It may seem a political and social irony that the soldier, whose principal purpose is the defense of America's historic freedoms, must himself consent to the partial abridgement of his own personal freedoms.

Yet because as a soldier, he has surrendered a portion of his personal liberty, he is perhaps in a position to appreciate more fully not only the privileges but also the Responsibilities of Citizenship, the topic of next week's Troop Information instruction.

For in America, the idea of liberty has come to mean also responsibility. Liberty is not license. It implies an interplay of personal privilege and individual duty.

The abstract "freedom" means many things to many Americans—and perhaps represents still other ideals to thousands of Cold War Refugees who have fled from behind the Iron Curtain to seek American freedom.

To each person, however, it means the freedom to choose—to choose his own manner of worship, the home in which he will live, his neighbors, his political party (or to ignore politics altogether), to select his own newspapers, movies and television, to join or not to join a labor union. The American need not accept an assigned pigeonhole; he has mobility of person and of intellect.

But the right to such freedom involves a corresponding responsibility. The freedom to choose one's religion would be essentially meaningless if the same freedom were not extended and protected for all. The newspaper editor must accept the legal and moral responsibility not to distort the truth. Freedom to join a labor union would be nonsense, if Congress did not pass laws forbidding the employer to fire a worker because he belonged to such an organization.

As a soldier or a civilian, the individual citizen must recognize responsibilities as well as rights. They are interdependent. The freedoms which contemporary Americans enjoy were won by their fathers' sacrifices in a struggle which continues today. It will be the inheritance of tomorrow, only if the responsibilities of citizenship fall upon a nation of individuals who recognize their heritage and wish to see it handed on to their children.

The responsibilities include not only exercising the vote but using it intelligently. It is the citizen's obligation to be informed of his local, state and national governments. He must be concerned for the rights of every minority not only his own. In his daily living, he must be aware of himself as a citizen among a nation of free individuals whose rights must also be his consideration. Citizenship requires even personal sacrifice.

Certainly, it is the soldier who is often called upon to make the heaviest sacrifice. In peacetime, it may mean that he delays his education and his career, or accepts separation from home and family. On the battlefield, he accepts the possibility that he will be called upon for the ultimate responsibility of citizenship.

enemy before they were able to wear such a medal."

Joe Lynton who had been General Dean's driver in World War II, accompanying him on more than one trip to the front lines, was killed by an enemy pistol bullet 16 hours before World War II ended.

"Joe wanted a badge more than anything," the general explained. "That's why this badge belongs to him."

As the Sixth Army Band struck up the strains of "Auld Lang Syne," the troops filed company by company off the parade ground. The hero of Taejon, who had once attacked a tank with only a hand grenade, who, exposed to enemy small arms and artillery fire had personally directed American guns in stubborn retaliation, who had spent three years as a North Korean prisoner of war, was now General William F. Dean, United States Army, Retired.

For the future, General Dean said, he looked only to unbroken retirement.

"No jobs in industry or anywhere else. Just travel, an effort to knock some strokes off my golf game and some time to devote to Mrs. Dean. I've been the kind of goof who thought the Army would fall apart if I took a leave. I'm going to make up for those leaves I never took."

Big Electronic Brain Expected To Reduce Ordnance Clerk's Job

BIZMAC, an electronic data-sorting machine which can replace the routine labors, but not the thinking of 300 clerks, is currently being installed in Detroit at the Ordnance Tank-Automotive Command. It is reputed to be the world's largest electronic brain.

The machine, which is expected to ease the voluminous job of processing records material for the Army's huge vehicle supply program, will be placed in operation next summer.

The machine will keep records of specific locations of every tank and automotive equipment part in operation throughout the world, forecast future requirements of procurement programs, and process incoming inventory data on the daily, instead of the current monthly basis.

BIZMAC is also expected to be highly useful in mobilization planning and in federal cataloging programs.

Grant Free Time So Local Employees Can Cast Ballots

Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, announces that in line with Department of the Army policy of encouraging Federal employees to vote, such personnel will be free to attend the polls without loss of commensurate time involved. The time attendant on such absence, however, must not exceed the first or last two hours of the working day.

It is not permissible to grant time excuses to employees voting in districts remote from their places of employment, if such can be accomplished by absentee ballot. One whole working day's time will be granted to Presidio workers whose voting areas do not permit absentee ballots.

Voting hours in the San Francisco district are from 0700 to 2000 hours on 8 November.

Professional Opinion!

DA Rates Star Presidian High In Annual Newspaper Review

Scoring 25 excellents out of a possible 28 the Star Presidian passed a Department of the Army newspaper review with flying colors this week. The Troop Information and Education Division of the Office of the Chief of Information found the local publication less than perfect in only three instances, rating it "very good" in two cases and "adequate" in another.

In the field of local news coverage the Star Presidian scored excellents for its coverage of post activities, unit news, coming events, recreation, pictures, features and sports. Garnering a "very good" in local slant to current events, and an "adequate" in local slant to service news.

On service news and military features the paper scored another pair of excellents. The same mark was registered in Commanders Troop Information and specialized coverage of the Army Education Program.

Editorially speaking, the Star Presidian rang up excellents in conformance to policy, conformance to journalistic principles and selection of materials. Three more excellents were scored under readability which included headlines, leads and length of stories.

The Star Presidian won twin excellents for pictures and cartoons and their conformance to good taste.

The dual-purpose newspaper scored its only other less than perfect mark in the use of Armed Forces Press Service (AFPS) and "canned copy," rating a very good in this instance. However, accreditation and masthead requirements were deemed excellent.

In the typography category the Star Presidian registered another bullseye with excellents for general appearance, quality of reproduction, accuracy, makeup and layout.

Commenting on the review, Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, said, "I've always considered the Star Presidian one of the best service newspapers that I have ever encountered. It gives me a great deal of personal pleasure to find that opinion confirmed by the recent Department of the Army review. I am sure that this high standard is a reflection of the great enthusiasm of the publication's editor. I am also sure that Mr. Erwin will not rest until the Star Presidian is rated excellent in every category."

Major Earle K. Stewart, Post T.I.&E. Officer and responsible for the military supervision of the Star Presidian, congratulated staff members for their accomplishment.

Under the editorship of Mr. Erwin, the first issue of the Star Presidian came off the press on 6 June 1952. It was the culmination of four previous attempts, by both service and civilian newspaper editors, to organize and produce a newspaper capable of providing adequate coverage for both Headquarters, Sixth Army and the Post. Mr. Erwin had previously organized and edited the Camp Roberts Parade following service in WWII as a Navy journalist.

Last year the Star Presidian won the Department of the Army Award for over-all excellence.

In closing, General Taylor said: "Our military planning must take into account the increasing reluctance of peace-loving people to embark on general atomic war and give increasing attention to the constant danger of erosive efforts against weak members of the Free-Nation community."

Headquarters Unit, 30th Group, Named Top AAA Mess Unit

Headquarters Battery, 30th AAA Group, added another plaque to its expanding trophy case recently when it was named the quarterly "Best Mess" unit for the AAA group.

Already the holder of the Yearly Best Mess Plaque, Headquarters Battery will keep the quarterly trophy for the next three months before it passes on to the next quarterly winner.

Efficient mess hall management, professional preparation and handling of food, high standards of sanitation, and the pleasant appearance of the dining hall were cited by the 30th AAA inspecting officers as the chief factors in the "Best Mess" designation.

M/Sgt. Glen M. Armstrong was presented the plaque by Lt. Col. Bernard Drew, 30th AAA Group executive officer, in a ceremony at which the battery's CO, Lt. Cyril G. Hess, and cooks SP-2 Edward Besler and Pfc. Carlos Tilley were present. Sergeant Armstrong is mess steward.

ode to a soldier -- unknown?

By Sfc Debra O'Hanlon

Soldier—known but to God—watchman silent above the fields of home . . . can you feel our tribute . . . grief—or see the flower we place beside your stone-faced door?

Here in honored glory—how are you honored now—where is the dove of peace . . . the laurel wreath with which they sealed the gate . . . the entrance to your quiet house?

What do you listen for—what do you hear—beyond this green trysting place where you made rendezvous with rest—does worldly strife reach in to haunt the stillness round your holy cell—your ear once sharp to catch the sound of guns whose deadly melody they said was played for peace? . . . do you hear of war and world's woe and wantonness—do you smile in tolerance . . . Watchman in the night—at evidence of man's ingratitude to man—does Reveille awaken you—or Taps announce your time to sleep?

Rest, Soldier!—here in honored glory—known but to God—lucky your homecoming to this hallowed place of exile . . . this your last Retreat . . . no peace but here . . . and you its only inspiration.

Can you see the flowers we place beside your stone-faced door—or feel our other tribute—grief—the tears of those who live between you and your soldier brother—seeking peace—a wayward stranger who does nothing more than scorn our plea?

Nearly Quarter-Billion Dividends To Be Paid Service Insurance Holders

Regular annual dividends will be paid during 1956 on National Service Life Insurance, which originated in World War II, and on U. S. Government Life Insurance, which originated in World War I, Veterans Administration announced today.

The NSLI dividend will amount to approximately $195,000,000 and will be payable to holders of approximately 5,000,000 participating term and permanent plan policies.

The USGLI dividend will amount to approximately $24,000,000 and will be payable to holders of approximately 370,000 permanent plan policies only.

In both the NSLI and USGLI payments, eligible policy-holders will receive a dividend for each month the insurance is on a premium-paying basis during the policy year ending in 1956, with a single check covering the total amount due on each policy.

Payments will be made shortly after the anniversary date of each policy, beginning in January and ending in December 1956.

VA said the basic factors in the 1956 dividend scale for both NSLI and USGLI remain unchanged from the 1955 schedules; however, 1956 payments in individual cases may vary slightly from 1955 payments because of the age of policyholders and the duration of their policies.

The 1956 dividends will be payable only to eligible participating policies. In NSLI, this includes both term and permanent plan policies. In USGLI, it includes only permanent plan policies. Term USGLI policies are excluded from the 1956 dividend, as in the past. No dividends have been paid on these policies for many years because the mortality and disability experience among this group has been such as not to provide any margin for dividends.

Also excluded from the 1956 dividend will be the non-participating Post-Korea policies issued under the Indemnity and Insurance Acts of 1951. The final group to be excluded will be the 735,000 NSLI and USGLI participating policies for which premiums have been waived under the same acts. VA said the exclusion will apply only to those months these policies were under waiver.

In both the NSLI and USGLI programs, the dividend payments are based on the plan of insurance, the age and year of issue, and the amount of insurance carried. They do not depend on the amount of the premium paid per $1,000 of insurance.

VA said eligible policyholders who already have designated a dividend payment option for previous dividends and who do not wish to change it, will not have to give VA any additional authorization for the 1956 payment. Their existing designations will be applied.

However, those who wish to change their previous dividend payment option for the 1956 declaration, must notify the VA Office handling their account to which option they wish to change. This notification, VA said, should be filed well in advance of the 1956 anniversary date of their policies so the agency may have ample time in which to process it.

Army Slates Combat Training For Excess EM Technicians

Washington (AFPS)—The Army has put into effect a re-training program in which thousands of excess enlisted personnel already trained for specialized assignments will be prepared for duty with combat units.

In announcing the policy, the Army cited a critical need for combat engineers, armor specialists and infantry light and heavy weapons specialists.

At the same time, it was pointed out that the Army currently has an excess of 2,000 food personnel, 5,000 administrative specialists and 4,000 military police.

The Army said the re-training program will result in the transfer of many non-commissioned officers and specialists from career fields presently overstaffed to those in which the shortages exist.

Officials here stated that the new policy is necessary so that the Army can operate effectively at the strength to which it has been reduced.

Talk On Management Consulting Firm Set For AFMA Meeting

The Management Consulting Firm will be the topic of a talk by Mr. Ian E. Wishart before the November meeting of the Bay Area Chapter Armed Forces Management Association at 2000 hours 17 November in Room 307, Stillwell Hall.

Representing a leading management engineering firm, Mr. Wishart will discuss the operation of a management consulting firm, its organization and staffing, and describe the development of a typical survey program.

Mr. Wishart's firm is currently working on a reorganization plan for the Army.

The 17 November meeting will also consider a proposed AFMA-sponsored seminar course at the University of California.

In the offing, according to Mr. Bernard Kahn, president of the local AFMA, is a dinner meeting planned for 15 December. Meetings of the management association are open to guests.

"Going For Three more, Sir," exclaims M/Sgt. Clarence L. Delp to Lt. Col. Fred C. Smith, 505th MP Battalion Commander, shortly after signing his name on the dotted line for another hitch. M/Sgt. Delp was the first member of the unit to re-enlist through Battalion channels since the inception of a new Army policy which permits units of battalion-size or larger to process its own re-ups. The sergeant saw the first dawn of an Army day in 1940 after being selected in the first WWII draft.

Drafted at 35!

Master Sergeant Is First MP To Reup Within Unit Channels

A fifty-year-old 505th MP Battalion Master Sergeant, who at 35 had his Selective Service number pulled from a barrel by the late President Roosevelt, became the first member of the battalion to re-enlist under a new Army policy which permits soldiers to re-enlist through unit channels.

From the relatively secluded atmosphere of Mount Saint Mary's College in Westwood, California, where he was an assistant stationery engineer, M/Sgt. Clarence L. Delp was transplanted to the rugged environs of Ft. Ord to take basic training.

By the time he had participated in setting up the S-4 section of Camp San Luis Obispo in 1941, the sergeant began to find the Army much to his liking.

Not long after the MP Corps was organized, M/Sgt. Delp's supply administrative acumen became an asset of the 785th MP Battalion which later went to Europe with the 3rd Army and combat in four major campaigns, including the perplexing Battle of the Bulge.

Victory in Europe was eminent when his unit was dispatched to the Pacific Theater to fight a different enemy in the Okinawa Campaign.

He already had chosen the Army to be his career upon returning Stateside in 1946. Remaining with an MP unit he continued perfecting his mastery of supply problems as a battalion S-4 NCO.

In 1950, the Sergeant again had to make the adjustment from a peacetime soldier to an armed combatant. Supply remained his vital job throughout six campaigns in the bitter and bewildering first two years of the Korean conflict.

Among more than a score of campaign ribbons and numerous Presidential Unit Citations and theater ribbons, he wears the coveted Bronze Star and Commendation Ribbon with Metal Pendant.

Master Sergeant Delp lives in quarters on post with his wife, Louise, who is President of the Presidio NCO Wife's Club. He consumes much of his off duty time at Lake Merced fighting the timeless battle of the elusive fish.

With the 505th since January, 1953, he still handles supply—as battalion S-4 sergeant.

Cramming in a few spare minutes of a lunch hour break, Major William B. Anderson, executive officer, Post Signal, prepares for Tuesday evening final in Geography at San Francisco State College. If he passes Geography and International Relations the following evening, he will have completed requirements for a B.A. degree in the social sciences. Major Anderson completed two years of courses in 16 months.

Bachelor Of Arts

After 15-Year Schooling Interruption Major William Anderson Earns Degree

Fifteen years, two wars and two children later, 35-year-old Major William B. Anderson this week crammed for the pair of final examinations which will complete his requirements in the B.A. degree program he left as a college sophomore in 1941.

In January, Major Anderson, executive officer, Post Signal, will receive a Bachelor of Arts degree in the social sciences from San Francisco State College.

Since May, 1954, Major Anderson has been sitting up late two to four nights a week with USAFI courses and homework from night classes at San Francisco State. It has taken him just 16 months to finish his junior and senior year requirements. He entered his final exams this week in Geography and International Relations defending a B-plus average.

His experience as an Army officer had entitled him to about 15 credit hours. He earned another 18 hours through USAFI courses and the remaining 30-odd units in evening classes at San Francisco State.

"I spend about three hours a night on study," Major Anderson said. "My wife and children just retire to the attic."

In 1941, World War II cut short his academic career at Glendale City College. For a great part of the next five years, he toured the South Pacific with a Signal Operations Company. In 1946, he was discharged as a Captain only to be recalled in January, 1951. After three years' duty in Tokyo, Major Anderson was assigned to the Presidio in April, 1954.

A short time later, he began work on the degree he had been forced by circumstances to postpone years earlier.

Major Anderson, who plans to make the Army a career, has already begun considering an advanced degree. He is particularly interested in social psychology and international relations, he said, either of which would be pertinent to an Army career.

"I have been particularly grateful," he said, "for the Post Army Education Center and the understanding help I have received from its staff members, Mr. Ralph L. McElroy and Mrs. Kathryn Mason.

"There is no doubt, whatsoever, in my mind, that a man can not only get an education while in the Army, but a very good education."

The Army maintains one soldier in supply for every 1.04 men in combat.

A Grand Tour was given the young troops of Cub Scout Pack 68 from Corte Madera by the Sixth Army Information Section at the Presidio recently. Shown with the Cubs and their leaders are members of the 505th MP Battalion, who demonstrated a variety of MP skills for the youngsters on the parade ground.

Raiders Blitz Ramblers, 27-6

RIGHT half Armando Macias of the Presidio Red Raiders is shown being downed by a California player in last week's 27-6 win for the Presidio. Arriving on the scene is big Ed Lewis (No. 20) Raider fullback. With the Point Magu game canceled this week the Raiders are working out for next week's clash with the Alameda Navy Hellcats.

Grid Clash!

Ratliff Scores Two TD's As Locals Win 8th Game

By Pvt. Bob Malone
Star-Presidian Sports Editor

Roaring back in the third quarter with 20 points, the Presidio Red Raiders earned their most impressive victory of the season last Saturday when they dumped the California Ramblers, 27-6, in Memorial Stadium, Berkeley.

The win was the eighth victory in the current pigskin season for Coach Larry McInerney's soldier gridsters. Only an early season loss to Chico State College mars an otherwise perfect slate.

The Ramblers got off to an early lead when quarterback Nick Papac lofted a 30 yard pass from his own nine to halfback Ken Myers who scampered the rest of the way for a 91 yard scoring play. Steve Glasgola's point after touch was blocked by the hard charging Raider line and the score stood, 6 to 0.

Then the Red Raiders took the second half kickoff and marched straight down the field for their first score. Big Bobby Ratliff, playing with a broken hand, bulled over from the three for the TD.

Speedy lefthalf Jim Guimarin scored the next soldier touchdown when he took a pitchout from quarterback Maytubby and went 59 yards for a touchdown on the best run of the day for either side.

Quarterback Maytubby scored the next six pointer when he quarterback sneaked from the Cal 49 for the necessary 51 yards. Ratliff converted and the third period ended with the Presidio out in front 20-6.

Ratliff scored the insurance touchdown in the final frame. The Raiders recovered a fumble on the Cal six, Ratliff then slid off right tackle for the tally and added the point.

Tomorrow's grid clash with the Point Magu Sailors was canceled at the request of the Sailors due to injuries suffered in previous games.

Next week the hard charging soldiers journey to Alameda for a return match with the Hellcats. The Raiders gave the Navy gridsters their only loss of the current season early in September, 16-7.

Current Deer Season Rated Next To Top

For the hunter who tramped the hills fruitlessly this year, the 1955 deer seasons were a flop, but cold statistics tell a different story.

In fact, the Department of Fish and Game reports, the 1955 tag return is expected to be over 70,000, comparing favorably to last year's record of 75,602.

Archers already have racked up a new record with 160 deer taken by bow and arrow compared to 148 last year.

Total tag return for the regular season as of the second day after the close of the season was 62,396 compared to 63,944 for the same day last year.

Big man in the Ft. Meade Md., attack is T-quarterback Lou Sorrentino. Of the Generals' first 10 touchdowns he scored six on passes and three on short runs. While at Lebanon Valley (Pa.) College he neared a national collegiate record by tossing 37 touchdown aeri-

Ord Edges Flyers On TD Passes

The powerful Fort Ord Warriors rode the strong right arm of Quarterback Jimmy Powers to a 14-10 victory over the previously unbeaten Hamilton Air Force last week-end at Hamilton Field and thereby claimed the mythical Armed Forces championship of the West Coast.

Powers, former USC and San Francisco 49er signal caller, pitched to both Ord touchdowns. One was a 36-yard heave to Ron Miller, also an ex-Trojan, climaxing a 53-yard drive in five plays, and the other was a 10-yard toss to end Dewey Brundage, one-time Brigham Young and Pittsburgh Steeler star, capping a 40-yard, five-play advance.

Hamilton's scoring came by way of a 16-yard field goal by former Iowa All-American Jerry Hilgenberg in the second period and a 24-yard TD toss from Elry Falkstein, former Illinois quarterback, to Jack Gotta, ex-Oregon Stater.

Sam Baker of Oregon State toed both Ord conversions, while Hilgenberg kicked Hamilton's lone extra point.

Statistically, Hamilton outrushed the Warriors, 221 yards to 205. In the passing department, Powers connected on 9 of 16 aeri-

Medics And Kops Tied For Lead In Pacific Roll

The smooth rolling Post Dispensary and the Keystone Kops were still tied for the top spot in the Pacific Bowling League race this week with identical marks of eight and 0.

Fischer with a 210 high is currently leading the post medics while Pawenski's 207 is tops for the Kops. Other high scores turned in were Van Kirk of the All-Stars with a 206 and Walsh of the G-2 Pin Splitters with 206.

High team with handicap honors go to the All-Stars with a sizzling 1012 pins downed. High team series goes to Fischer of the Dispensary with a 578 and the high team series with handicap to the Dispensary's 2891.

The red hot Masonites maintained their hold on the top place in the National Loop with a great 30 wins as against two losses. Masten is high for the league leaders so far this season with 205. Other bowlers on the Masonite squad with their high score for the season are Shumaker 190, Alba 192, Vida 201, Raish 195, Ball 191 and Bales 145.

Over in the Eastern League the Hilltoppers No. 6 team hold a narrow three game lead over the Ichi Ban's. The 6513 rollers are in the third slot and the Nuggets and the Occoquanians are currently tied for fourth.

High game so far this season for the Hilltoppers was rolled by Takahashi with a neat 224. Twenty-four points behind with an even 200 game is Willard.

Navy Hellcats Smash Moffett Flyers, 26-0

The Alameda Naval Air Station Hellcats swept to their fifth league this season as they rolled over the Moffett Field Flyers, 26-0 last weekend.

Hellcat back Bill Taylor led the way by scoring two touchdowns, on runs of 19 and 14 yards.

The only loss suffered by the Hellcats this year was at the hands of the Presidio Red Raiders, 16-7. One week from tomorrow will find the Presidio gridsters journeying to Alameda for a repeat game.

new name

Sports fans will be pleased to hear that a contest will begin next week to pick a new name for the Presidio Athletic teams. There will be a cash award for the winner. The name should reflect the colorful history of the Presidio. Details will appear in next week's edition of the Star-Presidian.

Bill Conterio To Kick His Way To Games

When the Olympic soccer trials get under way in Wiesbaden, Germany next month, it's a good bet that Presidio's Bill Conterio will make the soccer team that represents the United States in the 1956 games at Melbourne, Australia.

Considered one of the top three soccer players west of the Mississippi, by soccer experts, Conterio took part in the 1952 Olympics in Helsinki, Finland, as a member of the United States Team.

Conterio, a 26-year-old Sp/3 is a member of the 660th Engineer Battalion, of the 30th Engineer Group.

A native of Chicago, Conterio completed three years at the University of Illinois, where he majored in Agriculture, prior to entering the Army.

Information Topic

Manpower Still Prime Basis Of Active, Reserve Forces

"If we have the wisdom to perceive clearly the nature and dimensions of the threats to our liberty and our institutions; if we have the integrity to choose the course to protect against this threat—then, I believe, our nation will have the courage to face the trials of these troubled times."

So spoke General Matthew Ridgway, former chief of staff, United States Army last year in an address which touched upon the role of the United States Army in a world chilled by Cold War.

In consideration of "The U. S. Army—Active and Reserve," the next troop information instruction period will outline the history and the roles of both the Active Army and the reserve system as they have evolved from the days of the nation's infancy to the present.

One point upon which the information section's assessment of the topic concludes with General Ridgway is that "Skilled and brave men are still the vital ingredient of military strength." And military strength remains a cornerstone of the nation's foreign policies.

Despite revolutionary technological changes in the weapons of war and the nature of warfare, the Army's long range mission remains a readiness for prompt and sustained combat on land to defeat enemy ground forces and to seize, maintain and defend land areas.

The formulation of Army policy is based upon that single ultimate mission which is itself an integral part of the program for accomplishment of America's national aims—the defense of the national interest and the promotion of a peaceful world.

To be an effective instrument of national policy, the Army must still rely on its men, the men who come to do it service either in the Active Army or through the Reserves—men skilled and properly trained in the complicated business of modern warfare.

Asst. DA Secretary, Congressman Visit Here Coming Week

A 17-gun salute and Honor Guard will mark the arrival of the Assistant Secretary of the Army, Chester R. Davis, to the Presidio, 14 November at 0930 hours.

Similar ceremonies honoring the arrival here of Congressman John J. Riley, member of the House Appropriations Committee, on 17 November at 0900, are also planned. Both events are slated to take place in the parking lot north of Building 50.

The Sixth Army Band and Pipe Band will participate in both ceremonies.

Army Scrutinizes Security Program; Seeks Corrections

Washington (AFPS)—The Army is reviewing its security system to correct certain "defects and abuses," Secretary Wilbur M. Brucker has disclosed.

In a press conference here, Mr. Brucker outlined a set of requirements designed to eliminate any abuses in the military security program. He said eventually they will be applied to army civilian personnel as well.

The army secretary declared that personnel involved in security matters should have good judgment, high efficiency, analytical minds, experience in judging behavior standards and a complete lack of racial and religious bias.

He also said that those involved in intelligence work will be required to take special courses in security at Ft. Holabird, Md., if they have not had similar training within the last two years.

Mr. Brucker stated that although the review is still in progress, a classified directive dealing with security matters has been sent to all intelligence centers.

1st Armored's Switch To Ft. Polk Coincides With Sage Brush Start

Washington (AFPS) — The 1st Armored Div. will move to Ft. Polk, La., during November, concurrent with the beginning of Exercise Sage Brush, the Army has announced.

The 1st, known as the "Old Ironsides" division, has been located at Ft. Hood, Tex., since its reactivation in February 1951.

The Army said that the 1st will remain at Polk following Sage Brush, a joint Army-Air Force maneuver.

Also scheduled for transfer to Polk are III Corps Hq. now at Ft. Hood and necessary logistical and support units. About 19,000 Army personnel will be stationed there permanently.

Ft. Hood will remain the home of the 4th Armored Div., the Army said.

Local Crusade Campaign Surpasses Ideal Goal

Presidio's Crusade Campaign Proves Outstanding Success

A special last-ditch effort on the part of military and civilian personnel at the Presidio pushed the annual United Crusade Campaign well over its ideal goal, $30,000, with contributions of $30,225.09, to date. Only $717.24 of the total is still outstanding in pledges. In the final days of the drive, over $800 poured into local campaign coffers.

A week ago, the Presidio was just $600 short of the mark.

Since 1 September, the Presidio has been working to fulfill its role in Operation 288, the military's mission in the San Francisco Bay Area United Crusade Campaign. Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commander, has headed the Bay Area Military Cabinet since the drive opened.

The Presidio's $30,000 fund will be its contribution toward the $10,000,000 goal set as the over-all objective of the Bay Area drive. The monies will go to the support of some 288 recognized local and national charities in five counties comprising the Bay region.

The successful completion of the Post crusade is a recognition on the part of Presidio military and civilian personnel, said General Young, that "the San Francisco Bay Area is our community and the United Crusade the best way for us to support the whole community."

The United Crusade includes 90 per cent of the volunteer charity and health research agencies in San Francisco, East Bay, West Contra Costa, San Mateo and Marin counties. It bisects civilian and military needs, representing organizations in which the military has a direct interest—such as the USO, ### high praise!

I wish to congratulate every soldier and civilian employee at the Presidio of San Francisco for their contributions to the 1955 United Bay Area Crusade. Your goal of $30,000.00 this year was high. The fact that you exceeded it is evidence of your willingness to accept your responsibilities as members of the local community. Your magnificent response to this worthy cause gives me great personal pride and merits the highest commendation.

as well as many of the health and research agencies from which everyone receives at least indirect benefits—for example, the Multiple Sclerosis Society and the Heart Association.

As chairman of the Presidio drive, Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, directed a corps of unit representatives whose job it was to secure contributions. Colonel Lundquist lauded the fine showing made by military and civilian personnel, singling out in particular the unit representatives for their "splendid efforts." He praised them especially for "their dedication to the oftentimes thankless task of soliciting individual donations."

Sixth Army Host!

Area's Ranking Guard Leaders Discuss '56 Training Tomorrow

Sixth Army will host a conference of its state level reserve defense partners from the Army area tomorrow at Harmon Armory. The conference of State Adjutants General and National Guard unit commanders and advisors is expected to help blueprint summer field training programs which will affect approximately 48,000 Guardsmen from the eight western states next year.

Of the 109 officers slated to attend the high-level meeting, 22 are general officers.

Major General Donald W. McGowan, a veteran National Guard commander from New Jersey, who was recently chosen to head the Army Division of the National Guard Bureau, is to be the featured speaker and guest of the conference.

Following a welcoming address by Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commander, Major General Riley F. Ennis, Sixth Army deputy commanding general, will preside.

A review and analysis of field training completed this year will be presented during the first portion of the meeting. A consolidation of comments and recommendations made earlier this year by inspection boards, National Guard leaders and the Sixth Army staff will be incorporated in this discussion.

An outline of plans for personnel and administrative support of 1956 training including an explanation of procedures for requesting support and special services will be presented by the G-1 section. Logistics support pertaining to supply and food services will be discussed by representatives of the G-4 section.

G-3 section is slated to review unit field training programs of the USAR and also to suggest tentative dates and sites for next year's training.

The relationship of the Army's Public Information program to the National Guard will be discussed by Colonel Arthur C. Timboe, Sixth Army Information section chief.

To further facilitate coordination of plans for National Guard unit field training, training staff representatives from Ft. Ord, Camp Irwin, Ft. Lewis, and Headquarters, Sixth AA Command will attend the conference.

The final phase of the conference will center around a period of open discussion during which all aspects of field training may be discussed by National Guard commanders and staff officers with representatives of the Sixth Army staff.

more rotation

The Department of the Army announced this week that three more infantry divisions, the 2nd, 8th and 9th are slated for rotation under Operation Gyroscope. The 8th will move to Germany, the 2nd to Alaska and the 9th will return State-side. Application for transfer to these units will be announced as soon as specific manpower needs are determined.

promotions up!

Washington (AFPS) — Army enlisted promotions continued their upward climb in November with 56,000 new stripes authorized. Quotas for the grades are: E-7, 100; E-6, 800; E-5, 5,300; E-4, 21,400; E-3, 28,400.

It's Official Now: Early Outs Slated For Christmas!

Personnel scheduled for release from active duty between 22 December and 2 January will be separated between 12 and 21 December, the post adjutant section announced this week.

The actual date of individual release during this period will depend upon the work-load of the unit and post personnel transfer and separation branches.

However, all personnel in this category will be released by the 21st. EM eligible for separation under this policy will not be retained in service beyond 21 December merely because their records have not been received. Instead, temporary records will be used.

Exceptions to the early release policy include: Officers to be relieved on specific dates under DA directions; non-regular medical, dental and veterinary officers who have not completed 21 months' active duty, and EM of reserve components who desire to complete their reserve obligations.

Other exceptions are enlisted personnel eligible for release prior to completing two years' service, but who must complete 21 months' active duty, and RA personnel whose re-enlistment bonus and accrued pay leave would be reduced by an early release.

All Battalion Size!

Transfer Applications Open To Four Gyroscope Units Bound For Europe

Applications for transfer to any of the four battalion-size units which are scheduled to commence three years' duty in Europe next year may now be initiated by local personnel, it was announced by the Post Classification and Assignment section this week.

Units now accepting transfer applications are the 25th Signal Battalion (Construction), Fort Devens Massachusetts; 95th Engineer Battalion (C), Ft. Ord; the 532nd Field Artillery (Observation) and the 553rd Artillery Battalion; Ft. Sill, Oklahoma.

Personnel are eligible to apply for transfer to these units if they can meet the three years' minimum "time remaining" stipulation, if they hold MOS and Grades needed by the rotating units and if they have not had a permanent change of station since 1 July, 1955.

Applications may be submitted through unit personnel channels which will in turn forward them to the pertinent commands. A listing of the qualifications and an outline of the MOS and Grade requirements of the Gyroscope units is available at all local unit personnel sections.

The cut-off date for receipt of applications by the 532nd Field Artillery Battalion has been set for 1 January, and the cut-off date for 553rd FA Battalion transfer applications is 1 February, 1956. No application cut-off dates have been announced for the other two units.

Since family housing in Europe is critical, only top three graders will be authorized by the Gyroscope units to have their dependents and household goods shipped overseas under existing authority.

In many cases a one grade reduction substitution is authorized for any individual applicant who desires transfer.

parade

A Retreat Parade and "Honor Unit" competition is scheduled today at 1630 hours on the main parade ground. Units participating in the parade include the Sixth Army Band, Headquarters Company, Company A and Company D, Station Complement; the 30th Engineer Group, 561st Engineer Company and Detachments 1 and 2, 6002 SU.

yours for the asking

Education is normally not attained without exertion. In fact, most people can expect to make extra effort and feel its resulting pain; but, the end result can be pleasant and may open a whole new world to you.

In scope Troop Education ranges from functional education to college completion.

Functional education has three phases. Phase I (Transitional Training) is mandatory for certain newly inducted personnel in the United States. Phase II may be prescribed by commanders for personnel whose aptitude area scores are not high enough for service school attendance, who have not completed grammar school, or who need additional instruction to perform adequately in their military assignment. Phase III includes instruction in MOS-related subjects, spoken foreign languages, and English language.

In addition to providing partial payment of tuition costs for certain off-duty undergraduate instruction, DA has initiated a final semester plan (6 months full time on-campus study) for selected commissioned officers.

Education of a civilian type is available through your Troop Education program. Mr. Ralph McElroy, post education advisor, Ext. 2974, can give you further information. Call today!

On duty, Sturdley was a model serviceman. Sure he'd gripe when the chow line was a little longer than usual. Or when lights were doused before he was ready to turn in.

But Sturdley was no dope. "No man is an island" had special meaning for him. He knew that the service is a team and if life was going to be bearable for him he'd have to keep in mind his buddies' rights.

But when Sturdley took off on a pass Mr. Team did a Jekyll and Hyde and became Mr. Individual.

Sturdley was a cool cat. Once he hit traffic he realized he was competing with squares so he slipped by a dozen of them who couldn't get hep to the song of the road. And, at lights, when the local yokels didn't get off fast enough, Sturdley sent them on their way with a series of loud, long blasts of his horn.

One time, near town, an elderly man driving slowly got in the way and Sturdley blew his horn for a block before the old goat wised up and let him pass. And passing Sturdley threw a double-dip cussword at the old codger.

These civilians weren't on his team, Sturdley was sure. If he stayed out of the cops' way he wouldn't suffer any. They couldn't touch him. After all, wasn't he giving the best years of his life to serving his country?

What Sturdley didn't realize, though, was that in a democracy the military cannot be a law unto themselves. The armed forces owe their existence to civilian support. Civilians are as much a part of the defense team as Sturdley and his buddies are.

To the old driver—and to the other squares Sturdley had brushes with—Sturdley WAS the military. One heel like our boy Sturd can tear down the efforts of a hundred others to build community relations.

Wise up, Sturdley, public relations is a job for all of us. (AFPS)

Major Changes!

Army Secretary Brucker Gives CBR Green Light In Research Development

Washington (AFPS)—Weapons that would weaken the enemy's "will to fight" without mass destruction have been called for in reports recently approved for implementation by Army Secretary Wilber M. Brucker.

A four-man civilian committee, studying the composition of the Chemical Corps, recommended the development of agents and weapons for chemical, biological and radiological warfare "to the fullest extent that human minds can encompass."

Among the major structural changes recommended by the committee and approved by Mr. Brucker will be the establishment of three separate commands for research and development, engineering and material.

The committee also recommended the appointment of an assistant chief chemical officer who would take charge of long-range planning and doctrine.

Maj. Gen. William M. Creasey, chief chemical officer, appointed the committee of top civilian executives last March to look into all phases of Chemical Corps operation.

Chairman of the committee was Otto N. Miller, vice-president of Standard Oil of California.

thrifty ideas

Estimated savings of more than $20 million over a one-year period will result from suggestions made by Army civilian and military employees during fiscal year 1955. A total of 61,669 recommendations were received and 15,021 were adopted at installations in this country and abroad. The total sum of $332,956 was paid out for these suggestions.

Sixth Army Units Will Participate In Moose Horn

The tactics of Arctic warfare will be tested in Exercise MOOSE HORN, to be conducted in Alaska during January and February, 1956.

According to Hq., Continental Army Command, the Alaska-based 71st Infantry Division, one BCT of the 5th RCT and support units of Sixth Army will participate.

Designed to test and improve Arctic and sub-Arctic winter combat tactics, the maneuver will provide training in:

a. Reinforcement of the U. S. Army in Alaska by overland movement of troops from the continental United States.

b. Tactical operations and cross-country movement of BCTs in areas distant from established road nets and lines of communication.

The exercise also will offer an opportunity to check the ability of Infantry support weapons, including tanks and artillery, to deliver timely and accurate fire in sub-zero temperatures as well as to compare supply by air with overland transportation in support of BCT size operations in the Arctic.

inductions!

Washington (AFPS) — The Department of Defense has requested the Selective Service System to provide armed forces induction stations with 8,000 men during next January for assignment to the Army.

The Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps do not plan any draft calls for their services that month.

Guided Missiles Seen As Possibility For Air Nat'l Guard

New Orleans (AFPS)—The possibility of developing guided missile squadrons in the Air National Guard was disclosed in a speech here recently by David S. Smith, assistant secretary of the Air Force.

Addressing the National Guard Assn. of the U.S., Mr. Smith explained the AF now has only four guided missile squadrons, two on duty in Germany and two in training in Florida. All employ the Matador, a surface-to-surface missile.

"We are not yet ready to activate guided missile squadrons in the Air National Guard," Mr. Smith said. "But," he continued, "who would dare assert now, that a few years from now we will not be doing so?"

"Our plans call for integration of guided missiles with manned aircraft in accordance with a program designed to achieve operational capabilities as soon as possible. The Air National Guard is an integral part of the Air Force of the United States."

Mr. Smith said the AF still had not licked the re-enlistment problem. He did point out, however, that the rate was up "amazingly—from 24 per cent at the beginning of the year to 49 per cent in September."

Seriously disabled vets now have until 20 October, 1956, or five years after separation from service, whichever is later, to apply for a $1,600 grant toward the purchase of a specially equipped automobile.

officers recently assigned

Recently assigned to G-3 section, Sixth Army Headquarters, is Lt. Colonel S. H. MATHESON, formerly assigned to a similar post with the First Infantry Division in Germany, for a three-year interval.

A veteran of 13-years military service, Colonel Matheson was with the 101st Airborne Division during World War II, later with the IX Corps in Korea.

A graduate of the Infantry School, Fort Benning, Georgia, and the Command General Staff College, Ft. Leavenworth, Kan., the newly-assigned G-3 officer wears the Combat Infantryman's badge (Master Parachute), the Good Conduct medal, the World War II Victory medal, Army Occupation medal, the Korean Service medal, the European Service medal and the National Defense medal. He resides with his wife, son and daughter, at Fort Scott.

Captain JACK E. MILNER, newly-assigned to AG section, Sixth Army, came to the Presidio from recruiting duty at the US Army main station in San Francisco.

A veteran of over 14 years' service, Captain Milner is presently with the administrative services in the AG section. He served as an enlisted man with the XI Corps, Fort Lewis, Washington, in 1942, achieving the grade of Chief Warrant Officer in the ensuing two years. In 1942, Captain Milner acquired a commission as first lieutenant and was recalled to active duty in 1949.

Overseas service for Captain Milner includes duty in Europe and the Far East. In 1944 he was assigned as administrative officer for a military government detachment in Monschau, Biedenkopf, Germany, later as branch Exchange officer for AFPE, in Osaka, Japan.

Captain Milner resides with his wife and two daughters at Stillwell Road, Presidio.

First Lieutenant VAN D. SANDSTEDT, (VC), is now on duty as veterinarian with the 6002nd (Area Vet Detachment). After receiving his DVM degree from Colorado A. and M. this summer, the newly-appointed veterinary officer reported to Fort Sam Houston, Texas, where he attended the orientation course for Army Medical officers. From there he went to the Army veterinary hygiene school in Chicago, Illinois, before reporting to his present post.

Lieutenant Sandstedt is a native of Colorado. He resides presently at the Presidio officers' BOQ.

Recently assigned to the mess section of the Presidio Officers Club is CWO WALTER S. FILLER, who came here as a food service advisor from a similar assignment at the Armored Training Center, Camp Irwin, California.

Other service assignments held by Mr. Filler were as food supervisor for the Fourth Army, Fort Sam Houston, Texas (1945-1946); for Korea (1947-1948); for Sixth Army (1949-1950), and for the Field Service School, Fort Lee, Virginia in 1951, where he also served as clubs and messes supervisor.

Warrant Officer Filler's overseas duty includes an assignment at headquarters, European Command at Heidelberg, as clubs and messes officer, later for the Southern Area Command in Munich as food service advisor until 1954 when he returned to Stateside duty at the atomic problems unit, Camp Desert Rock, Nevada until 1955).

Mr. Filler's decorations include the Army Commendation ribbon, the American Defense Service ribbon, the American Theater Campaign ribbon, World War II Victory ribbon, the Army of Occupation ribbon, the Armed Forces Reserve ribbon and the National Defense Service ribbon. He was also awarded the equivalent of the US Army Commendation ribbon by the German government for his working contribution to German labor services organizations concerned with food management.

The newly-arrived officer to the Presidio has established a home with his wife, Irene, in Santiago.

New USAFI Study In U.S. Government Available Locally

The new USAFI replacement course in American Government is now in stock at the Army Education center here, it was announced this week.

Geared to meet the one semester American Government requirement set by many states for high school graduation, the course outlines the workings of government on the federal, state and local levels.

This USAFI course provides an account of government in action, emphasizing the methods by which people living in a democracy control the government and make it serve the public will.

Although persons enrolling in this course are urged to take it by correspondence, the course also is available for group study and self-teaching methods of study. Students who have not completed the equivalent of a ninth grade are discouraged from enrolling in the course.

Celebrating the end of its first year at Camp Rucker, the Army Aviation School announced that more than 2,000 officers and enlisted men will be graduated from 13 courses of study this year.

Roadeo Planned!

'Safe Driving Day' Campaign To Be Launched Here Monday

In a dynamic attempt to reduce traffic accidents all over the Nation, the President has designated 1 December, 1955, S-D (Safe Driving) Day.

Sparked by an intensive ten-day publicity period before the 1 December zero hour and a ten-day follow-up campaign, S-D Day 1955 will be aimed at every American, civilian and military.

Locally, Col. Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander has urged all personnel to assume full responsibility to avoid accident-producing situations on that day.

The Presidio and sub-post S-D Day campaign will get underway next Monday (S-D Day minus 10) when unit safety officers meet with Lt. Col. Freeman Gage, S-D Day chairman and Mr. Henry E. Bennett, post safety inspector at the conference room of post headquarters.

Plans have been made to display S-D Day posters on all unit and section bulletin boards. Also, special information sheets will be passed out to drivers visiting the Presidio on the safe driving campaign day.

To highlight S-D Day a truck roadeo will be held on the main parade ground. An elimination is scheduled for 29 November to determine the participants. All company size units and separate detachments are entitled to enter a team in the elimination.

S-D Day at the Presidio last year was a completely successful operation since not a single accident was registered. The campaign throughout the nation resulted in nine less deaths, about a 45 per cent reduction in the number of injuries and a 20 per cent reduction in the number of accidents.

As in the past, it is expected that the Army will be a major contributor to an accident-free Safe Driving Day this year. In overseas areas the day will be marked by a coordinated effort among military and civilian personnel to dramatize the importance of safety.

Re-Open Camp Polk As Permanent Post, Rucker Redesignated

Washington (AFPS) — Camp Polk, La., and Camp Rucker, Ala., have been designated permanent army installations and will carry the title "Fort," it has been announced.

Polk has been in a standby status since June 1954. Its reactivation as a permanent installation took effect Nov. 1.

Rucker, located near Dothan, Ala., is the home of the Army Aviation Center and the 351st Regimental Combat Team. The Army said its new designation should not imply any change of strength or mission at Rucker.

Meanwhile, the Army announced Exercise Sagebrush will be held as scheduled in the maneuver area recently acquired in Louisiana.

tank order

Washington (AFPS) — A $73,000,000 contract for the construction of M48 medium tanks has been awarded to Alco Products Inc., Schenectady, N. Y., the Army has announced. Each tank will cost about $109,000. Deliveries are scheduled to begin about 1 June, 1956.

Over 2 Million Vets Convert GI Insurance To Permanent Policies

Over 2,000,000 World War II veterans have converted their five-year term National Service Life Insurance policies to permanent plan basis, according to the Veterans Administration.

The term policies provide protection only in the event of death, with no loan, cash surrender or extended insurance value. They are renewed every five years at progressively higher premiums while the permanent plan policies maintain a permanent rate.

If a World War II veteran wishes to convert a five-year term policy, he may do so through the VA office to which he is paying premiums.

Of the permanent type policies, 20-pay life is the most popular. Almost a million veterans have converted to this policy.

Ordinary life runs second with 402,622. Other policies available are 30-pay life, 20-year endowment, endowment at age 60 and endowment at age 65.

Pay, Allowances, Travel!

Individual Soldier Gets Lion's Share Of Army's Yearly Dollar Appropriation

Washington—The largest slice of the Army dollar goes to the individual soldier.

During the current fiscal year, the Army will spend approximately $3,675,000,000 (B)—or about 39 per cent—of its $9,404,000,000 (B) budget on the man and woman in uniform.

Included in this sum are pay and allowance, clothing, food, and permanent change of station travel.

Pay and allowances—$3,117,000,000 (B)—makes up the major item in this portion of the budget. Other items in order are: clothing, for which the annual bill is about $85,000,000 (M); food, which will account for roughly 10 percent, or about $300,000,000 (M); and permanent change of station travel—almost $176,000,000 (M).

About 30 percent of the Army budget for this year—just over $2,800,000,000 (B)—will go for Army maintenance and operation costs.

In general, this includes funds to support the command and management structure, intelligence system, the training establishment, logistic and administrative services and most of the supplies and services needed to develop and maintain an effective combat force.

Certain joint service activities as well as some aspects of industrial mobilization are financed through maintenance and operations funds.

Army procurement and production—expenses such as procurement manufacture, service testing and modification of armament, ammunition, equipment, vehicles, and aircraft for both the Army and Army Reserve Forces—will total about $1,500,000,000 (B).

Army research and development for the current year will cost in the neighborhood of $374,000,000 (M),

Liberal Policies On Holiday Leave Anticipated Here

Headquarters Sixth Army announced this week that in accord with a recent directive on a liberal holiday leave policy from Department of the Army a memorandum pertaining to Sixth Army implementation of the policy is currently in preparation.

The Army indicated earlier this week that the holiday leave period will begin 21 December at 4 p.m. and end 3 January at 8 a.m. Training will be suspended at Army service schools and recruit centers during this period to permit personnel to take a maximum of 10 days' leave.

DA officials said that the postponement of training activities would not affect the Army's ability to carry out assigned missions.

It is expected that the same over-all policy will be effected at all Sixth Army installations. In many instances, however, due primarily to minimum manpower needs, leaves will not cover both the Christmas and New Years holidays.

In all cases the holiday leaves will depend on military situation, training schedules, missions and local conditions.

At the Presidio and sub-posts, Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, said that both military and civilian personnel would be encouraged to take maximum holiday and annual leaves.

Silver Beaver, highest award which the San Francisco Council Boy Scouts of America can bestow upon a local citizen, was awarded Tuesday evening to Colonel Halbert E. Fillinger (left), assistant Sixth Army engineer. Colonel Fillinger was the only military man to receive the award this year. Left to right are other award winners: John Nesbitt, C. # Colonel Halbert E. Fillinger Receives High Honors From Local Scout Council

Before a crowd of 3500 people at Civic Auditorium Tuesday, Colonel Halbert E. Fillinger, assistant Sixth Army Engineer, received The Silver Beaver award, highest honor which the San Francisco Council Boy Scouts of America may give to a local citizen.

For "distinguished service to Boyhood," said P. Tremaine Loud, member of the Council executive board, as he made the presentation to Colonel Fillinger at the Tuesday evening Appreciation Dinner.

A career officer, Colonel Fillinger has been active in Scout Activities wherever he has served.

In Heidelberg he had helped to build the European Command Scout Council, organized to provide scouting activities for the sons of Army and civilian personnel in Germany.

His assistance in a fund-raising campaign to establish a Boy Scout camp in Schriesheim, Germany, was a factor in his later selection as chairman of the European Command Scout Council, headquarters for scouting organizations throughout the American zone in Germany.

In 1952, Colonel Fillinger was assigned to the Presidio where he has since continued to serve scouting, particularly in San Francisco, in a number of capacities.

A member of the Society of American Military Engineers and the American Engineers, Colonel Fillinger holds Bachelor of Science and Civil Engineering degrees from Purdue University, as well as a Bachelor of Law from Indiana.

He has two daughters and two sons, both of whom became Eagle Scouts. One son, Earl, is a divinity student at Indiana University; the other, Halbert, Jr., is a senior at Heidelberg University Medical School.

Local Civilians Asked To Help Ease Critical LAH Blood Shortage

An acute shortage of blood at the Letterman Blood Bank, coupled with the fact that local military personnel who have received influenza shots this week cannot donate blood for a month, has brought an appeal from Letterman officials to Presidio and sub-post civilian personnel and dependents.

Civilians who give blood will be given credit at the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank and can draw upon it for their family for a period of one year after the donation.

Civilians who are able to give blood may contact Maj. Smiley, telephone extension 3669 or 3083 and make an appointment to donate.

The Pay-Off for money-saving and time-cutting suggestions came recently to three Post Signal civilian employees. From left to right: Mr. Erwin J. Rozzi received $10 for his cryptographic device—his fourth cash award; Ted K. Brewer whose suggestion for a new tool netted him $10; and Rene G. Borde, who notched his seventh cash incentive award for a photographic lens innovation. Shown with the cash winners is Francis D. Delong, Signal Maintenance Repair Shop supervisor.

War Games!

Local Troops Now Participating In Big Sage Brush Maneuver

Elements of three locally based units, the 505th MP Battalion, the 30th Engineer Group and the 46th Ordnance Group are now in the heat of maneuvers at the Louisiana site of Exercise Sage Brush, the largest joint Army-Air Force war games since WWII.

The maneuver extends over 7,000,000 acres on the ground and seven southern states in the air. More than 1,200 Army and Air Force aircraft and 140,000 personnel of both services are participating.

Simulated atomic, chemical, biological and electronics weapons are being employed extensively to test the integration of such weapons into our military structure and concept.

Sage Brush is based on a hypothetical combat situation in which aggressor forces have secured a foothold in the Gulf coast area of the United States.

The next day, the aggressor launches an offensive supported by atomic weapons. U. S. forces attacked by an enemy with both air and ground numerical superiority, are forced to withdraw to defensive positions north of the Red River.

U. S. forces, after being strengthened and regrouped, then cross the river with numerically superior air and ground forces. They go on the offensive with the objective of destroying the aggressor forces or driving them into the Gulf of Mexico.

Tried And True!

Small, Highly Trained Military Units Key Factor In US Security Planning

Traditionally, the security of the United States depends upon the existence of a relatively small, highly-trained regular military establishment that can be augmented quickly by civilian reserves.

This doctrine has served its purpose well in the past, largely because we have had time to train our reserves for combat before committing them to battle. In the dawn of the atomic age, however, it is becoming increasingly evident we can no longer count time as a factor in our favor. Only forces in being at the outbreak of hostilities can be relied upon for effective action—to fight the “little wars” with conventional weapons or to engage in atomic warfare on a global scale.

The Reserve Forces Act of 1955 is intended to provide the Nation with trained reserves that can be mobilized readily for war or other national emergency.

It does not establish a new reserve system but merely amends two of the principal laws constituting the foundation for the Reserve Forces; namely, the Armed Forces Reserve Act of 1952 and the Universal Military Training and Service Act of 1951.

There are four principal areas in which the Act helps: (a) improvement in the structure and size of the Reserve Forces; (b) establishment of a clear obligation to take part in reserve training, and effective measures to insure compliance with this obligation; (c) provisions for the recruitment and training of young men specifically for the Reserve; and (d) establishment of a shorter military obligation for individuals who enter the Armed Forces after 9 August 1955.

The essential elements of the Reserve Forces are the Ready Reserve and the Standby Reserve. Under provisions of earlier legislation, the Ready Reserve was designed to contain the reserve

man's moon

The Defense Department disclosed recently that work has begun on the project to hurl a small man-made moon on an earth-circling journey into outer space. A contract for the rocket launcher which will hurl the satellite into space has been awarded the Glen L. Martin Company of Baltimore, Maryland, builders of the Viking rocket which set an altitude record of 158 miles for a single-stage rocket.

Army To Handle Food Purchases For Navy and AF

Washington (AFPS) — The Army is going to do the grocery shopping for the Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps.

The Defense Department has put into effect a new plan under which the Army will be responsible for everything having to do with food for the other services.

The plan, covering far more than food, calls for a single service to buy and distribute any given military item, filling the needs of all the services.

The goal is elimination of duplicate purchases which have been criticized as wasteful.

Food is the first item to be reorganized on this unified basis. The Army, for some time, has been acting as food purchasing agent for the armed forces.

Now it is to get complete responsibility.

In each geographical area, the secretary of the Army will choose a single military installation, regardless of the service to which it belongs. That installation will be the food depot for all bases in the area.

mail snafu

Washington (AFPS) — Mail for military personnel serving overseas is being delayed, misdirected and returned to the senders because the serviceman is not putting his correct address in the return space, the Army has reported. Unauthorized abbreviations and incomplete return addresses are given as the two major faults.

In an effort to cut down on incorrectly addressed overseas mail, especially during the Christmas season, the Army indicated that APO's will screen mail from servicemen overseas during the week beginning 21 Nov. Mail with improper return addresses will be returned to the sender.

Top Military, Civilian Medics Meet Discuss Atomic Age Problems

Washington (AFPS)—The medical problems posed by atomic warfare were the subject of a three-day meeting here 7-9 Nov. attended by medical authorities of armed forces and civilian government agencies, as well as representatives of 19 foreign countries.

The 62nd annual convention of the Association of Military Surgeons discussed the medical effects of nuclear explosions and care of mass casualties.

Maj. Gen. Joseph I. Martin, special assistant to the army surgeon general, is president of the association.

Why Training?

Scope Of International Obligations Makes Top Troop Training Imperative

Ever wonder why the Army keeps us training for combat? A run-down of our international obligations casts considerable light on the subject.

Here are a few of the facts: To deter aggression, the United States has adopted the principle of collective security.

The strategic deployment of U. S. troops overseas and their state of readiness to move to troubled areas constitute the nation's intent to support this principle and preserve world peace.

Our share of this national responsibility falls on our force of slightly more than one million men.

The U. S. is obligated to assist Canada under the Ogdensburg Agreement of 1940 and the North Atlantic Treaty.

Since 1823, as proclaimed in the Monroe Doctrine, we have stood ready to resist aggression in the Western Hemisphere. Through the Inter-American Treaty of Reciprocal Assistance, we are bound with 20 Latin American countries to enforce it.

The U. S. is committed to provide forces to NATO. By joint declaration with the United Kingdom and France on 3 October, 1954, we must keep troops in Berlin to resist attack on the German city "from any quarter."

At the same time, we are morally responsible to defend West Germany pending development of its own military establishment.

The existence of U. S. air and naval bases in Spain implies an obligation there.

We also have bases in Libya and Ethiopia with a pledge to mutual support.

On 25 May, 1950, the governments of France, the United States, the United Kingdom declared their intentions to "maintain stability in the Near East."

Our nation is obliged, under the SEATO Treaty of 8 September, 1954, to meet common danger with Australia, New Zealand, the Philippines, Pakistan, Thailand, France and England.

We also have two individual pacts, one involves Australia and New Zealand, the other the Philippines.

The United States-Republic of China Mutual Defense Treaty, made 2 December, 1954, commits us to "act to meet the common defense."

Again, we are bound by agreement to aid the Republic of Korea in the event of renewed aggression.

The United States-Japan Treaty of 28 May, 1952, provides that we maintain armed forces in the Island Empire until it is able to protect itself.

Furthermore, the all-encompassing United Nations Resolution of 3 November, 1950, for the collective security of its more than 50 member-countries includes American troops in any U.N. force mobilized under the resolution.

With every American soldier shouldering a share in the Nation's responsibilities to preserve the peace, it's not difficult to understand why the Army must have a perpetual program to keep us combat ready. (ANF)

research head

Lieutenant General James M. Gavin, USA, has been named to the new post of Chief of Research and Development. The addition of this division will mean that the Army will have five Deputy Chiefs of Staff, and is another step to strengthen Army Research and Development.

Three hundred fifty clerks at the Army's Detroit tank-automotive center have been replaced by Bizmac, a mammoth electronic "brain." When stocks are low on any of 450,000 items the machine flashes a warning to buy more.

Pictured above is one of the first Texas Towers built in the U. S. and now in place off New England. Recently bids for three more towers were opened at the First Naval District Public Works Office in Boston. The award of the contracts will be made following consultation between navy and air force officials in Washington. The new towers are to be built off New York, on Nantucket Shoals and at Cashes Ledge (Maine). Contract bids cover construction work on shore as well as at sea.

Aldridge Leads Post To All-Army Volleyball Title

By Pvt. Bob Malone
Star-Presidian Sports Editor

Sparked by the outstanding spiking of team captain Jack Aldridge the Presidio swept to the 1955 All-Army Volleyball Championship last week at Ford Ord. The victory was the first All-Army Title ever won by an athletic team representing the Presidio.

The champion Presidio high net men opened the tournament by blasting the Fourth Army's Sandia Base team by the scores of 15-7, 15-3. The locals used a three man block and with good spiking by Coach Bob Jones and Matt Schmutz gave a great exhibition of top flight play.

The Presidio men came right back in the afternoon to smash the Second Army, Fort Knox, 15-11, 15-6.

The two wins put the locals into the finals of the winner's bracket along with the Central Command of Yokohama, Japan, representing Eighth Army.

The Far Eastern champs took the first game from the Presidio men 15-6 but great teamwork by McDonnell, Noel, Steiner and Godino pulled the last two games out of the fire to the tune of 15-3, 15-10.

This put Eighth Army and Second Army in the finals of the loser's bracket. Eighth Army won the first game 15-6 only to have the Second Army come right back and win the next contest, 15-7. Eighth Army won the third and deciding game, however, 16-14, for the right to meet the Presidio in the all-inclusive final match.

The post team was red hot at this point, however, and paced by Matthews and Aldridge took two straight games from the Eastern Champs for the All-Army crown.

The winning team had the distinction of going from the post-intra-murals to the All-Army title without losing a single match in official play. The squad was coached by Major Bob Jones of the 56th MRU, an outstanding volleyball coach as well as player.

civilians again

Two stars of Fort McPherson's All-Army championship baseball team, pitcher Wilmer (Vinegar Bend) Mizell and outfielder Norm Siebern, have returned to civilian life. Mizell, who pitched a one hitter in the final game of the All-Army tournament, left for Havana, Cuba, to arrange terms for a season of winter baseball there. Mizell will return to the St. Louis Cardinals in the spring. Siebern will be on the Denver roster but is scheduled for a trial with the New York Yankees.

Cage Team Wins Five In Hawaii

Starting off the season with a bang the Presidio Red Raider Basketball squad won their first four practice games out of six scheduled in their current barnstorming trip of the Hawaiian Islands.

The lanky Raiders under the direction of Coach Hal Fischer got off to a fast start in their opening contest by pouring on the coal in the second half to drub the Tripler Army Hospital Maroons 74-59.

Big Mike O'Neil led the local cagers in scoring with 26 points

late flash

The latest word from Hawaii is that the Presidio cage stars defeated Fort Shafter 84-74. Bob Harbertson, 505 MP's, pushed in 30 points to lead the Raider attack. Other high scorers were Bill Davis with 22 and Don Lofgran with 17 points.

closely followed by Don Lofgran with 24.

The second Presidio win came at the expense of the University of Hawaii, 94-54. The half time tally being 51-29. Don Harbertson led the Raider scoring with 29 counters. Lofgran was next with 20 points.

The Hickem Field Flyers were next to fall to the high scoring Red Raider squad to the tune of 75-44. The following night the Presidio men edged the Hawaiian Inter-service champion Navy Packers 61-55.

Results of the last two practice games were not available at press time. The games were played against Fort Shafter and the Hawaiian Marines.

Next Tuesday night the Raiders play their first practice tilt on the home courts. Letterman Army Hospital Gym will be the scene and the opponents will be the San Diego Marine Recruit Depot.

Red Raiders Meet Tough Navy Hellcat Foe Today

The powerful Presidio Red Raiders, fresh from their 27 to 6 win over the California Ramblers, engage the tough Alameda Navy Hellcats this afternoon on the Alameda turf. Kickoff time is slated for 1400 hours.

Coach Larry McInerney's soldier gridsters will be in quest of their ninth win of the current grid season. The Red Raiders have rolled up 205 points while giving up but 63 so far this year and have an eight and one official game record.

The starting offensive line for the Presidio barring last minute changes will be Nims and Piggott at ends, McDonnell and Terrell at tackles, Wilson and Holmes at the guard slots and Snyder at center.

Starting in the backfield will be Maytubby at quarterback, Guimarin and Macias at halves and Ratliff at fullback.

The Alameda Hellcats are one of the toughest teams that the Raiders have had to face this year. The local soldiers emerged victorious in the first meeting between the two teams this year, 16 to 7. This was the first time that a Presidio football team had ever beaten the always strong Alameda Navy.

The Navy Hellcats emerged as champions of the 12th Naval District last weekend without a defeat by blanking the Moffett Field Flyers 26 to 0. Their only losses this year came from the Presidio and the Humboldt College eleven.

Next week the Red Raiders journey to Yuma, Arizona, to meet the strong Fort Huachuca eleven in their last scheduled contest of the 1955 season.

On Location for The Rack, an MGM picture now in production, Major Richard G. Bohn (l. to r.), executive officer 30th Engineer Group; actors Wendell Corey and Paul Newman discuss a retreat ceremony about to be filmed in front of engineer headquarters at Ft. Scott. Presidio will be the locale for the production which concerns the court martial of an Army captain charged with enemy collaboration.

“The Rack”

MGM Army Shoots Scenes For New Film At Fort Scott

By Pvt. Sanders Rosenblum

A Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Army set up its field equipment at Fort Scott last week and began shooting the background material for “The Rack,” MGM’s forthcoming film story of an Army captain courtmartialled on charges of collaboration with the enemy while a prisoner of war.

Although most of the picture will be filmed in Hollywood, the Presidio of San Francisco is the specified locale of the courtroom drama. Last week’s brief one-day visit to location—on high ground in front of 30th Engineers Headquarters—yielded the preliminary background views of San Francisco, including a retreat ceremony backed up by a pan shot of the Golden Gate Bridge shrouded in its familiar blanket of fog.

Principals in the film (to be released sometime next March) are Wendell Corey, prosecuting attorney; Edward O’Brien, defense lawyer; Anne Francis, in the picture’s only notable feminine role; Paul Newman, the accused, and Walter Pigeon, Newman’s father and a retired colonel. Only Corey and Newman made the trip to San Francisco.

Also appearing in the movie, if the sequences shot last week are used, will be a Presidio officer and nine EM. Although the motion picture crew had recruited its own Army of civilian extras in downtown San Francisco, full-time Presidio troopers were called in on the technical jobs.

For instance, as the accused (Paul Newman) arrives by jeep at the Judge Advocate’s office (Building 1204, 549th Engineers converted into a legal section for the day) to hear the counts with which he is charged, he is chauffeured by Specialist 3rd Ronald Hibdon, a jeep driver from the 99th Engineers.

Another scene shows Newman leaving the J-A’s section as retreat is sounded. A Sixth Army Band bugler plays the call (although the sound will actually be dubbed in later at the studio), two MPs from the 505th fire the cannon while an officer and EM from the 549th Engineers lower the colors. In the background, soldiers of the extra Army stand at attention.

Two separate Armies on the set, along with a gathering crowd of spectators, led to occasional amusement and mild confusion, with EM saluting Hollywood brass and director Arnold Laven periodically shouting for men from “Our Army, the MGM Army.”

Throughout the day, the Engineers cooperated with the movie men in running off about 18 brief sequences to be used in simulating Presidio of San Francisco atmosphere. Many of the details were arranged through Colonel Wayne E. Downing, CO, and Major Richard G. Bohn, executive officer, 30th Engineer Group. Major Bohn, for instance, had a number of rooms in the Headquarters building converted into temporary dressing rooms for actors and extras. The Engineers also made available information on proper techniques of saluting, insignia and patches when they were called for.

The psychological drama of a captain on trial as a collaborator with the enemy, “The Rack” is a composite of several such cases which have since the Korean war presented difficult social, legal and political problems for the Army and the American people. Court-martialled on six to eight counts, the accused is finally stripped of rank and given a suspended sentence.

The movie offers no solution to the problems, according to the film’s unit manager, Charles Hunt, but merely poses some of the social and psychological difficulties involved.

Along with Specialist 3rd Hibdon, others who participated in the filming were 1st Lt. John W. Granicker, CO, 549th Engineering Company, six EM and one NCO all from the same unit. They are M/Sgt. Cornelius Kopper, Sergeant of the Guard; Pfc. Wallace Bishop, Specialist 3rd Thomas G. Frangos, Pfc. Gerald R. Koch, Pfc. William C. Dumas, Pfc. James Sims and Specialist 3rd Walter Janicki, who make up the color guard for the retreat ceremony.

Two MPs from the 505th—Sgt. Myron Westphal and Sfc. Marshall E. Auer fired the salute. Bugler and Specialist 3rd Larry Huck of the Sixth Army Band sounded retreat.

Congressman Riley Makes Brief Tour Of Presidio Area

Congressman John J. Riley (Dem.-South Carolina), and member of the House Appropriations Committee, made a one-day inspection tour of the Presidio and its subposts yesterday. One of the Congressman’s main interests is military construction.

After an hour’s briefing at Sixth Army Headquarters, Congressman Riley spent the morning in visits to the 30th Engineers enlisted men’s quarters at Fort Scott, the Service Club, Wherry Housing and the 505th MP barracks.

With Lt.-Gen. Robert N. Young, Sixth Army commander, acting as host, a noon luncheon was held at the Officers’ Club for the visiting Congressman.

The legislator spent the afternoon on a survey of the 6th Antiaircraft Regional Command Nike sites.

Congressman Riley completed his tour with a visit to the enlisted men’s quarters at Forts Cronkhite, Barry and Baker.

Local Signal Reps Will Be Sacramento Conference Guests

Representatives of Signal Section, Headquarters, Sixth Army and of the 6th Antiaircraft Regional Command will be guests at the third annual station liaison conference at the Sacramento Signal Depot next week.

Purpose of the meeting is to call together the depot’s traveling representatives to discuss policy, procedures, and to coordinate development of supply and maintenance techniques.

Sacramento Signal Depot personnel are continually on the road offering assistance and advice to posts, camps and stations in the Sixth Army Area.

Ft. Carson Lieutenant Grows Giant Salad Without Terra Firma

Ft. Carson, Colo. (AFPS) — Lt. Lawrence Crouse helped toss a salad which weighed 17,000,000 pounds.

The officer, now with the 61st Inf. Regt. here, was until recently assigned to one of the Army’s two hydroponic farms in Japan.

“Hydroponic” means the plants are grown in tanks without soil.

They are planted in gravel and fed on chemicals. The method not only produces tasty vegetables like tomatoes, lettuce and cucumbers, but is virtually disease-proof.

Sage Brush

Purpose Of Field Maneuvers Topic Of Information Period

Since the indefinite ceasefire 20 May 1955, an uneasy truce has reigned in the ten-mile demilitarized zone which separates American forces from those of the invading aggressor in the area marked off by El Paso, Abilene, Baton Rouge and the mouth of the Mississippi.

While the United Nations negotiates with the aggressor to withdraw from American soil, an anxious world is periodically jolted by constant military and civilian flare-ups in the crisis area.

This is the hypothetical strategic situation which has existed on Operation Sage Brush, the mammoth Army-Air Force maneuver now in process, according to this week’s Troop Information topic which will consider The Purpose of Field Maneuvers.

As an example of the nature and purpose of maneuvers, Sage Brush, the largest joint Army-Air Force operation since World War II, fills most of the Army’s maneuver needs.

Among its functions is the simulation of combat situations, training troops, testing equipment and new tactical concepts under realistic conditions. It serves to increase the peacetime capabilities of the Army and offers real challenges in terms of terrain and logistical problems. In a joint project like Sage Brush, opportunities for cooperation between services are also provided.

But despite the realism which the services attempt to inject into maneuvers, no unit ever “wins.” No one wins a maneuver. Its purpose is to create a learning, not a fighting situation. Maneuvers are not an end in themselves; they are a part of training, the climax to all training—to prepare troops and their staffs for combat.

A maneuver which is not realistic can actually be harmful, teaching the men involved the wrong lessons under artificial and false conditions. But certain adjustments from battle conditions do have to be made in a maneuver situation, resulting in a degree of artificiality.

Played in the right spirit, however, the maneuver is the supreme teacher in preparation for actual combat. In maneuvers, the aggressor force becomes the soldier’s best friend. He teaches him the lessons which may save his life.

Gen. Taylor Orders Finance Offs. To Pay Transient Servicemen

Washington (AFPS) — Army Chief of Staff Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor has directed finance officers to make casual and transient payments to servicemen in all cases except when the propriety of the payment is questioned.

He ruled out refusals to make such payments on the grounds of an alleged increase in work load or because of the specialized nature of the disbursing office.

He emphasized that army policy “requires prompt and proper payments will be made to military personnel wherever possible.”

DA Sets New Duty Tour Length For Battalion Commanders

Washington (AFPS)—The Army has set 14 to 18 months as the normal tour as battalion commander for infantry, artillery and armor field grade officers. Sixteen months is considered the most desirable tour length.

Under this new policy, the Army said, outstanding field grade officers will be rotated through battalion commands.

Assignments will be made with the following priorities: officers without previous command experience at battalion level; officers with less than nine months of such experience; and other field grade officers.

But field commanders have been informed that combat readiness of a unit must not be jeopardized by the transfer of battalion commanders under the new policy.

Army officials explained that the battalion command tour length has been adopted because it will allow for continuity in units. It also will permit enough officers to gain battalion command experience to meet mobilization needs.

This policy, they added, will give more outstanding officers the opportunity of enhancing their career potentials for future assignments for either high level, staff or command duty.

Vol. 4, No. 26

PRESIDIO OF SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA

Thursday 24 November, 1955

Honorable John J. Riley, Congressman (Dem.) from South Carolina, and a member of the House Appropriations Committee (center) talks with Lt. General Robert N. Young, Sixth Army commander and Maj. Gen. Riley F. Ennis, Sixth Army deputy commander, during a brief visit to Sixth Army

Headquarters. Congressman Riley spent a day at the Presidio and sub-posts inspecting military construction and housing. Included in his inspection tour were enlisted men's quarters, Wherry Housing, the Service Club and 6th Antiaircraft Regional Command NIKE sites.

Budget Cuts Force Army to Eliminate Some Civilian Jobs

Current budgetary limitations will require a reduction in force of civilian employees at the Presidio of San Francisco, according to an announcement made by the Army at the Presidio this week.

The Army's announcement said new budgetary limitations have necessitated the elimination of 177 positions of the approximately 2,500 currently held by civilians at Sixth Army Headquarters and the Presidio's Post Headquarters. The civilian employees affected by the reduction in force already have received their 30 days' notices.

The Army will assist separated personnel in obtaining employment with other federal agencies and private industry. Qualifications of employees affected will be sent to the State Employment Agency for dissemination to industrial organizations and to Civil Service Regional Office for referral to other federal agencies.

Arrangements will be made for employees' interviews to facilitate immediate consideration of their skills, according to the Army's announcement.

Congressman Visits NIKE Site; Notes Area Air Defense

The Honorable William S. Mailliard, United States Representative from the 4th Congressional District of California, visited Battery "B" (Battery Caulfield), 740th Antiaircraft Artillery Missile Battalion, Fort Scott, California, this week.

During his tour of Battery Caulfield, Mr. Mailliard was escorted by Major General Hobart Hewett, Commanding General, 6th Antiaircraft Regional Command, Fort Baker, California, and Colonel Dallas F. Haynes, Commanding Officer, 30th Antiaircraft Artillery Group, Fort Barry.

Representative Mailliard was met at Battery Caulfield by Lieutenant Colonel Charles Ashley, 740th Missile Battalion Commander, and Captain Arthur C. Shepard, "B" Battery Commander. Explanatory talks were given by Lieutenants Charles E. Watkins, John C. Cavanagh, Thomas M. Baatz and Pfc. David Killen on the assembly, testing, fueling and launching of the NIKE Guided Missile. An abbreviated launcher drill and tour of an underground storage chamber followed.

Operation of the radar systems at the battery control area was explained to the group during a general tour of the radar control vans and radar ready room.

turkish chief

General Ismail Hakki Tunaboynu, Chief of the Turkish General Staff, is slated to arrive in the United States next week for a three-week visit of Army installations in the east.

better hurry!

If you have missed the deadline date for mailing those Christmas gifts to members of our Armed Forces overseas, you can still reach them by using the Air Mail and Air Parcel Post services, announced Postmaster John F. Fixa today. Parcels may not exceed 2 pounds in weight and are limited to 30 inches in size (length and girth combined).

Mechanical Horsepower

20th Century Style Rodeo To Emphasize Safe Driving

Part of a nation-wide safe-driving campaign, a Motor Rodeo in the style of the New West, will be held on the Presidio Parade Ground, 1 December, the date designated by President Eisenhower as Safe Driving Day (S-D Day).

With considerably more horsepower available than was ever seen at an Old West Rodeo, the Motor Rodeo is designed to promote safe-driving techniques among service personnel.

Every unit on post is eligible to enter contestants in the Rodeo competition for cash awards of $25, $15 and $10. Three main events are scheduled—Best Vehicle, Driver Appearance and Knowledge and the Driving Course which consists of six different tests.

At 0930 the Best Vehicle and Driver Appearance and Knowledge events will be run off on the east side of the Parade Ground. Contestants' vehicles will be judged on a point system for appearance, mechanical condition and safety features. In the driver appearance and knowledge competition, each entry will take a written exam on safe driving, first aid and vehicular fire fighting.

Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander will open the driving course event at 1130 hours with a brief five minute welcoming talk. Each driver contestant will then run the motor gauntlet of six different events. They are:

The Serpentine: a test to determine the driver's ability to steer with precision under restricted conditions. He must weave his vehicle through a line of barrels passing alternately to the right, then to the left—first backwards then returning through the course forward. His grade will be judged on the number of times his vehicle stops, touches, scrapes or knocks over the barrels.

Specify Policy!

DOD Orders Close Review Of Rights Of Military Personnel Serving Abroad

Washington (AFPS)—Commanding officers in 15 foreign countries have been advised to press for diplomatic action if they decide servicemen under their command, arrested by local authorities, have not received fair trials.

The Department of Defense included this point in a directive consolidating its policies on safeguarding the rights of U.S. servicemen stationed in countries having authority to arrest and try them for criminal offenses. These are Japan and the 14 NATO countries other than the U.S.

A DOD spokesman said the single directive was being issued to give servicemen a fuller understanding of their legal rights while stationed overseas.

According to the directive, a U.S. officer should be appointed in each of the 15 countries to study local legal procedure. The directive added that any change in the legal machinery of these countries is to be reported to the judge advocates general of the three services.

The directive also includes the following provisions:

1. Representatives of all three services, whenever possible, shall act as observers in trials of military personnel before foreign courts.
2. These observers shall submit reports to the chief of the U.S. diplomatic mission stating whether the serviceman received a fair trial.
3. Accused personnel shall be represented by civilian lawyers at government expense when it is in the best interest of the U.S.

4. Designated officers will visit penal institutions at least once every 30 days to assure that confined military personnel are receiving the same rights as they would when held in U.S. facilities.

At last count, there were 68 servicemen confined in foreign countries and all are enlisted men. In almost 70 per cent of the cases in which they had jurisdiction, the foreign countries waived the right to try servicemen. Of those tried, only about one per cent were sentenced to prison.

The DOD also restated that U.S. servicemen confined in foreign countries shall not be discharged from the armed forces until completion of their prison terms, except in unusual cases authorized by the Secretary of Defense.

vip visit

His Excellency Paolo Emilio Taviani, Italian Minister of Defense, will visit Washington, D.C., as a guest of the Secretary of Defense, Charles E. Wilson, next week.

religious tradition!

In keeping with national religious observances, two services for Presidio personnel will be held on Thanksgiving day.

A Protestant service will be conducted at the Post chapel, 1000 hours, by Chaplain (Major) Henry C. Butt.

A Thanksgiving Mass for personnel of the Catholic faith will be celebrated by Chaplain (Captain) Ferdinand B. Dempsher, at the Chapel of Our Lady, 0830 on the morning of the 24th.

Parade Will Honor Officer, Two NCOs Next Wednesday

High military honors will be presented to an officer and two NCOs at a full retreat ceremony scheduled for 1630 hours 30 November on the Presidio Parade Ground.

By direction of the President of the United States, the Award of the Silver Star will be presented to 2nd Lt. Paul Zinsky who while a member of Company A, 38th Infantry Regiment, 2nd Infantry Division, spearheaded an assault on a strategic and heavily fortified enemy-held position near Mundung-ni, Korea, 14 October 1951.

To M/Sgt. Duane C. Ragan, the citation for the Commendation Ribbon with Metal Pendant will be presented. Sgt. Ragan will receive the award for his "exceptional" work as Administrative Noncommissioned Officer, Kyongsang Namdo Provincial Civil Assistance Team, and later as Sergeant Major, Korea Civil Assistance Command, from 11 April, 1954 to 17 June, 1955.

The Soldier's Medal will be bestowed upon Corporal James D. Dobson, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 505th Military Police Battalion. Corporal Dobson saved a man from drowning 30 April, 1955. When a car plunged into the waters of San Francisco Bay, Corporal Dobson rescued him just as the car was sinking to the bottom of the bay.

Special Feature

Brain fragment taken from the head of a dog suspect of being rabid is examined by Mrs. Beatrice England, virologist at the Fort Baker lab. A civilian, Mrs. England has a Bachelor of Science degree in Bacteriology. She is searching for the presence of minute Negri bodies. This week the Star Presidian features an exclusive trip to one of the post's most unique units. (p. 4)

Sensitive Radar equipment along with the deadly NIKÉ missiles used to fortify the San Francisco Bay area against air attack were examined recently by nearly 100 representatives of the National Security Industrial Association during their tour of Battery A, 9th AAA Missile Battalion. Taking a look at a radar antenna is (from left) Mr. B. A. Bannan, Col. Dallas F. Haynes, 30th AAA Group Commander and Admiral (ret.) H. D. Huber. The NSIA maintains liaison with the Department of Defense in order to help the Armed Services utilize technical equipment produced by American industry.

Defense Liaison

100 From Industry's Advisory Group Tour NIKÉ Battery At Ft. Cronkite

One hundred leading industrialists checked in at Ft. Cronkite recently and made a quick, but intensive tour of part of the San Francisco Bay Region's antiaircraft defense network.

The group, all members of the National Security Industrial Association, was shown guided missile and radar operations of Battery A, 9th AAA Missile Battalion.

The industry leaders were welcomed by Maj. General Hobart Hewett, Commanding General, 6th Antiaircraft Regional Command; Colonel Dallas F. Haynes, 30th AAA Group Commanding Officer, and Lt. Col. Lyman D. Burkett, 9th AAA Missile Battalion commander.

Serving as guide and coordinator of the visit to the NIKÉ sites was Capt. Henry E. Paine, A Battery CO. A group of battery officers, Lieutenants George W. Mulligan, Robert H. Martinchich and Warrant Officer Leland R. Anderson, conducted briefings on key NIKÉ characteristics.

The National Security Industrial Association is an organization composed of leaders of industry who maintain liaison with the Department of Defense in order to assist in the utilization of technical equipment which they produce and also to make the "know how" of industry available to the Armed Forces.

Their recent visit to the NIKÉ battery was a part of their program to keep in close touch with the military defense of the nation.

Army Commander To Attend Top Level Meet In Washington

Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Commanding General, Sixth Army, left the Presidio today for Washington, D.C., to attend a top-level meeting on current Army matters scheduled for 28 and 29 November.

Scheduled to attend the meeting with General Maxwell D. Taylor, Army Chief of Staff, are the Commanding General, Continental Army Command; Commanding Generals of the six Armies in the United States; Commanding General, Military District of Washington; Commander in - Chief, U.S. Army Europe; Commanding General, Military District of Washington; General, Army Forces Far East; Commanding General, U.S. Army Alaska; Commanding General, Army Anti-Aircraft Command, and Commanding General, U.S. Army Caribbean.

The Army Quartermaster school made its home in Fort Lee, Va., Oct. 6, 1941.

DOD Plans Cut In Recreation Facility Building

Washington (AFPS) — Proposed new post golf courses, bowling alleys and swimming pools disappeared from service drawing boards when the Department of Defense recently ordered a cutback in construction of recreational facilities.

Also ruled out, with some exceptions, was use of appropriated funds to build family housing units. The DOD indicated however, that other means would be used to provide housing.

A DOD directive, signed by Deputy Defense Secretary Reuben B. Robertson, Jr., and addressed to the three service secretaries, said "educational wings to chapels, additional swimming pools when one already exists, golf courses, bowling alleys, guest houses and entertainment workshops will be deferred unless exceptional circumstances exist."

The recreation and housing cutbacks apply to fiscal 1956 and 1957.

Replacement of existing facilities will be limited to items that cannot be used for mission requirements or constitute hazards to health and safety. Improvements and additions will be deferred unless "actually necessary to carry out assigned missions."

Army's New Pipeline Truck Converts Easily For Cargo Hauling

Designed primarily for petroleum pipeline construction, a dual purpose truck developed by the Corps of Engineers' Research and Development Laboratories will also do double duty as a cargo vehicle.

The new unit is built on a standard military 2½-ton truck, equipped with a rear or side mountable A-frame, a rear-of-cab mounted winch and rolling tailboard.

The winch has a capacity of 20,000 pounds and by using the rolling tailboard a driver can load or unload skid-mounted equipment such as pumping units without assistance.

By adding cargo sides, troop seats, lazybacks, bows and paulin, the truck can be transformed within a few minutes for cargo or personnel. The World War II pipeline truck could not be so converted.

On American Tour

General Tabayoshi Fuchinokami In Reunion With American Sergeant

Major General Tabayoshi Fuchinokami of the Japanese Ground Self-Defense Force, and M/Sgt. William T. Houston, Jr., of Fort Huachuca, Arizona, speak the same language.

The language is English—which Sgt. Houston taught to General Fuchinokami at the Japanese Military Academy during more than two years' duty with the U.S. Military Assistance Advisory Group in Japan.

When General Fuchinokami made plans for yesterday's arrival at Fort Mason, the beginning of his American visit, he wrote Sgt. Houston, asking if his former instructor could be on hand to meet him. Sgt. Houston accepted the invitation.

General Fuchinokami with four other high ranking Japanese officers began a tour of the United States Tuesday under the auspices of the Mutual Defense Assistance Program.

His friend Sgt. Houston taught English to many of Japan's top military leaders at the Japanese Military Academy. He has received a special commendation from Lt. Gen. Keizo Hayashi, Chief of the Japanese Joint Staff Council, in recognition of his work as a language instructor.

A veteran of 19 years in the Army, Sgt. Houston has served in the Philippines, Great Britain, North Africa, India and Japan. He attended the Philippines University for three years.

Making the American tour along with General Fuchinokami are Major General Kaizo Yoshihashi, vice-superintendent Defense Agency College; Colonel Schigefumi Hirai, Commandant, Officer Candidate School; Colonel Yrsuke Kudo, Adjutant General, and Colonel Takeshi Eto, Chief of the School Branch, Japanese Ground Self-Defense Force.

reorganization!

Seven of the 19 proposals for business reorganization within the department made by the Hoover Commission, have already been approved by Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson. Continued studies toward adoption of the remaining 12 are being continued by defense officials.

Under a new law, a close friend or an associate of a deceased veteran may receive the American flag used to drape the veteran's casket if no claim is made by the next of kin.

Half-Million Dollar Barracks Presented Oakland Terminal

Part of the plan to provide permanent housing for Oakland's non-family enlisted personnel, a new 263-man, three story barracks building was officially presented to Oakland Army Terminal last week by the San Francisco Army District Engineer.

The fifth of its kind to be built at the Oakland Army installation since the end of World War II, the three-floor reinforced concrete structure houses a full company.

It is equipped with living quarters, as well as facilities for mess, administration and recreation, rendering the unit which it houses self-contained.

The $516,000 barracks building is four in most respects to its four predecessors except where asphalt tile has been employed instead of concrete flooring, and in the use of tile wainscoting to replace painted concrete.

On the building's first floor are the company administrative offices and a center wing with two adjacent dining rooms and kitchens. The second story holds two day rooms, non-commissioned officers' quarters, lounge and bath facilities. The two wings each contain a 32-man squad room, partitioned into four-man roomettes. The third floor houses similar facilities.

army air!

The creation of the new Army Aviation Division within the office of the Assistant Chief of Staff, G-3, has added coordination and control to the expanding program. Headed by Brig. General H. H. Howze, USA, and assisted by Colonel W. R. Williams, both veteran aviators, a new and more important role is ahead for Army Aviation.

During fiscal 1955, 36,523 men successfully completed the fourth elementary grade in the Army.

thanksgiving message---

By CHAPLAIN (MG) PATRICK J. RYAN
(Chief of Chaplains, Department of the Army)

Each day God continues to bestow His blessings upon us and our Nation. In return, we offer to God our thanks. We place ourselves under God. We ask Him to direct and to guide us in doing what is right. We give thanks for His favors. This is the essence of thanksgiving and the spirit of our Thanksgiving holiday.

The traditional festive board, the exciting sports events, and other holiday attractions are good in their proper place. They must not be accentuated, however, to the point where we forget to put first things first—thanking God. When God becomes the center of our Thanksgiving Day, then the pleasures we enjoy and the things we do take on meaning and purpose. When we lead our military forces in prayerful thanks to God on Thanksgiving Day, then Thanksgiving 1955 is a real thanksgiving.

My staff joins me in wishing all of you the joys and blessings of a happy Thanksgiving in the spirit of the First Thanksgiving Proclamation:

"Wherefore, I, James Bradford, Governor of this group of people, do announce this season of prayer and thanksgiving to Almighty God.

"For the once, ye people will forsake ye implements of honorable toil and will assemble in feasting and dutiful worship."

Concentration Camp Survivor Becomes New American Citizen

Nine years after being freed from a Soviet Concentration Camp in his native Czechoslovakia, Sp3 Karl Minnich, Headquarters Company, 30th Engineer Group, took a morning off from his Army chores to pledge allegiance to the American Flag and to be sworn in as a citizen of the United States.

Sharing the first moments of a new citizenship with Specialist Minnich were 200 civilians and one other Army enlisted man, many of whom suffered similar treatment in post-war Europe.

"It was the biggest thrill of my life," he declared, "when they announced that I was granted United States citizenship."

The new American was born in Barschendorf, Czechoslovakia, and received his education there. In 1944 when the Russians marched into his homeland, he fled with his father and mother to the Sudetenland.

But in May 1945, the Soviet forces moved into the Sudetenland, also, again forcing Karl and his parents to flee—this time they hoped to their home in Czechoslovakia.

Their flight was abruptly halted when they were captured by the Russians and placed in the Novaky Concentration Camp in Czechoslovakia.

He and his mother remained there for 16 months, a half-year longer than did his father, who died in the camp. In November, 1946, Sp3 Minnich and his mother were released.

Carrying the scars of internment with them, they went to Ulm-on-the-Danube, Germany, where they settled for five years. Karl Minnich, then a displaced person, sailed for the United States in 1951 to start life anew in a free nation.

He entered the Army in December, 1953, completing basic training at Aberdeen Proving Grounds, Maryland. With Headquarters and Headquarters Company of the 30th since early 1954, he works at the Central Filing office at Group Headquarters.

Specialist Minnich is married and lives in San Francisco with his wife and eight-months-old daughter.

TI&E Separation Series Will Aid Reserve Policies

The Post Troop Information and Education Division has been doing its bit towards increasing participation in Reserve Force activities through monthly orientation periods scheduled at the Presidio Theater.

Personnel due for separation are given a two-hour period of instruction and discussion prior to reporting to the Post Transfer Station.

These sessions, designed to aid servicemen and women during their period of readjustment to civilian life, are held on the morning of the second Thursday of each month at eight o'clock.

The new "civilians" are briefed on what to expect during their few remaining weeks in uniform—and the importance of their Reserve obligation. They are told what must be accomplished during the processing period at the Transfer Station and what to expect after returning to their home states.

The countless questions which plague veterans are answered as speakers explain the Reserve Act of 1955 as well as many other important subjects.

A film, "Going Back to Civilian Life," is presented. This picture illustrates the importance of the saving of all papers connected with their Army service, the advantages of active participation in the Army Reserve Program, and veterans' rights and benefits.

A fact sheet, prepared by the Post Troop Information and Education Division, contains answers to questions about the Reserve Forces Act of 1955, and is distributed during the orientation period.

The two most important phases of separation from the service—the "terminal" or final-type physical examination—and the "Report of Separation from the Armed Forces of the United States" are emphasized during the briefing.

DA Directs Aid For EMs Seeking Class Q Allotments

Washington (AFPS)—The Department of the Army has directed that enlisted men seeking class "Q" allotments for parents be given all necessary help in submitting applications to the Army Finance Center in Indianapolis.

The Army pointed out that determination of such claims is the sole responsibility of the commanding general of the Finance Center. No one else is authorized to act on them, it added.

Circular 35-47 ordered that enlisted personnel not be "prevented" or "discouraged" from submitting claims. Authorities aiding EM to draw up applications were told to make certain they are "clear and legible and that member's name, service number, organization, and names and addresses of dependents are correctly furnished."

"A Little Spice goes a long way," says Sp3 Peggy Harris (left) to Sp2 Patricia Phillips, as they begin culinary chores at the consolidated mess hall here. Peggy finished first in her class at the Sixth Army Food Service School at Ft. Ord and Pat finished third in another. Both members of the Presidio WAC Detachment, they are the first WAC cooks to be used here.

WAC Pair Starts Cook's Tour After Success at Ord School

If any doubt remains regarding the truth of the adage that the way to a woman's heart is to praise her cooking, there are two Presidio WACs who are now ready and eager to reaffirm it.

First in a class of 22 men and women graduating from the Sixth Army Food Service School in Fort Ord recently, was Specialist 3rd class Peggy Harris, with a score of 920 out of a possible 1000.

In the graduating class preceding the above, another Presidio WAC, Specialist 2nd class Patricia Phillips, returned here with second place honors in a predominantly male class of students.

Both enlisted women are slated to don the white caps and jackets of the Army's women cooks and bakers when the 6002nd WAC detachment mess hall reopens soon after a thorough redecorating job under way during the past few weeks.

A humorous slant, or perhaps a prophetic one, connected with the story of the WACs and their mess hall is that in a recent survey to determine whether or not it might be converted to serve the enlisted women exclusively, the male soldiers were first and strongest in their disapproval of being robbed of the pleasure of joining the distaff side during meal times in the consolidated mess.

Not confining their skills to the culinary field alone, Specialists Harris and Phillips have served creditably in Army assignments here and on other military posts.

Peggy was a medical technician at the Presidio dispensary before she went to Okinawa where she also was assigned as a medic. She received her military training at Fort Lee, Virginia, and was recruited from her home city of Gastonia, South Carolina. Her most prized possessions at the moment are a commendation received from the commandant of the Sixth Army Food Service School, with a Parker pen and pencil set in recognition of her proficiency as a student.

Specialist Phillips is a native of Long Beach, California. She has had seven years' military service with Army Quartermaster and until she went to cooking school was assigned to the QM sales store here. Other assignments held by Patricia were at Camp Ota, Japan, Briggs Field in Texas, and at Ardmore Air Force Base in Oklahoma.

Establish New TAG Unit For Benefit Of Retired Personnel

Department of the Army has established a Retired Activities Unit under TAG that will provide centralized assistance to all retired officers and enlisted men.

Primary aim of the new unit will be to promote greater interest in Army affairs by keeping retired personnel informed of their rights, privileges and benefits.

The new unit will work closely with service agencies and associations, but stresses that it will not act as an employment placement agency.

Some Officers On Active Duty Will Win Education Aid

Washington (AFPS)—Army officers who need six months residency to complete their college education now can apply to finish their schooling while on active duty.

Outlined in change one to AR 355-30, the new policy is limited to 100 qualified officers each semester. They must be serving in the U. S. and not have orders to overseas commands.

Applicants must agree to bear all expenses, including tuition, books, fees and cost of moving dependents. Officers will receive their normal pay and allowances, but not per diem or dislocation allowances.

Streptococcus Cultures are carefully transferred from one container to another by Miss Diana Ides, a civilian lab technician. White mice, which are cannibalistic toward their young, nevertheless thrive in sizeable groups under care of the Medical Service Department. One of the lab's three photomicrographic cameras is operated by M/Sgt. George C. Hathaway of the Medical Illustration section. The microscope acts as the camera lens, is capable of magnifying up to 900 times, photographs in black and white or color. This is only one of the many modern instruments that facilitate the laboratory's unique ventures into medical research.

Army Lab Does Daily Battle With Deadly Virus

By Pvt. Sanders Rosenblum
Star-Presidian Staff Writer

No overseas assignment is likely to transfer a man to a stranger or more remote world than the microscopic and submicroscopic universes into which the staff members of the Sixth Army Area Medical Laboratory intrude daily.

Comparable to a sizable medical school in the extent of its research facilities, the Fort Baker laboratory has since 1947 been the experiment and analysis center for all the military installations in the Sixth Army Area.

From these bases, as well as from other continental Army Areas, the Central Pacific, Alaska and the Far East, medical specimens filter in to the Fort Baker labs for examination and diagnosis. From the hospitals and dispensaries of the Army, Air Force (nearly 40 percent of the lab's work is in connection with the Air Force) and the Navy come problems too complex to be handled by the smaller service outposts.

Exploration into the domains of viral and bacteriological forms of life or near-life which share the earth with man requires a staff of highly specialized personnel. About evenly divided between military and civilians, the Fort Baker laboratory staff, which includes five Ph.D.'s and an M.D., is commanded by Captain William A. Meriwether, who is himself an M.D. and a specialist in pathology. Most of the EM and civilian technicians each have at least one degree in some field pertinent to the laboratory's mission. One private is a Ph.D. candidate.

The lab's variety of objectives is reflected in its organizational breakdown. The medical division includes departments in Bacteriology, Chemistry, Parasitology, Entomology, Pathology, Serology, Virus and Rickettsial Diseases and Medical Illustration.

Some of the laboratory's work is new and on the edges of the most recently opened medical frontiers; some is simply routine operation.

In the Virology section, original research is being conducted in isolating and identifying agents of respiratory diseases until recently unexplainable. Grown on cancerous tissue cells, the viruses are nameless. They have only numbers. Lt. Col. Trygve O. Berge, the lab executive officer, has recently been credited with discovery of number 7 in the viral group connected with upper respiratory organ diseases of the Adenoid-Pharynx-Conjunctiva (white part of the eye) system. Viruses, which seem to take a chemical form under certain circumstances and that of living matter under others, are shipped frozen at 60 degrees below zero. At the laboratory, they are nurtured on living tissues. Cancer cells seem to provide the most fertile ground for raising viruses.

The daily task of the Virology section is to find and isolate the viral agents of respiratory diseases related to the so-called common cold and to identify other viral agents in cases like rabies, atypical or viral pneumonia, encephalitis, poliomyelitis and influenza.

Virology is a part within the general Immunology section of the lab, along with the Serology unit. One of the functions of the Serology department is the performance of the T. P. I. tests (Treponemal pallidum Immobilization)—a system of intricate blood tests for the elusive syphilis spirochete.

In the Pathology department, diseased tissues from surgical operations and autopsy examinations are received for examination and diagnosis. Autopsies are usually performed in any case where Army personnel has succumbed to disease. Lesions present on the specimens from body organs are put through the lab's extensive testing facilities.

The Parasitology department examines body materials for disease provoking parasites, as in the case of an illness like amebic dysentery.

Part of the job of the Bacteriology Department is to nurse a number of bacteria cultures into thriving communities for identification and diagnosis of diseases caused by bacteria. Grown in artificial culture media, some bacterial colonies may be injected into animals to check the potency of the microorganisms. For just that reason, the Medical Service Branch of the lab maintains a colony of some 2500 experimental animals—white mice, guinea pigs, frogs, hamsters and rabbits.

The insect world is also subject to scientific scrutiny by the Entomology Department. Some types of mosquitoes, for example, are known as carriers of malaria. Certain fleas are also suspect as a source of Bubonic Plague.

The Chemistry section (or more properly bio-chemistry), is called upon for a vast variety of tests and services. One of its important interests is industrial hygiene and it cooperates with a number of civilian organizations on problems relating to the field. Occasionally, it is even called into the cloak and dagger business, when a CID agent may present the Chemistry section with a bloody knife for examination and analysis. The Chemistry department may also be consulted in cases involving poisons and narcotics.

Once the IX Corps Area, Ninth Service Command Laboratory at the Presidio of Monterey, the present Sixth Army Area Medical lab in July, 1947, moved into the offices of a former Army hospital set in the quiet hills of Fort Baker.

Since that time, it has been unobtrusively fighting a perpetual battle against one of the oldest and most persistent enemies of men and armies.

Volume of gases in the blood and other body fluids is measured with a Manometric Blood Gas Apparatus by Pvt. Irving Rosen, a Biological Science assistant at the Sixth Army Area Medical Laboratory. Among the gases present in the body are, for instance, Carbon Dioxide, Oxygen and Carbon Monoxide.

Impregnation of tissues with paraffin in preparing microscope slides is an overnight process with the Autotechnicon apparatus. Checking the containers are Mrs. Mary Siefert, a Histopathology (study of tissues) technician, and Captain William A. Meriwether, commanding officer, Sixth Army Area Medical Laboratory. In the Serology Department, Miss Carmen M. Mauris and Specialist 3rd Lawrence E. Jones are pipetting serological specimens, measuring specific amounts to be deposited in separate test tubes. These are but a few of the many important jobs being done by the Army's medical technicians.

Electronic Card System Speeds Eucom Assignment

Washington (AFPS) — Army personnel headed for Europe soon may receive their specific duty assignments before leaving the U.S., by use of a new electronic punch-card system.

The plan will be tried as an experiment at Ft. Dix, N. J. It will affect only men, not accompanied by families, processed through the overseas replacement station there.

Operating by telephone and radio connections to USAREUR Hq. in Heidelberg, Germany, the electronic system will determine the duty station in Europe for individual enlisted men.

An assignment team from USAREUR will be stationed at Ft. Dix to operate the system. Using punch cards this team will compile the qualification data of replacements arriving at Ft. Dix.

The information will be transmitted by electrical impulse to USAREUR Hq., where the individual assignments will be determined by machine methods and sent back to Ft. Dix.

The men can then be shipped directly to their new assignments in Europe without stopping at replacement depots. The Army estimated that replacements will reach their duty stations three or four days sooner under this system.

New Blue Uniform At Local PXs On 1 December

A Presidio post exchange spokesman announced to the Star Presidian this week that the first showing of the new Army blue uniform will be presented at the local PX on or about 1 December. Shown on a sample basis only, the items may be looked over as such, with individual selections provided through special order.

Allowing for the varied accessories in regard to particular grade, only the basis two-piece uniform will be on display at post exchanges at present.

Prices at this time are not specific, but Army and Air Force Post Exchange officials say it is expected that cost will not exceed that of popular tailored civilian suits.

No immediate changes are contemplated in SR 600-32-10 which would nullify the Army blue uniform now prescribed by section 11 of the regulation. It is expected, however, that wording of the same regulation will be amended to permit substitutes in trouser and sleeve ornamentation to be worn with gold or gilt insignia of rank and cap ornament.

QM shade 150 for coat and 151 for trousers, (151 for general officers) remain unchanged.

Dropped from the list of authorized fabrics for blue uniforms are to be crepe and doe-skin based on the fact that such fabrics are almost nonexistent in the current market.

Wool gabardine is being added to the list which includes broadcloth, baratheia and elastique.

However, any uniform of-fabric such as crepe or doe skin now owned by military personnel is authorized for as long as it is serviceable.

Ichi Ban's, Hilltoppers Tied In Eastern Bowl

A two-way tie for the top spot in the Eastern Bowling League continued this week with the Ichi Ban's and the Hilltoppers No. 6 teams deadlocked with identical 38 and 26 marks in league competition.

High game for the Ichi Ban's so far this season has been Owens with a fine 224 roll. Owens is closely followed by Alexander with 221, Sakurada with 221 and Hirota with 218.

For the Hilltoppers No. 6 squad Takahashi is high man with a 224 score. Right behind him is Willard with 200 and Schillinger with 198.

The second place Hooks although ten games behind took a 4 to 0 forfeit win from the seventh place Fogbounders. The third place Hilltoppers were not so lucky, however, as they dropped a 3 to 1 loss to the fifth place Soltechs. Yeager was high for the Soltechs with a 169/482 roll and Stewart topped the men from the hill with a good 201/547 bowl.

Bowl Games Shaping Up As Thrillers

Michigan State and UCLA, third and fifth, respectively, in the national football ranking, have another Rose Bowl rendezvous scheduled 2 January in Pasadena.

Michigan State, which won a wild battle from UCLA in Pasadena two years ago, 28-20, was formally named as the Big Ten representative Sunday. UCLA's selection was made positive yesterday by conference vote.

Here is how the bowl pictures shape up as of yesterday:

ROSE BOWL—Michigan State (8-1) vs. UCLA (9-1).

ORANGE BOWL—Oklahoma (9-0) vs. Maryland (9-0), the two top ranking teams in the country.

COTTON BOWL—TCU (8-1) vs. team to be selected. The Cotton Bowl wants Navy if the Middies can beat Army this Saturday. Otherwise maybe Pittsburgh.

SUGAR BOWL—Mississippi, Georgia Tech and Auburn leading candidates with Vanderbilt, winner of its last six, a dark horse.

don't shoot

California hunters were warned that 53 yellow geese which may soon be winging down California from Tule Lake are not legal targets.

They are Ross's geese, a fully protected species, which were dyed yellow and banded by the Department of Fish and Game to determine their movements to the central valleys, and to check their wintering grounds.

Grid Clash

Raiders Win Ninth Tilt Over Alameda

By Pvt. Bob Malone
Star-Presidian Sports Editor

Under last Friday's cloudy skies Coach Larry McInerney's Presidio Red Raiders won their ninth victory of the 1955 pigskin season as they smashed the 12th Naval District Champions, the Alameda Naval Hellcats, 33-9, on the Alameda home field.

The Navy Hellcats, eager to avenge an early season defeat to the Red Raiders, 16-7, jumped off to an early lead as halfback Al Magnal kicked a ten-yard field goal to put the Tars ahead 3-0.

The Presidio gridsters roared right back when speedy left-half Jim Guimarin, of the 752d AAA Gun Bn., galloped 45 yards for the first Raider touchdown. Bobby Ratliff converted and the Soldiers were out in front 7-3.

Presidio kicked off to the Alameda 20 where Navy halfback Al Magnal gathered in the elusive pigskin and sprinted 80 yards straight up the middle for a TD. The extra point try failed and the Hellcats led 9-7 as the first quarter ended.

The Raiders came right back as the second frame ended when left end Dick Piggott ripped his way for 40 yards on an end around for the crucial touchdown. Bobby Ratliff converted and the half ended with the local gridsters ahead 14-9.

Taking the second half kickoff the Red Raiders marched right down the field displaying a powerful running attack sparked by big Bobby Ratliff, of the 740th AAA Msl. Bn.; Ratliff finally going over from three yards out for the score. The conversion was missed and the Presidio was out in front 20-9.

Alameda was unable to gain after the kickoff and the Raiders took over and scored when Morris Maytubby went 15 yards on a keep play. Ratliff toed the conversion true and the Raiders were out in front 27-9.

This ended the Raider scoring for the third period. Early in the final stanza quarterback Maytubby pitched out to halfback Purcell Daniels and the speedy back legged it 45 yards for the final Presidio touchdown of the afternoon.

Sometime this morning the Presidio gridsters will board a plane for the trip to Yuma, Arizona, for their final game of the 1955 season against the Fort Huachuca Raiders. Little is known about the Huachuca squad except the probable starting line-up. The ends will be Riner and Fausset, Schneible and Kahlesdorf at tackles, Stroud and Simmons at guards and Gelnett at center.

The Fort Huachuca backfield will feature Reeves at quarterback, Kaihewalu and Schwab at the halves and Combs at fullback.

second best

Although the 1955 Sierra season, which ended Sunday night, 30 October, ran an extra week it now appears that the total bag for the combined coastal and inland seasons was slightly lower than the 1954 record breaking total, but still is the second best ever recorded.

Tag returns as of the 31st day of the Sierra season showed the bag running about 3,500 behind last season as of this date.

The recent warm weather and lack of high mountain storms had prevented any major migrations to lower and more accessible hunting country, the Department pointed out.

Services To Play Part In Olympics

New York (AFPS) — The armed forces may be heavily represented on the U.S. Olympic basketball team in the 1956 games at Melbourne, Australia.

A new method of selecting the team has been recommended to the executive board of the U.S. Olympic committee which could greatly increase service participation in the games.

According to Colonel Harry Henshel, chairman of the Olympic basketball committee which made the recommendation, the plans call for a tryout tournament to be held the first week of April, 1956, following the AAU, NCAA and armed forces championships.

It may be difficult for college teams to participate in the Olympics because the games will be played halfway through the fall semester. For this reason, the basketball committee has encouraged the armed forces to cooperate as fully as possible.

Many of the college stars who are now in the service are still amateurs. Under a recent Department of Defense ruling they will have a chance to train and compete for the U.S. team when it does not interfere with their military duties.

Colonel Henshel said the Olympic tryout would consist of four teams, two from the AAU, one college squad and one from the armed forces.

The Olympic squad will consist of 14 players. Seven will be picked from the team which finishes first in the playoff and the committee will choose seven from the other teams. The same procedure will be followed should both AAU teams finish first and second.

Duck Hunt

Commission Sets 1955 Standards For Waterfowl

A 72-day waterfowl season, 15 October to 18 November and 10 December to 15 January, has been adopted for California by the Fish and Game Commission.

Bag and possession limit is seven ducks plus three additional sprig or widgeon authorized as an agricultural depredation control measure.

The bag and possession limit on geese remains at six, with no more than three of the dark species to be included in the bag. In District 22—Imperial County and eastern Riverside and San Bernardino counties—only one Canada goose may be taken.

The limit on coots is 25 birds.

A straight 80-day waterfowl season has been set for the Colorado River area, to coincide with the season in the bordering states of Nevada and Arizona. Dates are October 28 to January 15.

Black sea brant season will open December 10, to coincide with the opening of the second half of the split waterfowl season. Brant season extends to February 10. Bag and possession limit is three birds.

The season on jacksnipe will also open December 10. It will end December 24. Bag and possession limit will be eight birds.

Waterfowl hunters 16 years of age and over must have a federal duck stamp.

All hunters must possess valid state hunting licenses.

Details of the waterfowl regulations are available in printed form from all department offices and license agents.

The traditional noon opening has been eliminated this year. Shooting hours will be one-half hour before sunrise to sunset on every day of the season.

Not more than one hooded merganser and one wood duck may be included in the bag limit. No Ross geese may be taken.

basketball

The Post Sports Office announced this week that all companies interested in entering teams in the forthcoming Intramural Basketball competition should contact the Sports Office in Bldg. 122 or phone ext. 3968. A deadline of 28 November has been placed on the entries. Also teams should start practice now, with practice games being arranged through the Sports Office.

Air Planting Costs Again Show Drop

Unit costs for aerial trout planting by the Department of Fish and Game showed a decrease for the second straight year, the Department reported today.

Cost of planting each 1,000 fish was $1.12 as compared to $1.13 in 1954 and $1.25 in 1953. The decrease was smaller than expected because in some areas larger fish were planted necessitating more trips.

In all, 3,948,577 fingerlings including 830,000 kokanee salmon, were planted in 720 mountain lakes for a total cost of $4,440.

Rainbows and eastern brook trout accounted for two thirds of the total, with browns, kokanee, cutthroat, golden and splake rounding out the list. Splakes are a hybrid from Quebec which were planted experimentally this year.

good shooting

When the San Luis Westway public waterfowl shooting area in Merced County opened last weekend, it provided some of the best waterfowl shooting seen in recent years, the Department of Fish and Game reported.

During the weekend 321 shooters bagged 2,397 ducks for an average of 7.9 per hunter. Limits were the rule rather than the exception.

Other areas are holding up well, with the average bag per hunter standing at 4.4 birds on all areas as of Monday.

salmon run

The run of king salmon in the Klamath River this fall was at least several times as large as last year, and the biggest since 1951, according to counts taken by the Department of Fish and Game at the Klamathon racks in Siskiyou County.

Count for the season was 14,946 kings. Studies are being made to determine whether plants made by the Department accounted for the big population jump.

Local Star Attends

Service Soccer Players Prep For Olympic Trials

Wiesbaden, Germany (AFPS) — A group of 50 players from the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps is currently trying out here for 16 spots on the armed forces soccer team which will compete in the eastern Olympic soccer trials in New York 10 December.

Sp/3 Bill Conterio, a veteran of the 1952 United States Soccer squad, will be the only player from the Presidio trying out for the Service team. Bill is stationed with the 660th Engineer Battalion of the 30th Engineer Group at Fort Scott.

The eastern all-stars will then meet a western aggregation in mid-January. Following this game an all-star team will be chosen to represent the U.S. in the 1956 Olympic Games at Melbourne, Australia.

Since Oct. 9, the armed forces team—under USAFE sponsorship—has trained, toured and conducted training schools at Neubiberg and Furstenfeldbruck air bases in Germany. Training and instruction sessions were also held at Landstuhl, Bitburg and Hahn air bases.

Coaching the armed forces soccer squad is George E. Ainsley of Yorkshire, England, an internationally-known coach who retired from active competition in 1949.

Some of the standouts on the armed forces team are: 2nd Lt. John Dunn, Brooklyn, N. Y.; 2nd Lt. John Pinezich, Malden AB, Mo.; Pvt. John Carden, Ft. McPherson, Ga.; Pfc. Willy Nowotny, Ft. # Track Stars Wait Action On Records

New York (AFPS) — Four major records set by service track stars in 1955 are among the 200 to be considered for official recognition by the Amateur Athletic Union records committee in December.

Air Force 2nd Lt. Lon Spurrier of Hamilton AFB, Calif., is one of those up for U.S. recognition. He ran 880 yards in 1:47.5 at Berkeley, Calif., last March. His time also betters the listed world mark.

Two records were set by Marine 2nd Lt. Wes Santee of Quantico, Va. Santee was clocked at 4:00.5 for the mile in Austin, Texas, in April. At an indoor meet in New York last February, he ran 1,500 meters in 2:48.3.

In the shot put department, Air Force 2nd Lt. Parry O'Brien of Travis AFB, Calif., tossed the 16-lb. shot 59 feet 5½ inches indoors in New York on 19 February.

Also up for consideration is the time of 4:33.5 for the 400-yard women's medley relay swim, set by the Walter Reed Swim Club of Washington, D.C.—Shelley Mann, Mary Jane Sears, Wandy Werner, 2nd Lt. Betty Mullen—at Daytona Beach, Fla., last April. This mark tentatively has been accepted as a world record by the Federation Internationale de Natation Amateur—the international governing body of swimming.

Seven Key Points

Safety Council Hopes Driver Checklist Will Spur S-D Day

The San Francisco Chapter, National Safety Council, made a painstaking study of fatal accidents based on reports from more than 20 states recently and came up with a seven point driver self-examination which the council hopes will help checkmate accidents on Safe Driving Day, 1 December.

Drivers who follow these seven safety rules, the local council believes, will make Safe Driving Day a reality every day of the year. Here are the S-D Day suggestions:

On the Presidio, military and civilian drivers are being urged to participate fully in making S-D Day accident free.

Check your speed—more than three out of 10 drivers in fatal accidents were violating speed laws. Speed law violation was almost twice as high on rural highways than in urban communities.

Check your drinking—In 24 out of 100 fatal accidents a driver or an adult pedestrian had been drinking.

Check your car—Among vehicles involved in fatal accidents for which condition of vehicle was reported, about six per cent had unsafe conditions.

Check yourself — About one out of 14 drivers involved in fatal accidents had a physical condition that could have been a contributing factor in the accident. In the majority of these cases the condition was fatigue or sleepiness.

Check the weather—The weather was rainy, snowy or foggy in one out of six fatal accidents. This time of the year road and visibility conditions are at their worst.

Check the time—December is a dark-dreary month and night driving is considerably more hazardous than day driving. So, when possible, plan to travel during the hours of daylight. And double your care, reduce your speed at night.

Check your manners — Failure to yield the right of way, failure to keep to the right of the center line and other examples of poor manners on the highway ranked high among driver violations in fatal accidents. Take your turn—you'll probably get there just as fast.

Bulky Mail Should Be Held Down During Holiday Periods

Washington (AFPS) — Mailing of heavy and bulky official matter should be held to a minimum during the Christmas mailing period of 1-26 Dec., the Army has directed.

To aid rapid handling of holiday mail, the service is requiring reduced mailing of official pamphlets and books.

The Army also cautioned that holiday parcels to servicemen overseas must not weigh more than 70 pounds, except those addressed to Great Britain where the limit is 50 pounds. The length and circumference combined must not measure more than 100 inches and no package may contain matches or lighter fluid.

PSF Thanksgiving Menu Loaded With Special Goodies

Troops of the Presidio at San Francisco and its subposts in Marin County will sit down today to a Thanksgiving dinner that could easily vie with the tradition loaded larder of their Pilgrim forebearers.

Quartermaster Corps Personnel were busy this week issuing the ingredients to the Army mess stewards who face the gargantuan task of converting the tons of food into the annual repast.

The entree, of course, will be roast turkey, 3,400 pounds of it, but the soldiers will also down a choice of fruit cup composed of 1,100 pounds of oranges, apples, bananas and peaches, or 300 pounds of shrimp cocktail, 200 pounds of cranberry sauce, 900 pounds of mashed potatoes, 800 pounds of candied sweet potatoes, 650 pounds of buttered peas and 550 pounds of creamed onions.

Dessert will consist of 450 pounds of fruit cake, as well as mince or pumpkin pies, the pies calling for 250 large cans of pumpkin and 270 quarts of mince meat. For those who wish to nibble, there will be 200 pounds of dates, 650 pounds of grapes, 500 pounds of mixed candy and 900 pounds of mixed nuts. Each mess steward will also serve a relish plate of olives, pickles and celery. In addition to coffee, the diners will also be served 75 gallons of milk and 100 gallons of cider.

Post Rodeo

Offset Alley: tests the driver's ability to maneuver through the limited space of an offset alley at an intersection. He must maintain continuous forward motion without striking markers and without going over the marker lines.

Straight Line: the vehicle must be driven so as to travel a given straight path while the right wheels do not touch or move any of the markers.

Parallel Parking: determines the driver's skill in parking; judged on such points as distance from the curb, number of times the vehicle touches the barriers, etc.

Alley Dock: the contestant must back his vehicle down an alley to a loading dock, then pull away without touching side barriers. The vehicle must not touch or bump the dock or barriers, and can not be more than two feet from the dock when parked.

Diminishing Clearance: tests the driver's ability to steer his vehicle through a progressively narrowing path.

The competition will be held in five classes of motor vehicles—quarter-ton truck, five-passenger sedan, light truck (three quarters to ton and a half), heavy truck (two and a half to five tons) and tractor or semi-trailer.

An elimination contest will be held on the parade ground at 0800 hours 29 November. Each unit is entitled to one contestant in each class of the driving competition.

Army's Story Too

State Histories Are Keys To Saga Of Nation's Growth

When and how did your state become one of the 48?

The answers to that question involve some of the most stirring history of our Country and much of the information is to be easily had through the number of courses in American history offered through the Post Army Education Center.

The original 13 states, all of which entered the Union between 1787 and 1790, are: Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Hampshire, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia.

Next to come in were Vermont in 1791, Kentucky in 1792, and Tennessee in 1796.

In 1803 the United States purchased from France the vast tract of land known as the Louisiana Territory. The following States (with year of entry into the Union) lie wholly or partly within the area of the Louisiana Purchase: Louisiana (1812), Missouri (1821), Arkansas (1836), Iowa (1846), Minnesota (1858), Oregon (1859), Kansas (1861), Nebraska (1867), Colorado (1876), North Dakota (1889), South Dakota (1889), Washington (1889), Montana (1889), Idaho (1890), Wyoming (1890), and Oklahoma (1907).

The Ordinance of 1787 established the Northwest Territory, from which five states were eventually created: Ohio (1803), Indiana (1816), Illinois (1818), Michigan (1837), and Wisconsin (1848).

Texas (1845) is the only one of our states which initially was an independent republic.

Mississippi became a state in 1817, followed by Alabama in 1819. Florida was admitted in 1845, California in 1850.

Maine entered the ranks in 1820. Nevada, smallest state in population, but 6th largest in size, dates from 1846. Utah joined in 1896.

West Virginia was formed from 40 counties of Virginia and admitted as a state in 1863.

New Mexico and Arizona, our two youngest states, were admitted in 1912.

The history of this great continental expansion is also a rich part of the history of the United States Army. Exploring, surveying, building roads and railways, fighting hostile Indians—these are some of our Army's contributions to the growth of the United States.

Read up on the history of your own state; chances are you will also be reading a lot about the U.S. Army.

In the way of available courses in American history, the Post Army Education Center offers studies on the elementary, high school and college levels. MAO55, Elementary American History, was recently taken and completed by a group of 15 NCO's in an on-duty class. A second group has just finished the course as an off-duty curriculum.

On the highschool level, MD200, American History I, is being taught by a local high school instructor to a class of 20 persons on post during off-duty hours. The same book and curriculum are also available through the Education Center for correspondence study. They cover Colonial times to the Civil War.

Offered for college credit, courses MC455 and MC456, the History of the United States I and II, are available for self-teaching situations.

IQ Going Up

Washington (AFPS) — The armed forces will induct fewer men with low I.Q. ratings under a new policy adopted by the Defense Department.

Under the new policy, the services may take 18 per cent, rather than 27 per cent, of their recruits from the lowest of four mental categories established by the DOD. They may take 45 per cent, instead of 35, from the next higher category. DOD officials said the change was ordered because of the increased amount of technical knowledge and skill required of men in all branches of the service.

The Star Presidian

Vol. 4, No. 27

PRESIDIO OF SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA

Friday 2 December, 1955

"Can a Buddy help a buddy?" Is a question which was met with a positive response by the members of Headquarters Company, Sixth Army, who peeled off a layer of the folding green this week to provide funds for unit's Christmas project, which finances a parent's visit to a bed-ridden Letterman patient. Seated is M/Sgt. John W. Wooten, first sergeant, and M/Sgt. Merrill Harrison, who originated the project three years ago. The men making their contributions from the pay line are, from left: Sfc. Carlton Bersheim, Pvt. Clestor Bertus and Pfc. George Bekey.

Olive Drab Santas!

Headquarters Company Men Muster Early Christmas Spirit

The men of Headquarters Company Sixth Army adjusted a collective white beard, donned a figurative red suit and, using a pickle jar as a Christmas sack, filled it with a very real $342 in cash, this week. The money will be used, as it has every year since the Korean War, to bring the mother or wife of an as yet unchosen patient to Letterman Army Hospital for a Christmas visit with her loved one.

Master Sergeant John W. Wooten, Headquarters Company first sergeant, presented the contribution to Brigadier General Paul I. Robinson, Letterman commander, on behalf of the men of the company.

As in past years, the recipient of the gift will be the mother or wife of a patient who is physically unable to travel, who could not afford the cost of transportation for his mother or wife from her home to San Francisco, and whose condition will benefit from such a visit. Medical personnel at the hospital will choose the patient on the basis of these factors.

Arrangements for the guest's transportation to San Francisco will be made by Letterman officials, and she will arrive here shortly before Christmas. During her visit she will be billeted at the hospital. It is expected that she will remain in San Francisco until several days after Christmas.

Last year the men of the company financed the visit of Mrs. Julia Langlois, of Rockwood, Michigan, to visit her son, 17-year-old Private Leland Langlois, seriously ill of a brain tumor. Private Langlois was discharged from Letterman last June. The previous year, 67-year-old Mrs. Lucy O'Brien, of Homer, Michigan, was flown here to visit her son, Sergeant Louis O'Brien, totally paralyzed with polio, whom she had not seen in six years. First recipient of the gift was the widowed Mrs. Anna C. Sander, of Lapwai, Idaho, brought to San Francisco to visit her son, Corporal Kenneth Sander, paralyzed as a result of wounds received in action in Korea, and whom she had not been able to visit since his return from Korea because of lack of funds.

This year's contribution by the men of Headquarters Company brings the men's gifts to Letterman for this purpose to $1107.00 since Christmas of 1952.

New Officers' Call Will Outline Future Of Ground Combat

The character of future ground combat is outlined in "The Army in the Atomic Age," an Officers' Call (DA Pamphlet No. 355-21) being published by Department of the Army.

Opening with the point that atomic weapons cannot by themselves prevent war or win it if it comes, the pamphlet makes clear the need for a strong, modern, strategically positioned and strategically mobile U.S. Army.

The tactics, weapons systems and logistics of the future are reviewed, with emphasis upon what our Army needs in the form of greater firepower and mobility.

A central theme is that if war comes, our Army will continue to have an essential and fighting role.

Sixth Army Will Host Third Annual Disposal Meeting

Headquarters Sixth Army will be host to the Third Annual Property Disposal Conference being held at the Presidio of San Francisco at Building 915 on 5-6 December, 1955. The conference, which is being held by direction of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Logistics, will have representative Property Disposal personnel from Sixth Army installations and other Department of the Army agencies.

Purpose of the conference is the discussion of processing personal property from the time it is determined to be surplus until final disposal by means of screening for maximum utilization by Military Departments and other governmental agencies, donation to approved agencies, and merchandising for effective sale.

The keynote address will be delivered by Lt. Colonel Edward L. Burchell, Office, Deputy of Staff for Logistics, Department of the Army. Colonel Arthur L. Bivens, Sixth Army Quartermaster, will deliver the welcome address in behalf of Lt. General Robert N. Young, Commanding General, Sixth Army. Conference Coordinator will be Lt. Colonel Frank D. Wood, Miscellaneous Services Division, Headquarters Sixth Army.

reserve drive

A total of 15,000 pamphlets concerning the Reserve Forces Act of 1955 were printed and distributed last month at local fairs and throughout the military districts of the Sixth Army Area. Designed to promote the new Reserve program, the pamphlets deal with the various types of Reserve service offered under the new act.

Soldiers Encouraged To Seek Training In Army Intelligence

Because of overstrength in administrative MOS's in the Sixth Army Area and a critical need for more men in military intelligence assignments, career soldiers are now being encouraged to apply for Army intelligence training.

Training in this field is the best that the Army can provide because increasing numbers of experts are needed to gather and analyze intelligence material.

An inquiring and alert mind, unquestioned reliability and outstanding character are qualities desired for acceptance in Counter Intelligence training. This course includes a study of federal investigative and police agencies, appropriate military and federal laws, methods and techniques of surveillance and interrogation, as well as related scientific subjects. Exceptional graduates have an opportunity to attend the Army Language School, Presidio of Monterey, California.

Foreign Area Specialist Training qualifies officer personnel to know a potential enemy, "inside out"; and makes him eligible for assignment to Military Advisory Groups and Missions.

This training includes study of a foreign language, customs of the people, their history, social and economic structure and their military structure. Instruction normally is for one year at a leading university in the U. S., one year at the Army Language School, and two years overseas. The overseas phase generally consists of language instruction, association with people native to the area, on-the-job training with the attache, travel, and attendance at military and, sometimes, civilian universities of the host country.

Upon completion of this active training, FASTP officers (as these trainees are called), are assigned to carefully selected positions utilizing their special training.

Detailed information on these programs is contained in AR 600-148, for CIC training, and SR 350-380-1, for Foreign Area Specialist Training.

'Code of Conduct' Stressed In New DA Training Circular

A new DA training circular, TC 21-2, titled "Training For Combat Effectiveness," distributed this week, lists in detail the new Code of Conduct training to be given throughout the Army.

This new training program is intended to augment current evasion and escape instruction, with the purpose of increasing both unit fighting strength and individual will to resist.

The circular emphasizes that "motivational training and education will continue throughout the career of all soldiers to prepare them for combat and to increase their resistance to capture or enemy exploitation."

Aimed at clarifying and centralizing areas of responsibility among the Deputy Chiefs of Staff, an internal reorganization of the Army General Staff will go into effect shortly after the first of the year, according to a recent announcement by Secretary of the Army Wilbur M. Brucker.

The new structure will eliminate the designations G-1, G-2, G-3 and G-4 in the General Staff organization, although not in the field, however.

Under the new plan, staff sections with some exceptions, will report to one of three Deputy Chiefs of Staff, the Army Comptroller or the Chief of Research and Development.

The excepted officers which will continue in direct liaison with Chief of Staff Maxwell D. Taylor are those of the Assistant Chief of Staff for Intelligence, the Chief of Reserve and ROTC Affairs, the Chief of the National Guard Bureau, the Inspector General and the Judge Advocate General.

In two cases, the functions of a Deputy Chief of Staff will be revised.

Lt. Gen. Clyde D. Eddleman, now Deputy Chief of Staff for Plans, will under the new organization become Deputy Chief for Military Operations. He will have staff supervision over the offices of the Chiefs of Psychological Warfare, Military Government and Military History.

The present Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations and Administration, General Walter L. Weible, will hold the office of Deputy Chief for Personnel. He will supervise the offices of the Adjutant General, Chief of Chaplains, Chief of Information and Education and Provost Marshall General.

A Deputy Chief of Staff for Logistics, Lt. Gen. Carter B. Magruder, will pursue his mission unchanged.

The new breakdown will not affect the functions of the remaining offices. The official provinces of the Army Comptroller, Lt. Gen. Lauren L. Williams, will remain the same, with the Chief of Finance still under his jurisdiction.

Lt. Gen. James M. Gavin, Chief of Research and Development, will be maintained at the Deputy Chief of Staff level.

Secretary Brucker explained that the reorganization plan will not affect the offices reporting to, or the channels of communications within the Office of the Secretary of the Army.

promotions

An estimated 4,175 temporary promotions to the rank of captain and above will be granted in the fiscal year 1956. In addition, some 2,800 regular Army promotions to the grade of first lieutenant and above will also be authorized during the same period, according to a recent statement by Major General Thomas L. Sherburne Jr., Acting Chief of Staff for personnel.

new paint

Fire retardant paints which slow down the rate of burning have been developed recently by the Corps of Engineers Research and Development labs at Fort Belvoir, Va.

Post Historian Evaluates Content Of Colorful Outdoor Extravaganza

By Pfc. WILLIAM H. COHN
Post Historian

A recent movie shown at the post theatre depicts the last great Indian war that took place in California. The movie, DRUMBEAT, starring Alan Ladd, brings to the screen the story of the final subduing of the Modoc Indians in a war that took place in Northern California in 1873. Historically speaking the picture was quite accurate. The few touches of romanticism do not at all detract from the central theme of the movie.

In violation of an 1864 treaty, about 200 Modocs left the Oregon reservation and returned to their original homeland in the Lost River area in Northern California. Their main grievance was that they were forced to associate with the Klamaths, a war-like tribe with whom they were unable to cooperate. Chief Kientepoos (more commonly referred to as Captain Jack because he wore the jacket of a U. S. Army Captain) elected to fight for his homeland rather than return again to the Oregon reservation.

In January, 1873, Captain Jack with 50 fighting men, equipped with muzzle-loading rifles and a few revolvers and encumbered with about 150 women and children took refuge in the lava beds near Tule Lake. Opposed to Captain Jack were 400 well armed soldiers supported by a battery of howitzers. The movie version of the attack showed somewhat less than half of the 400 soldiers and no howitzers. The picture did, however, show how completely successful the Modocs were in the battle that ensued. The Indians, with carefully aimed shots, killed nine and wounded 30. The Modocs lost one man.

Another omission made by Hollywood was mention of the fact that the commanding officer of the U. S. troops sent a request to the Department of the Pacific for 400 more men and four more howitzers. These troops were eventually sent and did take part in the April campaign against the Modocs. Included among these reinforcements were two batteries sent from the Bay Area. They were Battery A, commanded by Captain Thomas and Battery M, commanded by Captain Throckmorton, both units of the 4th Artillery.

The treachery of the Modocs at the peace conference that followed the first battle ended all possibility of compromise. The Modocs came to this conference with no intention of discussing peace, at least on American terms. It was their plan to massacre the American representatives who had come to meet them on neutral ground. The Americans, even though warned of this plan, came to the conference prepared to discuss peace. As predicted, the Modocs did carry through their intentions and as a result Major General E. R. S. Canby and the Reverend Mr. Thomas were shot to death. A. B. Meham, the Indian agent, was mortally wounded in the episode.

After this breach of faith, the Americans concentrated on destroying Captain Jack and his band of renegades. But the attack in April, 1873, proved to be just as disastrous for the Americans as the one in January. Eventually, however, the Indians ran short of supplies and were forced to surrender. Among those who surrendered was Captain Jack.

With the loss of five men, two of whom had been killed while trying to open an unexploded howitzer shell, Captain Jack had held off a far superior force for over three months. The Americans lost eight officers, 39 privates, two Indian scouts and 18 civilians besides numerous wounded. The expenses of the war totaled a half a million dollars. Captain Jack along with five accomplices was tried and convicted for the murder of General Canby. He and two others were hanged at Fort Klamath while two were committed to life terms at Alcatraz.

Two New Pictures Now Available Local Army Film Library

The Sixth Army film library announced this week that two new films, "Workshop for Peace" and the Armed Forces Screen Magazine issue showing "June Week '55 at West Point," will be available here on or about the first week of December.

Released by the Office of Armed Forces Information and Education of the Defense Department, both films are available to all film libraries connected with military activities.

"Workshop for Peace" is a half-hour film story of the United Nations, introducing its achievements in arbitrating international friction and easing world tension.

"June Week '55 at West Point" is the Armed Forces Screen Magazine issue No. 538. It highlights the visit made to the military academy by President Eisenhower to take part in the 40th reunion of his class.

United States Army Europe headquarters reports a total of 61,562 officers and enlisted men enrolled in its educational program.

Junior Management Examinations Planned To Fill Federal Jobs

A Federal Service Entrance Examination has been announced to fill a wide variety of government management positions, including those formerly filled through the Junior Management Assistant and Junior Agricultural Assistant Exams.

Most appointments will be made to positions paying the entrance salary of $3,670 a year (GS-5), located in Washington, D. C., throughout the United States, its territories and Possessions.

Some appointments will be made to the positions at GS-6 and GS-7 levels, $4,080 and $4,525 a year.

Applications (Form 5000 AB) will be accepted by the Director, 12th U. S. Civil Service Region, 630 Sansome Street, San Francisco. Written tests will be scheduled at periodic intervals.

Officers stationed in San Francisco in the 1850s were unable to live on their pay. A tiny cottage on the outskirts of the city rented for $75 to $100 a month. A decent house near the downtown area rented for at least $250 a month. Servants, depending on their quality, cost $50 to $120 a month plus board. (WHC—Post Historian)

Army Slates Early Training In New Phonetic Alphabet

Beginning 1 March, 1956, a new phonetic alphabet for communications will be used by the military services.

Replacing the familiar phonetic alphabet which starts with "Able" and ends with "Zebra," the new system introduces, with four standing exceptions, the following names:

Alfa	November
Bravo	Oscar
Charlie	Papa
Delta	Quebec
Echo	Romeo
Foxtrot	Sierra
Golf	Tango
Hotel	Uniform
India	Victor
Juliett	Whiskey
Kilo	X-ray
Lima	Yankee
Mike	Zulu

According to AR 105-30, recently published, the Army will begin training its personnel in the phonetic alphabet before the 1 March effective date.

The Army utilizes three educational channels for servicemen in Europe wishing to complete their schooling. Most posts, camps and stations have education centers or study groups for men who need basic and intermediate schooling. United States Armed Forces Institute provides a wide range of subjects. Finally, there is the University of Maryland's overseas program with "campuses" in Germany, France, England and North Africa.

Parade

Three Decorated As Veteran Trio Retires During Ceremony

High decorations to three men—a reserve officer, a specialist and an NCO—provided an extra hue of military color for the parade this week which also was the backdrop for the retirement of three other soldiers—a colonel, a warrant officer and a master sergeant.

The Silver Star for gallantry in action was presented to an East Bay Army officer, Paul Zinsky of Hayward, California, who received in addition to the Silver Star, the Bronze Star and the Purple Heart for action in World War II and Korea.

Also decorated were Specialist 3rd Class James D. Dobson, Headquarters Co., 505th MP Bn. receiving the Soldier's Medal for heroism, and Master Sergeant Duane C. Ragan who was presented a Commendation Ribbon with Metal Pendant.

A native of Olyphant, Pa., Lieutenant Zinsky entered the Army in November, 1942. In Europe he participated in two campaigns, was wounded in action in Luxembourg on January 6, 1945, during the Battle of the Bulge and was awarded the Bronze Star Medal for exemplary conduct against an armed enemy.

Commissioned in the Army Reserve following WWII, he re-entered active service in November 1950 as a second lieutenant. Ordered to Korea in August 1951, he was assigned to the 38th Infantry Regiment, 2nd Infantry Division. Serving with Company A of the regiment, he was cited for gallantry in action on October 14, 1951, in the vicinity of Mundung-ni.

The citation for this action reads in part: "... Lieutenant Zinsky, a platoon leader, unhesitatingly and with complete disregard for his own safety, placed himself at the head of his platoon and led the assault on its objective. When his men began to falter under a heavy concentration of hostile fire, Lieutenant Zinsky moved among them, lending words of encouragement and inspiring them by his act of bravery. Reaching the final objective, he stormed the enemy positions with fixed bayonets, inflicting numerous casualties upon the enemy and forcing the remainder to retreat. The gallantry in action and outstanding leadership displayed by Lieutenant Zinsky on this occasion reflect great credit upon himself and the military service."

Specialist Dobson (formerly a corporal) will receive the Soldier's Medal for his heroism in rescuing a man from a car that had plunged into the San Francisco Bay at Sausalito last April.

A graduate of Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, Ala., Specialist Dobson entered the Army in January, 1954, at Fort Jackson, S. C., and is presently assigned to Headquarters Company, 505th Military Police Battalion, at the Presidio of San Francisco. Prior to entering the Army he taught lifesaving and water safety for the Red Cross and Birmingham Park and Recreation Department for four years.

A veteran of more than 13 years of Army Service, Sergeant Ragan will receive the Commendation Ribbon with metal pendant for meritorious service as an administrative non-commissioned officer in Korea, from April, 1954, to June, 1955. During this period he served as administrative NCO with the Kyongsang Namdo Provincial Civil Assistance Team and subsequently as Sergeant Major of the Korea Civil Assistance Command.

The three soldiers who retired during a ceremony at the parade this week were Colonel Richard T. Nichols, M/Sgt. Reginald F. Plagmann, who retired as a Chief Warrant Officer, and M/Sgt. William Boyd.

Commissioned a second lieutenant in the USAR in 1925, Colonel Nichols holds the Bronze Star Medal, the Italian Cross of Valor and the Korean Chungmu Distinguished Military Service Medal with Gold Star. His last assignment was with the Korean Civil Assistance Command which he served as Deputy Chief of Staff.

CWO Plagmann, who was chief clerk, S-4 section, 46th Ordnance Group, entered the Army in 1929. He wears the Good Conduct Medal and a variety of service ribbons for duty in the U.S. and abroad.

Winding up more than 32 years' service in the Regular Army was M/Sgt. Boyd who was on the inspection team for supply at California Military District. He holds the Good Conduct Medal.

Gyroscope is a ticket to Germany for Sp. 2 Thomas A. Keating, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 30th Engineer Group. He is among the first from the Presidio to transfer to a Gyroscope Battalion-sized unit.

Information NCO Leaves 30th Group In Gyro Switch

One of the first men from the Presidio to receive an Operation Gyroscope assignment to a battalion-sized unit, Sp2 Thomas A. Keating, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 30th Engineer Group, will leave for Darmstadt, Germany, in April with the 95th Engineer Battalion (C).

Over a year ago, Keating made application for the Gyroscope assignment. On 12 December, he will report to the 95th at Fort Ord. The assignment in Darmstadt will put him and his wife, Gerda, within 40 miles of her childhood home in Germany.

The 95th Engineers Battalion (C) is one of four battalion level units which are accepting applications for transfer. The other three are: 25th Signal Battalion (Construction), Fort Devan, Massachusetts; the 532nd Field Artillery (Observation), and the 553rd Artillery Battalion, Ft. Sill, Oklahoma.

When Keating applied for the transfer to the 95th, he met the requirements for Gyroscope with a needed MOS, as an Information Specialist, and with the necessary three years' time remaining. He has been the Information NCO for the 30th Group since May, 1955.

Keating has spent 13 years in the Armed Services, four in the Navy during World War II. After two civilian years as a journalist for a Trenton, New Jersey, newspaper, he enlisted in the Army Security Agency.

The Gyroscope assignment will not be his first in Germany. He spent two years at the Army Signal School in Ansbach. With his return to the United States, and a year at Fort Knox, he was then sent to Korea for the fall and winter offensives of 1951-52.

30th Engineers Award Coat Of Arms Citation To Transportation Worker

Air traffic coordinator for the Sixth Army Transportation section, Miss Lee Hays, was on the receiving end of an "Imprimis," 30th Engineer Group Coat of Arms this week for the special attention which she gave to the air shipment of group personnel, supplies and equipment to Alaska this year.

The award constitutes a statement of appreciation given by the group only on rare occasions. It was presented to Miss Hays by 30th Engineer Group Commander Col. Wayne E. Downing.

The citation stated: "Prompt and efficient shipment of approximately 35,000 pounds of aircraft parts and supplies was a major factor in the successful completion of the topographic survey of 88,000 square miles of Alaska."

It further stated, "Your wholehearted cooperation in arranging, coordinating and following through on these shipments is deeply appreciated."

Miss Hays first joined the staff of the Sixth Army Transportation section in 1948, remaining with them for two years. She then performed Special Services duties in Austria for two years, after which she came back to the transportation section.

Her interest in air transportation is not limited to office work. She is a pilot in her own right, having at least 200 solo hours to her credit.

An air officer in the Civil Air Patrol, Miss Hays recently received authority to fly the huge seaplane MARS on an orientation flight with 40 cadets.

Imprimis, the 30th Engineer Group coat of arms was presented Miss Lee Hays, Sixth Army Transportation section employee, by Col. Wayne E. Downing, group commander, for outstanding service to the group during its 1955 Alaska Survey Operation.

First Lieutenant George Washington Custis Lee, son of Robert E. Lee, was stationed at the Presidio in 1859. He was graduated first in the West Point class of 1854 and was assigned here with the Corps of Engineers to work on the construction of Fort Point.

The prize gold key and certificate will be awarded to an individual employee for contribution of outstanding service through unusual competence, integrity, interest and sustained high level performance in the public administration field.

The statement of eligibility qualifies "any employee of the Federal Government who has not passed his (or her) 36th birthday on 31 December 1955, and whose performance over a considerable period of time demonstrates unusual competence and interest in public administration, endowment for leadership, creative thinking, and close adherence to the basic principles of enlightened public service..."

"A Company clerk is rarely finished with his job," sighs Pvt. Jerry T. Ridgway, Headquarters Company, Station Complement. Leaves... passes... morning reports... blood donations: all require paper work and some element of personal concern. Ridgway, a native of San Bernardino, California, has been with the Company since April this year.

During the emergency following the 1906 San Francisco earthquake, the local quartermaster distributed some 11,000 tents, 20,000 blankets, 5,000 cots, 15,000 mattresses, and 65,000 pairs of shoes in addition to many other items. The total value of everything distributed was about $700,000. (WHC—Post Historian)

Defense Department

Orders Major Security Change For Future Military Inductees

Washington (AFPS) — The Defense Department has changed its security-risk procedure to provide for the investigation of suspected security risks before, instead of after, induction into military service.

Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson said that if the presence of an individual in the armed forces is found to be a threat to the security, he need not be taken into uniform.

In the past, Mr. Wilson said, investigations were made after induction to prevent individuals from avoiding the draft completely or producing long delays pending investigation of their backgrounds by the F.B.I.

Pre-induction investigations are now feasible, he added, because the manpower pool has increased and the need for large numbers of inductees has diminished due to increased enlistment and other causes. The investigating branches of the services have cleared their backlog and can conduct investigations more quickly, he said.

The new regulation provides for a thorough investigation of draftees who do not complete satisfactorily the loyalty form, or about whom there is "significant derogatory information."

If the investigation reveals that an individual's induction would be "not consistent with the interests of national security," he will not be accepted into the service.

Meritorious Service in Korea from January to August this year brought a commendation ribbon recently to Chaplain (1st Lt.) John O. Larsgaard, now chaplain to the 441st Antiaircraft Missile Battalion. The award, presented by Colonel Dallas F. Haynes, 30th AAA Group commander, was made in recognition of Chaplain Larsgaard's extraordinary efforts as battalion chaplain in Korea and also for aiding the local populace in establishing several churches and orphanages.

441st AAA Chaplain Is Presented Commendation Ribbon For Korean Duty

Chaplain John O. Larsgaard, 1st Lieutenant, 441st Antiaircraft Artillery Missile Battalion, Fort Cronkhite, California, received a commendation ribbon this week from Colonel Dallas F. Haynes, Commanding Officer, 30th Antiaircraft Artillery Group.

The ribbon was awarded for meritorious service during the period 15 January 1955 to 5 August 1955, at which time Chaplain Larsgaard was serving with the 76th Engineer Battalion (Construction) in Korea.

Major Kenneth B. Nicholson, Adjutant, 30th AAA Group, read the citation, which stated in part: "Chaplain Larsgaard devoted himself to the betterment of individual morale and spiritual welfare of personnel under his ecclesiastical jurisdiction, and assumed numerous additional responsibilities to further religious coverage within the battalion's sector. . . . Similarly, he maintained close liaison and fostered friendly relations with the local populace, aiding them financially and physically in establishing several churches and orphanages."

Chaplain Larsgaard is from Seattle, Washington, and has been in the service since 1 July, 1953. He was assigned to the 441st AAA Missile Battalion on 13 October, 1955. The 441st is one of three missile battalions which comprise part of the antiaircraft artillery defense of the San Francisco Bay Area.

On 23 November, 1911, the "United States General Hospital, San Francisco Presidio" was renamed to honor Major Jonathan Letterman, Medical Director of the Army of the Potomac, organizer in 1861 of the first ambulance corps in the Union Army. (WHC—Post Historian)

Free Flameproofing

Presidio Fire Department Launches Local Holiday Safety Program

Santa's whiskers have been responsible for more than one Christmas fire.

With the approach of the holiday season comes also a marked increase in accompanying fire hazards, cautioned Colonel William T. Cathart, Post Fire Marshal, and Fire Chief George Geller in a recently released list of holiday recommendations.

In the decor which surrounds the Christmas and New Year's holidays—trees, flammable trimmings, paper wrapping and electric lights—lie potential tragedies, if proper precautions are not observed.

To further insure a merry Christmas, the Post Fire Department itself will flameproof trees and decorations free of charge, if the owners bring them to any of the fire stations at the Presidio, Fort Cronkhite or Angel Island. Names and addresses should be attached to the articles.

The Fire Department also advises that Christmas trees not be installed before 16 Dec. and that they be taken down by the first week in January. Trees should be placed in water to keep them fresh, preventing needles and branches from drying out. Supported securely, they should be kept away from sources of heat—fireplaces, radiators, electric lights.

Rather than candles, electric lights should be used for decoration, and then, only those which bear the Underwriters' Laboratories label. Lighting should be checked for frayed wires, loose connections and broken sockets.

Gift wrappings on Christmas morning should be removed as quickly as possible. If combustible materials are used in decorating, they should be flameproofed.

The Fire Department also cautioned against buying such gifts as pyroloxlin plastic dolls, non-flameproof cowboy suits or other costumes, toys operated with alcohol, kerosene or gasoline.

The most common fire hazards remain the same at Christmas as during the rest of the year—smoking, open fireplaces and matches in the wrong hands.

If fire does strike, the first move is to get all concerned out of the danger area—then call the fire department.

Post Accident Report Shows Satisfactory Military Record

Motor accidents involving Presidio Army vehicles totalled 15 during October, according to a recent safety letter issued by Post Headquarters. Of other types of accidents, 14 cases were reported.

Among the major causal factors in the vehicle mishaps were excessive speed, assuming right of way, wrong lane or position, misjudged clearance and other improper actions, such as brakes applied on wet or oily pavements.

In the other types of accidents reported, four of which involved civilian, and nine military personnel, distraction or inattention accounted for three incidents. Other situations involved a defective chair, use of machines, small arms and improper lifting or handling.

Some 31 first aid cases were also reported during October. Although the military injury frequency rate remained satisfactory for military personnel the civilian cumulative figures tallied unsatisfactorily.

Air Force Christmas Show Will Play Local Service Club

A musical revue entitled "Christmas on Broadway" is being presented at the Presidio Service Club, on the evening of 7 December by the Hamilton Air Base players who are staging the same performance at the Fort Baker Service Club on Saturday, 10 December.

The revue consists of ensemble and solo routines with program highlights including "Lullaby of Broadway," "Stairway to Paradise" and "There is Nothing Like a Dame."

The 1½ hour performance by the Hamilton Air Base players is a fast-paced production complete with expert costuming, unusual specialties and a peppy chorus line. Its producer, S/Sgt. Harry Lynch, has had Broadway experience in choreography and stage direction.

Command performances by the players at military installations are already booked for the first two weeks in December.

Know Your Enemy

Communism In People's China Next Troop Information Topic

Communism in Red China, Number 5 in the Defense Department's Know Your Communist Enemy Series, will be the basis of the next Troop Information Topic, according to the Post Troop Information Section.

Since 1949, when the Chinese Communist Revolution won the mainland, the United States has felt the increasing impact of events in Asia on American interests—in Korea, in Indo-China and most recently with regard to Formosa and the disputed islands of Quemoy and Matsu.

Either behind the scenes or before the footlights, Communist China has figured as a principal in the dramatic power struggles now being enacted in Asia. It has aggravated historic anti-Western feelings among Asians and has signaled out the United States as Asia's chief antagonist.

With the aid of Soviet advisers, the Chinese Communist Party was organized in 1921. Its rank and file were drawn mainly from the cities and were led by professionals in the key positions. The Soviet Union lent military and advisory support to the growing Communist movement. During the twenties, Communists infiltrated Sun Yat-sen's Kuomintang, attempting to associate his movement with their own. In 1927, Chiang Kai-shek ended the coalition and expelled the Chinese Communists from the Kuomintang.

Throughout the next decade, bitter antagonisms between Communists and Kuomintang mounted to Civil War. In 1937, however, to further the current Moscow-inspired "united front," Communist peasant armies joined the forces of Chiang Kai-shek against the Japanese invaders.

With the war ended, civil conflict broke out again in 1946, resulting in the rout of Chiang's forces and their exile to Formosa in 1949.

Since seizing power, the Chinese Communists have attempted to impose a radical system of domestic reform upon China's millions. Similar in a number of ways to the Soviet Union's attempts to convert a backward, agrarian nation into a modern, industrial power, China's revolution has seen the institution of a land redistribution program backed up by the Chinese Communist Party in control of a giant militia, the Army, secret police and a system of "people's" courts.

Chinese foreign policy, since the conquest of the mainland, has similarly run parallel to that of the Soviet Union, showing an aggressive, expansionist front.

In self-defense, the United States has reacted through policies both within and without the United Nations. It led the defense of South Korea with troops and equipment. Most recently it joined with seven other nations in the Southeast Asia Collective Defense Treaty, aimed at forestalling further forceful expansion by Communist China.

Drill Team Returns Home After Colorful Southland Exhibitions

The crack Sixth Army Drill Team, the Presidians, returned here this week following a five-day Los Angeles stint which was highlighted when they appeared before a crowd estimated at a million at the annual Hollywood Santa Claus Lane parade.

Other features of their visit to the southland included a performance at the Culver City Pageant of Lights parade, an audition, luncheon and tour at Warner Brothers Studio, an appearance on the television program "Panorama Pacific," and an exhibition at Ft. MacArthur.

Captain Eugene J. Gasior, Honor Guard commander, made the L.A. trip a few days before the Presidians' departure in order to coordinate details of the various appearances with Maj. John Dickson, a DA information officer and Sixth Army Information Section representatives there.

Lieutenant Robert Liday was in charge of the drill team during all of its performances.

Motion Picture projectionists after a two-week, 80-hours course in movie projection, ten men, one from each of the Sixth Army Recruiting Districts, receive certificates from Major Samuel Raymond of the Sixth Army Recruiting Service. Graduation of the ten-man class makes a total of 100 students to graduate from the Projectionist instructor school at the Post Signal Pictorial building since January, 1954. As qualified projector operators, the graduates will now instruct others in the craft particularly in Reserve and National Guard units. With Major Raymond in making the presentation are instructor Mr. U. S. Burt, Mr. John Mitchell, Sixth Army Pictorial officer, and Mr. Norman Wood, Sixth Army Director of Film and Equipment.

An Inch and a half clearance was a pretty tight spot for Pfc. Harold Tribur, Company A, 505th MP Battalion, during the preliminaries to the S-D Day rodeo this week. Troops from most Presidio units participated in the rodeo yesterday, which demonstrated the skills needed for safe driving at its toughest. Results of the rodeo competition and the post's record on S-D day were not available at press time but will appear in the next edition of the "Star-Presidian."

'Y' Calendar Filled With Outstanding Events For Coming Holiday Season

Holiday events identified with the country, the small town and the city mark the special military calendar put out by the Embarcadero YMCA this week.

Covering the full month of December, the Y schedule for visiting Army, Navy and Air Force men in this area begins the festive season with a dance on the evening of 3 December, during which the girl and serviceman of the month are to be honored.

The YWCA has planned a Hobo Dance for the night of the 4th of December when prizes will be presented for the very worst costume, or the very worst dressed among the guests.

A "sock hop" on 8 December honors the man wearing the loudest pair of Argyles.

Nightly events at the Y during the middle and latter part of December pin-point the hanging of the greens on 13 December, followed by a "decorators" party at 1800 that evening.

Free gift wrapping starts at the YMCA on the 15th of December, with a Winter Wonderland formal slated for the following evening.

On the 20th of December at 1800, a tour of Christmas lighting scenes will begin at the Y, and on the 22nd, the hostesses are each to bring two gifts for their prospective escorts.

Red Cross Ladies Win Unique Awards For AAA Services

The red silk scarves worn by AAA soldiers at Fort Barry during dress parade have recently been adopted as honorary uniform decorations by lady volunteer workers who visit the Army Antiaircraft Artillery Nike and gun batteries in the Bay Area.

In recognition of the women's social program planned for soldiers serving in the more remote antiaircraft locations, Colonel Dallas Haynes, commanding the 30th AAA Group, presented the volunteer workers with the colorful scarves during a recent reception honoring them at the Fort Scott officers' club, for which Mrs. Haynes was hostess.

Colonel Haynes conveyed the gratitude of his men to the Red Cross ladies for their regular visits to the battery with coffee and doughnuts, gift books and the very special gift of friendly conversation to relieve the necessary monotony imposed on soldiers working on an around-the-clock alert status.

During the social event at the officers' club, Colonel Haynes presented red scarves to Mrs. Richard L. Sloss, director of volunteers, to Miss Mildred Samuelson, training committee chairman, and to the ladies of seven other Bay Area Red Cross chapters.

Raiders Drop Final Game To Fort Huachuca, 35-21

Last Friday night the Presidio Red Raiders dropped their final football game of the season to the Fort Huachuca Scouts 35 to 21. The game, played at Yuma, Arizona, was the last game for the Presidio this year with the local club winding up with nine wins and two losses.

The game, played before 4000 fans, was the first annual Yuma Lions Club "Sight Bowl" game with all proceeds going towards the club's work with the blind.

The Red Raiders jumped off to an early lead when left half Jim Guimarin took a pitchout from Morris Maytubby and rambled 43 yards to the Huachuca seven. Full-back Bobby Ratliff then bolted over left tackle for the tally and converted for a 7 to 0 lead.

After Fort Huachuca failed to gain, the Presidio gridsters took over on their 35 and marched straight down the field for a TD, Ratliff going over from the four for the score and converting for a 14-0 lead.

With the arrival of the second quarter the Fort Huachuca Scouts put together two drives for touchdowns to tie the score at 14-14. Huachuca quarterback Don Reeves was especially effective on his "split T" option plays along with the use of a tricky spread formation.

The Arizona grid stars opened the third quarter by scoring on a 20-yard pass from Reeves to left end Reiner to run the score to 21-14.

After the Presidio failed to generate a scoring drive the Huachuca Scouts tallied on a 60-yard run by left half Bill Schwab to run the score to 28-14.

The Raiders opened the fourth quarter by scoring on a fake field goal and a pass from Maytubby to end Dick Piggott. Ratliff converted and the Presidio was only seven points behind 28-21.

However, in the closing minutes Huachuca back Schwab intercepted a Presidio pass and raced it back 30 yards for the final score of the game.

bowl clash

The Fort Ord Warriors accepted yesterday a bid to play in the fourth annual Poinsettia Bowl at San Diego, 17 December, for the mythical Armed Forces football championship.

The powerful Warriors will play the winner of a 10 December game between Fort Sill of Lawton, Oklahoma and Bolling Air Force Base of Washington, D.C.

all-opponents

Two Presidio Red Raiders were chosen this week on the Chico State College 1955 All-Opponents team. They were tackle Frank McDonnell and guard Frank Wilson. Chico State won a hard fought 12-6 win from the Presidio in September for one of the two losses suffered by the Raiders this season. The Presidio squad won nine contests this year.

Wac's Open Cage Year, Play OAB

The Presidio WAC basketball team continued their practice sessions this week in preparation for the opening game of the Bay Area Armed Forces Women's Basketball League next Wednesday.

Returning members of Coach Julian Kite's squad from last year are Yvonne LaDue, Delores Argue, Edith Thompson, and Peggy Harris. Newcomers to the team include Vivian Brill, Edith Wark, Betty Harvey, Jane Smith, Cleo Moore, Sue Johnson, Betty Fergus, and Zorah Christian.

Last year the local girls finished second to Alameda in the BAAF and second to Fort Ord in the Sixth Army finals.

Following is the league schedule for the girls for December with all home games being played at the Letterman Army Hospital Gym at 1900.

Dec.	Team	Place
6	PSF vs. Oakland AB	there
16	PSF vs. Letterman AH	here
20	PSF vs. Parks AF	here
27	PSF vs. Mather	there

cage star

The St. Louis Hawks' chance of winning the National Basketball Assn. title received a jolt when their ace, Frank Selvy, reported for active duty to Ft. Knox, Ky. In his rookie year with the Hawks last season, Selvy a great collegiate scorer at Furman, averaged 19 points a game and finished in fifth in scoring in the pro league.

Sill Stops Unbeaten Ord, 35-20

Paced by their 1954 All-Army fullback, Buck McPhail, the Fort Sill Cannoneers trounced the unbeaten Fort Ord Warriors 35 to 20 last week before 7000 grid fans in Lawton, Oklahoma. The loss will probably keep Fort Ord out of the Poinsettia Bowl which will be played on 17 December in San Diego for the mythical Armed Forces football crown.

Big Buck McPhail rolled for 142 of Sill's 303 yards rushing and Ord's Paul Cameron, UCLA All-American, ran one kickoff return back 95 yards for a touchdown and took another 80 yards to the Fort Sill ten yard line.

Fort Ord's 1954 All-Army quarterback, from USC and the 49ers, completed 17 of 33 passes for 240 yards and set up both of Ord's other touchdowns with bullet-like lobs to right end Ron Miller, formerly of USC.

All in all the story was the pounding feet of McPhail and All-American Leon Heath, both of whom played on the 1952 Oklahoma squad that was judged mythical national champions.

At the end of the first quarter the score was deadlocked at seven all but Sill added seven more in the second period to take a 14-7 lead at the half. Ord tallied once in the third and once in the fourth, but the mighty Cannoneers blasted out three more TD's in the second half for the win.

O'Brien Stars As Air Force Stages Games

March AFB, Calif. (AFPS) — More than 1,000 athletes participated in the 70 events of the March AFB "Olympic Games" as Olympic champs of other eras looked on.

Highlight of the games was the performance by 2nd Lt. Parry O'Brien, world record holder in shot put. O'Brien tossed the shot 56' 6" and heaved the discus 263' 5". Another top competitor was Airman George Mattos, a pole valuter in the 1952 Olympics.

Some of the former athletes on hand were Olympic divers Clyde Swendsen, Thelma Sandborn, and U. S. Decathlon competitor Floyd Simmons.

Raider Cage Team Wins Six Straight In Hawaii

Starting the local cage season off with a bang the Presidio Red Raiders casaba team under the direction of Coach Hal Fischer journeyed to the Hawaiian Islands and swept six out of six games for a perfect record.

The Presidio opened the Island invasion by blasting the Tripler Army Hospital squad, 74-59. Big Mike O'Neil led the local garrison in scoring by dunking in 26 points. He was closely followed by Don Lofgran with 24 tallies.

The second soldier victory came at the expense of the University of Hawaii, 94-54. Bob Harbertson led the Raiders in scoring with 29 points, as the issue was never in doubt.

Next to fall were the Hickam Army Air Field Flyers and they fell to the tune of 75-44. Lofgran and Harbertson again led the Presidio scoring attack.

The Navy Packers, Inter-Service Island Champions last year, were next to fall before the Raider siege guns, 61-55. With four minutes to go and the Presidio enjoying a 14 point lead, the locals went into a stall and the Navy caught up nine points but was unable to overcome a smooth working Presidio crew's lead.

The Raiders then went on to Fort Shafter to play an Army All-Star team that had been working out twice daily in an effort to stop the high scoring Red Raiders. The Presidio shot out in front in the opening minutes and was never behind as it rolled to a 84-74 win over the All-Stars.

Only one team remained on the Island undefeated and on the following day the Presidio traveled to Kaneoke Bay to engage the Marine Air Corps. With the Marines fired up on being the first team to beat the Presidio it looked like quite a tussle but the Red Raiders rose to the occasion and smothered the Marines 73-54.

With this victory the Presidio had beaten the best teams in the Hawaiian Islands, from the Army, Air Corps, Navy, Marines and the only university.

Letterman Sets Northern California Sabre Contest

The fencers from the Presidio and Letterman Army Hospital, ranked fifth in the United States, will host the Northern California Fencers League of America Junior Sabre Championships Meet tonight in the Letterman Sports Center.

In ceremonies before the meet begins, Brig. Gen. Dale B. Ridgely, chief of the LAH Dental Service, representing Brig. Gen. Paul I. Robinson, LAH Commanding General, will present gold medals to five outstanding local fencers for their contribution to the Post's athletic program and in recognition of their excellent performances in gaining national prominence in the field of fencing.

The five men receiving the medals are: Specialist Third Class Jose Tafoya, member of the LAH Minerva Trophy Team, holder of the Novice Sabre and Junior Foil Individual Championship for 1955-fencers win

The composite fencing team from the Presidio and Letterman Army Hospital returned home Wednesday with the Fort Bliss Fencing title. The competition for the title was held last weekend and featured eight fencing clubs. Fort Bliss, Texas, was second and St. Joseph Salle d'Arms of El Paso was third.

56; Col. Laurance Brownlee, Minerva Club, 1954-55 Novice Sabre, Junior Foil, Intermediate Foil Champion, member of the Northern California Open Sabre, Intermediate Sabre and Intermediate Foil Championship teams; Sergeant Herb Rhodes, Minerva Trophy Team, 1954-55 Northern California Handicap Foil, Prep Foil, Junior Sabre Individual Champion, member of Intermediate Sabre, Open Sabre and Junior Foil Championship teams; Master Sergeant Robert Ennis, original member of the local fencing group, and Specialist Second Class Leo Thompson, most spirited team member.

Fencing, an unusual sport to be actively engaged in by an Army post, was introduced at Letterman by Bill O'Brien, civilian chief of Permanent Records section and former Pacific Coast Sabre Champion. O'Brien started fencing in 1933 at San Francisco State College and later for the Olympic Club. From 1933 to 1940, while actively engaged in fencing, he won over 40 championships and competed in the United States Fencing Meet twice.

Jack Baker, chairman of the Northern California Amateur Fencers League of America, and Salvatore Giambra, manager of the 1948 United States Olympic Fencing Team, will present the Minerva Trophy awards and other gold medals won by the Letterman fencers during the past year.

The Presidio and Letterman fencers have gained national recognition in their rapid climb to fencing superiority. At the end of the 1954-55 season, the local squad held the Northern California Intermediate Sabre and Foil Team championships plus the individual championships in the Intermediate Foil, Junior Foil, Prep Foil and Handicap Foil and the Junior Sabre, Novice Sabre, besides more than two dozen second and third places.

In June of 1955, the local slashers won the right to represent the Northern California Division, Amateur Fencers League, in the United States Fencing Championship matches in New York. Out of 234 entries the post group finished 5th in the Sabre, and 8th in the Foil and Three Weapon Teams. This was regarded as quite an accomplishment because, with the exception of Col. Laurance Brownlee, none of the others, S/p2 Jose Tafoya or Sgt. Herb Rhodes, had ever fenced before coming to the Presidio.

The Letterman fencers have dominated the Northern California fencing scene for the past year. After returning from the Nationals, last June, they won the Minerva Trophy. The Olympic Club and Berkeley Fencers' Club had held possession of the perpetual trophy for the past five years. In winning this trophy they picked off one of the fencing plums of Northern California.

Since the beginning of the new season of 1 October, 1955, the bladesmen have taken Prep, Novice, Junior Foil, and Junior Foil Team championships and have placed second and third numerous times.

2nd Lt. Jerry Clark, head coach of the Mountaineers at Ft. Carson, Colo., reports: "(Bill) Quinlan is our most valuable lineman." The 235-lb. tackle was also valuable at Michigan State for three seasons.

Paced by Johnson's fine 197/559 roll, the Keystone Kops took a four game series from the Post Dispensary to maintain their narrow hold on first place in the Pacific Bowling League. Fischer with a 186/517 score was high for the medics.

The Sixth Army Signal crew kept pace by shutting out the All-Stars, 4 to 0, as Rush hurled a 198/555. Beirmeister was high for the stars with a 172/480 tally.

In other matches the Headquarters Company, Station Complement gang, rolled by the 102d MRU without the loss of a game, 4 to 0. Schall topped the Headquarters men with a 187/530 while Dennis was high for the records squad with 158/429.

hauser was tops for the G-2 rollers and Pasko topped the ack-ackers.

Action in the National League saw the front running Masonites maintain their lead by winning a 4 to 0 forfeit victory from the Fogbounders.

Other games featured the second place Hooks sweeping a series from the fifth place Soltechs, 4 to 0. Jacobs was high for Hooks with a very good 207/538 score. Yeager topped the Soltechs with his 166/454.

Free Golf Clinic Offered Local Military Wives

By Pvt. Bob Malone
Star-Presidian Sports Editor

One of the Presidio Special Service section's newest programs is the Monday Golf Clinic at the Presidio Pitch and Putt Course for any interested service wife or daughter at the Presidio. Under the direction of Pro Ralph Scanlon, more than 40 ladies are now taking part in a free clinic which offers morning and afternoon consultations.

All Presidio wives and daughters are welcome to attend the clinic, from beginners to experts. Beginners are started on the putting green and work their way up through the various irons. All golf clubs and balls are furnished by Special Services. The Golf Clinic is conducted from 1000 to 1130 hours in the morning and from 1330 to 1500 hours in the afternoon.

Members of the clinic generally agree that "Doctor" Scanlon has improved their games in every department. Mrs. John Sparrow commented that "my game has improved 100 per cent since starting the lessons."

Supervised by Ralph Scanlon, the course is under the direction of Captain John Hoover, Post Special Services Officer.

Ralph Scanlon, by his own admission, has been playing golf for 53 years, the last 35 as a professional. Ralph's first golf position in the Bay Area was when he opened San Francisco's Harding Park Course in 1924.

In 1937, Ralph came to the Presidio to run a golf driving range and putting green near Crissy Field. In 1939, the Ninth Service Command established the driving range on the present site of the pitch and putt course. Under Ralph's direction, this was expanded to a nine hole course in 1941.

During the war years as many as 1,500 people toured the nine hole layout each month. Last year over 1,000 players a month tackled the course.

The course is open every day of the week except Monday and the hours are 0900 to 1630 from November to March and from 0900 to 1900 hours from March to October. No charge is made to military personnel and their dependents.

Search For U.S. Olympic Stars Begins

Candidates for the United States Olympic team trials in wrestling, gymnastics, rowing and horseback riding are urged to apply through channels to The Adjutant General Department of the Army, as soon as possible. Trials in these sports will be held in the spring and the AG's Sports Branch is anxious to get all applications in so they may be approved or disapproved by the Army and the Olympic committees concerned.

The final Olympic trials in free style wrestling will be held in late April and the final trials in Greco-Roman wrestling in late May. Gymnastics is set for 27-28 April, rowing for 28-30 June and riding for 20-25 March.

French Colonel Completes Broad Tour Of 30th Engineer's Mapping Activities

The French Army's Chief of Topographical Services, Colonel Charles Tingry, observed the operations of the 30th Engineer Group (Topographic Survey) here recently as a part of a 28-day observer training tour of Armed Forces Geological and Mapping installations in the United States.

Colonel Wayne E. Downing, 30th Engineer Group commander, planned and coordinated the French Army officer's tour of the local engineers' various units and plants.

On the junket, Coloney Tingry saw demonstrations of equipment and techniques in the 21st Engineer Company's Photomapping Plant, the 99th Engineer Company's Reproduction Plant and the 171st Engineer Detachment's Relief Map Plant.

He also received a briefing on survey operations by the commanding officer of the 660th Engineer Battalion. Colonel Tingry was shown a display of survey equipment and a movie of the 1955 Alaska Survey project.

Later, the visiting French Army Topographical Services chief observed a demonstration of the MONROBOT V, an electronic computing device currently being field-tested by the 660th.

On the last day of Colonel Tingry's visit here, he flew from San Francisco to Stockton in an H-23 helicopter piloted by Maj. Leo H. Bellieu, assistant group aviation officer. While on tour of the 521st in Stockton, he was briefed on the capabilities of the H-19 and H-23 rotary wing aircraft and the L-19, L-20, L-23 and YU-1 fixed wing aircraft.

USAFI Geometry Course Available At Education Center

Added to the extensive stock of USAFI courses at the Army Education center here recently is a new course in Analytic Geometry, a rudimentary study for personnel planning military or civilian careers in engineering or other technical fields.

The new college-level course is geared to the development of the student's ability to reason analytically and graphically.

Coverage in the course is similar to that of one semester courses in analytic geometry offered in most colleges and universities at the first year level. Extensive use of algebraic methods in solving geometric problems is one key feature of the course.

Among the topics covered are Cartesian and polar coordinates, curves and equations, the straight line, the circle, the parabola, the ellipse, the hyperbolar, transformation of coordinates, higher plane curves, and introductory solid analytic geometry.

Analytic geometry is available for self-teaching and correspondence study. The primary prerequisite is a course in plane trigonometry. This new geometry course can be aquired at the Army Education center, Building 117.

Formal Honors Greet 'Iron Mike' On Return Stateside From Far East

A formal honor guard this week welcomed Lieutenant General John W. O'Daniel, who returned to the United States following duty since April, 1954, as Chief, Military Assistance Advisory Group for Indo-China.

On hand to greet General O'Daniel was Major General Riley F. Ennis, Deputy Commander of the Sixth Army. After General O'Daniel received a 15-gun artillery salute he proceeded to inspect the guard composed of the Sixth Army Band, Sixth Army Pipe Band and Sixth Army Honor Guard.

One of the selections played by the band during the ceremony was "Iron Mike," a song honoring the general, which was written by Keith P. Latey, one-time band leader in one of General O'Daniel's previous commands.

A veteran of World Wars I and II and Korea, General O'Daniel enlisted as a private in the Delaware National Guard in July, 1916, served as a corporal and sergeant on the Mexican Border with the 1st Infantry Regiment, and, following his discharge in February, 1917, became a cadet in the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, Fort Myer, Va., and was commissioned a second lieutenant of infantry.

During World War I he served in France with the 11th Infantry Regiment, participating in the Saint Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne Offensives. He was severely wounded in action and was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for heroism in action in the Saint Mihiel salient.

During World War II, he commanded the 168th Infantry Regiment of the 34th Infantry Division and led that unit in the invasion of North Africa at Algiers on 8-9, November, 1942.

In June, 1943, he was named deputy commander of the 3rd Infantry Division, with which he landed in Sicily on D-Day, 10 July, 1943. He became officer-in-charge of amphibious operations for the Fifth Army on 1 October, 1943, and the following month was assigned as assistant commander of the 3rd Division.

He participated in the Anzio landing with the 3rd Division in January, 1944, and the following month assumed command of the division.

From September, 1948, until August, 1950, he served as American Military Attache in Moscow, Russia. Upon his return to the United States from Russia he was appointed Infantry Inspector in the Office, Chief of Army Field Forces, Fort Monroe, Va., serving there until July, 1951, when he went to Korea to command the U. S. First Corps.

General O'Daniel became Commanding General, U. S. Army Pacific, with headquarters in Hawaii, in September, 1952, and held that post until ordered to Indo-China in April, 1954.

General O'Daniel is en route to Washington for duty in the Office of the Army Chief of Staff.

Lundquist, deputy post commander, and chairman of the local drive, this week turned the $30,000 check over to Mrs. Clarissa Robinson, Civil Military Representative of the Crusade. Representing 288 health and welfare organizations in five Bay Area counties, the United Crusade this year seeks to raise $10,000,000. The Presidio opened its drive 1 September, setting the $30,000 mark as its ideal objective. In two months, civilian and military personnel met the goal with $79.40 to spare. Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commander, was chairman of the Bay Area United Crusade Military Cabinet.

Army Rate 5.2!

AWOL Rate On Downgrade Throughout Armed Services

Washington (AFPS)—The AWOL rate is on the downgrade throughout the armed forces.

The Army, whose AWOL rate was 15.2 for every thousand men in June, 1952, has had a gradual decline with its present rate now standing at 5.2 per thousand.

Army To Continue To Try Civilians Serving Overseas

Washington (AFPS) — The Army has decided that the Uniform Code of Military Justice still gives it authority to try civilians charged with crimes while accompanying the armed forces overseas. The Army's decision was reached in the face of a recent Federal court ruling invalidating an Air Force court martial in Britain which convicted the wife of an AF sergeant of his murder.

In the AF case, a Federal judge here declared that the services had no constitutional right to try civilians. The case is expected to be appealed to a higher court by the Justice Department acting on behalf of the Defense Department.

In answer to a press query, the Army said that, despite the court ruling in the Air Force case, "the Army feels it still has authority to proceed under Article 2, Section 11 of the Code of Military Justice against civilians accompanying the Army outside the continental limits of the U.S."

During WWII the Army had an AWOL rate of 4.5 per thousand. However, this figure included many men missing for less than 30 days who reported back to their units voluntarily.

In 1952, the Navy said it had 29,490 absent offenses. This figure jumped to 30,500 in 1953 but dropped to 18,542 in 1954. Evidence of the sharp decline in navy AWOLs was further demonstrated this year with only 6,841 offenses up to August.

The Air Force's rate has dropped from a high of 7.6 men per thousand in 1950 to 1.86 per thousand this year.

The Marine Corps is also reporting a similar decrease. In 1952, the corps had 5,849 administrative desertions. In 1953, there were 5,530 and last year 4,482. During the first six months of this year there were only 1,895.

The services attributed the decline in AWOLs and desertions mainly to President Eisenhower's order of September 1954, which imposed stiff penalties on all offenders. Information and education programs dealing with the individuals' personal problems have also been a key factor in reducing infractions.

almost . . .

A perfect accident-free S-D Day record for the Presidio and sub-posts was blemished by a single accident in which the Army was innocently involved. The post safety inspector also indicated that there were no traffic fatalities or injuries to local personnel on Safe Driving Day.

Four ROK Officers Scheduled for Brief Visit to Presidio

Completing a tour of American military installations, four Republic of Korea officers are scheduled to visit the Presidio today and confer briefly with Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commander.

A formal guard of honor has been planned to meet the visiting officers at 1030 hours when they arrive at Crissy Field from Fort Ord. After a 15-gun artillery salute, and greeting from General Young, they are scheduled to inspect the guard, composed of the Sixth Army Band and two platoons of infantry.

A brief conference with General Young is slated to follow.

The four Republic of Korea officers are: Lt. Gen. Yu Jae Hung, Commanding General Korean Army Training Command; Major General Kim Yung Il, Assistant Chief of Staff, G-2; Brig. Gen. Pak Kyong Won, Commanding General, Sixth Corps Artillery, and Colonel Lee Jong Tae, Deputy Assistant Chief of Staff, G-3, First Republic of Korea Army.

Following their Presidio visit, General Yu and his party are scheduled to leave for Fort Mason where arrangements for their return to Korea will be made.

$250 Jackpot

15 To Receive Cash Awards For S-D Day Rodeo Victories

Of the nearly four score contestants in the recent S-D Day Rodeo, fifteen cleared all hurdles including the rugged precision driving tests and written examinations, each to win a slice of the $250 prize jackpot.

The rodeo, similar to exhibitions presented by trucking firms throughout the nation on S-D Day, demonstrated the combined effectiveness of safe and skillful driving techniques under extremely difficult conditions.

Top driver of the day was Sp3 Thomas Haislet, 99th Engineer Company, who scored more points in his own category, the ¼-ton truck, than were registered in any other division. Like the first place winners in all classes, he's in line for $25 prize money.

Second in the jeep contest was Pfc. Lloyd Homer, Station Complement, while Sp3 Orestes A. Copetas, 60th MPCJ placed third. Second place winners will receive $15 and third placers $10.

In Class II, for five-passenger sedans, Sp3 Edward H. Coleman, 99th Engineer Company was the winner; Sp3 Arthur L. Thomas, Headquarters Company, 505th MP Battalion, was the runner-up and Pfc. Mike Munscheim, Station Complement, third.

Light truck drivers winning in the third classification were Pfc. Eugene H. Brundt, Company C, 505th MP Battalion, Pfc. Alton Wolff, Station Complement and Pvt. John L. Peters, 99th Engineer Company.

The men who displayed the greatest skill while driving deuce and a half trucks were (in one, two, three-order): Sp2 Herbert Thompson, 561st Engineer Company; Sgt. Howard A. Wheatley, 660th Engineers and Sp3 Bobbie Brown, Station Complement.

The fifth category, for tractor trailers, was won by Sp3 Theodore Bosgraaf, 99th Engineer Company, followed by Sp3 Roland. Martin, Station Complement and Sp2 Harvey Thomas, 561st Engineer Company.

Contestants from elements of the 30th Engineer Group racked up the most points of any unit participating and the Station Complement contestants managed to place in all five categories of the Rodeo.

Presentation of checks to the prize winners will be made by Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander at a time to be announced soon.

Sixth Army Plans For Active Role In Operation Alert

Operation Alert, 1956, will draw the Sixth Army, next June, into a nation-wide civil defense exercise in which the United States Army is expected to play a more active role than in any past mock defense problem.

Although the alert is still in the planning stage, the Army may be expected to participate in the movement of key headquarters to alternate location sites, the execution of D-Day continental defense plans, and the support of civil defense functions.

The Army's activities will be coordinated with the Federal Civil Defense Administration and other government agencies.

In the Sixth Army area, a staff of project officers from each staff section is currently being selected to assist G3 Project Officer, Lt. Col. Carl J. Hunsinger.

Last year, Sixth Army waged its defense tactics from the Sixth Army War Room which maintained constant teletype contact with the Federal Civil Defense Administration and Headquarters Continental Army Command, Fort Monroe, Virginia.

Because the details of next June's hypothetical defense situation have not yet been released, last year's exercise will be used as a model in the initial planning stages, according to Lt. Col. Hunsinger.

insurance

Korean service veterans who were unable to apply for waiver of premiums because their status between 25 April, 1951 and 26 April, 1952 was missing, in action or besieged, have the right to re-instate their expired government insurance, according to a recent ruling by the Veterans Administration.

The Presidio in 1881 offered billiards (see trooper at left) and $9 a month base pay for privates. Even then parades were held frequently on the grass-covered drill field while townsfolk of San Francisco looked on. It would be several years yet before the landscaping which adorns the post today was to leave the planning stage. The only shade trees on the Presidio cooled the officers' quarters. Civilian clothes were apparently authorized during off-duty hours.

Those Were The Days?

Early History Shows Presidio Offered Sparse Terrain For Troop Comfort

By Pfc. William H. Cohn
Post Historian

An assignment to the Presidio in 1881 was not apt to be as highly regarded by officers and men of the United States Army as it is today. As yet unlandscaped, the Presidio reservation wore a shabby cloak of sand, dirt and tall grass — hardly the garden spot of the Army.

Division headquarters had been established at the Presidio in 1878 and occupied two converted barracks just off the parade ground. Other buildings included: the officers' quarters, six enlisted men's barracks (some with attached kitchens), laundresses quarters, quarters for nineteen married men, a hospital, bakehouse, guardhouse, storehouses, magazine, carpenter and blacksmith shop, stables, gun shed, and three old adobe structures built by the Mexicans.

The present Post Dispensary served as the Station Hospital in 1881. It was divided into four wards equipped with fifty beds plus a small ward for prisoners and one attendant's room. Each ward had hot and cold water running into marble basins. The wards were warmed by grates fireplaces for coal and lighted and ventilated by windows. In addition there was a dispensary furnished with hot and cold water. In the basement was a kitchen equipped with a cooking range, a pantry, a store-room, and a mess hall.

The only shade trees on the post were around the officers' quarters. The parade ground was grassy all year 'round and, like today, parades were held frequently. The parades and other military exercises were often witnessed by the townspeople of San Francisco.

Each company and the hospital cultivated a small garden raising a variety of vegetables.

Health conditions were considered to be excellent, for the troops were bothered mainly with climatic irritations, such as acute rheumatism, coughs, and catarrh.

The casual group of enlisted men pictured above was probably not unlike a similar group of soldiers today that can be found loafing around the barrack's steps. The facilities of the former group for entertainment and recreation were, of course, limited if not sometimes non-existent. Noting the man second from the left, it appears that some form of billiards or pool was in vogue even in 1881. The table could probably be found in what ever served as the day room of that time. More than likely it was located in a corner of the barracks.

Apparently in those days, as now, civilian clothes were authorized for off-duty hours. On $9 a month, the pay a private received in 1881, a man could go into San Francisco and treat himself to a day of entertainment. But obviously his limited resources placed some restriction on the amount of fun in which he could indulge in any given month.

Education Center Open During Holiday Period To Accelerate GED Testing

For the benefit of personnel who have been unable to complete USAFI GED tests and end of course tests because of duty schedules, the Education Center here will be open for testing of this nature during normal duty hours for the periods 19-23 December and 27-30 December.

Testing during the holiday season is also geared to assist other military personnel who anticipate changes after the first of the year (transfer, service school enrollment, discharge or release from the service), in meeting basic educational requirements.

Military personnel who have not graduated from high school may raise their educational level to graduate equivalence by completing a five-test GED battery. Tests on this level are given in the effectiveness of expression; the interpretation of materials in the natural sciences, social sciences and literature; and problem-solving arithmetic.

Entry is made on service records to show completion of high school when personnel pass this series of GED tests.

Credit for one year of college is entered on military records of individuals who complete the four college GED tests which do not include an examination in mathematics.

Military personnel interested in attending Army service schools which require enrollee to meet high school graduate or one year college standards may meet these pre-requisites by successfully completing GED tests.

Many schools award high school diplomas and college credit to military personnel who pass the GED tests.

The Education Center, Building 117, will be open from 0745 to 1630 hours during the period announced above. Personnel wishing more detailed information and educational counseling may contact the center by telephone extension 2974 and 3189.

Army Names Unit For Road Trek —ZI To Alaska

Washington (AFPS) — A 1,000-man battalion combat team stationed at Ft. Lewis, Wash., will make history next January. It will be the first army unit to travel over the rugged Alcan Highway in the peak of winter for a rendezvous with six other BCTs in Alaska.

The Army made the announcement in releasing details of Exercise Moose Horn, a three-week training exercise in cold weather operations next January and February in central Alaska.

The BCT, a unit of the 71st Div.'s 5th Inf. Regt., will leave Ft. Lewis 4 Jan. and move north in a 40-mile convoy on the Hart Highway to Dawson Creek in British Columbia.

From there it will follow the Alcan route more than 1,500 miles through sparsely scattered regions of the Canadian northwest before it passes through White Horse in the Yukon Territory and crosses the Alaskan border.

Upon arrival at the maneuver site about 83 miles east of Fairbanks, it will join six other 71st Div. BCTs from Alaskan bases for the exercise.

When Moose Horn is completed, the team will make the return trek to Ft. Lewis over the same route.

The Army said about 7,000 71st Div. troops will take part. The exercise is designed to test the capabilities of U. S. based troops in supporting Alaskan combat units.

Information Topic

U.S. Soldier In The Far East: His Best Defense—Knowledge

"Yank Go Home."

The U. S. soldier in the Far East is a major target in the Communist Asian propaganda war. His best defense, according to the Post Troop Information and Education Section, is knowledge—knowledge of his nation's broader aims and how they involve him as a soldier abroad.

The next Troop Information topic, "The American Soldier in the Far East," deals with the methods which the Communists have adopted on the Asian front of the Cold War.

Deviating from their European tactics, the Soviets have followed a policy of encouragement to the post-war upsurge of Eastern nationalism and anti-Western feelings, identifying the United States as the foremost of the European colonial powers in Asia and the Pacific.

The American soldier abroad becomes the symbol of American imperialism, a word applied by the Communists to any movement which thwarts the extension of their own sphere of influence.

In inciting Asia's nascent nationalism, the Communists have attempted to depict the American soldier as the unwelcome intruder who will deny the aspirations of Oriental peoples for national independence.

Not only will the Communists attempt to estrange the American soldier from the people of the locality but they will also play upon the soldier's own desires to return to the United States from a foreign assignment he probably dislikes—a mission which separates him from home and familiar ways.

In order to defend himself in his own eyes as well as in the eyes of his Asian friends and critics, the soldier must know his nation's purpose in sending him to a Far Eastern assignment. He must know and understand how his mission is part of the broader policies which the United States has implemented in the Pacific.

The techniques which the United States has used in reply to Communist imperialism include a number of military assistance agreements along with the extension of economic aid and assistance.

But economic and military aid alone are not considered sufficient to block Communist incursions in Asia.

The United States must, in the words of Walter S. Robertson, Assistant Secretary of State for Far Eastern Affairs, "... help create a constructive atmosphere or atmosphere of hope, a climate of confidence in Free Asia's present nationalist, moderate leadership."

By conduct based on an understanding of his Far Eastern assignment, the American soldier in the Pacific can contribute much to the accomplishment of that condition.

Candidate for Washington is Dan D. Buttolph, Presidio Boy Scout, attached to Explorer Post 77, displays his pleasure at the prospect of an introduction to the President of the United States. Dan, who resides with his parents, Colonel and Mrs. L. D. Buttolph, at 536B Simonds Loop, has been selected on a competitive basis, to carry the annual report of the Boy Scouts of America to President Eisenhower, in February, 1956.

Presidio Scout Will Compete For Visit To White House

A 16-year-old boy from the Presidio was recently selected by a group of prominent local community leaders to represent San Francisco in a competition to present the annual report of the Boy Scouts of America to the President of the United States.

If Dan Buttolph wins in the regional selection in which he is pitted against 56 boys representing Scout councils in California, Nevada, Arizona, Utah and part of the state of Wyoming and the territory of Hawaii, he is slated to join boys from the 12 geographical Scout councils in the Nation in a free trip to Washington.

There, he will be presented, with the other scouts, to the President of the United States in conjunction with the acceptance of the annual Scout report by President Eisenhower.

The son of Colonel and Mrs. L. D. Buttolph, Dan is an Eagle Scout with eight years' membership to his credit. He was chosen as delegate to Washington on the basis of his achievements in Scouting school and the community as well as for his personal appearance and his speaking ability.

The boy is a junior at Lowell High School. He hopes to enter West Point and eventually to make the United States Army his career.

wow!!

Shorts and knee-length stockings are the latest additions to the soldier's expanding wardrobe.

The Army has approved a new hot weather uniform of khaki shorts, similarly colored stockings and a short-sleeved, open-neck shirt.

Beginning next summer, recruits will be issued two of the abbreviated uniforms in initial clothing allowances.

At the same time, the ensemble will go on sale through Quartermaster Sales Stores. Area commanders, however, will prescribe the conditions under which it may be worn since it merely will be an alternate to the conventional cotton khaki summer uniform.

set play date

Opening night for the Army variety show, "Sound Off," produced by WAC Sergeant Elsie Davis, is set for 14 December at the Presidio Service Club.

Drawing on military talent to complement an already highly talented civilian cast, the producer features enlisted men and women in song, dance and comedy numbers, highlighting their performances with the contributions of professional stage performers who have played to civilian audiences across the nation.

news in books

New books at the Sixth Army Reference library, available for loan, include:

Free Service

Personnel May Send Holiday Morale Messages Via MARS

A MARS radio teletype circuit has been established by the Sixth Army Signal Section to points throughout the world to facilitate the transmission of Christmas morale messages by local military and civilian personnel.

Blank message forms are available at the Communication

Center in Building 35. The Sixth Army Signal Section urges personnel contemplating messages to file them as early as possible so that their Christmas Greetings to loved ones overseas may be sent at the earliest possible time.

Christmas messages sent, received, and delivered via the MARS circuit in the past averaged about 1,500, according to Sfc. C. A. Roen, Sixth Army Signal Section MARS operator.

Daily schedules are maintained from 1100-1300 hours and 1500-1700 hours and will continue until approximately 15 January, 1956.

To provide for local distribution of morale messages within the Sixth Army area, several new nets have been organized to be operated during the evening hours.

Since the establishment of the Military Affiliate Radio System (MARS) in 1948, nearly every post, camp and station maintained by the Army in the Zone of Interior and in overseas regions, have acquired stations.

Designed primarily for supplementary emergency and training purposes, MARS is coordinated with amateur radio operations and is frequently employed for the transmission of morale messages which normally would be transmitted through commercial channels.

absentee vote

Voting by military personnel in the 1956 national elections will be conducted under the new rules and regulations of the Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955.

Approved by the first session of the 84th Congress, the law allows military personnel and their eligible dependents in overseas areas to cast absentee ballots in federal elections.

President Eisenhower recently authorized Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson to administer the technical details of administering the new law.

family travel

Advance applications for concurrent travel has been authorized for officers and enlisted personnel from Grade E-4 with permanent assignments to either Japan or the Southern European Task Force stations in Italy. The stipulation applies where the reporting date at the Overseas Replacement Station is on or after 1 January, 1956.

Until the new regulation, E-4's assigned to Japan needed seven years' service to qualify for concurrent travel. The latest stipulation requires only four years' service to allow for transportation and housing of family members. The regulation with regard to the Southern European Task Force authorizes private housing only, however, according to the Sixth Army Transportation Section.

Letterman General Wins Second Star In Special Ceremony

The commanding general of Letterman Army Hospital was elevated to the rank of major general, last week. Major General Paul I. Robinson received his second star from Major General Riley F. Ennis, deputy commanding general, Sixth Army, and Mrs. Robinson in a special ceremony at the hospital.

Before his assignment here in June, General Robinson commanded Madigan Army Hospital at Tacoma, Washington. He had previously served as Eighth Army surgeon in Korea, winning that nation's highest military decoration, the Order of Military Merit Taiguk.

A graduate of Washington University, St. Louis, Mo., General Robinson has served in the Army since 1928. He holds the Legion of Merit with Oak Leaf Cluster and the Philippine Military Medal of Merit.

The Old Sarge Says!

Too Many WAC Cooks Will Add Spice To Army Fare

By Sfc. Debra O'Hanlon
Star-Presidian Staff Writer

"It really takes a man to understand women," says M/Sgt. James Kinces, the mess steward in the newly-opened WAC consolidated mess. "Once you know how to handle them on the job, their working possibilities are unlimited."

Sgt. Kinces is in a position to know what he is talking about. His family domain is reigned over by his wife and two daughters (at least he lets them think it is), while on the job, he plans and supervises the daily food intake of a few hundred women and men, as well as having three spanking-new, Army-trained WAC cooks and an apprentice in his formerly all-male mess kitchen.

An old hand in the manly art of leading women, the veteran soldier speaks with quiet pride of his 25 years' military service as a food specialist and supervisor during which much of his time was devoted to training WAC cooks when Sixth Army maintained its on-the-job culinary school here.

Any of the six male cooks in the newly-renovated mess hall will readily agree with Sgt. Kinces that the "women in white" are mighty nice to have around the kitchen. "It lends a nice, homey touch," they tell you, "and the girls really have an elegant way of roasting a chicken or mixing up a cake batter."

The three WAC cooks are just as enthusiastic in their regard for the co-ed system now prevailing in the consolidated mess. "I'd far rather work with men than with women, any day," declares Specialist 2nd class Agnes Masterson, a WAC who has made history in her own right by taking the highest score for her class in the Sixth Army Food Service School and the highest in the school's curriculum since its inception.

Agnes shares these honors with Specialist 3rd class Peggy Ann Harris and Specialist 2nd class Patricia (Ellen) Phillips who each took top-of-the-class honors at the Fort Ord Food Service School prior to Master-son's graduation.

Pvt. 2nd class Gloria Lourdes Fernandez is the apprentice in the otherwise exclusively professional co-ed mess hall. Unlike the sprite in Goethe's fable who caused water to be drawn by a broom, Gloria has no such magic at her fingertips. She does, however, maintain close alliance both with the water and the incidental brooms required to "man" the pots and pans incidental to preparing a meal whether in the home or the mess hall.

Gloria Lourdes Fernandez is a heroine in her own right! She bravely stepped in where the well-known angels fear to tread, for it is no mean achievement to fall in line in any kitchen with such an accomplished group of men and women cooks, and to hope that one day she can match their skill.

The little apprentice believed that she would have to assume the regular duties of Kitchen Police, since she is not school-trained, but M/Sgt. Kinces very generously vetoed any such idea. "Only in the rarest emergency," he vows, "will any of my girl cooks pull KP."

The newly-opened mess hall is now gaily painted in a sea-green shade. It boasts cretonne drapes in hues of green and tan and there are potted plants to relieve the necessary austerity of an Army dining-room.

"Meals," says Sgt. Kinces, "will have to adhere as closely as regulation demands, to the plan provided by the master menu, but with the inspiration circulated by our women cooks and the happy relationship they are establishing with the men both inside and outside the steam table, we should be able to continue our record of having the best mess hall in the Presidio area."

A reminder from Sgt. Kinces to men and women patrons of the mess hall is that even though Christmas Day is being celebrated on Monday, the regular Christmas dinner will be served for military personnel and their guests on Sunday, 25 December. As far as can be determined at present, there is no definite limit on the number of guests whom servicemen and women may invite to the mess hall on Christmas or New Years Day.

CMD Launches Downtown Reserve Counseling Service

Headquarters California Military District this week opened a downtown front in its campaign for recruits to the new Reserve system created by the Armed Forces Act of 1955. A new office at the corner of Market and Van Ness has since Monday been offering counseling service to Bay Area men of military age on the provisions of the new Act.

Two information specialists from the Plans and Training staff of the Presidio's CMD, M/Sgt. John C. Morrissey and Sfc. Forrest Kleinman, are on hand at the new office from 0800 to 1630 hours daily to counsel Bay Area residents on the opportunities offered by the new Reserve structure.

Brigadier General Claude F. Burbach, Army Reserve Chief for Northern California, emphasized the importance of the new law to men in the 17 to 18½ age bracket.

"It's too late for us to enroll young men for special training programs in the Army Reserve, if they wait until they receive their induction notice from Selective Service, General Burbach pointed out.

Most eligible men don't realize, he said, that they do not have to wait until graduation from high school to enlist in the Reserve program. The six months active duty which constitutes their total active service obligation may be delayed until after they have completed their high school educations.

The remainder of the time will be served in a local unit of their own choice where they will participate in drills one night a week and field training two weeks a year.

For the convenience of residents in the vicinity of the Presidio, the CMD continues to maintain an information office on post at Stillwell Hall. It is open from 2000 to 2200 hours Monday through Thursday as well as from 0800 to 1630 hours daily.

Post Library Offers List of Seasonal, Regional Reading

Gift books and fireside reading material recommended by the Post Librarian include "The American Christmas," by James H. Barnett, a light-hearted account of religious observances and traditions from early times to the present.

"Make Your Own Merry Christmas," by Ann Werstner, suggests hundreds of wrapping ideas, and "The Art of Wrapping Gifts," Drucella Lowrie, inspire how-to-do-it streaks in the most uninitiated.

"The Other Wise Man," by Van Dyke, or even the poem, "Night Before Christmas," bring back the ancient magic of the Christmas season.

A special holiday exhibit of gift books at the library carry such happy themes as "The Jerome Kern Song Book," "The Fireside Book of Folk Songs," and a pictorial history of America from Korea to Quebec as seen by artists in uniform.

"The American West," by Lucius Beebe, and "Makers of the Modern World," by Louis Untermeyer, are both timely books giving the pictorial epics of a continent, and a series of biographies of 92 men and women who have helped to shape the lives and the culture of the everyday American.

Originally taken from an old English libretto, the Messiah is a tragic, tumultuous and eventually glorious musical and oratorical composition evoking dramatic scenes from the life of Christ and his Mother from the time of the Annunciation through His birth and resurrection. The complete score carries 45 numbers, parts of which are sung in all Christian churches during the Lenten, Easter and Christmas seasons.

Included in the San Francisco operatic group performing the Messiah here are Kay Shipley, soprano soloist (from the Presidio); Eleanor Avery, contralto soloist; Dan Bishop, bass, director of Presidio Male Chorus; Pat Daugherty, tenor; Mrs. George Masters, soloist; Mrs. Beatrice Babbitt and Gary Hall, director of the San Francisco Opera Chorus Company and presently assigned to the Post chaplain's office.

Presidio Cagers Win First Three

RANGY DON LOFGRAN (17), Presidio center, is shown out-jumping three rivals, including the Presidio's Bill Davis (16), for the ball. The local casaba squad is currently tied with Parks Air Force Base for the league lead with three wins apiece. Parks invades the Presidio for an important clash next Friday evening.

Waterfowl Bag Better Than Ever

Nimrods who tried the 12 state-operated public waterfowl shooting areas for the first half of the split season found some of the finest hunting in years, the Department of Fish and Game reported.

Bag for the first half was up 79 per cent over the same period for last year and the number of hunters was up 46 per cent.

Game men of the Department attributed the increased good hunting to two factors. There were more birds, and nimrods had a highly successful opening weekend, encouraging them to come back several times during the half.

In 12 areas there were 19,406 hunters as compared to 13,288 last year. They bagged 66,223 ducks, geese and coots against only 36,938 during the 1954 first half.

Over-all hunter success ratio on the state operated areas was 3.4 birds per hunter, while 1954 nimrods averaged only 2.8 birds.

Cold weather in the north has brought millions of ducks into the central valleys and south, the Department reported. The quality of hunting should continue through the second half, which begins 10 December.

hood wins

Fort Hood, Texas, won the Fourth Army football championship last Saturday by defeating Fort Sill for the second time this season, 31-20, at Fort Sill, Oklahoma.

Again it was quarterback Don Gottlob of the New York Giants and Sam Houston State who proved the difference. Gottlob passed for four touchdowns and Steve Meillinger of Kentucky bulled over from the one for the other.

generals win

Undeclared Bolling Air Force Base beat Fort Belvoir, 23-7, last Saturday in Washington, D. C., in their annual interservice clash.

Some 9,000 fans turned out in perfect football weather to watch the Bolling Generals run their winning streak to 25 straight regular season games.

The powerful Generals play the Fort Sill Cannoneers tomorrow with the winner going on to the Poinsettia Bowl against the Fort Ord Warriors. The bowl game will be played in San Diego on 17 December for the mythical Armed Forces Football Championship.

Radarman Allan Bell of the aircraft carrier Wasp finished third in the recent National Bicycle Championships of America. Sixty cyclists, five of them former national champs, competed.

Mike O'Neill Leads Post To Early Season Wins

By Pvt. Bob Malone
Star-Presidian Sports Editor

Starting the local basketball season off with a bang, the Presidio Red Raider cage team won their first three tilts of the 1955-56 season by blasting Beale Air Force Base 74-48, Mather Air Force Base 71-41 and Chico State College 73-58.

The Presidio casaba squad will be competing in two leagues this year, the Bay Area Armed Forces League and the Northern California Armed Forces Basketball League. The latter came into being earlier this year when scheduling difficulties with Navy teams arose.

Big Mike O'Neill led the Presidio to their first win of the year by dropping in 22 points against the Beale Air Force Base five. Rangy Don Lofgran, Raider center, was right behind O'Neill with 21 counters. Other Presidio cagers hitting for more than ten points were Bill Aires with 11 and Bill Davis with ten points.

The second Presidio victory came at the expense of the Mather Air Force team. Bob Harbertson led the soldiers scoring from his guard position with 21 tallies followed by Mike O'Neill with 17. Bill Aires with nine points and Bill Davis with five were other Presidio stand-outs.

Tuesday night, Coach Hal Fischer's fast breaking squad journeyed to Chico for a clash with the powerful Chico State College five. The college foes showed surprising strength in the first half, leading 37-36 at the break. However, in the second half, the Presidio roared back led by Bob Harbertson with 14 points and Norm Slavitt with 11 to defeat Chico 73-58.

With no action slated this weekend, the Presidio faces three league foes next week. On Monday night the local soldiers invade Mather Air Force Base for an important clash. On Wednesday night, Beale Air Force Base will invade the local gym and on Friday, Parks Air Force comes to the Presidio.

New League Gets Initial Boost Here

A group of Presidio fathers met last Monday night at the Fort Scott Chapel to lay plans for the inauguration of P-O-N-Y League Baseball at the Presidio next summer. Called by Chaplain Harms, Battalion Chaplain of the 505th MP Battalion, the group discussed the initial steps to be taken in effecting a suitable organization to guide the new endeavor.

P-O-N-Y League Baseball, which derives its name from the phrase, "Protect Our Nation's Youth," is a program of baseball for 13- and 14-year-old boys. Started in 1952 as a direct result of the success experienced by the Little League Baseball Program, it is designed to carry on Little League principles until such time as the boys reach the age required by Junior Baseball leagues or scholastic teams.

P-O-N-Y League at the Presidio is also the direct result of the success of the Little League Baseball here, which was organized this past season as the Golden Gate Little League. Presently being directed by Capt. Ronald Ellis, president, this League met with great success and is planning on even greater interest in its next season.

Most important of the matters discussed last Monday was the calling of a meeting of all parents of 13- and 14-year-old boys to organize a local P-O-N-Y League. Invited to this meeting beside the mothers and fathers concerned are all older brothers and all other interested parties. This meeting will be held on Wednesday, 14 December '55, at 7:30 p.m. at the Fort Scott Chapel. Parents are requested to call Chaplain Harms at Ext. 3828 or SK 1-5914 to offer their services or otherwise indicate their interest.

Among other matters discussed was the possibility of using the abilities of the older boys, ages 15-19, in positions of team coaches.

It was emphasized that the principal aim of P-O-N-Y League is not to develop major league ball players, but to provide wholesome recreation where our youngsters can develop the principles of fair play and sportsmanship, self respect and discipline, respect for the rights of others, and the ability to lose gracefully.

Present at the initial meeting of P-O-N-Y League beside Chaplain Harms were Lt. Col. Earl Pegram, Lt. Col. Raoul Psaki, CWO Thomas Delaney, Col. Alexander Doerner, Michael Doerner, and Major George Leonard. (Ch. Harms)

yanks win

The visiting New York Yankees continued winning on their current barnstorming trip of the Far East. Latest to fall before the Yankee big guns were the Okinawa All-Stars, 9-1, in a seven inning game. The game was played at Naha on the island of Okinawa.

WINNERS in the recent 30th Engineer Group intra-mural basketball competition was the 21st Engineer Company. Shown presenting the gold trophy is Colonel W. E. Downing, commanding officer of the 30th Group to Sp/3 Lloyd Weis, athletic NCO for the 21st Engineers. The winners won five out of six games for the championship.

Collins Stars As 21st Engineers Win Crown

Paced by their shooting ace Roger Collins the 21st Engineers won the recently completed 30th Engineer Group intra-mural basketball competition. The first place squad won five out of six games played and it was a hard fought 44 to 41 win over the 99th Engineers that clinched the title.

Finishing a close second was the Headquarters Detachment of the 660th Engineer Battalion with four wins and two losses. Headquarters Company of the 30th Group, the 542nd Engineer Company, the 537th Engineer Company and the 549th Engineer Company each won three games and lost three.

Members of the hard driving squad from the 21st were Roger Collins (coach), Bob Zappi, Joe Napolitano, Bob McFarland, Chuck Johnson, John Baker and Dan Cook.

Collins also lead the league in scoring with 100 points or a 17.6 average for each league game. Other high scorers were Clair Oren of the 660th Engineer Battalion with 100 points, Lowell Simmons of the 542nd Engineer Company with 80 counters to his credit and Bob Brinkerhoff with 78.

With the closing of the intra-mural play an all-star team has been gathered together to represent the 30th Group in the Bay Area Armed Forces Class "B" League.

The Class "B" League is roughly equivalent to a Junior College League and has six teams entered from units in the Bay Area. They are the Oakland Army Base, Fort Mason, Sacramento Signal Depot, Letterman Army Hospital and Two Rock Ranch.

Coaching the Fort Scott team will be Captain Sterling Pollock and 2nd Lieutenant Tom Snowden.

Army Plans New Airborne Division For Activation In Fiscal Year '57

Washington (AFPS)—The Army will activate a new airborne division at Ft. Campbell, Ky., during the 1957 fiscal year. The new division, as yet undesignated, will take the place in the U. S. of the 11th Airborne Div. The 11th will make a Gyroscope exchange with the 5th Inf. Div. in Germany beginning in January.

In a shift of permanent home stations, the 5th Inf. will go to Ft. Ord, Calif., when it returns to the U.S., instead of replacing the 11th Airborne at Ft. Campbell as previously scheduled. The 5th will take the place of the 6th Inf., a training division now at Ft. Ord. The Army said that in the interest of economy, the 5th, although organized as a combat division, will also train new recruits from time to time. Army Secretary Wilber M. Brucker said that airborne training facilities at Ft. Campbell will provide most economically for the new airborne division.

The 187th Airborne Regimental Combat Team, which recently returned from Japan in a Gyroscope switch with the 508th ARCT, will be moved from Ft. Bragg, N. C., to Ft. Campbell next February for integration into the new division. The activation of another combat airborne division will give the Army three such units. Now in existence are the 11th and the 82nd, whose home station is Ft. Bragg. Another airborne division, the 101st, is a training unit at Ft. Jackson, S. C.

6th Army Vehicles To Carry Christmas Mails For Post Office

The Christmas mails will go through this year with the help of 607 Army trucks on loan to the United States Post Office from Army installations in California, Washington, Utah, Arizona and Oregon.

In California, the Army has loaned state postmasters a total of 362 vehicles, 306 of which will be used in San Francisco alone, according to Colonel Calvin L. Whittle, Sixth Army Transportation officer.

Earlier this year, another 14 ten-ton tractor trailer had been made available to the San Francisco postmaster for use in overseas mail movements.

Intended for service within a 75-mile radius of the installations from which they are borrowed, the vehicles will be available to postmasters until 20 January, 1956. Maintenance costs and drivers are furnished by the Post Office Department.

Some 199 Army vehicles have been put into Post Office service for the holidays in Washington, the remainder in Utah, Oregon and Arizona.

Revise Army Security Procedures To Eliminate Hearsay Evidence

Washington (AFPS)—The Army has revised its security procedures to provide that anonymous and unsupported derogatory information about an individual will not be kept in his records.

A new regulation, AR 640-98, states that the following material will not be filed in an individual's records:

"Unsupported or unacted upon adverse matter, other than counterintelligence information, which will prejudice the individual's reputation or future in the military service.

"Allegations which have been satisfactorily rebutted and/or have not resulted in elimination or disciplinary action."

Files which are the property of an army intelligence agency and which are referred to before taking any personnel actions on the individual concerned are not affected by these provisions.

The regulation directs, however, that only information that has a direct bearing on loyalty or national security should be placed in intelligence files that are consulted prior to taking personnel actions.

AR 640-98 also says that no adverse matter, with some exceptions, will be made part of an individual's personnel record without giving him an opportunity either to make a written reply to the information or decline in writing to make such a statement. This also was provided by the previous regulation, AR 600-195. However, a new safeguard now has been added.

Where it is decided that the individual has satisfactorily answered the adverse allegation and the charges are not considered serious enough to warrant disciplinary action, all references to the derogatory material will be removed from the record.

But various adverse official reports and investigations that normally would not be shown to an individual may be filed.

new assignment

Major Lowell Rice reported to his new assignment in G-2 this week. A Korea veteran, with 15 years' military service, Major Rice was wounded in action while serving with the 90th Infantry Division.

He came to the Presidio from the Associate Infantry Advance course at Fort Benning, Georgia, where earlier in his career he also took the Officers Basic Infantry course and the Field Grade refresher course.

Major Rice also served with the Far East Command, Liaison office, in Japan. He wears the Purple Heart, the Bronze Star with Cluster, the Infantry Badge and the theater ribbons for the European campaigns and the Far East.

Rabbi Dalin To Hold Hanukah Services At Presidio Chapel

Hanukah services for Jewish Army personnel in the San Francisco area will be held at 1930 hours, 13 December, at the Post Chapel by Rabbi William Z. Dalin, Chaplain (Major) USAR, Sixth Army Auxiliary Chaplain.

Commemorating the victory won more than 2100 years ago by the Maccabees over the Greek-Syrian King Antiochus, Hanukah or the Feast of Lights begins at sundown and ends 17 December.

In 167 B. C. E., the Jews staged a successful rebellion against the attempts of Antiochus to suppress Judaism in his Middle Eastern domain. It is the custom today in Jewish homes and synagogues to light evening candles, an additional light each night for eight days, in memory of the event. An eight-branched candelabrum, the Menorah, symbolizes the holiday.

Hanukah is also a gift-giving celebration and immediately following the Tuesday evening services, presents will be distributed to the children of Jewish military personnel by the San Francisco B'nai B'rith Lodge 21.

Winter, or more appropriately the rainy season in San Francisco generally means that more Presidio enlisted personnel pass time in unit day rooms. Above, Pvt. Gordon Dick Edwards Pubals peruses a periodical as Pvt. Danny Murray bends his mind to the more serious task of studying from a volume on social anthropology. Both men are members of Headquarters Company, Station Complement.

Presidio Holiday Season Now In Full Swing

Children, EM Parties Highlight Post Plans

The Star Presidian

It Won't Be Long before Letterman patient A/2c Eugene Boltz talks over old times with his mother who will visit him this Christmas at the expense of the men of Headquarters Company, Sixth Army, who contributed $352 to pick up the tab for her trip here from Jones-town, Penna. Surrounding Airman Boltz (from left to right) are: M/Sgt. Hughes L. Turner, Sfc. Joe Putman and Sp/3 Alan W. Barnett, all of Headquarters Company, Sixth Army.

Soldiers' Generosity Will Bring Mother To Bedside Of Badly Injured Airman

A 21-year-old Pennsylvania airman, critically injured in an auto-train accident last August and now a patient at Letterman Army Hospital, will receive a Christmas gift in the form of a visit from his mother through the generosity of the soldiers of Headquarters Company, Sixth Army.

Their recent donation of $342.00 will finance the trip of Mrs. Pierce W. Boltz, mother of Airman 2nd Class Eugene G. Boltz, of Jones-town, Pa., from her home to San Francisco and return. She will leave several days prior to Christmas, fly to San Francisco and remain at the hospital until after Christmas with her son.

Airman Boltz enlisted in the Air Force in January, 1953, and after completing his basic training at Sampson Air Force Base in New York and schooling at Lowry Air Force Base, Colo., was transferred to Castle Air Force Base, Calif., where he was serving as a radar and bomb sight mechanic with the 93rd Armament and Electronics Maintenance Squadron until he was admitted to Letterman.

Injuries sustained by him in the accident last 21 August near Atwater, Calif., included multiple fractures of the skull, extensive injuries to his face, fractures of both jaws, loss of an eye and a fractured leg. He was in a semi-coma for several weeks and has already undergone five major surgeries, according to medical officers at the hospital, and will probably require another half dozen operations in the next several months. Immediately following the accident he was flown from Castle Air Force Base to Travis Air Force Base near San Francisco and transferred to Letterman by ambulance.

Although his parents visited him briefly at the hospital immediately after his admission to Letterman and while he was still on the critical list, hospital personnel selected him as the patient to receive the gift visit. Boltz was selected because he is unable to travel, his mother cannot afford another trip to San Francisco at this time, and because in the opinion of his doctors Boltz would benefit greatly from the visit.

Prior to entering the Air Force and after graduation from high school in May, 1952, Airman Boltz was employed by the Hershey Chocolate Corporation in Hershey, Pa.

He has two sisters, Doris, 18, and Linda, 6.

This is the fourth consecutive year that the men of Headquarters Company, Sixth Army, have defrayed the expenses of a mother to visit her son at Letterman. They initiated the project just prior to Christmas, 1952, and their donations for this cause during the past four years total $1,107. They have enabled mothers from Lapwai, Ida., and Homer and Rockwood, Mich., to visit their sons in San Francisco at no expense to the parents or patients. This year is the first time that an Air Force man has been the recipient of the gift.

Holiday Roundup!

Post Program Has Something Special For Individuals, Units

The season of Christmas will find the historic Presidio more than mildly aglow with the high spirits of holiday festivities.

Programs already announced indicate that post planners haven't missed a trick in assuring food, frolic and furioso for soldiers and their dependents.

From children to ancient warrior, there'll be a parcel of traditional Presidio pleasure in every argyle or khaki stocking.

Children first, and tomorrow morning the small fry will begin a round of well-planned parties sponsored by Post Special Services. All parties are slated to get underway at 0900 hours.

North Bay children, 1-6, will have their party at the Fort Baker Service Club. While the 7-12 age group will hold forth at the Fort Baker Theatre.

Presidio area youngsters, 1-6, will be feted at the Presidio Service Club, with a simultaneous program underway at the Presidio Theatre for the 7-12 year olds.

Movies, refreshments and candy highlight the bill at each party. Christmas stockings and individual gifts will be presented by the bearded-man in the red velvet suit. Special Service personnel will be on hand at each party to supervise the gala activities.

At the all-new NCO Club, formerly the YMCA building, torrid Inez Torres, star of the Sinaloa Club, tops an outstanding variety bill that will celebrate the grand opening. Paul Desmond, skits and songs; the Ah King comedy magicians, and dancing to the popular music of the Herb Faulkner orchestra, round out the festive holiday bill.

On the special guest list for the club opening are General Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commanding General, and Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, Deputy Post Commander. Attendance at the event is by reservation only.

A big New Year's Eve party at the NCO Club will have dance music by Hal Saunders' orchestra, a top-talent floor show and a buffet supper is slated for 1900 to 2100 hours.

The Presidio Officers Open Mess features a delicious grilled rainbow trout dinner, or an elegant mixed grill on Friday and Saturday evenings. Families are invited and there is a special half price for a child's plate.

There will be no dinner dance at the Officers Open Mess on Christmas Eve, but members and guests may avail of its normal social activities. Assuming that most people will want to spend Christmas Day and New Year's Day at home, the club will be closed both days.

The Sixth Army WAC Detachment is giving a big party at the Fort Scott NCO Club. The celebration, which takes place on the 19th of December, will feature dancing to a military combo, group caroling, and a big buffet supper of roast turkey, ham, potato salad and the customary liquid refreshments.

On Christmas morning the WACs plan a festive mess hall breakfast. This also includes the men of Company C, and will feature egg nog and other holiday fare. There's a breakfast-in-bed-party for enlisted women who hate to get up on Christmas morning.

Silent Night . . .

Carols of Christmastime Come from Man's Heart

The Christmas libretto—the many carols and songs that joyously proclaim the holiday—is the work of clerics and poets.

In 1865, on the day before Christmas, Phillips Brooks, a young American preacher, was traveling from Jerusalem to Bethlehem. As he stood in the fields where shepherds had watched over their flocks he was stirred with emotion.

The words of "O Little Town of Bethlehem" welled up in his heart. But it was not until three years later that he asked Lewis H. Redner, superintendent of the Church of the Holy Trinity in Philadelphia, to write the music.

On the night before the song was to be sung for the first time, the music was still to be written. As he slept, however, Redner heard "an angel strain whispering in my ear." He transcribed the melody to paper the next morning and 20 years later it became a hymn.

Perhaps the most prolific of hymn writers was Charles Wesley, who during the Methodist religious revival of the 18th century produced more than 6,500 hymns. His best known hymn is "Hark! The Herald Angels Sing."

"Jingle Bells," which epitomizes the merry spirit of Christmas, was written in 1857 by James Pierpont, a Unitarian minister. It seems that this song has been with us forever, for no Christmas is complete without it.

One of the oldest and best liked of English carols was popularized by Charles Dickens in his classic, "A Christmas Carol." The words "God rest you merry, gentlemen, Let nothing you dismay. Remember Christ, our Saviour, Was born on Christmas Day;"

are typical of the songs that children and trained choirs, according to English customs, sing in the streets and from door to door.

"Silent Night" is one of the best loved of Christmas songs. It grew from an inspiration that came to the Rev. Joseph Mohr as he stood before the window of his little church in Austria watching the snow slowly drift down in the silence of the night. A memorial chapel has been erected at Oberndorf-on-the-Salzach to commemorate the composition of the song in 1818.

AG Section's Project To Bring 400 Gifts To Needy Children

Personnel of the Sixth Army AG section, including the 56th and 102d MRU, have added a new twist to the Christmas Exchange.

Instead of exchanging gifts among themselves they are following the suggestion of Col. Robert N. Nourse, Sixth Army AG, by bringing gifts for children which the section will turn over to the local Salvation Army on 23 December.

By the time that date arrives, it is expected that nearly 400 gifts will have been donated. Each will be attractively wrapped and labeled according to whether it is for a boy or a girl and the age group to which it will appeal.

As in years past, AG section personnel will gather around a Christmas tree late next Friday afternoon, spreading the season's cheer among themselves with coffee, cake, refreshments and traditional carols.

Christmas Message-- '55

By CHAPLAIN (MAJOR GENERAL) PATRICK J. RYAN
Chief of Chaplains, United States Army

During this holy season, we follow once again the Star which leads us to a crude shelter near the little town of Bethlehem. With simple shepherds from nearby pastures and wise rulers from far places, we gaze once more with new understanding at a tiny Infant wrapped in swaddling clothes and lying in a manger. The eye sees only a man, a woman, a child, a few animals, and some straw. But over the whole scene there is a light not of this world, and the voice of an Angel opens our minds to the mystery we gaze upon . . . "Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy that shall be to all the people, for this day is born to you a Saviour who is Christ the Lord . . . Glory to God in the highest and on earth peace to men of good will."

The Angels rejoiced and sang "Glory to God" because our redemption began with the Birth of Christ. He brought peace to men by reconciling earth to heaven. This peace on earth which leads to the eternal peace of heaven can only be obtained by men who are of good will. The Scriptures tell us that the shepherds returned to their flocks "glorifying and praising God for all the things they had heard and seen."

May God keep us from being men who have eyes that see not and ears that hear not. May the Son of God make us worthy of the peace and joy He brought into the world on Christmas Day. In that hope, I wish you a Holy and a Happy Christmas.

General Guy Meloy Named Education, Information Chief

The recently-named Army chief of information and education, Maj. Gen. Guy S. Meloy, Jr., will leave the command of the 1st Infantry Division, Ft. Riley, Kansas, to report shortly after the first of the year to his new Pentagon assignment.

He will replace Brig. Gen. Theodore S. Briggs who has been assigned to Far East Command Headquarters.

From his position as commandant of the Fort Benning Infantry School, General Meloy was appointed in June, 1954, as commanding general of the 1st Infantry Division in Europe. The 53-year-old general returned to the United States from Germany this year with the Big Red One, the first Gyroscopic exchange of divisions.

A graduate of the United States Military Academy, General Meloy was commissioned as a second lieutenant in June, 1927. He served in the European Theater in World War II as chief of staff of the 103rd Infantry Division from October 1944 to September 1945.

During the Korean War, he commanded the 19th Infantry Regiment, part of the 24th Infantry Division. In July, 1950, General Meloy was wounded near Taejon. He received the Distinguished Service Cross and the Purple Heart for heroism in action.

DOD Ruling

24,000 SCARWAF Personnel Will Be Returned To Army Control

Washington (AFPS) — The Defense Department has directed the return of 24,000 SCARWAF (special category army with air force) personnel to army control.

Since 1947, when the AF became a separate service, SCARWAF units have performed military construction activities overseas for the AF. This arrangement has proved unsatisfactory to both services, the DOD said.

In the future, army engineer construction units, under army control, will build air bases and perform major repairs in overseas areas as required by the AF.

Personnel at AF installations will be trained to make emergency bomb damage repairs as an "additional or collateral duty," according to a directive signed by Reuben B. Robertson, Jr., deputy defense secretary.

To supplement regular base personnel, a limited number of AF specialists will be assigned to various installations to supervise the development of the capability to repair bomb damage.

SCARWAF units and personnel returned to the Army will be absorbed by existing army facilities. To assume the function of overseas construction when needed by the AF, the Army has been au-

Addresses High Level Meeting On Armed Forces Reserve Act

The importance of the recently enacted Armed Forces Reserve Act to America's defense was stressed recently at a meeting of San Francisco Bay Area educators and student counselors by Edgar W. Smith, civilian aide to the Secretary of the Army for Oregon.

Mr. Smith, a long-time president of the Oregon State Board of Higher Education and three times President of the Portland Chamber of Commerce, addressed the group at Abraham Lincoln High School in San Francisco while here to address a Junior Chamber of Commerce meeting.

He pointed out that after each of eight major wars in which this country has been engaged, we deliberately stripped our Army of its strength. Therefore, with no adequate ready reserve force available each time a new war came it was necessary to rebuild the armed forces from scratch.

In his discussion of the new Armed Forces Reserve Act, Mr. Smith said that all factors—total manpower requirements, number of men available, length of service required, needs of industry, budgetary considerations, technological advances, the projectible international situation—were considered and focused down to three essential principles:

- To establish and maintain adequate and effective Reserve forces without reducing the effectiveness of the Active forces.
- To assure minimum impact on essential civilian activities.
- To provide maximum equity of obligation for all qualified young men.

Following the speech, a question-and-answer period was conducted with Brigadier General Claude F. Burbach, Chief of the California Military District, representing the Army. Presiding over the discussion was Dr. John L. Roberts, director of counselling and guidance services for the San Francisco School System.

new strength

Washington (AFPS)—The total strength of the armed forces at the end of October was 2,922,000, a decrease of 8,863 from the previous month, according to the Defense Department.

Army strength was estimated at 1,105,062; Navy at 660,770; Marine Corps at 201,768 and Air Force at 954,400.

Presidio to Tighten Its Economic Belt Ending Fiscal Year

The Presidio will open the New Year with a firm resolution to live within its budget for the 1956 fiscal year.

A program designed to effect the greatest possible economies in funds, supplies and equipment has already been initiated with the appointment of Lt. Col. Albert M. Wunderlich, S-4, as Post conservation officer.

In order to continue operations within the Presidio's economic means, the cooperation of all military unit commanders and civilian section chiefs in a "rigid conservation program" has been called for by Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander.

Requests for suggested economy measures have already been sent to each unit and section on Post in preparation for an overall format. The unit commander, officer or civilian in charge of each activity has been appointed conservation officer for his command.

The savings program will go into effect 1 January 1956. Each unit will file a report on the fifth of each month until July and the end of the fiscal year.

"The success of this program," said Colonel Lundquist, "is entirely dependent upon the initiative, judgment and aggressiveness of unit commanders and officers or civilians in charge of activities.

"The sincere and wholehearted cooperation of all military and civilian personnel is imperative," he said.

Defense Seeks Better, Less Expensive Medical Care In New Joint Provision

Washington (AFPS)—In a move to provide better and less expensive medical care for servicemen, the Defense Department has told the armed forces to begin preparing their medical facilities for "joint utilization."

A directive, signed by Deputy Defense Secretary Reuben B. Robertson, Jr., states that joint use will be made of all existing medical and dental facilities, including clinical laboratories.

However, facilities still will be staffed by personnel from their respective service.

The directive calls for the hospitalization of military patients at the nearest medical facility capable of providing proper care, regardless of the individual's service affiliation.

It is based upon a comprehensive survey by the DOD and greater economy is expected. This was an objective of the Hoover Commission.

Mr. Robertson said, "We believe that this directive constitutes another forward step in our efforts to eliminate duplication and provide better medical

Lt. General Gavin Chief of R & D Will Visit Presidio

Lieutenant General James M. Gavin, Army chief of Research and Development will be met by a motorcycle escort at the Lombard Gate when he arrives at 0745 Tuesday for a visit to Sixth Army Headquarters.

The Honor Guard and a 15-gun salute will pay the Sixth Army's military respects in a ceremony before the Presidio's Officers' Open Mess in Arquello Square. An assembly of 62 flag bearers, carrying banners of the United Nations will frame the assembled troops.

A West Point graduate, the 48-year-old General Gavin was commissioned as a second lieutenant in June, 1929. By 1943, he had risen to Brigadier General at the age of 36.

During World War II, General Gavin led the 505th Parachute Battalion in a spearhead assault on Sicily in July, 1943. In September, he commanded the landing at Salerno Bay.

He became assistant commander of the famed 82nd Airborne Division on October, 1943. The 82nd made a parachute assault during the Normandy landings.

In the fall of 1944, General Gavin as commander of the 82nd led the Division in the Nijmegen, Holland, struggle. The 82nd took part in the Battle of the Bulge and the 1945 Spring offensive.

After the war, General Gavin was city representative to the Berlin Kommandatura.

He held the position of Assistant Chief of Staff for Plans and Research from March, 1955, until his appointment in September as Chief of Research and Development.

Among his decorations are the Distinguished Service Cross and Oak Leaf Cluster, the Silver Star with Oak Leaf Cluster, the Purple Heart and the Distinguished Service Medal.

big payroll

The Army employs 688,000 civilian workers throughout the world. They are in 1,200 occupations, ranging from laborer to research physicist and from file clerk to procurement specialist.

support to our military personnel."

The army, navy and air force secretaries have been told to place the new policy into operation immediately and to assure maximum tri-service coordination.

Other key provisions of the directive include:

1. Expansion of the use of specially trained personnel, particularly medical and dental corps reservists to conduct physical examinations for reserve units.
2. Joint planning of requirements for new medical construction.
3. Joint studies of preventive health and medicine policies.
4. Free exchange of organized training programs with a view towards standardization of training courses and their further joint utilization.

Sharpshooting meant a total of $50 for these three members of the 505th MP Battalion who were presented checks this week by Lt. Col. Fred C. Smith, 505th MP Battalion commander and Post Provost Marshal. Following battalion-wide competitive firing of the M-1, carbine and .45 automatic pistol. From left to right are Sgt. Dorris Haynes, Company C, who earned $10 for his third place standing, Sfc. John W. Hunter, Company A, who placed first to win $25 and Sgt. Matthew D. Schuster, Headquarters Company, held the runner-up slot, winning $15. Awards were based on composite scores for all three weapons.

New Program!

505th MP Marksmen Win First Local Unit Cash Awards

The 505th MP Battalion became the first local organization to take advantage this week of a new post program which authorizes cash awards to the top marksmen of each of the five locally-based major units.

Because of the versatility in arms proficiency stressed by the Military Police Corps, the 505th based its awards on composite scores registered in the recent competitive firing of the M-1, the carbine and the .45 automatic pistol. The other two weapons fired by the MPs at this time, the .45 submachine gun and the shotgun, were not a part of the cash awards competition.

M/Sgt. John W. Hunter, Company A, a holder of nearly 400 trophies and citations for marksmanship during his military career, was the leading shot in the Battalion, earning the biggest slice of the sharpshooters' pie, $25.

Runner-up was Sgt. Matthew D. Schuster, Headquarters Company, who won $15 while Sgt. Dorris N. Hayne placed third to receive a $10 dividend.

The winners' circle, incidentally, included one man from each of the three line units currently on duty here. Company B, which is winding up operations at Camp Polk, Louisiana, with Operation SAGE BRUSH, was not present for the competition.

Lieutenant Col. Fred C. Smith, 505th Battalion Commander, presented the checks to the sharpshooting trio during an informal ceremony at battalion headquarters.

Other units now authorized to make similar cash awards for outstanding marksmanship are the 30th Engineer Group, Headquarters Company, Sixth Army; Station Complement, and a composite unit consisting of the 46th Ordnance Group, the 561st Engineer Company, the 16th Air Base Post Office, the 56th MRU, 102d MRU, the Sixth Army Band and Detachment 4, Armed Forces Police Detachment.

deputy post commander

Here's hoping the members of the Presidio family, both military and civilian, have the happiest possible Christmas and New Year. However, I would temper this greeting with a leaven of caution—drive safely. Don't let a tragic accident mar your happy holiday. In this season of congested roads, weather hazards and accelerated timetables, many may end as vital statistics—don't you! Season's greetings and may God bless you all.

COL. CARL E. LUNDQUIST

New System Of Pay For Army Personnel Began At Dix, 1 Dec.

Ft. Dix, N. J. (AFPS)—"Operation Pay," a test of a new system of paying army personnel, began here 1 Dec.

The test, which will continue indefinitely, presently is limited to some 2,000 troops, whose units are served by the personnel offices of the 1262nd SU and the 364th Inf. Regt. of the 69th Inf. Div. here.

The new pay system was tried out experimentally on paper last summer by these same units. This time, however, the military pay record system, which now is in use throughout the Army, will be dropped.

The new military pay voucher system will be used alone. Under this plan, each man is given a complete account of his pay status each month.

Post Encourages Personnel to Take Christmas Leaves

The Presidio will pare its on-duty manpower down to 50 per cent of strength during the next two weeks in order to allow a maximum of holiday leaves for Post personnel during the Christmas and New Year season.

Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, has urged local commanders and civilian section chiefs to grant leaves liberally wherever possible.

The policy is being applied to both civilian and military personnel on the Presidio, Colonel Lundquist said.

Civilians have been encouraged to take annual leave at any desirable and convenient time during the holiday period which begins 21 December and ends 3 January.

In granting leaves to military personnel, commanders have been instructed to authorize leaves for 50 per cent of their men during the week from 21 to 28 December. An additional 50 per cent can then be granted leaves during the second week of the holiday season.

Because of minimum manpower needs, however, leaves may not in many cases cover both the Christmas and New Year weeks.

The Post's liberal leave policy is in conformance with general Department of the Army efforts to maximize the number of Army personnel permitted to spend the holidays with their families.

free wrapping

Christmas gift wrapping facilities are available free to Post personnel at the Presidio Service Club. Not only will the Club supply paper and ribbon but hostesses will advise on matters of taste and decor in the selection of attractive trimmings.

The gift wrapping service is offered every day and evening except Thursday and Sunday nights.

Part Two

Information Topic To Outline UN—Its Structure And Scope

The UN—Its Structure and Scope will be outlined in the next Troop Information hour, according to the Post Troop Information and Education Section.

A follow-up on an earlier consideration of the United Nations' organization and purpose, the coming session will describe the UN's component agencies and their roles in the international relations of the post-war world.

The major divisions of the United Nations are the General Assembly, the Security Council and the Secretariat.

It is in the Security Council that the burden of the peace and the immediate power to enforce it really lies. Composed of eleven members, it includes the five powers recognized as major at the end of World War II—each of which holds a permanent seat. They are the United States, the Soviet Union, Great Britain, France and Nationalist China. The remaining six members hold non-permanent elective seats for two-year terms.

Because any of the permanent powers on the Security Council may block a proposal for action by use of the veto, effective control over international frictions depends upon a concert of the five great powers—the five nations with sufficient means to enforce the peace.

In a rough way, the General Assembly corresponds to the American House of Representatives. As in the American lower house, each member holds one vote (although as many as five representatives from each state are permitted). Like the House of Representatives, the General Assembly controls the UN purse strings, determining dues and controlling the budget.

As a policy-making body, the Assembly may consider and make recommendations on any question of international concern. Of major importance is the Assembly's role as a world sounding-board for the ideals, aspirations and ambitions of the member nations.

A number of individual agencies work in cooperation with the Assembly in a variety of fields. They include the Economic and Social Council, the Food and Agriculture Organization, the International Labor Organization and others.

The Secretariat is the administrative arm of the United Nations. Its chief officer, the Secretary-General, is appointed by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council.

A number of other sub-organizations under the General Assembly and the Security Council will also be touched on during the information hours. They include such agencies as the Trusteeship Council, the International Band for Reconstruction and Development, and the Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

New Trial, Defense Counsels

Two Sixth Army JAGC Officers Pass Recent California State Bar Exams

Two officers from the Sixth Army Judge-Advocate General Corps will be admitted to the California Bar next week at a formal swearing in by the California Supreme Court and the Ninth Federal Circuit Court.

Among the most recent candidates to pass the California State Bar examinations are Capt. Walter Patrick Lukens and 1st Lt. Kenneth G. Nellis of Sixth Army JAGC. Capt. Lukens will also be certified under Article 127B of the Universal Code of Military Justice to practice as Trial and Defense Counsel before courts martial.

A West Point graduate, Capt. Lukens received his B.S. in Military Science and Engineering in 1947. Under Army sponsorship, the 31-year-old captain attended Stanford University Law School where he was granted his LLB this year. Captain Lukens has worked for the Sixth Army JAGC in reviewing inferior courts-martial and on a number of legal research projects.

On graduation from the United States Military Academy in 1947, Capt. Lukens took further training at the Army Ground and Infantry Schools. He was then assigned in 1948 to the Caribbean Command.

In August 1950 he began a 34-month tour of duty in Korea where he participated in five major campaigns. Among his decorations are the Combat Infantryman's Badge, the Korean Service Medal, the United Nations Service Medal, the Bronze Star and Oak Leaf Cluster.

Already a member of the Illinois Bar when he entered the Army through the USAR in February 1954, Lt. Nellis took his LLB from the University of Illinois College of Law. He holds a B.A. in Economics from William and Mary.

After Basic Infantry and JAG training, he came to the Sixth Army JAGC where he has worked on pre-trial advices, post trial reviews and loyalty board hearing cases.

25,000 Gifts sent to the Presidio Chapter of the American Red Cross, by more than 500 local chapters throughout the nation, await distribution by Military Sea Transport Service to service personnel who will be at sea Christmas Day. From left, Aaron M. Hirsh and Charles E. Schmitt, assistant field directors here, expedite the operation by packing the small gift items in cardboard cartons.

At Sea

Red Cross Christmas Program Provides Gifts To Servicemen

Christmas Day for service personnel aboard transport vessels at sea will be embellished by small gifts donated by more than 500 American Red Cross chapters throughout the nation.

Nearly 25,000 gifts purchased, packaged, and gift-wrapped by local Red Cross chapters have been sent to the Presidio chapter which is serving as a clearing house for the traditional high seas Christmas program.

Gifts passing through the local chapter are marked for distribution to military transport ships operating out of the San Francisco Port of Embarkation at Ft. Mason.

After the Red Cross delivers the gift packages to the Military Sea Transport service at the SFPOE, the gifts are loaded aboard MSTSS vessels for distribution at sea.

Though the contents of the packages vary slightly, most of them contain ball point pens, automatic pencils, cigarette lighters, cases, billfolds, playing cards, pocket novels and Christmas candy.

The high seas Christmas gift program is also being operated at the four other posts of embarkation: San Diego, Seattle, New Orleans and New York.

Railroads Extend Fare Reduction To Services For Another Year

Washington (AFPS)—The nation's railroads have extended for another year reduced furlough fares for military personnel in uniform traveling at their own expense.

Under the plan, round-trip coach fares average a little over two cents a mile as against the regular average of three cents. Recently, this has been extended to include foreign military students in the U. S.

The reduced fare plan, begun during WWII, was suspended after the war, but was reinstated in late 1950. It has been extended each year since then. The latest extension carries the reduced fares through 31 Jan., 1957.

The Spanish influence in the Netherlands changed "Saint" to "Santa"—hence, "Santa Claus."

Security Evaluation Class Now Underway At Ft. Holabird, Md.

Washington (AFPS)—The first of 10 two-week courses in the review and evaluation of personnel security information has begun at the Army Intelligence Center, Ft. Holabird, Md.

Some 15 army and civilian personnel charged with the final analysis and adjudication of personnel security cases will attend each class.

The course has been established at the direction of Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker. It will stress legal concepts as to the sufficiency of information and the necessity for complete and minute examination of all evidence involved in every personnel security case.

Those attending the courses will be drawn from the DA, army headquarters, major overseas commands and special and administrative agencies.

$$$ for best decorations!

Competition is keen for prospective winners in the Presidio Christmas decorations contest sponsored by S-1. The judging is slated to take place on Tuesday evening.

Prizes in the decorations contest are as follows: The best unit arrangement—$50.00. There is a $20.00 award for the best officers' quarters and a like sum for the top decorating scheme in the enlisted men's area.

Best multiple quarters, in which more than a single unit is billeted, will draw $30.00 prize money. There is still time to get busy on the decorating project, since it isn't always the work hours involved that determines the quality of the finished result.

Originality combined with simplicity are two key qualities being considered by the judges. But if light and color is the theme suggested by individual or group taste in decorating, they are no block to achieving top prize.

The True Spirit of Christmas doesn't always need a lighted tree or a man in a white beard to identify it. Without tree or flower or candle, four Presidio women brought a special kind of Christmas to dependent children patients at Letterman Army Hospital this week. They announced the arrival of Santa Claus, bringing a new "locomotive" cart for the kiddies to ride in on necessary journeys to adjoining areas; new wall murals sporting a gay circus theme, new drapes and other interestcatchers. Cost of the renovation and additional features was presented by the Presidio Women's Club from the sale of Christmas cards sponsored by the group. Shown left to right are: Mrs. Howard F. Kuenning, with Randy Auer; Mrs. Robert N. Young, (seated), with Gerald Thompson and Sandra Burton, Mrs. Paul I. Robinson, (second row center) and Mrs. Robert S. Nourse, holding Squire Wallace. # Presidio Woman's Club Will Donate Christmas Profit To Children's Ward

Star-Presidian Staff Writer

The problem facing the Presidio Woman's Club recently was not where or what to do, but how to do it! They wanted to mark the Christmas season—to mark it fittingly, and with a good deed, but they had no money. To date, there are no "do it yourself" books carrying instructions on how to make an honest dollar. But—the adage does hold true—that you must never underestimate the power of a woman.

It began with an artist—Mrs. Virginia W. Somerville, a lady with a keen eye for scenic beauty and the ability to put what she sees on paper. Mrs. Somerville fell in love with familiar scenes in the Presidio area, panoramic views depicting the core of the garrison's culture and its historic significance. She took to her drawing board one evening and turned out sketches so true to life that people who saw them advised her to have the scenes printed as Christmas cards and on special stationery.

Local enthusiasm was shared by members of the Presidio Woman's Club who took over the project of selling the Christmas cards and stationery with a view to donating part of the money realized, to a local worthy cause.

The cards were printed by the Star Presidian publishers—Recorder Sunset Press in San Francisco at a reduced cost, in recognition of the Woman's Club's purpose.

This is why and how the sum of $1000 was realized from the sale of Mrs. Somerville's Christmas cards.

From the total, $300 is being presented to Letterman Army Hospital to be used toward decoration and refurbishing of its children's and orthopedic wards. The remainder is being given back to the Welfare Fund to reimburse it for a larger sum granted to the Presidio Woman's Club for Youth projects sponsored by the members over the past year.

To date, some 12,000 cards and stationery have been sold by the club women, the NCO Wives' Club and by the Thrift Shop and the Post Exchange.

Mrs. Robert N. Young, Mrs. Paul I. Robinson, Mrs. Howard F. Kuenning and Mrs. Robert S. Nourse are among a long list of Presidio women giving their time and effort to this community project. Others include Mrs. Robert E. Berry, Mrs. Thomas Inmon (president of Letterman Officers Wives Club), Mrs. Wellington Glover, (CMD) and Mrs. H. F. Kuenning. Mrs. Joseph Arrigo is slated to do the new murals in the Letterman childrens' wards.

Mrs. Brookner W. Brady is one of the main forces in the charitable venture. She is assisted by Mrs. Robert S. Nourse, Mrs. John McFarland, Mrs. John T. Drake, Mrs. Reul E. Hewitt and Mrs. Claud F. Burbach. Also listed on the project are Mrs. C. W. Allen, Mrs. Willett Ware, Jr., Mrs. Thomas Seigler, Mrs. Joseph B. Coolidge, Mrs. A. R. Sewall, Mrs. Milton Schneider and Mrs. Howard Kuenning. Their gratitude is here extended to the members of the NCO Wives' Club and to Mrs. Parsons of the Thrift Shop and her volunteer saleswomen.

unique christmas display

What may well be the most extraordinary Christmas display at the Presidio in modern times will soon stand on the grounds of the Fort Scott Green in front of the 99th Engineer Company.

Extending to a height of 20 feet, the unique structure takes the form of a three-planed tower, with each of three triangles joined together at 120 degree angles. Its pyramid-like shape and height makes observation possible from all directions.

Placed in front of three angles formed by the tower legs is a large mural painted on plywood. One scene is a representation of the Madonna and Child, another shows the Shepherd and Flock and the third depicts the Three Wise Men on their journey to Bethlehem. The murals will be eight feet high and like the tower they were designed to be seen from a great distance. This Christmas display will be illuminated by floodlights and is expected to be completed early next week.

Its creator is Pfc. Viking Leon, brilliant young artist-architect, 171st Engineer Detachment, who received an A.B. degree in architecture from the University of California. At the university, he was Art Editor of the "Daily Californian," student newspaper.

Choirmaster Pvt. Gary Hall directs members of a special choral group in a rehearsal of The Messiah. The Christmas section of the famous oratorio will be presented at the Presidio Post Chapel at 1045 hours this Sunday. Soloists and director are members of the San Francisco Opera Company and choral group includes members from every walk of Presidio life. A string ensemble from the Sixth Army Band will also participate. The public is invited.

famed raider dies Six Local Units Set For Marching Roles In Retreat Parade

Major General Frank D. Merrill (USA-Ret.), famed WWII commander of three battalions of jungle fighters in the Burma Campaign died this week in Fernandina Beach, Florida, of a heart attack. The specially trained troops under his command were known by the name, Merrill's Marauders. A graduate of the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, he had been New Hampshire Highway Commissioner since 1949. General Merrill's combat fame came when he was chief of staff to Lt. General Joseph Stillwell in the China-Burma-India theater. General Merrill visited the Presidio on many occasions following WWII.

A weekly retreat parade and "Honor Unit" competition will be held this afternoon at 1400 hours on the main parade ground.

Units participating in the parade will be the Sixth Army Band, 30th Engineer Group, 561st Engineer Company, the Honor Guard, Station Complement and Headquarters Company, Sixth Army.

Local officers and civilian personnel not required at their duties are encouraged to attend the ceremony as spectators.

first troops

The name Christmas comes from the early English term Christens Masse, meaning Christ's Mass.

Fireproofing Christmas trees sold by Bay Area Exchange here is an annual project of the Presidio Fire Department. The firemen will give the flameproof treatment to all trees purchased here as well as those purchased by local personnel offpost. Above, as Jay Murphy turns the hose to a small tree, Steve Toth stands by to assist with the nearby large trees.

ig anniversary

The Inspector General Corps of the United States Army observed its 178th anniversary on 13 December. "Elder Statesman" within the military establishment, the corps was established by an Act of Continental Congress on the same date that General George Washington made its function an official one.

First Inspector General of the Army was Baron Frederick William Augustus Von Steuben, a Prussian Army officer who volunteered his services to the colonies during the revolutionary war.

The present incumbent of the Office of Inspector General of the United States Army is Major General Wayne Zimmerman.

band concert

The first of two Christmas concerts by the Sixth Army Band is scheduled for noon today in Union Square. A repeat performance will be presented at 1400 hours Sunday at the Presidio Service Club.

Conducted by Chief Warrant Officer Louis Ferraro, the band will play a number of popular Christmas songs including "Winter Wonderland," "From Heaven Above," "Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer" and "Frosty the Snow Man." At both performances, guest conductors, Sgt. Bruce J. Corley and Sfc. Ben T. Buckley will lead the band in several selections.

new course

A "Methods of Instruction" course designed to bring Army Reserve and National Guard training to a higher standard was completed recently by 96 Army Reservists and Guardsmen from Northern California, Nevada, and Utah.

The course included instruction in the fundamentals of military instruction, principles of learning, planning the lessons, and speech techniques.

Brigadier General Claude F. Burbach, Chief of Reserve Affairs for Northern California, opened the week-long course. The instruction, first of its kind to be given in the eight western states, comprising the Sixth Army area, will be repeated at Fort MacArthur, California, for Reservists and Guardsmen from Southern California.

By order of Bishop Liberius of Rome, 25 Dec. was adopted as the day of the Nativity in the year 345.

dental history

Washington (AFPS)—The Army Dental Corps at its WWII peak was employing 60 times as many officers as it did in 1939.

The story of this tremendous expansion is told in the latest in a series of volumes on Army medical activities during WWII just published under the Surgeon General's supervision. It is entitled the "U. S. Army Dental Service in WWII," published by the Government Printing Office.

Briefly, in 1860, the Department of the Pacific was commanded by Brigadier General Albert Sidney Johnston, later to become a leading general officer of the Confederacy during the Civil War. (WHC—Post Historian)

M/Sgt. Michael L. Bray, chief clerk, S-3 section, and NCO in command of the troops at the parade, presents the Honor Unit plaque to M/Sgt. John W. Wooten, first sergeant, Headquarters Company, Sixth Army.

Snow Time

Services Begin Push For Winter Olympic Victories

When the Winter Olympic Games get under way in Cortina, Italy, next January, the presence of United States servicemen will be apparent. Throughout the Armed Forces for the past several months, keen competition has been a natural as men from all branches of the service vie for berths on the US team.

After being chosen, competition turns to hours of hard practice, conditioning, timing and all the work that goes to transforming an athlete into an Olympic champion who will bring a great deal of honor and prestige to his country.

For the skiers, the Army's Mountain and Cold Weather Training Command has provided Camp Hale, near Fort Carson, Colorado, as the training site for Armed Forces Olympic ski hopefuls.

Six servicemen, all champion skiers, are training for the cross-country and jumping trials to be held at Walla Walla, Washington, early in January. They will compete against 16 other Americans for the six US places in the combined events.

Two other Olympic ski teams—alpine and special jumping—have already been named as a result of trials held last February and March.

Meanwhile, Armed Forces personnel have lent their support to the raising of funds for the US teams. General of the Army Omar N. Bradley and Lt. General Emmett O'Donnell, USAF, were among the many notables attending a recent dinner in New York, which served as the official start of the New York campaign to raise $375,000 for the US teams.

General Bradley was toastmaster of the dinner, which was attended by more than 1,000 guests. General O'Donnell, Armed Forces representative on the National Olympic Executive Committee, was one of the principal speakers.

Production Costs For Trout Drop

Direct costs of producing and planting trout from California's 17 trout hatcheries dropped from $1.07 per pound in 1953-54 to 89 cents per pound in 1954-55, the Department of Fish and Game reported.

A breakdown of the statewide average of 89 cents per pound shows that 26 cents went for food, 41 cents for labor, and 22 cents per pound for miscellaneous costs.

Direct cost of each catchable trout was 12 cents, as compared to 16 cents the previous fiscal year.

These costs, derived from formal accounting reports by the hatcheries, do not include administrative overhead or capital outlay, but do include equipment purchased during the year, and the Department's payments of retirement funds for the employees of the hatcheries.

Cash Prizes Offered For Fish Tags

Over $500 worth of rods, reels, and other fishing tackle, plus $200 in cash, will go to lucky Sacramento River anglers who return Department of Fish and Game steelhead tags this year.

The tackle prizes have been donated by 29 sporting goods dealers, resorts, and bait shops along the river from Colusa to Redding. The $200 in cash has been donated by Kamloops, Inc., the Northern California sportsmen's organization which has been active in fostering steelhead planting in the river.

Drawing for the prizes will be held in April, 1956. All anglers who turn in tags will be eligible.

deer

Deer track count this year on the Devil's Garden interstate migratory herd, along the Oregon border in northeastern California, indicated a population of about 18,500 animals. This was about the same as last year's total. This could mean that the herd reached a population peak in 1954, the department's game management branch points out and further gains have been curtailed by reduced fawn production and increased winter losses. Use of key browse on the Devil's Garden area last winter was reported to be the heaviest since study of this herd began in 1945.

season ends

First half of the split waterfowl season, which has been generally good hunting despite the warm clear weather, ended 18 November, the Department of Fish and Game reminded nimrods.

The second half opened 10 December and continues through 15 Jan. Along the Colorado River the season runs continuously through 15 January, having opened 28 October.

Public Hunting Areas Have Good Opening

Preliminary reports show that opening weekend pheasant hunting on state operated co-ops, waterfowl areas and federal refuges open to pheasant hunting was slightly better than last year, the Department of Fish and Game said today.

Incomplete returns for opening weekend showed that 30,000 hunters on public areas bagged 18,000 birds for an average of .6 bird per hunter.

Wardens reported that it was an average opener for private land hunting, which accounts for a great majority of the birds in the bag.

Best of the public shooting areas reported was McArthur in Shasta County, where 461 hunters bagged 546 birds. Gray Lodge in Butte County was good, with the hunter success average close to one bird per hunter.

In Sacramento Valley areas, the bag consisted of one-third hens. Complete hen figures were not available for other areas.

Under new regulations each hunter may take one hen in his seasonal limit of ten birds.

Steelhead Run Down From Last Year

Based on the number of fish trapped during Fremont Weir tagging operations from July through October, the Sacramento River steelhead run is down considerably from the same period last year, according to the Department of Fish and Game.

This year 2,739 were trapped, compared to 5,738 last year. There were 3,674 king salmon trapped this year, with 2,973 taken in the traps last year.

Trapping and tagging operations will continue through the period of the fall-winter runs.

Early Quotas On Owens Elk Hunt Excellent

Hunters who drew permits for the Owens Valley special Yule elk hunt just about wrapped up the shooting in the first two days of the eight-day event, reports to the Department of Fish and Game showed.

During opening weekend (3-4 December) 138 hunters had bagged 132 elk including 95 cows and 37 bulls. This left only three bulls and 15 cows allowed for the remainder of the season.

The hunter quota was 40 bulls and 110 cows. More than 11,000 hunters had applied for permits.

Good Luck For Public Duck Areas

With only two shoot days unreported from the first half of the split waterfowl season, hunters had bagged 59,213 birds on the state's 12 public waterfowl shooting areas, the Department of Fish and Game reported.

This represented an average of 3.4 birds per hunter for the 23,760 nimrods who have used the areas to date.

Gray Lodge area in Butte County showed the best average for the season with 4.5 birds per hunter, while at Mendota in Fresno county the average was only 1.9.

During the first half exceptional shooting was recorded on various weekends at Grizzly Island, San Luis Wasteway, Gray Lodge and Honey Lake.

The first half ended November 18, and the second half opened on December 10.

★ ★ ★ Eighteen Tourneys Slated For Sixth Army Troops

By Master Sergeant Merrill Harrison

Final plans for a Sixth Army sports program in which every soldier in the eight western states of the Army area will have an opportunity to participate, at least on a unit level, were formulated at a two-day conference at Fort Mason Monday and Tuesday of this week.

Approximately 30 sports program directors from Sixth Army installations met with Sixth Army Special Services officials and athletic leaders from Stanford University and the University of California to iron out details of the program for 1956, formulate final plans for the 1956 sports calendar and plan sites for the 1956 sports tournaments.

According to Henry S. Gustafson, Staff Sports Director from the Sixth Army Special Services Office, a turnout of 700,000 participants in all sports activities at installations in the Sixth Army is anticipated. This includes such unit activities as bowling and softball leagues.

The Sixth Army tournament schedule includes male basketball at the Presidio of San Francisco (games to be played at Kezar Pavilion), 27 February-3 March; women's basketball at Letterman Army Hospital, 20-24 February.

The bowling tournament will be held at Fort Lawton, Wash., from 13-16 March and the table tennis tournament for men and women will be held there from 10-13 April. The volleyball tournament will be at Fort Lewis, Wash., from 30 April-4 May.

Fort MacArthur, Calif., will be the host for track, field and triathlon on 24-25 May. The all-Army meet will be held at Compton College on 1-3 June and the interservice meet in the Los Angeles Coliseum on 14-16 June. The winners in the various divisions of the interservice meet will be eligible to participate in the Olympic tryouts.

The Sixth Army swimming and diving tournament will also be held at Fort MacArthur on 18-20 June, and this will be followed on 26-29 July by the All-Army meet in Los Angeles.

Fort Ord will be host for the Sixth Army golf tournament 30 July to 4 August.

The men's and women's tennis tournaments will be at Dugway Proving Ground, near Ogden, Utah, 30 July to 4 August.

Madigan Army Hospital in Tacoma, Wash., will be the host installation for the men's softball meet on 20-24 August; the women's softball tournament will be at Fort MacArthur, Calif., 6-10 August.

The skeet tourney will be at Fort Lawton, Wash., 9-10 August.

Fort Ord, Calif., will be the site of the Sixth Army baseball tournament 3-8 September.

The Sixth Army boxing meet will be at Oakland Army Base 18-22 September and the wrestling

fire losses

Although 1955 has some of the worst forest fires in recent years, California's wildlife, particularly deer, were not badly hurt, a department survey of burned-over areas showed.

In the north, where 130,000 acres of brush and timber were burned, less than 50 deer carcasses were found. Nor were many found in the 75,000 acre Santa Barbara fire. In the McGee fire in Sequoia National Forest, up to 200 deer may have been lost.

tournament will be at Fort Lewis, Wash., 19-23 November.

Civilian sports leaders who participated in the conference included Mr. Jake Irwin, of the Stanford University athletic staff; Dr. Wesley Ruff of the Department of Physical Education at Stanford; Mr. Henry Stone of the University of California, and Dr. Franklin Henry, also of the University of California.

Senior military representatives present included Brigadier General William J. Deyo, Jr., Commanding General, Headquarters, Pacific Transportation Terminal Command, Fort Mason, Calif., and Colonel Arthur W. Gustafson, Special Services Officer, Sixth Army, Presidio of San Francisco, Calif.

Parks Plays Red Raiders Here Tonite

Tonight in the Letterman Army Hospital Gym the Presidio Red Raider cage squad faces their toughest foe of the still young season when they run into the Parks Air Force Base "Blue Devils."

The smooth shooting Parks crew, paced by their ace forward Arnold Schroeder and guard Paul Scheer, are currently in second place in league standing just one game behind the Presidio.

Coach Hal Fischer's red hot cagers have swept to four league victories so far this season to top the Bay Area Armed Forces and the Northern California Armed Forces Leagues.

girls win

Sparked by two new forwards, Jan Phillips and Georgia Kelly, the Presidio WACs raced past the Alameda Naval "Hellkitens", 39-22, in a cage clash on the Letterman hardwoods. The Presidio lassies will play Letterman Army Hospital tonight in the Letterman Gym and Parks Air Force Base next Tuesday night for their only games over the Christmas holidays.

Paced by big Mike O'Neill and rangy Don Lofgran the Presidio cage squad rolled past McClellan Air Force Base 87-70 last Monday night in Sacramento. O'Neill was high scorer from his forward position with 34 points and center Lofgran hit for 24 tallies.

On Wednesday night, 21 December, the Presidio plays host to the powerful Whittier College team from Southern California. This will be the only game played at the Presidio during the Christmas holidays. The Whittier hoop stars are defending champions in the strong Southern California Conference and should be one of the best teams to see action this season at the Letterman Gym.

Next Monday night the Raider cagers journey to Mather Air Force Base for another league clash.

LAH Fencer Cops Second In Title Tilt

Paced by the sterling swordspay of Herb Rhodes and Jose Tafoya the combined Presidio and Letterman Army Hospital Fencing squad took two of the top four places in last Sunday's Northern California Three Weapons Championships at Halberstadt Fencing School.

The various bladesmen tangled with all three weapons; foil, sabre and epee, for the important championships with Herb Rhodes of Letterman Army Hospital taking second in the gruelling matches as Girard Biagini, Pacific Coast Fencing Champ, won the top spot.

Jerry Klotz, Western Intercollegiate Champion, was third just ahead of the Presidio's Jose Tafoya, who finished fourth.

The top three winners will represent their clubs or organizations and the Northern California Division at the Pacific Coast Fencing Championships in Los Angeles next May. Fourth place winner Tafoya will also attend the championship matches as an alternate.

By reason of placing in the top four in this tournament Rhodes and Tafoya qualified for the United States Nationals next June in New York.

In women's swords play, Mrs. Shirley Canter and Miss Shon Brownlee entered the Northern California Women's Intermediate Foil Championships last weekend. Mrs. Canter won first place and will represent the local fencing organization at the Pacific Coast Fencing Championships and in the Nationals in June of 1956.

No action is slated for the local fencers during the Christmas holidays with competition beginning again in January.

Tomorrow

Pensacola To Meet Ord
In Poinsettia Bowl Game

The Pensacola Naval Air Station Goshawks were named last week to meet Fort Ord in tomorrow's fourth annual Poinsettia Bowl in San Diego, California. The announcement came somewhat as a surprise since the Bolling Air Force Generals were expected to be the opposition for the powerful Sixth Army gridsters. However it was revealed that Bolling, the only undefeated service team in the country, had turned down the bowl bid.

Pensacola, which lost only to Eustis and Camp Lejeune while compiling a 9-2 mark this year, will be underdogs against the Ord Warriors.

Before losing to Ft. Sill 35-20, Ord powered through the season with impressive wins over the San Francisco Windbreakers, Fort Carson, Marine Corp Recruit Depot, Naval Air Station, Fort Bliss twice, Camp Pendleton, Seattle Ramblers, Stanford Jayvees and Hamilton AFB.

The Goshawks will go into the contest crippled by the loss of All-Sea Service candidate center Dick Olson who is out for the game with a knee injury.

However, the Navy stars will carry considerable talent into the bowl game led by one of the nation's leading passers, Dick Echard, former Academy great, who has completed 55 of 115 passes for 1164 yards and 14 touchdowns. Former Navy All-American guard Steve Eisenhower anchors a powerful line.

Fort Ord coach Bill Abbey was handed a bit of bad news prior to leaving for the south when it was disclosed that a painful rib injury had forced former USC and LA Ram star Rudy Bukich to scratch his name from the bowl game roster.

The Sixth Army gridsters will be led by Jim Powers, former USC and San Francisco 49er, at quarterback and Paul Cameron, UCLA and Pittsburgh Steeler, halfback.

The servicemen are: 2nd Lt. Theodore Farwell, Jr., Goose AB, Labrador; A/1C Victor Tremblay, Turner AFB, Ga., and Pvt. Marvin Crawford, Pvt. Russell Carey, Pfc. Lynn Levy and Cpl. Andrew Miller, all of Ft. Carson.

Two other Olympic ski teams—alpine and special jumping—have already been named as a result of trials held last February and March.

Servicemen to compete in these events are Sgt. Marvin Melville, Ft. Ord, Calif.; Pvt. Leslie Steeter, Ft. Dix, N. J.; Pfc. Ralph Miller, Ft. Carson, Colo.; 2nd Lt. James Mitchell, Malden AB, Mo.; and Ens. Tom Corcoran, Portsmouth Naval Shipyard, N. H.

Tankers Meet
Gaters In Shrimp Bowl

Norfolk, Va. (AFPS)—The Amphibious Force Atlantic Fleet Gaters have been invited to meet the Tankers of Ft. Hood, Tex., in the seventh annual Shrimp Bowl football game to be held in Galveston, Tex., 18 Dec.

The Shrimp Bowl is sponsored by the "20-30" Club of Galveston. Proceeds will go to the Crippled Children's Hospital there.

One of the features of the game will be a joint recruiting drive by the Army and Navy with enlistees being sworn in at half-time.

grid star

Second Lt. Paul Giel, Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., the former Minnesota athlete who preferred a baseball contract with the N. Y. Giants to numerous pro football offers, says, "I have no intention of playing football while in the service, but I do hope to play some baseball, if at all possible."

HERE is the 1955 Associated Press All-American football team. College football stars named are: backs—Howard "Hopalong" Cassidy, Earl Morrall, Tommy McDonald and Jimmy Swink; ends—Howard Schnellenberger and Ron Beagle; tackles—Paul Wiggan and Frank D'Agostino; guards—Pasquale Bisceglia and James Brown, and center—Robert Pellagrini. The Army Times All-Army team and the Armed Forces Press Service team will be released in the near future and will appear in the "Star Presidian."

Christmas Roundup

The WAC Company will be busy wrapping gifts for Presidio children on the evening of 16 December, when volunteer hands take over the project to aid the Service Club in making the Christmas event a big one in the lives of the local small fry.

"Home Away from Home" is the slogan of the Presidio Service Club.

The club plans a big Christmas tree lighting party this evening. The children's party was held at the club this morning, and tonight there's a fireside and caroling party for visiting soldiers.

The Sixth Army Band gives a concert at the club tomorrow evening. It will feature old English Christmas themes and community singing. At 1900 hours the servicemen are welcome to join a city tour for the purpose of seeing the lighting and getting some good color photos.

On December 20th, the club presents a special stage show entitled "It's a White Christmas" and packed full of fun.

The Christmas Dance takes place at the Presidio Service Club which is semi-formal and will include the Mexican "Pinata," by which custom gifts are showered from the ceiling on the people below.

Interspersed with the routine weekly club activities are a big New Year's dance to music by Russ Marlin's band from Fort Mason. The New Year is begun with a brunch and games on 1 January.

The Fort Baker Service Club presents a fat holiday program highlighted by a pre-Christmas schedule carrying over until the last day of the old year.

A trip to Santa Cruz by men of Fort Baker takes place on Sunday, when a two-ton truck of Christmas greens is being filled for local delivery. The greens-gathering expedition to the country is the most popular activity to date, since the servicemen volunteers are later availing themselves of a special invitation to a home-cooked meal in a private ranch in Santa Cruz.

On Monday, the Army show, "Sound Off," produced by the Presidio Special Service Section, is being presented at the club, and on Tuesday evening there is the Christmas semi-formal dance.

On Wednesday, the Fort Baker enlisted men are each being Santa Claus to a group of children from Sunny Hills orphanage. At 2100 on the same evening, the Presidio Male Chorus presents a program of carols and Christmas music at the Fort Scott Service Club.

On the evening of the 23rd of December, the club has its pre-Christmas party featuring the Marin Starlighters, followed by another party on Christmas Eve, which winds up with midnight attendance of the guests at Catholic and Protestant chapel services.

Christmas Day is gift-giving day for the servicemen visitors, with a special drawing to be made for free phone calls to relatives at home. Coffee and cake will be served throughout the morning, and in the afternoon Santa Claus leaves the club directors to visit soldiers in the outlying AAA batteries.

A pre-New Year's Day party on the 27th of December closes out the main holiday celebrations at the Fort Scott Service Club.

The Presidio Officers Wives Club and the Enlisted Men's Wives Club have already marked the season with a series of teas and group parties during the past week. The remaining days before Christmas are being devoted to making house visits and participation in bringing Christmas gifts to the sick and underprivileged.

The Teenage group has not been forgotten in the Christmas rush of festivities. The Presidio young members are becoming wandering minstrels and minstrelettes on the evening of the 24th of December when they tour the quarters and Wherry Housing areas to bring Yuletide carols to the occupants.

A New Year's Eve Dance takes place at the Presidio Officers' Open Mess from 2100 on 31 December to 0300 on the morning of 1 January.

By reservation only, the dinner dance is formal and costs $5.00 per person. (Dinner hours from 1730 to 2300.)

Breakfast is being served at the Officers' Open Mess beginning at 0100 on New Year's morning, at a cost of only $1.00 per person.

Among other holiday events slated here is the college-age dance sponsored by the Presidio Women's Club and the Presidio Officers' Open Mess. The affair brings together young people from the Presidio and those of them returning on Christmas vacation from colleges and universities across the nation.

A formal dance for the Teenagers is being held at the Presidio Officers Club on the evening of the 29th, and on the 31st, a mammoth New Year's party marks finis to 1955.

It may not be white, but it's sure to be a festive and busy holiday season at the Presidio of San Francisco.

chief of staff

For almost twenty centuries Christmas has come and gone and come again. One hundred and eighty times, Christmas has found the United States Army—tried, tested and ready—manning the ramparts of freedom behind which our country enjoys prosperity and peace.

With the advent of another Christmas Season, we are moved by thoughts and emotions of greater poignancy than at any other time of year. We think of home, family and fireside, and then of those who serve in far-off places—in Asia, in Europe, in Alaska—separated from their families, or at least, separated from home.

These members of the army overseas are performing a vital mission for peace as a deterrent force restraining possible aggression against the lands of peace-loving friends. Their presence abroad is a constant reminder of the determination of America to resist any breach of the peace in the areas of our army deployments. This feeling of mission should be a source of moral strength for our soldiers, not only at Christmas but throughout the entire year.

With pride in your accomplishments wherever you serve, I wish a Merry Christmas and a Happy 1956 to every member of the Army. May the New Year be one of continued peace under the protection afforded by your devoted service.

GEN. M. D. TAYLOR

Service School Goals

GED Testing Given Impetus By Unit Commanders' Interest

Post Education Center's General Educational Development (GED) testing programs have received added impetus recently as a result of the efforts of local unit commanders to help their men qualify for Army service school training, it was reported this week by the Post T.I.&E. division.

Last month, for example, 24 military personnel completed the GED tests in order to raise their educational standards to the high school graduate level required by many service schools.

Additionally, many of these men plan to apply for a high school diploma on the basis of their GED test scores.

Among the units which have participated extensively in the High School GED testing program are the 505th MP Battalion, the 16th Base Post Office, the 30th Engineer Group and the 30th AAA Group.

The antiaircraft artillery units in particular are making a concerted drive to meet Guided Missile School educational requirements. A group of 15 men from the 441st AAA Battalion completed the high school tests last month.

Currently scheduled to take the High School GED test are six enlisted men from the 9th AAA Battalion, six from the 740th AAA Battalion and 12 from the 752nd AAA Battalion.

Lieutenant Colonel Marvin E. Waller, 30th AAA Group Executive Officer, coordinated the group's drive to raise its educational level to meet Guided Missile School quotas with the Post Education Center personnel.

The college GED test was taken last month by nine men from local units, five officers and four enlisted men. Successful completion of this test series brings the individual's educational status up to the one-year college level.

To facilitate local military who have been unable to take GED tests due to duty schedules, the Post Education Center will be open during regular duty hours for the periods 10-23 December and 27-30 December. The education center, located at Building 117, may be contacted for additional information by phoning Ext. 3189 or 2974.

Sixth Army Prepared For New Flood Threat

The Star Presidian

Vol. 4, No. 30

PRESIDIO OF SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA

Friday 6 January, 1956

The Family Circle of M/Sgt. Antonio W. Cruz, D Battery, 9th AAA Missile Battalion first sergeant was completed last week when his first-born, Dalisay (center), arrived from the Philippines at Ft. Mason. From left are: Chaplain (1st Lt.) Wayne F. Killdall who was instrumental in getting San Mateo Congressman, J. Arthur Younger to introduce special legislation which permitted the girl's entry, Antonio Jr., Dolores, M Sgt. Cruz, Dalisay, Mrs. Cruz, Benjamin and Aurora. Missing was daughter Lydia, who was attending classes at the French Hospital School of Nursing in San Francisco.

After Eight Years

Daughter Comes From Manila To Complete Family's Reunion

When House Resolution Number 1552 was passed by Congress last summer and signed into law by the President in August, it toppled the last barrier to the first complete reunion of a much-decorated Bataan-Corregidor survivor's family in eight years.

Last week, M/Sgt. Antonio W. Cruz, D Battery, 9th AAA Missile Battalion First Sergeant, his wife and four children showered greetings upon Miss Dalisay Lourdes Cruz, the oldest child in the family circle who had just debarked from the USNS Barrett, the ship which carried her here from the Philippine Islands.

She was unable to come to the United States last January with the rest of the Sergeant's family because she was then 21 and consequently ineligible for entry as a dependent.

Although, as 9th AAA Missile Battalion Chaplain (1st Lt.) Wayne Killdall learned, Miss Cruz was eligible to come here under the regular immigration quota for the Philippine Islands, it would probably have been 1964 before her immigration could have been made.

Contacted by the Chaplain, San Mateo Congressman, the Honorable J. Arthur Younger, agreed to author special legislation which would permit Sergeant Cruz's firstborn daughter to come to America. After introducing House Resolution 1552, Congressman Younger engineered its passage.

Duties in Washington prevented the Congressman from

Sixth Army Flight Unit Sets Outstanding 2-Year Safety Record

One of the finest military flight safety records, 6000 flight hours without a single air or ground accident, ever recorded has been set by Sixth Army Flight Detachment #3, 6000 SU, during their past 24-months of operation at Presidio's Crissy Field.

The detachment, which operates an average of seven planes with six pilots and some 25 ground crew members, is commanded by Major John C. Gillespie. His executive officer is Captain Henry C. Vineyard.

Major Gillespie told the Star Presidian that he attributes the unit's outstanding safety record to the excellence of the ground maintenance by one of the "best ground crews in Army Aviation."

He singled out three of his top NCOs, Sfc. George C. Rule, detachment first sergeant; Sfc. George C. McPherson, maintenance chief, and Sgt. William R. Jackson, administrative NCO, for their contribution to the unit's superior safety record.

6th Army Responds To Urgent Needs Of Flood Victims

For over two weeks, Sixth Army Headquarters has remained mobilized for crisis, as nature chose the Christmas season to unleash a destructive attack against military and civilian populations in the Sixth Army area.

Although primary direction of relief operations has remained in the hands of civilian agencies, the Armed Services have been called on for assistance throughout the flooded areas.

Sixth Army Headquarters, alerted by Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commander, has been a coordinating center for activities of both civilian and military relief missions. Calls from threatened citizens and communities shuttled through Civil Defense authorities and on to the military through the Sixth Army nerve center.

Troops in the affected areas were then moved to mitigate the catastrophe wherever possible.

Sixth Army communications media maintained a flow of information to the local Federal Civil Defense Administration, the Red Cross, Salvation Army and area military, including not only the Army but the Coast Guard, the Air Force and the Navy. Army personnel worked with the other services, particularly the Coast Guard and the Air Force at McClellan, Beale, Parks and Mather bases.

Besides troops from the Presidio and its subposts, Army personnel and equipment from

30th Engineers Win High Praise For Flood Assistance

Individual Acts Of Heroism Displayed By Local Soldiery In Early Rescues

As the first drops of a new rain began to threaten this week, the 30th Engineer Group was knitting a reinforced net of radio communications throughout the disaster area in preparations against potential return of flood conditions to Northern California.

Post Plays Key Role in Relief Of Flooded Areas

Out of blankets, food, fuel and other necessities of life, the Post in the past two weeks has helped to build a long, high dike against distress in Northern California, as Quartermaster stocks on the Presidio, its subposts and depots poured aid out to stricken citizens.

By 30 December, the Presidio Quartermaster had already expended a total of $262,477 in supplies and equipment for relief activities.

Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, alerted the Presidio 22 December, pledging the post to "render all assistance that is legal and possible to the civilian communities and military installations within reach." The 30th Engineers were charged by Colonel Lundquist with relief assistance outside of normal post jurisdiction.

Throughout the critical period, special Staff Duty officers were assigned on a 24-hour basis to take relief assistance calls at Post Headquarters. The requests were then

Burkhardt, now in Korea with the Army Audit Agency, and Marcia Burkhardt of 697 S. 10th Street in San Jose. Sp3 Burkhardt formerly served with the Army Audit Agency at the Oakland Army Base. (Photo, M/Sgt. P. B. Davis.)

Seven officers and 10 enlisted men of the 30th Engineers, on duty since 24 December, remained posted this week at some of the state's hardest-hit points—Eureka, Marysville and Santa Rosa. Helicopters of the 30th's 521st Aviation company remained assigned to officials in key cities, where they are carrying representatives of the District Engineers on a survey of flood destruction.

At the same time, District Engineers were taking soundings and shooting photos of inundated regions, estimating needed repairs and weighing possible future control measures.

On 22 December, Colonel Wayne E. Downing, commanding officer of the 30th Engineer Group, was appointed officer in charge of "all relief operations outside the immediate Bay area and outside of the normal responsibilities of Post Headquarters" by Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander.

Since the earliest flood threat two weeks ago, the Engineer Group has been pitting men, equipment and supplies against unruly California nature. With the 22 December alert, Colonel Downing had mobilized two Engineer companies equipped with pneumatic rubber boats, field and transportation equipment. The 30th Group permanent radio station, directed by Captain Richard Nurss, Group Communications officer, began a round-the-clock relay system with field units and communications agencies in the threatened areas. Operating in coordination with Sixth Army Headquarters, the Group radio was at times the only means of contact with a number of outlying points.

For their "tireless efforts" in "keeping channels of communication open," four enlisted men were recommended for official recognition by Colonel Downing. The men are Sfc. Harrison

'Excellent' Replaces 'Superior' As Top Efficiency Rating

"Excellent" will replace "superior" as the top efficiency rating for enlisted personnel according to a new Army directive.

Under AR 623-201, which revises the ratings for both efficiency and conduct, the grades will be: excellent, good, fair and unsatisfactory.

The old regulation graded soldiers superior, excellent, satisfactory or unknown in the performance of their duties, and good, very good or excellent for character.

"Character" also will disappear from 201 files in favor of "Conduct" to denote deportment.

more sweat - - less blood

Americans believe that hard work is the only way to learn to do something well. We believe that know-how is important for success, and that hard training is where we get the know-how.

A skilled worker makes things look easy as he goes about his job. Sometimes we forget that long hours of learning and practice have given him his skill. He wasn't nearly that good when he started to learn the basic things about his job.

Think of the times a doctor has examined or treated you. It probably didn't take him long. After studying your case, maybe he wrote a few strange words on a slip of paper for you to take to the druggist. Maybe you thought, "What an easy way to earn three bucks." But, was it really easy?

Those few words on the prescription blank are very important to you. They have to be the right words. The doctor knows they are right only because he has spent years learning his job. He didn't get to be a doctor overnight. And, like people in nearly all jobs, he goes on learning more about his profession when his school days are over. He never stops learning.

Think about the best football team you ever saw. The team made touchdowns easily because every man on the team was doing everything just right. Watching the touchdowns, you may not have thought much about the weeks of hard training that made the plays work so well. If you had seen the players in their first practice of the season, you would have seen only eleven men making all kinds of mistakes. It took lots of practice to make them winners.

To become a soldier also calls for the same kind of hard work and hard training. To fight and win on the battlefield is never as easy as it might seem when we read about it in the papers. Soldiers really start to win battles when they begin their individual training. Everything they learn up to the moment of battle helps them to win.

We know from long experience that proper training means fewer casualties when the fighting starts. That's why we say it is your blood and sweat that put the expensive weapons and equipment to work against the enemy, and that's why the more you sweat in training the less chance there is of your blood spilling in battle.

In all your training, keep this idea in mind—MORE SWEAT, LESS BLOOD.

6 Corporal Armed Bns. Slated For Duty In Europe

Washington (AFPS) — Six field artillery battalions equipped with Corporal, the surface-to-surface guided missile, will be assigned to Europe during the first four months of 1956, the Army has announced.

The units are the 530th, 531st, 557th, 558th, 559th and 601st FA battalions, all of which now are stationed at the Guided Missile Center at Ft. Bliss, Tex.

In Europe they will join the 259th FA Bn., which was assigned there in 1954. Other modern army weapons already in Europe are several batteries of the Honest John long-range artillery rocket and six battalions of the 280-mm atomic cannon.

The Corporal, which can be equipped with either an atomic or conventional type warhead, is designed for the tactical support of ground combat operations. Its range is described as far greater than that of the Honest John or the 280-mm gun, the Army's largest artillery piece.

Each 250-man Corporal battalion is equipped with three missile launching sections.

History Of Armored Warfare Shows Tank Best Defense Against Tanks

Man facing his foe with a shield on his arm in the dawn of history led the way to the modern concept of Armor in the tactics and strategy of warfare.

As he sought to become superior to his enemies, additions to his armament slowed his pace on the battlefield.

His next contrivance was a skin-covered frame pushed on skids to give him a carrier for his weapons as well as protection.

But armored vehicles met indifferent success until the development of the internal combustion engine and the endless track made possible the tank of today.

The U. S. produced the first practical caterpillar traction device. However, the French built the first tank and the English showed the way to putting it to work in war.

In 1915, Lt. Col. (later Maj. Gen.) E. D. Swinton, a British Army officer, observing a small American-made Holt tractor lumbering over the French country-side hit upon the idea that the caterpillar fitted with enough armor plate to stop machinegun bullets could drive across no-man's land under fire and destroy the weapons that could stop his infantrymen.

Working in utmost secrecy, Swinton's theory was developed in England. When the machines were shipped to France, the crates were labeled "TANKS" to trick German espionage agents. Since then, the name has stuck to armored caterpillar-tread combat vehicles.

On 15 Sept., 1916, these tanks were thrown into battle. Despite many mechanical failures, it was apparent at once that tanks gave impetus to an attack and all warring nations, recognizing the value of the new weapon, began to build them.

The U. S. Army Tank Corps, created 26 Jan., 1917, entered its first engagement 12 Sept., 1918, fought in the St. Mihiel offensive and the Argonne, and with its British allies, in the decisive attack that cracked the Hindenburg Line, near La Gatele.

Farsighted military leaders soon saw the tank's great effect on troop morale.

The tank's shock action, ability to stun the foot soldier and to dominate his powers of reason with fear and panic was a weapon with which commanders could attack the nerves of an army to spread terror and chaos through its ranks. The National Defense Act of 1920 made tanks a part of the Infantry to support the rifleman. To allow independent development, mechanized cavalry also was formed at Ft. Knox, Ky., and Armor experts went to work to improve both equipment and tactics.

The Ft. Knox pioneers visualized the first mechanized force executing missions based on speed, firepower, shock action and a wide sphere of operation, thereby conceiving a second role for Armor.

The U. S. entered WWII with its armor organized under these two basic concepts with separate tank battalions to provide support to Infantry divisions and tank units assigned to Armored divisions.

On the great expanses of the North African desert where armored armies clashed, infantry was practically powerless without tanks.

In Europe, American armor was pitted against German armor. The smashing engagement of the "Falaise Pocket" in Normandy proved conclusively that tanks can best defend against tanks.

A number of books on the subject of armor are available at the Sixth Army and Post libraries. A sampling includes M. G. Gillie's Forging the Thunderbolt, a history of the development of armored force; Lt. Col. G. D. W. Court's Hard Pounding, the tactics and techniques of anti-tank warfare with observations on its past, present and future.

The Sixth Army Library Depot also carries the bi-monthly Armor, a Magazine of Mobile Warfare, published by the United States Armor Association.

A collection of armored unit histories are also available at the Sixth Army book center.

Economy Drive Enters Third Week

Unit commanders and section chiefs began flicking light switches and tightening leaky faucets this week, as the Presidio entered the third week of an economy drive designed to keep the Presidio's household bills trimmed down to budget size.

The thrift campaign will be conducted under the direction of Lt. Col. Albert M. Wunderlich, S-4, newly appointed Post Conservation officer.

Announced by Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, shortly before the holiday season, the campaign was described as "a rigid conservation program" which will include every unit and section on the Presidio.

Unit leaders, both civilian and military, will submit reports on the 5th of each month until July and the end of the fiscal year. The monthly tallies will include reports on estimated savings in supply, medical equipment and facilities, transportation functions, general services and a host of miscellaneous fields.

Estimated dollars and cents savings will be included in each report.

"The success of the program," said Colonel Lundquist, "will depend upon the wholehearted cooperation of the entire Presidio community."

All-Out support of the Army's new Reserve Forces Act earned a special letter of commendation of Master Sergeant Harold W. Roberts recently. Although recruiting is not part of his duty as unit advisor for the 335th MRU (USAR), Sgt. Roberts has signed up four young men for a Ready Reserve unit since the new bill was passed. Brigadier General Claude F. Burbach, chief of the California Military District, makes the presentation.

Off-Duty Recruiting Wins Special Commendation For Local Unit Advisor

Master Sergeant Harold W. Roberts was awarded a letter of commendation this week by Brigadier General Claude F. Burbach, Chief of the California Military District, for his off-duty support of the new Reserve Forces Act.

Although recruiting is not part of his duties as unit advisor of the 335th Machine Records Unit (USAR), Sergeant Roberts has signed up four young men in the neighborhood of his residence at 3117 Balboa Street, San Francisco, for a Ready Reserve unit since the legislation to provide a strong Army Reserve was enacted three months ago.

The commendation reads in part: "Such voluntary assistance to a program so vital to national security is especially valuable to the Army. It demonstrates that the volunteer provisions of the law are attractive to young men if they are properly presented. The fact that the young men you recruited were initially referred to you by neighbors and businessmen located in the vicinity of your residence off post speaks highly of your community relations and of the credit that your off-duty conduct reflects upon yourself and upon the Army. By lending your effective support to a program so vital to national security you have provided an example worthy of emulation by every member of this command."

A veteran of over 13 years in the Active Army, Sergeant Roberts holds the Bronze Star, and other service awards.

Fort Ord were brought into play by Sixth Army Headquarters in Watsonville, Santa Cruz and Carmel Valley.

Sixth Army Headquarters has maintained a liaison officer throughout the flood period with the FDCA in Santa Rosa, while personnel from G-3, G-4, District, Sixth Army and 30th Engineers kept the lines of communication open and moving. The Headquarters MARS radio net has operated on a 24-hour basis, contacting stations and amateur radio men at points of distress. About 150 messages have been handled, originating from official, welfare, Red Cross, Airline and Civil Defense sources. Another radio net was set up with Fort Ord units in the Ord area.

Sixth Army Headquarters has coordinated the designation of men, equipment and supplies of all kinds to the Humboldt Bay, Russian River, Marysville-Yuba City, San Joaquin-Sacramento Delta, Santa Cruz-Watsonville, and other areas stricken by the flood.

Presidio Launches Annual 'March Of Dimes' Drive

Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, announced this week that military and civilian personnel of the Presidio would be afforded every opportunity to contribute to the annual March of Dimes campaign, which got underway this Monday, 3 January, and will run through 1 February.

Major Florence Boush, post funds custodian, has been named chairman of the local drive and will meet with unit representatives from the post and sub-posts today. The meeting is scheduled for the post theatre at 1300 hours.

In announcing the campaign, Colonel Lundquist urged unit commanders to appoint representatives on the basis of enthusiasm, imagination and determination. He also expressed the hope that the Presidio would not only measure up to the outstanding contribution of last year's drive, $8,177.30, but would make every effort to surpass the former goal.

In 1956, the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis is seeking to collect enough money to help 68,000 patients and the new patients the new year inevitably will bring.

Some 3,200 polio patients today depend on breathing devices purchased with help of the March of Dimes to stay alive. These persons were "born too soon" for the Salk vaccine.

Dr. Jonas Salk, developer of the vaccine, was trained under a fellowship made possible by the March of Dimes. Hundreds more must be trained like him to carry on the research fight until it can truly be said that polio is conquered.

New Million Dollar Contract Awarded GM Gun Production

Washington (AFPS)—The Army has awarded a $23,500,000 contract to the Cadillac division of General Motors to continue production of the M-42 twin 40mm self-propelled gun after the current contract expires next May.

The Army said the total cost of each gun unit is about $100,658. Production of the combat vehicle will still be centered at Cadillac's Cleveland Tank plant.

The average Army reenlistment is for three years—the minimum reenlistment period accepted by the Army. The next greatest percentage is for six years.

Soldier-Sailors Play Cowboy In Bay Island Cattle Roundup

A herd of 85 Winter Island Farm cattle mooed in confused and noisy protest last week, as they were corralled into two LCM-8 (mechanized landing crafts) and hauled off to high, dry land by 2d Lt. Lawrence Bingham and eight EM from the Fort Baker Harbor Craft Detachment.

When the dikes surrounding the island buckled under the pressure of rising flood waters, high tide rushed in to submerge most of the grazing land and carried off a community of Winter Island sheep along with 25 head of cattle.

By the time the Army detachment arrived at the request of Mr. William W. Ward, area director Federal Civil Defense Administration, a surviving herd of 110 cows had huddled themselves on a tiny knoll which poked up above the flooded plain.

As the two LCM-8's moved in, cowboys herded the balking livestock in groups of 35 into the hay-strewn landing craft and ferried them to the mainland and safety. One of the LCM-8's returned for a second roundup, managing to load another 15 head aboard before the tide closed in on the sinking hilltop.

The mounting waters gave the Army only two hours of working time. They had left their Presidio docks at 0420 hours 28 December, arriving at 0930 at Winter Island Farm, owned by Mr. William Pacini. The LCM-8's went into action at 1000 hours. By noon the waters had engulfed the entire hill, claiming the remaining 25 cattle.

Professional cowboys herded the rescued cattle to a safe grazing area.

The LCM-8, the Army's latest model in landing craft, is large enough to swallow its most recent forerunner, the LCM-6. Driven by four 225 hp Diesel engines, the landing craft can carry up to 60 tons.

"But when they queried me about cattle capacity," said Lt. R. P. Madsen, in command of the Detachment, "I had to confess Manual TM 55-3203 didn't say a word about it."

Skippers of the two LCM-8's were SFC Dudley E. Fulcher and SFC Leslie W. Pierce. Engineers were Sp 2 Herman D. Johnson and Sp 2 Leroy F. Ducharme. The crews included seamen Pvt. John R. West, Pvt. Francis Carmichael, Pvt. Henry Cooney and Pvt. Billie E. Mullins.

Of the Army's 688,000 civilian employees, one-fourth are in supply and maintenance depots. Training camps, research centers, manufacturing plants and construction follow as major employers of these civilians within the Army.

Port Construction Unit Wins $50 Award For Best Decorations

Competition was keen in the Presidio contest to determine the most attractive and original Christmas lighting displayed in the garrison area over the recent holidays.

S-1, which conducted the judging, announces that the prize of $50 for the best unit decoration was won by the 561st Engineer Detachment.

The multiple quarters having what the judges considered the most attractive lighting and decorative ideas went to M/Sergeant A. U. Rodrigues, Quarters 732 A, and to M/Sergeant C. T. Dennis, Quarters 732 B. Both enlisted men received prizes of $15 each.

Judging of the best single quarters decorations resulted in a tie between Lt. Colonel K. L. Rudser, Quarters 326 B, and Lt. Colonel G. W. Batts, Quarters 1536 C. Colonel Rudser is assigned to the Sixth Army Engineers Section, and Colonel Batts is assigned to Finance and Accounting Section. The officers received prizes of $10 each.

Best Army Rifles Meet At Ft. Benning

The best "shots" in each state-side Army and oversea command will compete in the All-Army Rifle and Pistol championships at Fort Benning, Georgia, in June, 1956.

According to a Continental Army Command letter going to the field this week, all Army commands will soon begin holding competitive marksmanship programs.

The best "shots" will be aiming for a try at the big matches at Fort Benning, where the top marksmen will be selected for the U. S. Army Rifle and Pistol teams.

These teams will then compete in the National Rifle and Pistol Matches at Camp Perry, Ohio, in August and September.

DOD Will Ask Congress OK For 50,000 Additional Men

Washington (AFPS) — The Defense Department will ask Congress for authority to increase the manpower ceiling of the armed forces by 50,000 men during the next fiscal year, Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson has disclosed.

The 2,900,000 figure to be requested in the new DOD budget represents a ceiling, and strength levels will not go that high unless the additional men are needed, Mr. Wilson pointed out.

"We're trying to get enough flexibility in our force levels to meet any new missions or assignments that might arise," the secretary explained. By next 30 June, the end of the current fiscal year, the armed forces are scheduled to have a total of 2,850,000 men.

He indicated that all the services would benefit from the proposed increase in manpower authorization. The Army, he said, might get some 16,000 additional personnel, if needed, to train six-month recruits in the reserve program.

Mr. Wilson revealed that the DOD budget for fiscal year 1957, to be presented to Congress early in January, would ask for about $35.5 billion—an increase of one billion over the current year.

Measures designed to enhance the attractiveness of military service, such as the DOD proposed survivor benefits and dependent medical care program, account for $200 million of the increased expenditure.

More additional funds will go for a stepped-up guided missile program, on which almost one billion dollars will be spent, an increase of about one-third over the $750 million being spent this year.

Mr. Wilson said that recent emphasis on the development of ballistic missiles resulted from the desire to exploit U.S. technological advances rather than as counter-measures to Soviet accomplishments.

Part One

'The Constitution And You' Set For TI&E Sessions This Week

That the integral relationship between the American serviceman and the Constitution is capsulized by the oath which the individual takes upon being sworn into the Armed Forces will be pointed out in the Troop Information Topic, "The U.S. Constitution and You," the first part of which will be presented this week.

Paraphrased, the oath says essentially, "I believe in the Constitution of the United States, and I will serve my country to the best of my ability. I am ready to fight the enemies of my country. I will do what the President and my officers tell me to do. I will obey the regulations of the Armed Forces."

Inherent in this oath are the elements of loyalty, integrity and honesty. These are the standards of behavior which the serviceman accepts as a personal obligation when he enters the service and repeats the oath.

Loyalty, it will be stressed, is a two-way street. The soldier's loyalty to the United States has something in common with his loyalty to his family, his religion, his ideals and his military unit; it is reciprocal. He gives and he receives.

The individual loyalties of a soldier, when extended to his unit and to the nation, becomes that force which transforms the United States from 156 million individuals into a united nation, strong and purposeful.

In explaining the significance of integrity and honesty in the soldier's relationship to the Constitution it is stated in the information topic outline that "Because of the nature of their occupation, members of the Armed Forces are obliged to rely upon the integrity of their fellows, and in turn must themselves be reliable."

Also, according to the outline, "There is no better simple statement of the essential meaning to the service person of the terms honor, veracity and integrity than the following:

"1. A man has honor if he holds himself to a course of conduct because of a conviction that it is in the general interest, even though he is well aware that it may lead to inconvenience, personal loss, humiliation, or grave physical risk.

"2. He has veracity if, having studied a question to the limit of his ability, he says and believes what he thinks to be true, even though it would be the path of least resistance to deceive others and himself.

"3. He has integrity if his interest in the good of the service is at all times greater than his personal pride, and when he holds himself to the same line of duty when unobserved as he would follow if all of his superiors were present."

I&E Colonel Named For 'Hall of Fame'

Washington (AFPS)—Army Lt. Col. William C. Pelton has received one of the first two life memberships in the Basketball Hall of Fame, which is being established in Springfield, Mass., in memory of Dr. James Naismith, inventor of the game.

As a lifetime member, the colonel—who is the executive officer under the army chief of information and education—will be one of those who will select the basketball greats to be enshrined in the Hall of Fame.

Col. Pelton is the 1955-56 president of the International Association of Approved Basketball Officials.

Top Soldier for the 16th Base Post Office last month was Pfc. Roy A. Peterson. A native of Newington, Conn., Pfc. Peterson entered the Army in 1954 and received basic training at Ft. being on hand at the Ft. Mason Docks to witness the reunion, but the other persistent worker for the family's first complete get-together in eight years, Chaplain Killdall, was on hand.

Actually, the family was still not completely reunited at Ft. Mason because another daughter, Lydia, couldn't skip classes at French Hospital, where she is taking nurse's training. Later in the day, though, the entire family was brought together in their new home in Sharps Park.

The newly-arrived Miss Cruz, who holds a B.S. degree in Education from Santa Tomas University in Manila, hopes to join her sister, Lydia, in following a career in nursing.

Of the other members of the family, Dolores attends City College of San Francisco, Benjamin is in the Air Force, Tony, Jr., is a senior at Jefferson High in Daly City, and the youngest, Aurora, is in the third grade at Sharps Park Grade School.

Entering the Army via the Philippine Scouts in 1922, M/Sgt. Cruz wears, among numerous other decorations and awards, the Silver Star and the Bronze Star Medals.

After being captured by the Japanese in Corregidor in 1942, the Sergeant managed to escape and serve with the Philippine Guerrillas until the end of WWII.

Both as a commissioned officer and an NCO, M/Sgt. Cruz served in Okinawa and in the United States following WWII and prior to the outbreak of hostilities in Korea. Later he served 14 months in Korea. He has been with the 9th AAA Missile Battalion since March 1954.

Gyroscope Transfer To Alaska-Bound 2d Infantry Now Open

Application for Gyroscope transfer to the Second Infantry Division which is slated for rotation to Alaska this spring is now open to Presidio and sub-post personnel it was announced in a Sixth Army memorandum this week.

To meet minimum requirements for transfer, personnel must either have a minimum of three years' service remaining or sign a certificate of intention to take a discharge and reenlist for a minimum of three years.

Personnel who can meet the above requirement are urged to make application as soon as possible in order to increase their chances of being accepted by the Second Infantry Division.

Application for Gyroscope transfer will be channeled through the post unit personnel office which indicated that from three to five weeks are severally required for processing of the applications by the rotating division. Applications will be accepted according to the Second Infantry Division's need for MOS and grade slots.

Assistance and additional information concerning Gyroscope reenlistments and transfers may be acquired from M/Sgt. Richard Evans, Extension 3412 and Sfc. William R. Daniels, Extension 3594.

handled in cooperation with the Sixth Army Headquarters coordinating center.

The facilities of Post Ordnance, Quartermaster, the 561st Port Construction Engineers and 505th MP's were held in readiness over the crisis period. The entire post remained on alert.

In reply to emergency calls, Post Ordnance dispatched four DUKWs and drivers for relief work in the Guerneville area. The Harbor Craft Detachment helped evacuate a herd of 85 stranded cattle near Pittsburg, California. (See stories elsewhere.)

Among the supplies sent to the disaster areas, over 23,000 blankets from the Presidio, Oakland Army Base and Utah Depot warehouses were sped to flooded regions. Clothing, sandbags, cots and a mountain of food, equipment, fuel and vehicles were dispatched through the Presidio to distressed areas.

The Presidio has reason to be proud of its fire prevention record for the past year, says Colonel William T. Cathcart, Post Fire Marshal. George Geller, Chief, Fire Prevention and Fire Protection Division, credits two factors in keeping fires at a minimum. "First, we emphasize rigid fire prevention inspections of all areas continuously and second we are dependent on the wholehearted support and participation of all personnel, military and civilian, in our fire prevention program at the Presidio and its score of subposts."

Damage resulting from fires was kept down to a total of $6,370. One fire involved a loss of $5,395 and another one of

Flood Hero!*30th Engineer Group Specialist Recommended For Soldiers Medal

The Soldiers Medal has been recommended for Specialist 3rd James F. Hatcher of the 30th Engineers, who twice during flood relief operations jumped from a hovering helicopter into threatening waters to haul three imperiled refugees into the plane and safety.

Hatcher made his first descent into the flood near Geyserville where two children had been reported trapped in a house by the swollen Russian River.

Flying an H-23 helicopter, Lt. Brooks Homan had spotted the stranded children but was unable to take them aboard his small craft. He radioed 1st Lt. Donald W. Coggins and his copilot James M. Allen then en route with Specialist Hatcher to Eureka.

Arriving at the Geyserville site, the two 521st Aviation Company pilots maneuvered their plane to a small clearing about 150 feet from the house. Trees, power lines and TV antennae prevented any closer approach.

Hatcher dropped into the waist-high water, swimming and wading his way to the house. Carrying the children back to the plane, he boosted them aboard the hovering helicopter. They were taken to a local school yard and left to be cared for by local townspeople.

Going on to Eureka, the three 30th Engineers flew supplies, food and personnel for the next two days in cooperation with the Coast Guard. They also carried supplies to Crescent City where the Trinity and Klamath rivers were plaguing local residents.

On the way to imperiled Marysville, they were diverted to Stockton for another rescue pick-up. Again Lt. Brooks Homan had spotted a flood victim and radioed for the pickup crew. This time a man, caught by rush of waters from a broken dike had been swept away by the current. He had clutched for support to a telephone pole which carried him crashing into a submerged corn crib. The helicopter crew arrived to find him clinging to a 2 x 4 and in a state of shock.

Hatcher again leaped into the water and pulled the elderly victim to safety aboard the hovering aircraft.

amounted to $125 in property damage. There were 206 fire runs.

The Fire Chief is keeping his fingers permanently crossed in the hope and expectation our fire safety program will continue to pay dividends. "Much of the success of our fire prevention efforts can be attributed to informative talks, instruction, demonstrations, display and special events designed to focus the attention of personnel on the potential dangers likely to invite the disaster of a fire. We show how to avoid these hazards. A feature of our program is youth activities. Both Girl and Boy Scouts are trained in fire safety practices by your Fire Department."

vital statistic!

Although the rest of the nation experienced what has been termed a Black Christmas when measured against a record number of traffic fatalities and accidents, the Presidio and sub-posts, according to the post safety director, registered a completely accident-free Christmas holiday record. This mark applies to all Presidio personnel, whether they were on-post during the period, or whether as in many cases they were in the midst of leaves at distant places. The Presidio also scored an unblemished safety record over the equally-long New Year's weekend.

No Legal Action Planned by Army On Former POW

Washington (AFPS)—The Army will not take legal action against former POW Richard Tenneson who has returned to the U. S. after voluntarily choosing to go to Communist China following the Korean armistice.

The Army said it felt it had no jurisdiction over Tenneson who was given a dishonorable discharge at the time he elected to stay with his communist captors.

Any charges against Tenneson therefore will have to be filed by the Department of Justice in a civil court.

The Army's policy regarding Tenneson apparently was determined by a recent Federal court order releasing three other former prisoners who returned earlier from China.

The Federal judge held that the Army had no jurisdiction over the dishonorably discharged trio.

His decision was based on a Supreme Court ruling that a provision of the Uniform Code of Military Justice giving the armed forces jurisdiction over former servicemen for offenses committed in the service was unconstitutional.

sult of Christmas decorations. In the past year no injury has resulted from fires.

"There are a number of vitally important things to remember," warned the Chief. "In any fire no matter what its size or origin notify your Fire Department. Dial 117. Don't delay. Second and better yet, prevent fires from starting by eliminating careless smoking habits and seeing to it that combustible rubbish is not permitted to accumulate anywhere. Remember, trash is a prolific fire cause."

"By following an intelligent and sensible course this coming year we can maintain our high standards of fire protection, but this demands participation of everyone in

Rapid Response

Tons Of Usable Clothing Donated Here To Boost Salvation Army Flood Relief

While many Presidio personnel were giving urgent on-the-spot assistance to flood-stricken Northern California communities last week, other local personnel were hurriedly searching closet and billfold to make contributions to the Salvation Army's special flood relief appeal for clothing and funds.

Clothing collection points were established at the Main Fire Station, the Scott House, Headquarters Battery, 30th AAA Group, Ft. Barry; Stillwell hall and Harmon Armory.

The drive, which continued through last Saturday, netted a total of nine truck-loads of usable clothing. There is no accounting of cash donated since money was given individually to the Salvation Army.

Another aspect in the local response to the Salvation Army appeal occurred when a Headquarters Battery, 441st AAA Missile Battalion cook heard the charities radio request for men to assist in the handling of clothing donated through its San Francisco Armory.

Specialist Second Class Ed Green had just finished his first cook chores in the unit's mess hall at Ft. Cronkhite on 27 December when he returned to the barracks. There he heard the broadcast which requested volunteer manpower.

He rounded up a crew of 25 from the 441st, obtained permission to use military transportation and proceeded with his men to the downtown Armory of the Salvation Army.

There the local AAA soldiers spent more than five hours sorting and packaging tons of clothing destined for use by thousands of Californians left homeless by the disastrous flood waters.

1,118 Majors Listed For Army Up-grades By November Board

Washington (AFPS)—The Army has published a list of 1,118 majors who have been recommended for temporary promotions to lieutenant colonel.

The recommendations were made by a selection board that met here in late November. Cut-off date of rank for the list is Nov. 30, 1950.

The list is contained in DA Circular 624-31, dated Dec. 13, 1955. The promotions will be made as vacancies occur.

The Army pointed out, however, that the list is subject to administrative review and should not be construed as a promotion order.

About 190 majors listed in DA Circular 624-24, March 16, 1955, have not yet received promotions although recommended by an earlier board. Their cut-off date was Oct. 26, 1950.

The Army said it will continue to make temporary promotions to lieutenant colonel from the earlier

Mr. Ferraro will conduct the balance of the program, which includes the "Pique Dame" overture, "Pas des Fleurs," "The Sleeping Beauty," "Irish Washerwoman," "Autumn Leaves," "Mardi Gras," "Haskell's Rascals," "Bandinage for Brasses," and the "Marche Hongroise."

PRESIDIO BRIEF—In the period 1848-1860 punishments of enlisted men for infractions of rules consisted of reduction in pay and rank, forfeiture of coffee and sugar, and solitary confinement on bread and water. Habitual drunkards were sentenced to wear a barrel for a week.

Army Will Reclassify NCOs To Meet Field Shortages

Reclassification or retraining will offer certain non-commissioned officers and specialists increased promotional opportunities in fields where shortages of skilled personnel exist.

Previously, the Army directed major commanders to reclassify or retrain upper three grade NCOs and specialists holding MOSs considered to be excess to Army requirements, and thus, a block to promotion for these individuals.

Although, reclassification or mandatory retraining has been ordered for surplus first three grades holding specified MOSs, advancement chances are bettered in the following specialties needing personnel:

MOS	Title
112—Heavy Weapons Infantryman
121—Combat Engineer
130—Armor Basic
131—Armor Crewman
141—Field Artillery Crewman
145—Artillery Survey Specialist
146—Field Artillery Operations and Intelligence Specialist
161—AAA Automatic Weapons Crewman
162—AAA Gun Crewman
211—Field Artillery Radar Crewman

311—Infantry Communication Specialist
313—Artillery Communication Specialist
612—Construction Machine Operator
911—Medical Aidman
931—Medical Laboratory Specialist

Many NCOs and specialists, according to the Army, have had previous training and experience to qualify them for vacancies in combat units while others will need retraining for duty in line outfits.

Exempt from reclassification, the Army said, are: men over forty-one years old, specialists who do not volunteer, those who are physically unqualified, and individuals selected and awaiting orders to attend service schools. At the same time, specialists who volunteer for retraining or reclassification under the program and are assigned to NCO duties, may be appointed NCOs.

The Army estimates the firepower of the infantry division has increased 80 per cent since World War II with an increase in division personnel of 19 per cent.

LA Police Force Slates Job Exams For Ex-Servicemen

The Los Angeles Police Department, which ranks as one of the outstanding municipal law enforcement organizations in the country, has announced a new recruiting program aimed at ex-servicemen and men presently in the Army who will be entering civilian life in the near future. The salary range at the entry level of Policemen there is $375 to $440 a month.

Servicemen may take the required written examination for Policemen while still in the armed forces if they are not stationed near Los Angeles. This is administered at their stations and post of duty through arrangements made by the Los Angeles City Civil Service Department with commanding officers.

Candidates must be between the ages of 19 and 30 years inclusive, be at least 5 feet, 8 inches tall, and have a high school education or its equivalent.

Appointments are limited to those 21 and older, but 19 and 20 year-olds may take the examination now for appointment upon reaching 21.

During an initial 13-week training period police cadets receive full pay. Advancements to higher paying ranks of greater responsibility are based upon the results of competitive civil service examinations.

Men interested in investigating this opportunity should write to Los Angeles City Civil Service Department, Room 5, City Hall, Los Angeles 12, California. A detailed bulletin and application form will be mailed.

Raiders Win Four Tilts To Lengthen Loop Lead

By Pvt. Bob Malone
Star-Presidian Sports Editor

Coach Hal Fischer's Presidio Basketball squad swept to four wins over the Christmas holidays to run their victory string to fifteen straight over the current season. The powerful Red Raiders need but one more win to cinch the Northern California Armed Forces Championship.

First to fall were the strong Parks Air Force Base five 70-65. Control of the backboards was the big reason for the Presidio win over the defending Bay Area Armed Forces Champs. The Army stars got off to a fast start and were never headed as they held an 18 point lead at halftime.

Top men for the Presidio were Mike O'Neill, former University of California cager, and Don Lofgran, ex-University of San Francisco star, both of whom tossed in 22 points. Big Bill Davis, Presidio forward, scored 14 points.

Next to fall were the Humboldt State College cagers 71-61. Pfc. Mike O'Neill led the Raider scoring with 25 counters from his forward position. Don Lofgran with 20 and Bob Harbertson with 14 were the other Presidio scoring stars.

Bouncing on, the potent Red Raiders ran rough-shod over the Mather Air Force casaba men to the tune of 85-50. Bob Harbertson led the scoring with 26 points, closely followed by Mike O'Neill with 23 tallies. Lofgran with 14 and Slavitt with 10 points aided the Army attack.

Closing out 1955 the local cagers trampled the Whittier College squad 93-75. The locals were never in trouble as Lofgran hit for 34 and O'Neill for 30 to pace the Raiders. Harbertson with 9 and Bill Aires with 6 were other standouts.

A look at the Northern California Armed Forces Basketball League standing shows the Presidio ahead with six wins as against 0 losses. Parks Air Force is in the second slot with a four and one record just in front of Beale Air Force Base with a five and two mark. Bringing up the bottom are McClelland Air Force Base with one win and five losses and Mather Air Force with a 0 and seven mark in league play.

Looming on the horizon is the Sixth Army Basketball tourney which will be played here from 27 February to 3 March. The games will be played in the Kezar Pavilion.

Next games on tap for the Presidio are the Alameda Naval Air Station Helcats, who played host to the Red Raiders last night with results appearing in next week's Star-Presidian. Next Tuesday the San Francisco Navy Shipyards invade the local arena in one of the opening games of the Bay Area Armed Forces League.

Sportsmanship Award Goes To Army Star

Boston (AFPS)—Don Holleder, Army's All-American end who turned quarterback this year and led the Cadets, to an upset win over Navy, topped 20 other outstanding football players as the winner of the Nils V. (Swede) Nelson Sportsmanship Award.

Holleder was selected because he "willingly sacrificed individual glory by moving from end to quarterback to help the Army team," the citation read.

The selection committee said, "Although he had rough going in his first few games at the unfamiliar spot, he persevered in the new assignment and finished the season as a key figure in Army's 14-6 victory over Navy."

The committee received 162 recommendations for the award.

Final tabulation of the 1955 regular deer season tag returns shows a bag of 71,126 bucks for the second best total in California hunting history.

The 1955 bag was off six per cent from the record year of 1954, when nimrods took 75,602.

For the coastal season it was 26,785 as compared to 28,076 a year ago, and the inland total was 44,341 as against 47,526 in 1954.

For the second straight year archery hunters set a record, with 189 taken by bow and arrow. The previous archery record, set in 1954, was 148.

Final Count!

Eight Presidio Grid Stars Place On All-Army Team

The names of eight members of the Presidio Red Raider 1955 team appeared in the final Army Times All-Army football rating released last week.

Bobby Ratliff, hard charging Raider fullback whose all around play was instrumental in one of the most successful grid seasons the Presidio has ever enjoyed, headed the locals on the honorary squad. The local grid stars finished the year with a nine and two record. The Raiders were coached by Larry McInerney, former Saint Mary's star.

Veteran end Dick Piggott was the only Presidio end named in the balloting, earning between 21 and 100 votes.

Tackles Burt Terrell and Frank McDonald received from 1 to 20 votes in their slots.

Frank Wilson was the only Presidio guard to make the rating, receiving 20 votes for his excellent play.

At the center slot John Snyder was in the 21 to 100 classification.

In the backfield, quarterback Morris Maytubby and left half Jim Guimarin each earned from 1 to 21 nominations.

The 1955 All-Army eleven ran as follows: ends, George Tarasovich, Fort Belvoir, and Dan Sekanovich, 12th Infantry (Europe); tackles, Bill Quinlan, Fort Carson, and Gerald Perry, Fort Ord; guards, John Michels, Fort Eustis, and Joe Ramona, Fort Sill; center, Jim Schrader, 86th Infantry (Europe); quarterback, Cotton Davidson, Fort Bliss; halfbacks, Paul Cameron, Fort Ord, and Harry Spears, 9th Divarty (Europe); fullback, Buck McPhail, Fort Sill.

Buck McPhail, Fort Sill, won the most valuable player award and a position on the All-Army eleven in his fullback position. McPhail was the second most popular winner since Fort Ord's Ollie Matson ran away with the contest in 1953.

Fort Ord stars, quarterback Jimmy Powers and end Ron Miller, were named on the second string All-Army. Both formerly played for the University of Southern California.

Fourth Army Stars Dominate Alamo Matches

Ft. Sam Houston, Tex. (AFPS)—Two Fourth Army marksmen, both of whom were members of the Army pistol team at the Camp Perry, Ohio, national matches, dominated the Alamo City Mid-Winter Pistol Tournament in San Antonio.

The duo, Maj. Lloyd C. Hummert, of Camp Chaffee, Ark., and 1st Lt. David C. Miller of Ft. Sam Houston, won the team match for Fourth Army with a score of 587 out of a possible 600.

Lt. Miller won the grand aggregate championship with a score of 2,579 points, one point off the national service record. He also won the .45-cal. and NRA short course aggregate championships and won nine trophies and seven medals during the two-day event. Maj. Hummert won the .22-cal. and center fire championships.

Willie Gardner, 6' 7", a Harlem Globetrotter since October, 1953, is now playing basketball at Camp Chaffee, Ark.

State Men Play Part In Floods

Department of Fish and Game personnel played a major role during the flood crisis in California last weekend when they aided in the evacuation of victims, helped direct the movement of repair and rescue equipment to stricken areas and maintained continuous radio communication.

In most cases game wardens were on the job before being directed to the scenes by their superiors. A good portion of them worked several times around the clock until relief was in sight in the various areas which were hit by the floods.

Wardens aided in the emergencies in Northern, Central and Southern California. However, one of the best examples of their work was in the hard hit Yuba City-Marysville region in Northern California.

In that region alone, wardens were instrumental in the rescue of 14 persons from trees and rooftops on the morning of December 24 when the high water was at its peak.

Probably the biggest contribution made by the wardens was in keeping communication flowing smoothly through use of two-way car radios and portable handies.

Through the use of these facilities members of the sheriff's office, Army, Red Cross, Civil Defense and other agencies were able to keep in constant contact even though their own communications systems were clogged with messages, or in some cases broken down.

The wardens also aided in the search for hunters who became lost or stranded due to the flood conditions. Others worked with farmers in locating livestock which had strayed or wandered from farm lands.

The two-way radio system in Sacramento headquarters, normally closed on weekends, was kept open on a 24-hour basis.

Fort Hood Wins Bowl Tilt, 33-13

Galveston, Tex. (AFPS)—Quarterback Don Gottlob led the Tankers of Ft. Hood, Tex., to a 33-13 win over the Amphibious Force Atlantic Fleet Gators in the seventh annual Shrimp Bowl game here.

Gottlob, the little All-American from Sam Houston State who set three national collegiate passing records, completed nine of 17 aeriels for 154 yards before a crowd of 7,500, largest ever to see a Shrimp Bowl game.

The Tankers' signal-caller was aided by the running of halfback Carl Mayes, former University of Texas star. Mayes scored two touchdowns and kicked one of Ft Hood's three conversions.

The Gators scored their first touchdown midway in the fourth quarter when Noel Schmidt intercepted a Tankers' pass and ran 37 yards to the three. He scored on the next play.

A short time later the Amphibious Force eleven scored again John McKee, formerly of Mississippi State, recovered a Hood fumble on the Tankers' 37 and five plays later ex-Tulane quarterback Bill Bonar tossed a 12-yard pass to McKee for the score.

Army Small Arms Meet Set For 56

The U. S. Army's small arms marksmanship program for 1956 kicked off at Fort Monroe, Va., last week with representatives from the six Army areas meeting at Headquarters Continental Army Command.

Major General A. D. Mead, nominated to be a new member of the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice and chief of CONARC's Infantry section, led the discussion of the year's plans.

Army representatives, charged with developing the competitive eliminations which lead to Army area, All-Army and National Match participation, worked over the problems which developed during last year's competition. Two prime fields of interest dealt with increasing participation at company and battalion levels, and with the steps necessary to insure that the U. S. Army Rifle and Pistol Team is composed of the best marksmen in the entire Army.

Attending the 3-day conference were: Lt. Col. Wendell W. Lockett, First Army; Lt. Col. Joseph Werp, Second Army; Lt. Col. Edward R. Mason, Third Army; Capt. Charles W. Stowell, Fourth Army; Major John W. Barber, Fifth Army; Major Wayne F. Dwyer, Sixth Army, and Lt. Col. Richard H. Smoot, Fort Benning, Ga. Col. Smoot was officer in charge of the 1955 U. S. Army Rifle and Pistol team which he led to championships in the National Matches at Camp Perry, O.

aerial census

Representatives of the Department of Fish and Game and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service have completed plans for the annual waterfowl census in California, to be taken next week.

Most of the census will be taken by aerial photos of concentrations of birds in the interior valleys and Delta region.

The joint census in this state is part of a count for the entire Pacific Flyway. Information gained here, plus surveys of northern breeding grounds, forms the basis for the 1956 regulations on seasons and bag limits.

Speed Army Med Promotion

Washington (AFPS)—Physicians and dentists now are eligible for promotions to the grades of colonel, lieutenant colonel and major one year earlier than other Army officers.

About 800 medical and dental officers will be promoted to higher grades before next 30 June as a result of the new policy.

The Army said it is also considering early advancements of medical and dental first lieutenants to the grade of captain.

In announcing the revised promotion program, the Army pointed out that doctors have at least nine years of formal education before being commissioned while most other officers have less formal training.

The Army, now faced with a shortage of doctors, expects the new policy to serve as a means of attracting more career medical officers.

First Model of a man-made earth satellite was on display at a recent exhibition of New York City's Hayden Planetarium. The model is 18 inches in diameter and weighs 25 pounds. It has standard subminiature electronic parts and is encased in a transparent plastic sphere. It was designed and built under auspices of a science magazine. The first actual satellite to circle the earth is scheduled to be launched in 1957. The armed forces are playing major roles in the project.

Former Army Private Will Head Launcher System Of First Satellite

Baltimore (AFPS)—A 31-year-old engineer who served as an infantry private in WWII has been appointed operations manager of the launcher system for the first earth satellite scheduled to be launched into space within two years.

The engineer assigned to the post by the Glenn L. Martin Co. is N. Elliott Felt, Jr., a graduate of the University of Maryland and Georgia Tech. Felt designed the guidance system of the Navy's Viking rocket, also built by Martin, which established a world's altitude record for single stage rockets.

Reserve Obligations Must Be Met

The Reserve Forces Act of 1955 imposes on all young men entering the Armed Forces after 9 August, 1955, a definite obligation to participate in reserve training and provides effective measures for insuring compliance with that obligation.

It requires Ready Reservists to take part in a minimum of 48 scheduled drills or training periods and not more than 17 days of active duty for training a year or, instead, a maximum of 30 days active duty for training a year.

Soldiers who were on active duty on 9 August, 1955, and are being released before 1 July, 1957, may volunteer for one year of active participation in a unit of the Ready Reserve. Upon completing the year, these men will be entitled to transfer to the Standby Reserve, if they ask for it. Otherwise, they will be transferred to the Ready Reserve, in a non-participating capacity, to complete their eight year military service obligation.

Ready Reservists, except members of the National Guard who are subject to separate State codes, who fail to perform the prescribed training may be ordered to active duty without their consent to perform annual active duty for 45 days' training. Failure to comply with these active duty orders could result in disciplinary action under the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

The Reserve training requirement extends to all individuals covered by the act, who enter the Armed Forces through induction, enlistment, or appointment. ROTC graduates are subject to the compliance measures, and those who fail to comply with standards of satisfactory participation may have

Find Officer POW Guilty On Single Count; Light Sentence

Ft. Lewis, Wash. (AFPS)—Lt. Col. Paul von Liles has been convicted by an Army court martial board here of bringing discredit on the service by making propaganda records while a prisoner of the communists in Korea.

The 39-year-old officer was suspended in rank for two years. This means he will remain static on the promotion list during this period.

The third officer to be convicted of collaboration in Korea, Col. von Liles received the mildest punishment of the three. Originally accused of aiding and abetting the enemy, he was found guilty only of the lesser charge of "bringing discredit" on the armed forces.

PRESIDIO BRIEF—To encourage enlistments in the California Volunteers during the Civil War, the legislature authorized an enlistment bounty of $160.

College Extension Courses! New Adult Education Series Available Through Post T.I.&E.

Two Bay Area colleges, the University of California Extension and the College of Marin, announced this week new spring programs of adult education which are open for enrollment by local military personnel.

The Army, through the Post T.I.&E Division, will pay 75 per cent of the cost up to a maximum of $7.50 per semester for enrollment in classes by local military personnel.

Additionally, one vocational machine shop course and a lecture series on America's neighbors are being offered. The lecture series will commence 20 January.

Most of the classes at the College of Marin will be given during the evening hours. A $1 registration fee covers the cost of enrollment in one or more classes and the only additional fees charged will be for arts and crafts courses.

The University of California Extension is offering courses in more than 200 subjects in San Francisco, Oakland and Berkeley. Most of the classes will begin the last week in January and no previous training is required for many of the courses.

Plans in Motion For Army's '56 'Gyro' Switches

Washington (AFPS)—The wheels have been set in motion for two division exchanges under Operation Gyroscope during 1956.

The 8th Inf. Div. which will "gyroscope" to Germany from Ft. Carson, Colo., and exchange places with the 9th Inf. Div., will make its move in three stages.

One-third of the division will leave New York City on 1 Aug., another third will leave 1 Sept. and the final group 1 Oct.

Most of the division's troops will go to New York from Colorado by train. Dependents are authorized to travel with them. Families and single soldiers who wish to have their private automobiles shipped to Europe will be allowed to drive them to New York.

Each group will disembark at Bremerhaven and will be taken from there by train to southern Germany. As soon as a Carson unit arrives at its German location, a corresponding unit of the 9th Div. will leave its post.

On-post quarters will be reserved in advance for the 71st Inf. Div. which moves from Alaska to Ft. Lewis, Wash., next summer to change places with the 2nd Inf. Div. Similarly, on-post quarters for the 2nd Div. will be reserved at Ft. Richardson, Ladd AFB and Eielson AFB in Alaska.

Two ships, each able to carry about 850 troops and 350 dependents, will make two round-trips per month between Alaska and Ft. Lewis during July and August.

Shipment of automobiles for this exchange is still in the planning stage. Personnel who wish to drive the Alcan Highway may be authorized to do so but they must arrive at their destination no later than their unit.

The month with the highest Army reenlistment rate is July. January and February have the lowest reenlistment rates.

28,473 New Military Housing Units Approved

Fort Huachuca, Arizona, will be one of 43 military installations in the U. S. and Hawaii to get new family housing, 28,473 units, as a result of the Department of Defense decision to take advantage of Title VIII housing provision as amended by the 84th Congress. This act gives the services authority to finance their own housing developments. However, Defense has emphasized that Congress will still be asked for funds to build military housing in areas not suitable for investment under the quarters allowance system.

The units will have an average cost of about $13,500. They will be built with private capital in accordance with Title VIII of the Capehart Housing Act as amended by Public Law 345 during the first session of the 84th Congress.

Mortgage payments will be met by the services with funds normally allotted as quarters allowances to the personnel occupying the houses. Mortgages are expected to run for 25 years at a four and one-half per cent interest rate. They will be insured by the FHA and guaranteed by the Defense Department.

The DOD pointed out that the private capital method of financing military housing will permit the construction of as many units as are needed with no more expenditure of public funds than is authorized for quarters allowance.

President Praises Military In State Of Union Speech

Washington (AFPS)—President Eisenhower in his recent State of the Union message to Congress paid tribute to the members of the armed forces for the important role they play in the nation's defense.

"In the last analysis," he said, "our real strength lies in the caliber of the men and women in our Armed Forces, active and reserve."

Although much has been done to attract and hold capable military personnel, "more needs to be done," the President asserted. He renewed his request of last year for legislation to provide proper medical care for military dependents and a more equitable survivors' benefit program.

"The Administration," he added, "will prepare additional recommendations designed to achieve the same objectives, including career incentives for medical and dental officers and nurses, and increases in the proportion of regular officers."

Speaking of the over-all U. S. defense program, the President

Stillwell Hall Site! AFMA Slates Local Forum On Depot Management System

"Depot Command-Management System" will be the topic of a joint talk by three ranking management officials from Benicia Arsenal before the 19 January meeting of the Bay Area Chapter (10) of the Armed Forces Management Association. The Thursday evening session is scheduled for 2000 hours in room 307 Stillwell Hall.

Scheduled speakers are J. W. Kamb, executive assistant to the commanding officer at Benicia; Robert Mello, comptroller, and Joseph D. Lubin, budget director.

The program will cover new methods by which planning, budgeting, funding and accounting are being integrated at Ordnance installations. The result, according to Bernard Kahn, AFMA president, is to provide commanding officers with improved "command-management" techniques.

Since the recommendations of the Hoover commission, new concepts like those being instituted at

Variety of Vacancies In Army Area Listed By Civilian Personnel

A variety of job openings, including clerk typists and stenographers, as well as a number of technical positions, were announced this week by the Division of Civilian Personnel.

The vacancies call for a budget analyst, electronic and mechanical engineers, histopathology and medical X-Ray technicians, staff nurse, tab machine operator, vari-typer and dental assistants.

Other positions at the Presidio, Reno, Fort Ord and Two Rock Ranch include clerk typists, clerk stenographers, dental assistants, military pay clerk, meat cutter and dictation machine transcriber.

Signed applications (Form 58) should be submitted to the Division of Civilian Personnel, Building 36. Further information may be obtained by calling Ext. 2349 or 4233.

Regular Army personnel have a reenlistment rate up to 20 times as great as that for inductees.

New Ideas Pour In! Post Economy Drive Continues; Unit Reports Show Steady Gain

After just a few weeks' practice, the Presidio has already begun to acquire the knack of squeezing into the rigidly corseted budget ordered for the post during the last six months of the fiscal year.

The first of the regular unit reports which will be filed on the 5th of each month until July, contain long lists of conservation ideas, many of which have already been put into practice.

Most important factor in determining success of the savings campaign, however, will be the effectiveness of unit commanders in delegating responsibilities for each economy measure to specific individuals, according to Lt. Col. Albert M. Wunderlich, Post Conservation officer.

"For instance," said Colonel Wunderlich, "a particular man should be charged with checking lights, another with water taps and so forth. The campaign is also in large part psychological. Every officer, man and civilian employee on the Presidio must become economy conscious."

Among the suggestions for an effective conservation program is the practice already instituted by some units of price-tagging individual pieces of equipment and articles of supply before issuing them to personnel.

New emphasis has been put on savings ideas in the Employee Incentive Awards Program.

Some units have instituted a system of close monthly inventories, returning excess equipment to stock, thus saving maintenance costs. One unit found a number of "nice to have" projects which, however reluctantly, could be eliminated at considerable savings.

Medical costs (and a great deal of discomfort for everyone involved) would be saved by making sure that personnel dress in proper protective clothing while working outdoors.

Other suggestions include doubling up on the use of motor vehicles wherever possible, daily inspection of plumbing, lights and thermostats, consolidation of remote or isolated offices. Another idea recommends the use of lukewarm water for scrubbing floors and racks.

Proper maintenance techniques in all fields will also be stressed.

Top Student in a class of 42 graduates of the Army Meat and Dairy Hygiene School at Chicago, Illinois, recently, was Pvt. Ray N. Walker of Jacksboro, Texas. Now assigned to the Quartermaster Food Warehouse in Alameda, Pvt. Walker is a graduate of Texas A&M where he majored in agriculture and education in preparation for a teaching career in vocational agriculture.

TAGO Officer to Discuss Career Management With Army Personnel

Lieutenant Colonel Joffre H. Boston of the Career Management Division, TAGO, on a visit to Sixth Army Headquarters will spend today discussing problems in career management with individual officers and groups.

The career management advisor can be reached through Lt. Col. David J. Reina, Chief A-G Personnel Management Branch, Room 200, Building 39, or by calling Ext. 2875.

Colonel Boston toured the California Military District and visited ROTC groups in the Bay Area Wednesday and Thursday.

Former Sixth Army Commander Named For Fourth Star

President Eisenhower has nominated Lieutenant General Willard G. Wyman, deputy commanding general of the Continental Army Command and former commanding general of Sixth Army, for four star rank. General Wyman is expected to replace General John E. Dalquist, who will retire next month, as commander of CONARC.

Venice, Water And Army Ingenuity Provide Local Island Commuters With Interesting Transportation

During the past week Venice Island commuters have been catching the LCM-8 ferryboat to the tiny town of Terminous on Route 12. Because the only bridge between the mainland and the insular farm community washed out during the recent floods, men from Fort Baker's 561st Engineer Company, TC, have since Sunday been conducting a ferry service via one of the Army's mechanized landing craft.

Operating out of an ancient

ferry slip at Terminous (between Stockton and Rio Vista), skipper Sfc. Elvin Goforth and his crew have been providing the Venice Island farmers with their only means of transportation to the mainland village.

When the dikes broke last week, the island was inundated and the solitary span to Terminous destroyed. The Civil Defense director at Stockton appealed to the Army for aid.

The Fort Baker Harbor Craft Detachment, commanded by Lt.

R. P. Madsen, dispatched a diesel-driven LCM-8 at 0500 hours Sunday. By 1400 hours, they had arrived and established transportation for the stranded islanders.

Just two weeks ago, two of the giant landing craft were used in the rescue of some 85 Winter Island cattle threatened by rising flood waters.

The crew of the LCM-8 ferry at Terminous includes, along with skipper Goforth, engineer Sp.-2 Lindy G. Stone, seamen Sp.-3 David Townsend and Pvt. Dennis Nichols.

Disarming an antagonistic suspect with judo technique is demonstrated by instructor Sgt. Ernest H. Hullinghurst for some of the 250 men who will take six weeks' MP training starting Monday. The erstwhile gun-wielder is student Sp3

The Only Safe Weapon is one which has been properly cleared. Here, Sgt. Hullinghurst shows a group of student MPs the step-by-step methods for clearing a .45 caliber automatic pistol. Besides the side-arm, the rookies will learn to fire the .45 caliber submachine gun, the shotgun and the .50 caliber heavy machine gun. Weapon training will be given by key 505th MP Battalion officers and NCOs at the Ft. Barry ranges.

The "Come Along" is another key judo hold which the 250 potential MP's will learn during the next month and a half at the 505th MP Battalion training center. Lieutenant William J. Shisler demonstrates the hold on Sp3 William T. Tyson as Sgt. Ernest H. Hullinghurst

Six-Week Cycle

505th To Train 250 Future Military Policemen At Baker

Fort Baker will take on a slightly hyperactive appearance next Monday as the 505th MP Battalion opens a six weeks' training cycle which will prepare more than 250 men from all branches of the Army for future roles in the ranks of the Military Police.

Chief aim of the extensive training program is to provide an additional group of MP's to augment the current personnel rosters of the Presidio-based battalion.

The men slated for the rugged and highly specialized training have been selected from a broad variety of units throughout the Sixth Army area.

In virtually all cases, these men have never previously performed Military Police duties but the instruction during the next month and a half is designed to effect a complete transformation of the men from numerous other military skills to that of the MP.

Although the Military Police Corps' objective for its personnel is good combat-ready soldiers first and competent MP's second, this training cycle will be devoted entirely to MP subjects since all of the students have had previous basic infantry training.

This specialized instruction will include classes in military justice, court procedures, investigative methods, authority and jurisdiction, traffic control, procedures for incidents, military police forms, riot control formation and prisoner handling.

Other classes will entail training in first aid, driver skills, military courtesy, calisthenics, drill and ceremonies, and judo. At the Fort Barry ranges the men will become familiar with four of the weapons commonly used by the Military Police: the .45 caliber pistol, the shotgun, the .45 caliber submachine gun and the .50 caliber submachine gun.

One element of the training will not be conducted in classroom fashion but instead will be the duty of platoon and squad leaders. This pertains to polish and appearance of the individual soldier and his variety of special MP gear.

An additional factor which will help provide the men with a solid notion of the high MP uniform and equipment standards will be frequent inspection by Lt. Col. Fred C. Smith, 505th MP Battalion commander and post provost marshal.

After the training has been completed, the new MP's will be assigned to the three line MP companies here where they will be given an additional week on-the-job training before pulling routine MP duty.

The training cycle was programmed by the battalion's S-3 staff, under the direction of Maj. John Kwock. Veteran MP officers and noncoms have been selected for instructor and leadership chores.

Other newly-elected officers for the club are Mrs. Robert Von Volkenburgh, Mrs. Franklin G. Smith, Mrs. Walter F. Kelso, Mrs. Glenn Hawes, Mrs. Arthur Jacoby, Mrs. John T. Drake, and the retired representative, Mrs. L. T. Lathrop.

Guest speaker at the Presidio Woman's Club meeting was Charlotte Vickery. Her topic, "The Romance of Flowers in Design," traced the appearance of plants, shrubs, trees and flowers as they appear in fabric designs. The speaker's subject was illustrated by heirloom brocades, damasks, and hand-loomed tapestry once owned by her father.

The club meeting terminated with an afternoon tea hosted by Mrs. Wayland Augar, Mrs. Robert McIntire, Mrs. Jack Stewart and Mrs. Henry C. Butt.

16 Take Tax Class To Help Presidians File '55 Statements

To assist local personnel in filing 1955 income tax forms, 16 officers, civilian and enlisted men from post and Sixth Army staff sections and from major Presidio and sub-post units attended a day-long class held by the local office of the Bureau of Internal Revenue at the Federal Office Building downtown last week.

Chief purpose of the class was to acquaint select military personnel with the various procedures involved in preparing tax returns so that the information could then be made available to Presidians having tax problems.

Attending the one-day short tax session were CWO Harold Premo, 561st Engineer Company; 2nd Lt. Eugene L. Hudson, Pvt. Peter Young and Pvt. J. Thomas Eubank, Post Judge Advocate section; CWO/4 Clifford L. Beisel, Headquarters Company, Station Complement; CWO Travis L. Van Kirk, Headquarters Company, Station Complement; CWO Clyde R. Thompson, 505th MP Battalion; Maj. Kenneth B. Nicholson, 30th AAA Group; Maj. Harold E. Young, 441st AAA Bn.; CWO Alejandro M. Nasis, 752nd AAA Bn.; 1st Lt. Robert W. Foster, 740th AAA Bn.; 1st Lt. Peter R. Vallarino, 9th AAA Bn.; Maj. Robert Ahern, JA section, Sixth Army; Mr. Jon J. Montoli, G-4 section; Lt. Col. John Daujat, G-1 section, and Lt. Col. Phillip J. Vander Ziep, G-2 section.

Civil Service Recruits Engineers, Architects For Public Parks Plan

Some 50 engineers, architects and landscapers will be enlisted by the United States Civil Service Commission for a California-centered program of improvement in the national parks and monuments of 17 Western States, Alaska and Hawaii.

Headquarters for the project is the Western Design and Construction office of the National Parks Service, 1000 Geary in San Francisco, where applications are being accepted.

Since the end of World War II, the number of visitors to American parks has jumped from 21 million to over 50 million. The proposed project will need men to carry it through from the planning stages to actual supervision of the work.

Card Forms OK to File If Income Under $5,000

(This is the second in a series of eight articles on federal income tax filing for the year 1955. The articles are based on information furnished AFPS by the American Institute of Accountants, the national organization of certified public accountants.)

The government provides two forms for individual income tax returns. If you choose the wrong one, you may automatically cut yourself off from many possible tax savings.

The easiest way to file is to use the simple Form 1040A. It's a card the size of a check, which anyone can fill out if he is able to write his name and address and a few other simple facts. You just send it in with your withholding slips and the government takes care of the rest. If you owe more tax than was withheld you will get a bill for the difference. If more was withheld than you owe, you will get a refund check.

The tax rules permit you to use the card form if your gross income consists only of wages, dividends or interest totalling less than $5,000, and if you did not have more than $100 of gross income apart from that listed on your W-2 withholding slips.

Before deciding to use the card Form 1040A, you should consider these facts:

1. Your tax will be figured from a table which allows you a deduction of about 10 per cent of your income instead of itemized deductions for contributions, taxes, interest paid, medical and dental expenses, etc.

2. There is no provision in this form for filing as the "head of a household," as a "surviving spouse," or for claiming special credits for dividends and retirement income.

If you are sure that these two points would not cost you any tax savings, and your income is within the limits for filing a Form 1040A, you might as well use this simple card form.

If you decide to use the regular Form 1040, you still have the choice of itemizing your deductions or using a standard deduction which generally amounts to about 10 per cent of your income.

You are likely to save by itemizing your deductions if you:

1. Own real estate.
  2. Had unusual medical expense.
  3. Had deductible child-care expense.
  4. Suffered losses from fire, storm, accident, or theft.
  5. Made fairly large contributions.
- Form 1040 has been rearranged

this year, so that although it still contains four pages, a taxpayer whose income was entirely from wages needs to use only the first one or two pages. Pages 3 and 4 are for other types of income and for computing the special credits for dividends and retirement income.

The instructions that come with your tax forms give further information. Help is also available from the Internal Revenue Service, which urges you to consult a properly qualified advisor if you need outside assistance. (AFPS)

Raiders Sweep Two More Tilts

Basketball!

Presidio Extends Victory Streak To 17 Straight

By Pvt. Bob Malone
Star-Presidian Sports Editor

Coach Hal Fischer's Presidio basketball team swept to two wins this week in the opening round of the Bay Area Armed Forces basketball league. The twin victories extended the local win streak to 17 straight victories over the current season.

First to fall were the strong Alameda Naval "Hellcats" 78-45 in a game played on the Alameda home courts. Red Raider center Don Lofgran led the local scoring parade with 24 points. Other soldier high scorers were Mike O'Neill and Bill Davis with 14 tallies each.

Last Tuesday evening the San Francisco Navy Shipyards invaded the local gym only to lose 79-46 to the Presidio. Once again Don Lofgran led the Raider scoring with 21 points. The smooth shooting Presidio five took the opening tip-off and were never in trouble as reserves played most of the contest. Bob Harbertson and Mike O'Neill added 14 tallies apiece to help the Presidio attack.

A look at the local league standing shows that the powerful Red Raiders need but one more win to capture the Northern California Armed Forces basketball league. The locals are in first place with a 6 and 0 mark while their closest competitors, Parks Air Force Base, has a 4 and 1 record.

With the Bay Area Armed Forces league just getting under way the local cagers are out in front due to their twin wins over the Navy teams and should pick up all the marbles.

Looming brightly in the not too distant future is the All-Sixth Army basketball tournament which will be played locally in the Kezar Pavilion.

The tourney is slated for 27 February to 3 March. The strongest competition at the moment for the locals appears to be the Fort Lewis "Chiefs" and the Fort Ord "Warriors." Last year Fort Lewis walked off with the title after edging Fort Ord in the finals.

The next official league games on the Presidio schedule are next week. On Tuesday night the Raiders invade Mare Island and on Thursday night the Presidio travels to Treasure Island. Both games are in the Bay Area Armed Forces league. Next official home game is on the 24th when the San Francisco Marines invade the Presidio.

4 Servicemen Dropped From Hockey Team

Duluth, Minn. (AFPS)—The U.S. Olympic hockey team—in training here for the Winter Games in Cortina d'Ampezzo, Italy—has been trimmed to the 17-man limit by coach Johnny Mariucci.

Four players, three of them servicemen, were cut from the squad. A fourth serviceman, 2nd Lt. Ed Robson of Quantico, Va., voluntarily resigned from the team. The players cut will act as alternates in case of injury or illness, but otherwise will not accompany the team to Italy. The number of servicemen on the team is now eight.

They are: Army—Pvt. Richard Dougherty, Camp Chaffee, Ark.; 2nd Lt. John Mayasich, Minnesota Military District; Pfc. Dick Rodenhiser, Ft. Benning, Ga.; 2nd Lt. Eugene Campbell, Ft. Eustis, Va.; 2nd Lt. Kenneth Purpur, USAREUR; and Pvt. William Cleary, Jr., Ft. Knox, Ky.

Air Force—2nd Lt. Willard Ikola, McClellan AFB, Calif.; Marine Corps—2nd Lt. John Matchefts, Marine Barracks, Boston.

Dropped from the roster were: Army—Pvt. Douglas Manchester, Ft. Dix, N. J.; Navy—Ens. G. H. B. Gould, SubGroupOne, Boston, Mass.; Air Force—2nd Lt. John Titus, Malden AB, Mo.

Track Stars Wanted For Post Squad

With spring just around the corner the Presidio Sports Office has issued a call for track and field men. Talented fellows should contact the Sports Office in Building 122 or call ext. 3968. A number of dual meets are being arranged at the present along with entries in the Fresno, Modesto, Compton and Coliseum relays.

Coaching the Red Raider cinder squad will be Sports Director Hal Fischer, 2nd Lt. Lowell Zellers and Pfc. Lee Schroeder. The team will work out daily on the San Francisco State College track.

Brightest prospect at the present is miler Lowell Zellers, A Company, 505th MP's, from the University of Indiana. Among Zellers' many records are third in the 1954 NCAA mile, second in 1954 Big Ten competition with a time of 4:11.4. He finished second to Fred Dwyer in the U.S. National Championships being clocked in the identical time of 4:09.5. Zellers' best recorded times are 1:53 for the half mile, 4:09.5 in the mile, 9:21 in the two mile and 14.51 for the 5000 meters.

Lee Schroeder of the 505th MP's competed for Fort Lewis last season after graduating from the University of Nevada. In last year's Sixth Army track meet, Lee placed second in the broad jump and fourth in the 100 yard dash.

Back from last season's Presidio cinder squad is Pfc. John Byrnes, who took a third in the All-Sixth Army mile behind Fort MacArthur's Fred Dwyer.

inducted

Steve Korcheck, young Washington catcher, was inducted into the Army at Fort Jackson, S. C., 9 December. The 23-year-old backstop gained All-Southern Association recognition while with Chattanooga last season and batted .278 in 13 games with the Senators at the end of the campaign.

Keg Action

Keystone Kops Maintain Lead In Pacific League

Although the league leading Keystone Kops match with the D Btry, 752d AAA was postponed this week the Kops maintained their eight game lead in the Pacific Bowling League. Pawenski is still pacing the league leaders with his season-all high of 221.

The fourth place 102d MRU pin splitters led by Dennis's 184/473 score shut out the G-2 keggers, 4 to 0. Walsh was high man for the losers with his 172/474 mark.

The only other match in the Pacific loop this week saw the All-Stars drub the Post Dispensary 3 to 1. Luckman's 190/513 score paced the Stars while Fischer was tops for the medics with a 177/521 mark.

In the Wac Bowling league team No. 3 enjoys a narrow two-game lead over the second place No. 1 squad and three games ahead of the third place No. 5 team.

Engels is top kegler for the league leaders with her 162 average and a high game score of 196. Other members of the squad with their averages are King, 138; Fergus, 107; High, 100; Fernando, 70, and Van Houten, 147.

Besides leading the league the No. 3 club boasts the top score for high team series with 2,617, and holds the high team game mark with 896, so far in league competition.

For individual high series, Engel's team No. 3, leads the way with a 531 score, closely followed by Wark, team No. 5, with 526. For individual high game Wark, with a fine 201, is out in front with Engels in the second spot with a 196 game. Third place is held down by Ossenkop, of team No. 2, with a 171 high mark.

The Wac bowling league consists of five teams with a grand total of over 35 bowlers in official competition.

wac standing

Last Friday night the Presidio WACs traveled to Mather Air Force Base to suffer their first set back in the Bay Area Armed Forces Women's basketball league. The 49-39 loss put the local lassies in third place in league standing. Coach Julian Kite's five should improve this standing as they played the Mather tilt without three of their first players. Following are the latest standings in the cage league.

Team	Won	Lost
Mather AFB	4	0
Hamilton AFB	3	0
Presidio	3	1
Ft. Mason	2	1
Parks AFB	3	3
Letterman AH	0	4
Oakland AT	0	5

army wins

Kadena AB, Okinawa. The Okinawa Army All-Stars defeated the Air Force All-Stars here recently, 14-2 before a capacity crowd of 5,500.

A 65-yard touchdown run by Bruce Gallop and a three-yard plunge by Earl Sutton accounted for the Army scores. The victory gave the Army the right to meet the Marine All-Stars in the Typhoon Bowl.

Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson was grand marshal of the 67th annual Tournament of Roses Parade.

Presidio Places 2nd In Tourney

Despite an opening round loss to the San Jose YMCA the Presidio Volleyball squad battled back through the losers bracket to capture second place in the Stonestown "Y" invitational tourney. The local team finished second to the Stockton "Y" club who have been National champions for the past two years.

Fourteen teams were entered in the day long struggle including squads from the local YMCAs, Berkeley, San Jose, University of California, Hamilton Air Base and the Oakland Air Station.

flash

With volleyball starting at an earlier date this year all Companies, and teams on the Presidio and its sub-branches, are advised to start practice at once. Entries and information may be secured at the Presidio Sports Office, Building 122, or Ext. 3968.

The Presidio team led by player-coach Major Bob Jones captured the All-Army championship late last year for the first All-Army title ever won by a local sports team. Besides winning numerous trophies the winning team members were presented with sterling silver belt buckles by the Presidio.

The 1956 team will compete in the central division of the Sixth Army tournament at Fort Ord, 17-20 April. If the local club can win the central playoffs they will go to the Sixth Army tourney at Fort Lewis, Washington, 30 April through 4 May. The winner will play in the United States Nationals, 9-12 May at Seattle, Washington.

Post personnel interested in playing on the Presidio team are urged to contact Major Bob Jones at Ext. 4223. More players are needed as several valuable members are gone from last season's All-Army champions.

For Tomorrow's Peggy Anns!

Warrant Officer's Daughter Proof Of 'March of Dimes' Vital Necessity

SFC Debra O'Hanlon
Star-Presidian Staff Writer

You may have seen Peggy Ann at the Presidio! She wears her dark hair in a slicked-back pony tail. She is brown-eyed, with finely-cut features, and when she smiles, her face is startlingly radiant.

Peggy Ann is 15; an age when most girls begin dating and dancing and dining out.

But this teen-ager is not so privileged.

Polio stole upon Peggy Ann when she was seven years old, and she has worn the same pair of orthopedic boots ever since.

Peggy Ann will tell you with awesome fortitude that she can never walk again.

The daughter of CWO Harold W. and Mrs. Webber, Quarters 9-A, Peggy Ann spends most of her daily life in a wheel chair. Her knees and hips are now so contracted from the initial ravages of polio that she is completely crippled in both legs, partially so in her left arm. Her right arm is gradually returning to normal motion.

The Polio Foundation took care of Peggy Ann's medical expenses when she was first stricken. Meanwhile, she has received expert attention at Army hospitals in Fort Riley, Kansas, Tokyo U.S. Army Hospital, Japan, where she underwent five surgical operations, and more recently at Letterman Army Hospital in the Presidio. She has had seven operations in all.

During the national polio epidemic in 1948-49, the March of Dimes fund was diminished to the extent that foundation could extend aid only to patients showing signs of eventual recovery. Peggy Ann's condition was not promising, so she was discharged from St. Margaret's Hospital, Kansas, later from the University of Kansas Medical Center.

From Bell Memorial Hospital in Kansas, the girl was returned to Army medical supervision. Her father was assigned to duty in the Far East and the National Polio Foundation in Warm Springs, Georgia, was already overcrowded, so Peggy Ann was taken to Japan with her family. It was at Tokyo Army Hospital that she had further surgery, including spinal fusion and corrective operations for her arms.

She attended school in Tokyo and she speaks gratefully of how a whole class in the U.S. Army school building was transferred from the second to the first floor so that Peggy Ann wouldn't have to worry about the stairway.

The greatest emotional problem the stricken girl had to overcome was through the unconscious cruelty of children. "They used to stop and stare at me," she says, "and point at me as if I were a freak. There was no point in my crying about it," she adds bravely, "so I made it easier for all of us by calling them to me and telling them about polio."

After the Polio Foundation was forced to stop its contributions to Peggy Ann's medical expenses, the Army Emergency Relief stepped in to fill the breach. To the average citizen, these two units may be just titles, but to Peggy Ann Webber and her parents, they have become living heroes of great stature and compassion.

Mature and poised beyond her years, the crippled girl tells you sincerely that were she to win

The Crippler Polio struck pretty Peggy Ann Webber some seven years ago. Since then the 15-year-old daughter of CWO and Mrs. Harold W. Webber has spent most of her young life in and out of hospitals. Without the help of funds from the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis and the AER, the Webbers would have been face to face with an impossible financial obstacle. Though Peggy has been confined to a wheelchair since the first stages of her affliction, she remains a cheerful and happy child. Our Peggy missed out on some of the great strides made recently by medical research, but today's and tomorrow's Peggys will benefit from your contribution to the March of Dimes. Not only will your gift further the case of future research but it will also help maintain adequate medical assistance to the thousands of cases that the National Foundation must continue to care for in the future.

a $64,000 Question she would share it between Army Emergency Relief and the March of Dimes Funds.

"For the past seven years," she declares, "they have been the big-dest big brothers to me!"

The special ramp outside the Webber quarters was built by the Post Engineer Section in deference to the need for the polio victim to have a level runway for her wheel chair trips to chapel and to the out-patient clinic at Letterman. She cannot attend school, so the California school system for the handicapped now sends a teacher to the Webber home once weekly to tutor Peggy Ann. She paints and reads extensively and struggles hard to make herself a miracle whereby her doctors' verdicts will be confounded.

"They thought I could never reach down and touch the floor," she exults, "but see how well I can do it now."

The Webbers have two other children, 3-months-old Michael

Game Of Confidence

'The Rackets' Slated As Topic Of Next Information Session

"Where you from, buddy?" said the cool-looking cat in the gray plaid suit.

"Detroit," replied the young EM, turning to the man on the barstool at his right.

"No kidding," the civilian answered, surprised. He offered the soldier a cigarette. They both lit up.

"Ever been to the Brass Rail across from Grand Circus Park?" the stranger asked amiably.

"Sure," the soldier said, glad to meet someone who knew home.

From that point, the conversation could have slipped into a discussion of what the Detroit soldier liked in the way of entertainment, or his love-life, or an introduction to a "nice" girl.

But it didn't. The young EM knew a con man when he met one.

"Rackets," the topic of next week's troop information session, will cover both the out and out con games, conducted by professional criminals, as well as the so-called "business" enterprises which skirt and slide beyond the limits of the law.

The topic will describe the activities and techniques of the "paddy hustler" and the "B-Girl," the pickpocket and the overly enterprising cab driver. But the "rackets" are not restricted to the "denizens of city night life," according to the information outline.

They also include the questionable practices of some commercial enterprises which are dedicated to separating the soldier from his bankroll. Despite the great number of legitimate business organizations, many correspondence schools, loan agencies, charity drives and life insurance firms have a primary mission in mulcting the serviceman.

It is probably the con man, however, who is the cleverest of those who prey on the man in uniform. Gaining the unschooled soldier's confidence, he sets him up for the kill. The topic will describe such devices as the "pigeon dropping routine," "locker racket," a number of "get-rich-quick" schemes and other confidence games.

Purpose of the topic is to clue the soldier in—so that he can recognize the racketeer in whatever form he meets him. Once informed, the soldier can confidently protect himself and others from being victimized by the rackets.

army commander

American soldiers are always prepared to campaign against any enemy which attacks the spirit or body of their countrymen. Consequently, American soldiers have always supported wholeheartedly the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis in its fight to the finish against the disease which cripples and sometimes kills.

Last year a magnificent and decisive victory was won in the long campaign against infantile paralysis when an effective vaccine was successfully introduced. There remain, however, more campaigns, new objectives. We need to perfect better techniques of diagnosis and to extend our research. Nor can we ever forget our unfortunate fellow citizens who were attacked by this terrible disease before the advent of the new vaccine. Their continued care must be insured.

The great war against infantile paralysis will not be won until the disease is completely eliminated as a threat to our nation's health. As in past years, we members of the Army shall be ready to provide that support requested of us to carry on the fight. I urge all of you to respond generously to this most worthy cause.

Review Board Decision Holds Collaborator's Sentence Was Just

Washington (AFPS)—The conviction of M/Sgt. William H. Olson of collaborating with the Communists while a POW in Korea has been upheld by an Army board of review.

Olson, accused of making speeches in praise of Red treatment of prisoners and writing pro-Communist articles for POW publications, was sentenced to imprisonment at hard labor for two years and a dishonorable discharge.

He may appeal to the Court of Military Appeals.

Four Officers Retire

Ceremonies Honor 100 Years Service In Mid-Week Parade

A formal military retreat and retirement ceremony at the Presidio last week brought to an end the military careers of four officers whose combined Army service totaled nearly 100 years.

The four officers were Colonel Halbert Fillinger, 3727 Creston Dr., Indianapolis, Ind.; Colonel Norman H. Adams, Guadalupe St., Carmel, Calif.; Lieutenant Colonel Stewart L. Carse, 2844 Chatsworth Blvd., San Diego, Calif.; and Chief Warrant Officer Albert F. Melville, 755 Pine Lane, Terra Linda, San Rafael, Calif.

Participating in the ceremony on the Presidio's Main Parade Ground were over 600 soldiers, including six companies of Presidio troops and the Sixth Army Band. Brigadier General Louis J. Rumagosi, Sixth Army Chief of Staff, served as reviewing officer, and Lieutenant Colonel Richard M. Davis, Sixth Army Headquarters, commanded the troops.

Colonel Fillinger served as Assistant Sixth Army Engineer at the Presidio since 1952, when he returned from Heidelberg, Germany. There he had been Chief of Repairs and Utilities at European Command Headquarters from 1948.

A veteran of 32 years of military service, Colonel Fillinger entered the Army Reserve in 1923, when he was commissioned a second lieutenant after completing a Reserve Officers Training Corps course at Purdue University, where he earned a Bachelor of Science degree the same year. In 1927 he won a Civil Engineering degree from Purdue and in 1944 a Bachelor's degree from the University of California. (Continued on page 2)

corps shortages

Washington (AFPS)—The Army has encouraged officers in certain grades to apply for transfer to the armor, artillery and signal corps branches, in which shortages exist.

Circular 614-2 lists those needed as first lieutenants not over 28 years of age, captains not over 31 and majors not over 33 for armor and artillery and lieutenant colonels not over 39 for armor.

Sought for the signal corps are colonels and lieutenant colonels qualified by experience or academic training in 11 scientific fields, ranging from mathematics to electrical engineering.

Army Secretary Says:

American Troops In Korea 'Razor Sharp' Can Meet Any Major Truce Violation

Washington (AFPS)—The Communists have violated the armistice terms by bringing more men and weapons into Korea, but American troops there are "razor sharp" and "ready to slug if anything happens," Army Secretary Wilber M. Brucker recently told a Pentagon news conference.

Reporting on his recent 26-day trip to Alaska, the Pacific and the Far East, Mr. Brucker said he found U. S. Forces in those areas combat-ready and high in morale. He paid tribute to the fighting ability of the Republic of Korea army, but said he believed the U. S. should maintain its troops in Korea as the "stiffener" in the situation.

Letterman Whole Blood Supply Replenished By Local Donors

Nearly 60 men from the 505th MP Battalion and Headquarters Company, Sixth Army made a mass blood donation this week in a stopgap emergency effort to rebuild dangerously overdrawn accounts at the Letterman Army Hospital blood bank.

Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, made the appeal for immediate voluntary contributions but he also stressed the need for a strengthened quota system which would provide a steady and permanent flow of whole blood to the LAH stock. He immediately ordered the post S-3 to prepare a sustained and workable program.

In 1953, Letterman blood bank officials explained, the Army eliminated its Blood Donor Centers, as developments in synthetic substitutes—blood plasma and albumen, serum, relieved whole blood needs. But such substitutes are used only as initial treatments and must be followed by injections of whole blood.

Whole blood can be stored for a limited period only—21 days in refrigeration at the most. Although in the past, Presidio units have responded willingly to blood appeals (particularly such outstanding donor groups as the 30th Engineers, Headquarters Company, Sixth Army, the 561st Engineer Company and others), a program calling for small but regular donation quotas is more workable, according to Letterman spokesmen.

"A proportionate regular contribution for Presidio personnel has been set at 150 pints monthly with an additional 50 on an on-call basis," Major Jack W. Peterson, ordinating efforts of all the Armed Forces in the West in time of civil disaster, early on the morning of December 22 requested the Navy, Air Force, Coast Guard, and his own Army units to assist in every way possible to alleviate suffering caused by the floods.

Sixth Army Headquarters went on a 24-hour operational schedule until the critical period was over and dispatched men, equipment and a huge quantity of supplies of all types to stricken communities. Army helicopters and DUKWs were instrumental in rescuing hundreds.

Equally effective assistance was provided by the Coast Guard, Air Force and Navy. "I formed a very high opinion of the ROK Army," he stated, and commented how the ROKs "imitated the Americans right down to even our faults."

The Secretary said the Japanese people were beginning to take an interest in raising their own ground defense forces. He said he told Japanese leaders that the U.S. did not propose to tarry in Japan and that it is hoped they will build their ground forces as rapidly as possible.

"We're not anxious to keep our troops there any longer than is necessary," he said. "But we see no change in the situation."

Mr. Brucker declared that Okinawa is "a big nerve center" of U.S. military might in the Pacific, the previous ninety days, and persons who have themselves received transfusions in the preceding six months.

Chief of Staff

Praises Sixth Army For Contribution To Flood Relief

General Maxwell D. Taylor, Army Chief of Staff, in a message to Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Sixth Army commander, this week warmly praised Sixth Army flood relief efforts in Northern California.

"I take pleasure and pride in commending you for the effective manner in which your headquarters mobilized men, equipment, and supplies to help meet the emergency caused by the recent floods in your area," said General Taylor. "The vigorous and enthusiastic manner in which disaster relief assistance was rendered by your command saved many lives and attests to the high state of readiness of your command. I want to express to all who participated my thanks for their outstanding efforts."

General Young, who has a Defense Department mission of coordinating efforts of all the Armed Forces in the West in time of civil disaster, early on the morning of December 22 requested the Navy, Air Force, Coast Guard, and his own Army units to assist in every way possible to alleviate suffering caused by the floods. Sixth Army Headquarters went on a 24-hour operational schedule until the critical period was over and dispatched men, equipment and a huge quantity of supplies of all types to stricken communities. Army helicopters and DUKWs were instrumental in rescuing hundreds.

Sixth Army Celebrates 13th Anniversary

Some 70 Army installations in eight Western states will mark the 13th anniversary Wednesday, 25 January, of the war-time founding of their parent organization—the Sixth Army.

Through its network of training camps and defense installations girding the continent's western perimeter, the Sixth Army today is engaged cooperatively with the other services in the primary peace-time mission of maintaining the defense readiness of the American West, Canada and Mexico.

Under the command of Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, the Sixth Army is also the training fulcrum for active Army, National Guard and Army Reserve units in its jurisdiction.

At its inception in 1943, at the request of General Douglas MacArthur, then Commander-in-Chief, Southwest Pacific, the Sixth Army's primary mission was to spearhead the Philippine invasion campaign, then move on for the attack on the Japanese home islands. That was "Operation Olympic," scheduled for 1 November 1945.

Constituted by the War Department

22 January 1943, the new Sixth Army was formed three days later from members of the Third Army staff at Fort Sam Houston, Texas. Its commander throughout the Pacific campaigns of World War II was General Walter Krueger, former commander of the Third Army.

Only ninety days after its formation, troops of the Sixth Army led by General Krueger were launched on an Island hopping Pacific campaign. They entered the war in action at Milne Bay, New Guinea.

Milne Bay was just the beginning of Sixth Army's push through the Pacific. There followed landings on Woodlark and Kiriwina Islands with action from 30 June to 4 August 1943. From that time on, the Sixth Army remained in almost continuous contact with the enemy, participating in 15 amphibious operations and 22 major assaults.

Sixth Army's principal operations included the capture of western New Britain, seizure of the Admiralty group, the battle of Gloucester, conquest of New Guinea and finally the bitterly fought Philippine invasions of Leyte, Mindoro and Luzon.

When General MacArthur declared the Philippines secure 28 June, 1945, the Sixth Army relinquished control of the islands to the Eighth Army and began to train for the knockout blow at Japan. Only weeks before the Sixth Army was fully ready for the invasion, the atomic bomb brought the war to a sudden conclusion.

Civil Service Week!

Nation Pays Tribute To Federal Employees On 73rd Birthday

Mayor George J. Christopher paid glowing tribute to the thousands of local Federal career employees on the 73rd anniversary, 16 January, of the National Civil Service Act by proclaiming this week as Civil Service Week in San Francisco.

Throughout the nation, government and military leadership added praise for the exemplary service being performed by more than two million Federal employees. At a civilian awards dinner in Washington, D.C., President Eisenhower, in a personal message read at the presentations, called civil service employees "the backbone of our government service."

"Without our able career civil servants, it would be almost impossible for politically appointed officers to conduct the necessarily complex government functions of today," the President said.

In an anniversary message (see page 2) Chairman Philip Young summed-up the broad accomplishments of the U.S. Civil Service Commission during the past few years.

At the Presidio and its subposts, where some 3600 civilians assist in carrying out a mission that plays a vital role in the National Defense Plan, Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, said, "Without the zealous assistance of this fine and dedicated group of (Continued on page 4)

West Germany!

Army to Install First Nike Units In West Europe

Washington (AFPS)—Nike antiaircraft guided missiles soon will be installed in West Germany for the first time, the Army has announced.

An undisclosed number of the supersonic Nikes will be set up in western Europe. They will be a "significant step in strengthening the over-all European air defense system," the Army said.

Army headquarters in Heidelberg, Germany, announced that a survey for possible Nike sites in western Europe is now under way.

Nike missiles are able to track down and destroy all types of enemy aircraft regardless of evasive action. In the U. S., Nikes are located near key industrial cities and strategic targets where the enemy might strike.

33,000 pfc's

Washington (AFPS) — The Army has authorized 51,875 enlisted promotions for January, the fourth highest monthly quota in the past 16 months.

For only the sixth time in two years, advancements to grade E-7 have been allocated. There will be 125 promotions to that grade during January.

Authorizations for the other grades are: E-6, 300; E-5, 1,450; E-4, 17,000; E-3, 33,000.

Muddy Business!

Heavy Rainfall Drenches Baker, Barry; Turn Rifle Range Into Swimming Pool

As if in retaliation for recent Presidio flood-fighting efforts, California waters assaulted the Post's home grounds this week, choosing Forts Baker and Barry as major targets.

Round the clock for two full days, members of Fort Baker's 561st Engineer Company, TC, took the initiative in defending themselves against swollen streams, road slides, overflowing culverts, spouting drain pipes and knee high mud.

A day's downpour had by early Saturday brought 1st Lt. Alvin McDowell, 561st CO, his officers and men out in an emergency force to protect their installations and others from engulfment.

Graders, cranes, dumptrucks and sandbags were moved up into a dozen danger areas where slides working down the oozing hillsides threatened roads throughout the base. For the engineers it was a full time battle throughout most of the week, keeping roads clear and safe between Sausalito and the posts. At three points near the MP gate to Fort Baker, slides threatened to block movement in and out of the fort. The connecting tunnel between Forts Baker and Barry showered motorists with water seeping through from the hillsides.

At Fort Barry, driver M/Sp. Melvin Alderman of the 561st descended Tuesday into nine feet of mucky water which made a swimming pool of the rifle range target pits. After three or four passes, he found the drain outlet plugged with bits of old targets and mud.

As the water from the pits swirled through the outlet, the pressure burst the pipe near the range house, sending the crew of engineers off on another emergency repair mission.

Over the weekend, SFC William U. Havens won a commendation from Colonel Arthur Roth of the 6th AAA Command. Waters from a bloated stream (Continued on page 8)

Target Pits at Fort Barry firing range, flooded by weekend rains, called for diver M/Sp. Melvin Alderman, 561st Engineer Company, TC, to unplug the drain outlet clogged by bits of old targets and mud. Specialist 1st Neil Erikson tended the air hose and cable during Alderman's several descents. With the pipe cleared, the water level subsided rapidly.

Three Day Alert

Sixth Army, Presidio Troops Meet New Flood Threats

Until Tuesday when Sixth Army's new three-day flood alert ended, troops in the Army Area remained poised to meet new flood threats brought by weekend downpours.

From Saturday evening to Tuesday morning, Sixth Army Headquarters staff sections operated on a 24-hour schedule, coordinating activities with other posts and shuttling supplies and help to threatened areas.

Monday morning some 400 engineer troops were back in harassed Yuba City, ready if needed. With the coming of clearing skies and lower temperatures in the mountains, however, the new crisis was pronounced passed by Tuesday morning. The area around Marysville, Yuba City and south to the confluence of the Feather and Bear Rivers was still considered potentially dangerous, however.

Sunday morning the Army's 136th Engineer Aviation Brigade at Beale Air Force Base was alerted and by noon had 300 men working on the levees near Marysville and Yuba City. The soldiers filled sandbags until late Sunday, when the river surrendered to the levees.

During the three-day crisis, pilot 1st Lt. Loial Haas of the 521st Aviation Company, 30th Engineer Group, flew fuel and food to a marooned family near Ukiah. On temporary duty with the District Engineers, Lt. Haas was dispatched to Ukiah where Red Cross and Civil Defense workers provided supplies and milk for a family of six adults and one infant.

With a Civil Defense worker, Lt. Haas flew to the ranch outside Ukiah which they found isolated between the forks of a stream. The bridges had been washed out. Lt. Haas had to make several passes before he could land his helicopter on the wooded hillside. He also flew one of the stranded ranchers across the river for stove parts, got caught in a snow storm and on his way back had to buy ten gallons of ethyl from a local gas station in order to reach Ukiah.

Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commander, alerted Headquarters Saturday until the crisis passed. The Sixth Army Command, its staff and troops, recently received high praise from civilian and military officials for aid rendered during the Christmas period floods.

news note

A list of about 75 Army schedules and lesson plans now on file for reference was announced this week by Post S-3. They will be available for use during normal duty hours, according to the announcement.

Additions will be published monthly, keeping the listings up to date.

750 Family Units!

Army to Lease Nearby Housing For Nike Sites

Washington (AFPS) — The Army's Antiaircraft Command has received authority to lease 750 family housing units in areas nearest Nike guided missile sites, the Defense Department has announced.

Four antiaircraft command regions in the U. S. will receive the housing. The 1st AA Regional Command has been allocated 194 units; the 2nd Command, 233; the 5th Command, 92; the 6th Command, 110.

The Army said the remaining 121 units would be allotted shortly.

Army engineers are negotiating for the leases in New York, Boston, Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Chicago, Detroit, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Lt. Gen. Stanley R. Mickelsen, CG of the Antiaircraft Command with headquarters at Colorado Springs, Colo., said the housing is an important first step in solving (Continued on page 3)

Post Legal Assistance Office Offers Soldier Best Possible Protection

Need help with the fine print at the bottom of the contract?

You might escape an annoying or even disastrous legal tangle by dropping in for a confidential consultation at the Post Legal Assistance office before signing on the dotted line.

If you've already signed, you may be in even greater need of their legal services.

Languishing in litigation, the soldier's worth to the Army and to himself is devalued as much as though his physical health were jeopardized.

Recognizing that a soldier's legal status is as important as his state of health, the Army in 1943 established the Legal Assistance Office, a service now offered at every post, station and camp in the United States and overseas.

Last year, the Presidio's Legal Assistance Office (Building 201) conducted nearly 7,500 interviews with soldiers troubled by problems in the law.

Problems in military law are handled by Major G. H. Kleikamp, Post Judge Advocate. A civilian attorney, Mr. Ralph P. Sheldon, specializes in cases involving the soldier and his relationships to the civilian community.

"If more men would come to us for a little preventive law," said Mr. Sheldon, "they might save themselves a great deal of embarrassment as well as serious difficulties."

The legal assistance counselor cited the recent case of a man who obtained a Mexican divorce which he thought was legal but which he did not check beforehand. He remarried in Nevada and later had four children by his second wife. When it was discovered that the divorce was invalid, he was open to charges of adultery, bigamy, violation of the Mann Act and defrauding the government by receiving Class Q allotment checks.

The Legal Assistance Office man-

The Early Taxpayer gets the return first, figured Pfc. Walter Cutler, 6002 Station Complement, who this week went to Legal Assistance Counselor Ralph P. Sheldon for filing advice. Income tax counseling is only one of the services offered by the Legal Assistance Office of the Post Judge Advocate (Building 201). Counselors will give legal aid to soldiers on matters ranging from torts and leases to wills and estates. The interviews are kept in strict confidence. This year the Legal Assistance Office will handle only the most complicated tax problems, however. A crew of 20 selected officers and men, trained by the Bureau of Internal Revenue, will assist Presidio personnel with less complex tax cases.

aged to extricate him from serious trouble but he did have to remarry his second wife, pay back the allotments and adopt all of his children.

Most common among the legal difficulties of soldiers are those involving leases and contracts. Too often military personnel have been baited by unethical business men and hooked into financially disastrous contracts.

Not infrequently, the soldier's understanding of a contract may be faulty. In some cases, Legal Assistance offices have managed to modify unfair contract obligations of servicemen. But often, consultation prior to signing the contract in the first place might have prevented the difficulties, Mr. Sheldon pointed out.

The Legal Assistance service covers a wide range of problems—leases, damage to property, real and personal; injuries, veterans' bonuses, execution of wills and estates, power of attorney, changes of name, guardianships, etc.

As 15 April approaches, one of the busiest seasons opens for the Post Legal Assistance Office with the income tax problem. This year, however, only the most complicated cases will be handled by the assistance counselors. The simpler forms will be processed by a selected group of officers and men, recently trained by the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

In some cases, the Legal Assistance Counselor's jobs goes rather beyond just the legal. Through the trust he inspires, he may often provide the opportunity for a distraught client to unburden in confidence a troubled mind.

Chairman Young Lauds Federal Progress

"On January 16, 1956, the 73d anniversary of the signing of the Civil Service Act, the Federal merit system established by that Act is stronger than it has been at any time in civil-service history.

The past year has brought far-reaching improvements in the administration of the merit system, the benefits of which will continue to be felt for years to come. Some of the most significant facts can be briefly stated.

A completely new appointment system for the competitive service has been established. Known as the career-conditional system, it has opened the way to full careers under the merit system for the first time in 5 years, and has re-established the importance of competitive examinations. With the aid of a greatly accelerated examining program, over 600,000 employees who held indefinite appointments in the competitive service have met the competitive standards for career or career-conditional status. In the future, career-conditional appointments will be made only through competitive examinations; few if any indefinite appointments will be made; and the permanent career service will be relatively undisturbed by the fluctuations in the size of the Government work force that are inevitable in a changing world.

Having built the framework for a true career service in the Federal Government, the Civil Service Commission was able to give attention to the need for real career recruiting. In order to assure a regular intake of highly qualified young men and women with the capacity to grow with the service and become the career leaders of the future, the Commission developed and put into effect the Federal Service Entrance Examination. The new examination replaces over 100 college-level entrance examinations, and provides in their place a single avenue of entrance into the Federal career service. Announced on October 18, 1955, after an intensive promotion campaign, the Federal Service Entrance Examination attracted over 30,000 applications for the first written test—the largest filing for any Federal college-level examination in more than ten years. The examination will remain open continuously; applications will be accepted at any time, and written tests will be given at convenient intervals throughout the year.

The new examination has broad appeal, offering opportunity to college graduates in all fields of study and also to people without college degrees who have qualifying experience. It will be used to fill not only a greater number, but a much wider variety of entrance-level positions, all of which can serve as a first step on the career ladder. The success of this program will insure for the Federal service the trained and experienced career executives and professional leaders we will need in order to meet the challenging problems of tomorrow.

The program will also contribute to another permanent improvement of striking proportions that took place during 1955, namely, the extension of the competitive service to a large block of overseas positions held by United States citizens. The positions were formerly excepted under Schedule A of the Civil Service Rules, on the assumption that it was impracticable to hold competitive examinations for them. The practical obstacles having been overcome, we are now on the way toward building, for the first time, a world-wide career system under which employees may be reassigned freely to and from overseas positions while retaining their standing in the career service.

About 10,000 excepted positions in Alaska were brought into the competitive service in August, and plans have been completed for bringing in an additional 20,000 positions in foreign countries and United States island possessions on April 1, 1956. Present incumbents of these positions will be eligible for conversion to career or career-conditional status if they can meet competitive standards, and future appointments to the positions will be made through the regular competitive examining processes.

Another development of the past year that has even greater significance for the long-range future than for the immediate present is the implementation of the Federal employees incentive awards program. From December 1954 to July 1955, employee participation in this program increased by 34 per cent over the previous year. Federal employees submitted 138,000 suggestions for the improvement of Government operations; 35,000 suggestions were adopted; 3,850 superior-performance awards were granted; cash awards to employees totaled $1,519,400; and the first-year benefits to the American taxpayers amounted to more than $40,700,000.

The possibilities of this program are almost unlimited. The Federal Government has never before had so effective a means of stimulating suggestions, ideas, inventions, and high levels of performance, and for giving suitable recognition and reward to outstanding employees. Even more impressive than the program's initial results are its implications for the future. Increasing participation will bring increased benefits as the program develops. And we have by no means felt the full impact of even those suggestions that have already been adopted, for many suggestions continue to yield benefits for many years.

An outstanding achievement of 1955 was the completion of one of the Civil Service Commission's major projects, of which the overseas personnel program is actually one facet. This project, which was undertaken in 1953, was the identification of the true career service by clarifying the relationship of the competitive and the excepted areas of Federal employment and establishing a clear line of demarcation between them. The first step in the over-all program was the establishment of Schedule C and the inclusion therein of the positions (most of which had been excepted under Schedule A) that should be excepted from competitive requirements because of their confidential or policy-determining nature. The final step, which was

High school diplomas, accredited by the San Francisco Unified School District, will be awarded to a graduating class of nine enlisted personnel, including one WAC, at ceremonies 26 January. The students earned their secondary certificates by completing the course of four on-post classes and the high school GED tests administered by the Presidio Army Education Center.

A new semester of on-post high school classes has already been scheduled to open 31 January. The courses will include American History, Math, English and General Science.

In the past six years, nearly 200 military persons have received diplomas through the Presidio Army Education Center, Building 117.

"In past months," the AF announcement said, "the aircraft has made numerous successful flights during which the reactor was operated.

"Among other things, the reactor is used to investigate problems of shielding against radiation, to study effects of radiation on aircraft, materials and systems and to develop nuclear airborne instrumentation," the AF said.

The Air Force added that it and Convair "have completely reviewed problems of hazard which might be involved in the test and have taken every precaution for public safety."

"The reactor is never operated during take-offs and landings," the statement continued. "It is operated only when the aircraft is flying over a pre-designated area where maximum public safety is attainable."

Local civilian officials have been informed of the public safety measures to be taken in the "unlikely event" of an accident. The AF assured the public that there is no danger of a nuclear explosion resulting from an accident to the aircraft.

parade today

Eight Presidio units will participate in a retreat ceremony and parade scheduled for 1600 hours today.

The march will be conducted by non-commissioned officers with the commander of troops and his staff selected from the 30th Engineer Group.

Today's retreat parade is one of a regular series to be held bi-weekly, according to a recent policy announcement by Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander.

Officers and civilian personnel not required at their duties during parade time have been urged to attend the ceremony as spectators.

New Housing

critical morale problems at Nike sites.

Because of lack of housing, personnel are often separated from their families or pay very high rents to obtain quarters near their stations.

The Army requires, wherever possible, that family housing be in the immediate vicinity of the guided missile site so that men can report to their duty stations within 10 minutes. Nike personnel are on a 24-hour alert seven days a week.

Gen. Mickelsen said that the housing will have "powerful potential as a morale builder," and should give a tremendous boost to the command's re-enlistment program.

The Army Tank Corps was created on Jan. 26, 1918.

Group Studies Burial Plans For WWII Unknown Soldier

Washington (AFPS)—The Army has set up a 17-man committee to decide finally if an unknown WWII serviceman will be buried in Arlington National Cemetery alongside the Unknown Soldier of WWI.

The committee is composed of representatives from each of the services, four leading veterans organizations and the Commission of Fine Arts.

Congress passed legislation in 1946 authorizing the burial. But plans to bring an "unknown American" back to the U.S. and inter him next to the Unknown Soldier on Memorial Day, 1951, were postponed when the Korea war broke out.

The committee is faced with a multitude of problems. One is the apparent apathy of the American people to the WWII unknown serviceman plan, so the committee has been asked to gauge as closely as possible public reaction to the burial, from all parts of the country.

The Army said that should the burial be cancelled, the Unknown Soldier of WWI might be designated as symbolic of all the unknown dead from wars in which the U.S. has participated.

But the Army, acting as executive agent for the other services, does not propose to cancel the burial. It only hopes the committee can resolve this and other problems.

One of the difficulties the committee will encounter is the selection of one unknown serviceman from the 8,700 unidentified dead from WWII.

The Army has proposed a number of suggestions on the actual burial, which included:

1. To have the interment in the base of the present monument.
2. To build a second memorial for the burial.
3. To enlarge the present memorial so that soldiers from several wars, including the Korean conflict, could be buried there.

It was pointed out that 900 unknown soldiers from the Korean war will be buried early this year at the National Memorial Cemetery in Honolulu.

If the first or third plans are adopted by the committee, the inscription on the monument might possibly be changed to "Here Rest in Honored Glory American Heroes Known But to God."

The inscription now reads, "Here Rests in Honored Glory An American Soldier Known But to God." Scholars consider this one of the most famous quotations in American history.

air chief

On a tour of aviation units in the Sixth Army Area, Major General Hamilton H. Howze, Chief of the Army Aviation Section, G-3, Department of the Army, is scheduled to make an inspection tour of Crissy Field today.

General Howze has also been slated for an 0830 hours briefing on Sixth Army activities and meeting with Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commanding General. General Howze arrived by plane at Crissy Field, 1600 hours, Thursday.

He is slated to leave for Fort Lewis, Washington at 1300 hours, today.

46th Ordnance Group Has 'Spruce Up,' 'Paint Up' Session

In line with the Army's Management and Improvement program initiated in the interests of morale and maintenance, volunteers from the Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 46th Ordnance Group tackled a house-keeping chore this week.

A group of the dual unit donned fatigues during off-duty time to paint the woodwork and re-arrange the group headquarters sections. The walls are now a restful shade of green and the ceilings sport a bright new coat of white paint.

Colonel Albert L. Hettrich, the group commander, said that the renovation of the headquarters and headquarters company sections was instrumental in the present high morale of his men as well as being a distinct improvement factor in working conditions there.

High Praise was accorded Sp.3 Jack L. Everhart, former Star Presidian staff writer who was honorably discharged this week, in a Letter of Commendation presented to him by Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander. The citation read in part, "Your initiative and constant devotion to duties as an Army journalist are in the highest tradition of exemplary military service. Your contribution has been a major factor in making the Star Presidian an exceptionally well regarded Army news media. My personal thanks can only be added to those of your fellow workers who are already aware of your contributions to performance of a job well done."

career employees, our daily tasks would become almost insurmountable."

"They bring continuity and stability to an organizational operation that has vastly increased the administrative and technical responsibility of the modern Army commander," the DPC said.

Throughout the eight western states, Sixth Army employs some 12,000 civilian workers to assist it in meeting a key defense mission.

In California some 230,000 Federal employees staff the numerous governmental agencies. In the Bay Area alone some 45,000 civilians are in government work. Only Washington, D.C., with a total of 229,000 Federal employees nearly approaches this state record.

In April of 1956, the coverage of the competitive civil service will be extended to approximately 20,000 jobs held by American citizens in foreign countries and island possessions—marking one of the major historic extensions of the system. Ten thousand jobs in Alaska were brought into the system in 1955.

The civil-service system in America was born of the martyrdom of a President. The assassination of James A. Garfield in 1881, by a disgruntled job-seeker, stirred the American people to act to end the spoils system, under which public jobs were awarded on the basis of politics rather than merit and fitness. On January 16, 1883, the present Civil Service Act—also known as the Pendleton Act—was signed into law by President Chester A. Arthur, laying the groundwork for a competitive civil service which today embraces a career work force of more than 2 million Federal employees.

At the beginning of our national history, merit and fitness for a job were the primary considerations of our first Presidents in making job appointments, but gradually these factors became subordinated to the question of party loyalty. By 1829, the full-scale spoils system had arrived, bringing to vogue the cry: "To the victor belong the spoils!"

Incoming administrations made mass removals of Government workers and awarded the jobs to supporters of the victorious party. The practice became a public scandal and a hindrance to effective operation of the public's business. President Lincoln, besieged by job-seekers, said: "I seem like a man so busy letting rooms at one end of his house that he has no time left to put out the fire that is blazing and destroying at the other end."

Passage of the Civil Service Act of 1883 was not the first attempt to set up machinery to regulate appointments. An act of 1871, in the administration of Ulysses S. Grant, set up such a body and granted $25,000 for its operations. When these funds ran out, Congress did not supplement them. The Commission did a good job, but Congress was indifferent, if not hostile, to its work. Lacking operating funds, the Grant Commission passed out of existence.

The three years trial of the merit system, although it seemed to end in failure, was valuable to those who advocated what became the Civil Service Act of 1883. The Grant Commission did accomplish enough to prove to the country that the merit system was both practical and beneficial. A number of civil-service reform associations were formed, and, in 1881, these associations combined as the National Civil Service Reform League. This organization of civic-minded citizens, now known as the National Civil Service League, is still actively working in support of the merit system.

James A. Garfield had been chosen as candidate for the Presidency because his public record won the support of the reform element. He attacked political influence in appointments and supported appropriations for Grant's Civil Service Commission.

Four months after his inauguration, Garfield was slain. He had been engaged in a patronage dispute, which attracted much attention and especially interested eccentric Charles A. Guiteau, who daily visited the White House to press his claim for a job.

On the morning of July 2, 1881, as President Garfield was waiting in a Washington railroad station for the train to take him to his college reunion, Guiteau slipped up behind the President and shot him twice through the back. The President lingered a painful three months before his death.

The tragedy aroused the American people, and impatience at the spoils system became indignation. Newspapers and periodicals were filled with stories and pictures on the subject.

It appeared that Congress underestimated the popular feeling, however, for it continued to do little about civil-service legislation. But the fall elections of 1882 showed beyond doubt that the people wanted the Civil Service Act. In a number of Congressional districts, the issue of civil-service reform decided the election. When Congress met, civil service received its attention from the first day of the session until passage of the Civil Service Act.

The Civil Service Act created the Civil Service Commission "to regulate and improve the civil service of the United States." It established the Federal merit system, providing for open, competitive examinations and the making of appointments to the civil service from among those graded highest in the examination.

Only 10 per cent of the jobs in the executive branch were filled competitively at the start. From its meager beginning, the competitive service has grown to embrace approximately 85 per cent of all jobs in the Federal Government and 91 per cent of those in the continental United States. Unless an executive-branch job is specifically excepted by law or by action of the Civil Service Commission, it is in the competitive service and subject to civil-service rules.

Today the Federal Government is the largest employer in America, with some 2,375,000 workers.

Federal employees staff more than 70 departments and agencies—ranging from the Commission of Fine Arts, with three paid employees, to the million-man Department of Defense civilian staff. They are stationed throughout the United States, in its Territories and possessions, and in most foreign countries.

Almost half of the workers of the executive branch are employed in direct support of our Nation's air, ground, and sea forces as civilian employees of the Defense Department. One in five of the executive-branch employees is responsible for delivery of our mail. Another 8 per cent serve veterans and their dependents. The remaining 21 per cent handle all of the many other services performed by scores of Government departments and agencies.

In one way or another, the work of Federal employees touches every American every day. Government workers print and mint our money, control narcotics, regulate immigration, collect taxes and duties. They help to conserve and revitalize land that is unproductive, bring electricity into rural homes, enforce Federal laws, and administer social security. They operate the atomic energy program, forecast the weather, and protect national parks and forests. They conduct research in physics, chemistry, electronics, meteorology, geology, metallurgy, and other scientific fields, which has far-reaching effects on the health, welfare, economy, and security of the Nation. They control the Nation's airways, standardize weights and measures, handle relations with other countries, develop flood control measures, and perform hundreds of other services required by the American people.

Seventy-three years after enactment, the Civil Service Act remains the keystone of today's modern, comprehensive Federal career service. The many facets of the Government's highly developed personnel management system include recruitment and placement, promotion programs, position classification and pay administration, employee development, performance evaluation, employee relations and services programs, and employee recognition and incentives. Employee benefits include a model retirement system, low-cost group life insurance, sick and annual leave, unemployment compensation, premium pay provisions, and uniform allowances.

Present Civil Service Commissioners are: Philip Young, Chairman, George M. Moore, and Frederick J. Lawton.

Read Tax Laws Carefully, All Income Not Taxable

(This is the third in a series of eight articles on federal income tax filing for the year 1955. The articles are based on information furnished to AFPS by the American Institute of Accountants, the national organization of certified public accountants, and tax information available from the Navy's Bureau of Supplies and Accounts.)

You may think that listing your income is the easiest part of tax filing. Actually, according to the Internal Revenue Service, this is where taxpayers make the greatest errors.

Not all the money that may have come to you during 1955 needs to be reported on your tax form.

For example, you may have received "dividends" on an insurance policy. Don't list them as dividends, because they are considered merely a refund of part of the premium you paid.

Do not report inheritances and bequests. The estate may be taxed but not the recipient.

The official tax instructions contain a list of the types of income which should or should not be included in your tax return. It is important to check this carefully.

There is an interesting rule on prizes—they are only taxable if you worked for them. Even the slightest action on your part to earn the prize—such as appearing on a quiz program or writing a slogan—makes it taxable income. But prizes awarded for scientific, literary or other achievements without any action by you to bring about your selection would be regarded as gifts to you rather than taxable income.

Damages received for personal injuries are not considered taxable income, whether awarded by a court or settled out of court.

The interest on state and municipal bonds is also tax exempt.

Sick pay—there are several provisions for the deduction of pay received during hospitalization and sick periods. A special article on this will be written later.

Several types of income peculiar to service personnel do not have to be included in gross income. Among them are:

1. Pay (up to $200 monthly for commissioned officers, the full amount for other grades) received for service in the Korean "combat zone" between June 24, 1950 and Feb. 1, 1955. This also includes hospitalization outside the zone as a result of wounds, disease or injury that occurred in the zone.
2. Quarters and subsistence allowance.
3. Transportation of dependents and household effects at government expense.
4. Clothing allowance.
5. Muster-out pay.
6. State bonuses paid by some states to residents who have been in the armed services.
7. Amounts received under the GI Bills of 1944 (Public Law 346, 78th Congress) and 1952 (Public Law 550, 82d Congress).

The instructions that come with your tax forms give further information. Help is also available from the Internal Revenue Service, which urges you to consult a properly qualified advisor if you need outside assistance.

Who Is The girl in the leopard skin dress? Well, never mind. The real factor in our picture is the large scale state map with the individual March of Dimes containers. This was the happy medium that provided a backdrop for last week's March of Dimes-A-Dance at the Presidio Service Club. Over forty dollars was dropped in the state containers. Though Texas was given the large and predominate position on the map, little South Carolina led the donations. Map is scheduled (see story) to be displayed in other key centers for the duration of the local drive. The girl in the leopard skin dress? You tell us and we'll furnish you with a year's free subscription to the "Star Presidian."

annual appeal for financial contributions, the local medium was suggested by Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander.

The large-scale map of the continental United States carries a small collection box attached to each of the designated states, as a means of proving to the contributor that his particular state may be small in quantity yet larger in generosity—even than the wide area covered by Texas.

To prove this point, a reading of the map's possibilities after its recent introduction at a Presidio Service Club dance showed that South Carolina's contribution was exactly twice as large as that of Texas, the runner-up.

Both states now sport the first two stars of honor on the map for the generosity of their men and women serving at the Presidio.

Augmenting the polio fund drive here is a penny carnival being held at the Fort Scott Service Club on 26 February.

Other projects being launched here in the interests of the March of Dimes drive are the introduction of the Map of All States to the Post Exchange, the Commissary and the Officers' and Enlisted Men's clubs during the next two weeks.

Meanwhile, individual collection boxes are now posted at strategic places in buildings throughout the Presidio and adjoining areas.

It is anticipated by the Presidio polio fund drive committee that the regular pay day collections and group and individual projects will be instrumental in bringing the fund drive, sponsored by this military headquarters, to a highly laudable end.

Seventh Army

"Why We Are in Germany" Next Troop Information Topic

A decade after the victorious Allied military forces marched in to occupy the rubble of the Third Reich, the American Seventh Army remains bivouacked in Western Germany.

No longer an occupation Army, it now trains at combat-readiness on a year round basis against potential Communist aggression.

"Why We Are in Germany" in 1956 will be the subject of next week's Troop Information topic, according to the Post Troop Information and Education Section.

The topic outline points out that the 14 nations and the 380 million people who constitute the North Atlantic Treaty Organization are part of a transAtlantic community of ideals and interests in which the United States shares. Despite national diversities, there exists an overriding cultural unity to which America is further joined by political, historical, economic and military ties.

America's basic ideals and values in religion, education and government originated for the most part within the European acumen. In the past half century, the United States has shared with Europe the experience of two World Wars.

In the modern technological world, the United States finds it is not alone self-sufficient in the natural resources necessary to keep the pace of competition with the Communist bloc. The United States needs the confidence and cooperation of the free European world, as Europe needs American strength. Its ports among the finest in the world, rich in agricultural and industrial as well as human resources, Europe would be a priceless military prize to the Soviet Union.

In forming the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, the United States recognized its community of interests with Europe against the threat of Soviet expansion. Germany is now a major organ in the NATO body, the 14 members of which recognize an attack against one as an attack against all. NATO's purpose is to make her defensive strength an effective warning to potential aggression.

The Seventh Army in Germany, equipped with the newest weapons of war, is regarded as one of the finest combat-ready units in the world. Its presence in Germany serves to promote the confidence of America's NATO allies and provides a flexible support for American diplomacy. It is a deterrent against aggression and a weapon of defense in the event of war.

Speedsters

Track Stars Needed As Workouts Begin Here

With the rain stopping for a while this week the Presidio track and field squad have been busy working out in preparation for the coming cinder season. Speedy runners and stout weight men are still needed by the local team. Interested personnel should contact the Post Special Services Sports Office in Building 122 or by calling Ext. 3968.

The local speedsters have been working out under the direction of Sports Director Hal Fischer and 2nd Lt. Lowell Zellers of the 505th MPs, with outdoor workouts being held on the San Francisco State College track.

Lee Schroder, a former University of Nevada athlete, is one of the brightest stars turning out so far. In 1954, Lee was runner-up for high point man in the Far Western Intercollegiate Meet in the 100, 220 yard dash and the broad jump.

Last season, while performing for Fort Lewis, Schroder turned in times of 9.8 for the 100-yard dash, 21.7 in the 220 churn and 23 feet 4 inches in the broad jump. He is now stationed with the Honor Guard.

From Compton Junior College comes Purcell Daniels, who has signed up for the sprints, broad jump and low hurdles. His best recorded times are 9.8 in the 100, 21.9 in the 220, and 48.9 in the 440. In the 220 lows, Purcell boasts a 23.8 clocking and is another Honor Guard member.

Number one weight man thus far is Olen Wright from the University of California where he was a three year letterman in track, rugby, football and wrestling. Wright has signed up for the shot-put, discus, and javelin. Wright is currently stationed with the 21st Engineers.

The latest entries include Bob Nelson, a strong 440 prospect from Company B, 505th MPs, and Bobbie Carver, a sprinter and broad jumper from "D" Battery, of the 441st Missile Battalion.

A number of dual meets are being arranged by the locals along with entry in the Coliseum, Modesto, Compton and Fresno relays.

boxers

All boxers on the Presidio are urged to call the Post Special Services, Sports Office, immediately as the Bay Area Armed Forces Boxing Tournament will be held in March at Hamilton Air Force Base. Interested personnel should call Ext. 3968 for information.

Air Planting Of Pheasants Discontinued

Experimental stocking of pheasants by airplane drops was discontinued before the end of the season, the Department of Fish and Game announced.

Planting on cooperative areas was tried during the past season and several times previously with inconclusive results.

This method has no particular advantage over conventional methods, Department pheasant people pointed out, and in addition exposes the newly stocked birds to concentrated hunting pressure.

On the other hand, planting of chukar partridges by air has worked out satisfactorily because of the isolated areas in which stocking takes place.

Lofgran Tosses In 27 As Presidio Blasts Tars

By Pvt. Bob Malone
Star-Presidian Sports Editor

Paced by 6'6" center Don Lofgran's 27 points the Presidio Red Raiders drubbed the hapless Mare Island Sailors Wednesday night, 99-41, in a Northern California Armed Forces League game. The victory extended the Presidio win streak to 18 straight wins over the current season.

Red Raider Coach Hal Fischer used his entire bench in an effort to keep the scoring down, but to no avail. Ten Presidio hoopsters scored points as the fast breaking locals literally ran away with the contest.

Presidio players hitting for more than ten points during the clash were Bob Moran with 14, Bill Aires 11, Mike O'Neill 12, and Norm Ellenburger 10.

A look at the Northern California League standing shows that the powerful Red Raiders are out in front with a 6 and 0 mark. The second slot is in the hands of Beale Air Force Base with a 5 and 2 record.

In the Bay Area Armed Forces League the locals boast a neat 4 and 0 mark while Alameda Naval Air and Parks Air Force Base are tied for second with 3 and 2 records. Treasure Island holds down third position with a 2 and 0 mark in official play.

Looming next month is the All-Sixth Army basketball tourney which will be played in San Francisco with the Presidio as home team. The games will be played in the Kezar Pavilion with free admission for all.

The tournament is slated for 27 February to the 3rd of March. Leading competition will probably come from the Fort Ord Warriors and the Fort Lewis Chiefs. Last year the Fort Lewis club walked off with the title after edging the Presidio in the semi-finals and Ord in the finals.

Last night the local casaba squad journeyed to Treasure Island for a Bay Area League game. Results will appear in next week's Star-Presidian.

This afternoon in the Letterman Army Hospital gym the Presidio crew will play a game-type scrimmage against the strong Hamilton Air Force Base. Starting time is slated for 1400 hours.

Next Tuesday evening the San Francisco Marines invade the Presidio in an important league clash. Tip-off time will be 1800 hours and all Presidio fans are invited to the Letterman Gym to support your winning team.

Quantico To Hold Giant Relay Meet

Quantico, Va. (AFPS) — Quantico has announced it will hold a giant relay carnival 6-7 April, which tentatively has been entered by nearly 90 colleges—including many eastern and Big Ten track powers.

The two-day meet will also include individual events which will be open to all service and AAU athletes. The services are expected to enter their top Olympic candidates.

The announcement of the full-scale track and field program was made by Capt. Frank Copeland, public information officer, and Lt. Tom Rosandich, director of the relays, at a track writers' luncheon in New York. The meet manager will be Quantico's ace miler, 2nd Lt. Wes Santee.

intra-mural

With Army volleyball starting at an earlier date this year, all companies and units on the Presidio and its sub-posts are urged to begin practice at once. Entries and information may be secured in the Presidio Sports Office in Building 122 or by calling Ext. 3968. A new rule in effect this year states that an individual must belong to the unit that he plays for.

Post Team Wins In Volleyball

Continuing on where they left off last week the Presidio volleyball team, under the able tutorage of player-coach Major Bob Jones, swept six practice games from the Embarcadero YMCA Veterans Club on Tuesday night.

Post personnel interested in playing on the Presidio squad are urged to contact Major Jones at Ext. 4223. More players are needed if the Presidio is to repeat as All-Army champs.

The local court men, as defending Army champions, are working out weekly in preparation for the All-Sixth Army Volleyball Tournament. The central division of the tourney will be held at Fort Ord, 17-20 April. If the local club can win the central they will go on to the Sixth Army tourney at Fort Lewis, 30 April through 4 May.

The Sixth Army champion will be entered in the United States National Tournament that will be held in Seattle, Washington, 9-12 May.

Returning players from last season's champions are Major Jones, Jerry Steiner, Bob Noel, Dick Godino, Matt Schmutz, Harry Matthews, and Frank McDonnell.

Newcomers to the team are Jesus Gonzales, Catalino Ignacio, Phil Kilmer and Bob Barry.

The locals are also planning on entering two teams in the Berkeley open tournament which will be held on the 28th of this month in the east bay city.

LAH Fencer Cops 2nd In Title Tilt

Displaying excellent swordplay, Jose Tafuya of the combined Presidio-Letterman Army Hospital team, captured second place in the Northern California Intermediate Foil Championships held last Saturday evening at Stanford University.

The meet is considered important as the top three finishers qualify for the Pacific Coast Fencing Championships which will be held in Los Angeles in May of this year.

The foil event consisted of two preliminary strips and one final strip. Tafuya went through the preliminary strips without a loss and lost but one bout in the finals. This single loss put him in a tie for the top spot with Jack Baker of the Olympic Club who won the ensuing fence-off by a narrow margin. Third place went to Gordon Schule of the Halberstadt School of Fencing.

Frank Dama of the local squad missed making the finals by one touch, which is considered excellent considering the short time he has been fencing.

Other members of the soldier fencing team were Frank Beauvais, Doug Bostard, Carl Klien, Leo Thompson and Severo Pasol.

Tomorrow night the Senior Foil Championships will be held at the Halberstadt School of Fencing which is located at 3145 Fillmore Street, here in the city. The time will be 2000 hours.

The Presidio-Letterman Army Hospital team will enter Colonel Laurence Brownlee and Jose Tafuya in the events.

Coach Julian Kite's team is improving rapidly and should give both Air Force squads plenty of trouble.

From 20-24 February the Presidio WACs will host the Sixth Army Women's Basketball Tournament. The court at Letterman Army Hospital will be used and teams from throughout the Sixth Army will participate. Strongest competition at this point appears to be the Fort Ord squad.

New Army Memo Out On Sports

According to Army Circular 28-22 released this week, Army personnel can only participate in Interservice championship competition as members of an Army team.

The Department of the Army intends that all individuals within the Army be given an opportunity to participate and represent their parent units in sports events continuing through the major command and all-Army championships.

In cases where outstanding individuals are so located as to make it difficult to participate in the Army sports program, every effort will be made to provide the necessary on-duty or off-duty time and transportation as required for interservice competition.

Because of fund limitations and geographical locations, many units, especially AAA units, have limited opportunities to enter Army competition. However, commanders will encourage personnel to try out for major command teams.

In cases where outstanding individuals are so located as to make it difficult to participate in the Army sports program, every effort will be made to provide the necessary on-duty or off-duty time and transportation as required for interservice competition.

New Ideas Will Save CMD $5,000!

Nine members of Headquarters California Military District at the Presidio of San Francisco received certificates of completion for a Work Simplification Course held recently at district headquarters. The certificates were presented by Brigadier General Claude F. Burbach, District Chief.

In order to receive full credit for the course, each student was required to submit, have approved, and adopted a work simplification proposal. The course consisted of eight hours of classroom and laboratory work.

Tangible benefits from the proposals submitted by the group will total approximately $4,973 when full adoption of the proposals is approved. Intangible benefits such as savings in time, space, effort and paperwork will also result.

The CMD supervisors represented staff sections as follows: Mrs. Mary Kleinlein, Civilian Personnel; Major James E. Marks and Mr. Miles Grove, Personnel Management Division; Mrs. Mary P. Lake, Comptroller; Capt. W. A. Rutledge, Headquarters Commandant; Capt. Douglas Huff, G-3; M/Sgt. O. C. Miller, Senior Army Advisor Office; M/Sgt. Jack O. Silver and M/Sgt. E. B. Elliott, G-4.

Bullseye Dollars were presented the top carbine marksmen of Headquarters Company, Sixth Army, this week making it the second unit to make such presentations since the marksmanship cash awards program was established here last month. From left to right are M/Sgt. Alvin M. Doster, tied for 3rd place; Sgt. Robert N. Alexander, tied for 3rd and SP/3 Jack G. Monroe, 2nd place; and Maj. Bern E. Marsden, commanding officer. Monroe received $10 and the two third place winners shared $15 with three other men who have been transferred since the competition. First place winner, SP/2 Dwight J. Curry, Jr., has been mailed a $25 check at his new duty station.

Chairman Young

completed during 1955, was a re-examination of all positions remaining in Schedules A and B, with a view to determining whether continued exception was warranted in all cases. As a result of this review, many of the positions have been discontinued, revised, or returned to the competitive service.

Total Federal employment is now about 2,375,000. Eighty-five per cent of all Federal employees are in the competitive civil service. The remaining 15 per cent breaks down as follows: 5 per cent are in jobs excepted from the competitive service by statute; 1 per cent is made up of the 30,000 American citizens in Alaska and overseas jobs who have been or will be brought into the competitive service; 5 per cent consists of 107,000 foreign nationals in overseas jobs who are ineligible for competitive appointment; 1 per cent is the total of 8,000 attorneys and 17,000 substitute rural mail carriers; and the remaining 3 per cent, outside of 1,100 employees in Schedule C and about 8,000 in Schedule B, is composed mainly of employees in temporary, intermittent, seasonal, part-time, and consultant jobs.

Thus it can be seen that virtually all Federal positions that can be brought into the competitive service by executive action have been, or are being, brought in. This fact, coupled with the many far-reaching improvements in merit-system administration that I have outlined, gives us good reason to regard 1955 as a most significant year in civil-service history.

I consider 1954 outstanding for civil-service legislation; 1955 has been outstanding for administrative achievement. The Fringe Benefits Act and other legislation of 1954 opened the way for tremendous improvements to be made in the merit system, and in 1955 we have constructed and set in motion the administrative machinery to put those and other improvements into effect. In fulfilling the promise of 1954, we have created new and positive promise for the future."

Military Honor award was presented to the Presidio of San Francisco last week in appreciation for outstanding support during the 1955 United Crusade. In forwarding the award to Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, General Robert N. Young, commanding general of Sixth Army, said, "You and the members of your command are to be congratulated on the response given to this most worthy campaign. The donation of $30,340 toward the support of the health and welfare agencies of the Bay Area contributed immeasurably to the over-all success of the United Bay Area Crusade."

Trailer Allowances Provided Families With Mobile Homes

By the Career Incentive Act of 1955, a trailer allowance has been provided for service personnel who transport mobile dwellings to a permanent change of station.

Rate of payment is ten cents per mile for personnel transporting the trailer with his own vehicle. It jumps to 20 cents per mile where commercial vehicles have been hired.

The policy applies to service members in grades of E-5 or higher and to E-4s with four years or more.

16,000 draftees

Selective Service will draft 16,000 men during March, with 6,000 of the inductees slated for the Army and 10,000 to be assigned to the Navy.

The Marine Corps and Air Force do not intend to place calls with Selective Service in March.

The Department of Defense made the request, basing the figures on attainment of approved strength after allowances have been made for enlistments and reenlistments.

1945, landed at Wakayama on Honshu Island to carry out occupation duties. Headquarters was established at Kyoto and for four months carried out the early occupation under General MacArthur.

When Sixth Army was inactivated in Japan 28 January 1946, General Krueger with the members of his staff left for the United States. Less than two months later, the Sixth Army was reactivated at the Presidio of San Francisco, its new commanding general Joseph W. Stillwell, outstanding veteran commander of the China-Burma theater of the Pacific campaign.

General Stillwell passed away 12 October 1946 at Letterman Army Hospital but he was followed as commander by a line of brilliant successors.

Major General George P. Mays became acting commanding general on Stillwell's death. A veteran of both World Wars, he commanded the 34th Division's Artillery in the Normandy invasion.

With General May's retirement in April 1953, General Mark W. Clark, leader of the Italian campaign and later Commander-in-Chief of the Austrian Occupation, commanded the Sixth Army. He left in September 1949 to become finally Supreme Commander of Allied Forces in the Far East.

General Clark's successor was General Albert C. Wedemeyer, commander of U. S. forces in China from 1944-46 and former Chief of Staff for Chiang-Kai-Shek. He retired at ceremonies on the Presidio 31 July 1951.

The Sixth Army's fifth commanding general was Lt. Gen. Joseph M. Swing, a pioneer in the use of airborne troops and former Commanding General of the 11th Airborne Division. He planned the first airlift of an entire division in planes, a device which paid off in the invasion of Leyte and Balate Pass.

Not long returned from Turkey, where he commanded the Allied Land Forces, Southeastern Europe, Lt. Gen. Willard G. Wyman became Sixth Army Commanding General 1 March, 1954.

Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, presently commanding Sixth Army, came to the Presidio in July 1955 from his post as deputy chief of staff for G-1, Department of the Army. Long an Army trouble shooter, General Young is credited with a successful plan for streamlining Army personnel planning, while DA assistant and deputy assistant chief for personnel.

During World War II, General Young joined the Sixth Army Group in the North African theater in October 1944 and was named acting assistant commander of the Third Infantry Division in Europe. He became assistant commander in January 1945.

Today, as an up-to-the-minute component of the Continental Army Command, Sixth Army must meet the continuing challenge of the rapid technological change constantly taking place in the planning of modern tactics. She has! For from the gleaming corridors of her vast medical and research centers to the streamlined silhouette of the deadly Nike—Sixth Army stands poised and ready to add to her gallant heritage.

The Army's Commendation Ribbon with Metal pendant will also be presented to Captain Thomas P. Sechrest, 38 Wilshire Ave., Daly City, Calif., and to Master Sergeant James W. King, 1517-E Pershing Drive, Presidio of San Francisco.

Captain Sechrest, a member of the 30th Engineer Group (Topographic Survey), stationed at the Presidio of San Francisco, was cited for exceptionally meritorious conduct as operations and logistics officer, Task Force Alaska, from October, 1954 to September, 1955.

During this period he distinguished himself by planning and supervising the operational and logistic portion of the 1955 Alaska survey operation of the Task Force of the 30th Engineer Group, which accomplished the survey and mapping of 83,900

80 Years' Service

Three Will Retire At Retreat Parade This Afternoon

Three veteran soldiers, whose Army service totals more than 80 years, will be retired at formal ceremonies at the Presidio of San Francisco this afternoon at 1600 hours.

Lieutenant Colonel Grant J. Williams, 1528-A Pershing Dr., Presidio of San Francisco, whose 23-year career includes service in World Wars I and II and during the Korean hostilities; Major Joseph J. Kelly, 770 Bryant, The Bronx, N. Y., a soldier for 29 years and Sergeant First Class Andre L. Ray, 2228 Union Street, San Francisco, a 30-year veteran, will be retired.

Now serving as Assistant Staff Judge Advocate of the Sixth Army, Colonel Williams' first service was a tour of duty from 1913 to 1916 with the Idaho National Guard.

He re-entered the Army from the Reserve in 1942 and after service in the United States spent one year in France and Belgium as Assistant Staff Judge Advocate with the Chanor and Delta Base Sections. In 1946-47, he held the same post in the Berlin Military District and then returned to the United States for service as Staff Judge Advocate at Fort Knox, Ky., remaining there until 1951.

Secretary of the Army Wilbur M. Brucker announced the appointment of Don Belding, Chairman of the Board of the advertising firm of Foote, Cone and Belding, Inc., Los Angeles, as a Civilian Aide to the Secretary of the Army for Southern California, this week.

The position of Civilian Aide is an honorary one. His duties will consist of advising on matters pertaining to Army policies and activities in the Southern California area.

A native of Grants Pass, Ore., the Los Angeles advertising executive graduated with honors from the University of Oregon in 1919, following 18 months of Army service in World War I.

General Howze Visits Presidio; Says Army Seeks New Plane

Major General Hamilton H. Howze, director of aviation for the Army, is back at his Pentagon desk today, following a whirlwind inspection tour of Sixth Army and Presidio air installations.

He touched down briefly at Crissy Field landing strip late last week for a rapid inspection of its operation and a press conference in which he stressed the Army's need for a light, durable fixed-wing aircraft capable of manifold tasks.

In the press conference, the General, a Class of 1930 graduate of West Point, who is one of the Army's youngest two-star generals, declared he is seeking from manufacturers an airplane that can land in limited space and take off from a rough surface.

"What," he said, "we want to do is augment the combat efficiency of the Army. Basic purposes of Army aircraft will be for observation and direction of artillery and guided missile fire, as well as liaison and the photographing of enemy terrain."

General Howze expects the Army to receive a plane with a more efficient power plant, improved landing and flap-wing controls, probably a tilting wing and modified fuselage.

To date, though, he hasn't found exactly what he has in mind, but told reporters that his tour included visits to aircraft manufacturers.

Helicopters, the General said, may be part of the answer to the Army's aviation problem.

Army aviators from stations throughout the nation are currently taking advanced training in the huge Sikorsky H-34, newest member of the Army aviation family, at Fort Sill, Okla.

The H-34, 58 feet long and weighing 13,300 pounds when loaded with fuel and cargo, can carry 17 combat equipped troops plus a pilot and co-pilot. The H-19, its predecessor and measuring 42 feet in length, can carry only eight soldiers and has a gross weight of 8,000 pounds.

In addition to the H-34, the Army has an order for a number of H-37 helicopters, weighing 6,000 pounds.

Later the Army expects to purchase helicopter in the five-ton class and is testing a revolutionary "flying ouija board," manufactured by the Hiller firm.

The H-34, however, is the craft Army aviators are being trained on at Fort Sill.

aboard his L-26 Aero Commander is Major General Hamilton H. Howze, director of Army aviation, who made a brief visit to the Presidio late last week to inspect Crissy Field operations. The General held a press conference for San Francisco newsmen, stressing the need for a light, durable aircraft, after his inspection.

'Chutists Can Collect Previous Jump Pay If Reup Is Prompt

Washington (AFPS) — Army paratroopers now can receive incentive pay for jumps made at the close of a previous hitch if they re-enlist immediately following separation and are placed on airborne duty.

A recent revision in Army regulations permits airborne personnel to qualify for special pay for the last two months of their old hitch if they jump during the month following their re-enlistment.

Paratroopers must jump at least once every three months to be eligible for incentive pay.

The system of Civilian Aides to the Secretary of the Army was established in 1922 in order to provide liaison between the Secretary and the citizens of each state and Army area in the nation. In California there are two Aides; the one for Northern California is Mr. Eugene Bennett of San Francisco.

The selection of Civilian Aides is made without regard to political affiliation on the basis of interest in national defense and unselfish leadership in national, state, and local civic affairs. Mr. Belding succeeds Mr. Clarence Beesemeyer, also of Los Angeles, whose term recently expired.

Sec'y Wilson Gives Group Military Status

Washington (AFPS) — Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson has declared that he foresees no major changes in the nation's military policies and concepts during the coming fiscal year.

Addressing the Senate Armed Services Committee, Mr. Wilson said that defense planning for the 1957 fiscal year "is a further development" of past administration policies.

In his opening remarks he told the lawmakers that the "present defense program was designed to meet our security needs over a long period of time.

"Development of a sound, long-term security requires that we design our forces so as to assure a steadily increasing efficiency, in step with scientific advances but characterized by a stability which is not materially disturbed by every propaganda effort of unfriendly nations or wishful thinking on the part of ourselves or our allies."

Mr. Wilson emphasized that the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the military departments plan to make a "complete and careful evaluation" of the size, nature and composition of the armed forces that will be required during the next three years.

"This longer range study will provide us with a sound base for planning future procurement and other military programs which necessarily extend over a period of years," he concluded.

Army

Washington (AFPS) — Defense Secretary Wilson gave the Senate Armed Services Committee the following picture of the Army as of June 30, 1957—the end of fiscal year 1957:

• Nineteen divisions, 10 regiments and 143 anti-aircraft battalions;

• Some 100,000 men expected to enlist in the eight-year reserve program with 80,000 actually entering six-months active duty for

Estimated Strength Figures Show Slight Gain For '57

Washington (AFPS)—President Eisenhower has asked Congress for a manpower ceiling of 2,906,000 for the end of fiscal 1957 (June 30, 1957) although the plan is to have 2,839,458 men in uniform at that time.

The ceiling is somewhat higher than the Defense Department estimate of 2,900,000 men in uniform as of Dec. 31, 1955. Here are the DOD strength estimates.

	Dec. 31, 1955	June 30, 1956	June 30, 1957
Army	1,088,000	1,034,300	1,034,500
Navy	670,000	662,774	663,223
Marine Corps	200,000	201,000	205,735
Air Force	944,000	916,000	936,000
Totals	2,900,000	2,814,074	2,839,458 training during the year. Training of the other 20,000 would be deferred to a later date;

• An infantry division converted to the 101st Airborne Div. to give the service three airborne divisions. The new division would be engaged in special experiments with new organizations, tactics and weapons;

• An increased number of units armed with new weapons, such as the Honest John rocket batteries;

• Greater battlefield mobility with more helicopters in use;

• Fifty antiaircraft battalions of the National Guard maintained on a partial alert for the continental air defense system.

Navy, Marines

Washington (AFPS)—The Navy and the Marine Corps will look like this by the end of fiscal year 1957 (June 30, 1957) Defense Secretary Wilson told the Senate Armed Services Committee:

• In operation will be 1,005 active ships including 411 combat vessels. Presently there are 984 active ships including 403 warships;

• The number of carrier air groups would remain at 17 but there would be an increase in "certain other fleet combatant air units, particularly air early warning squadrons for the seaward extensions of the continental defense system";

• The Marine Corps would continue to maintain three divisions and three air wings in a high state of combat readiness. In cooperation with the Navy, the corps would continue to improve helicopter-borne landing forces;

• Two new Forrestal class carriers and additional "modernized" carriers would join the fleet and older type aircraft would be replaced with new high-performance jet aircraft;

Air Force

Washington (AFPS) — By the end of fiscal 1957 (June 30, 1957) the Air Force is expected to have 137 wings, Defense Secretary Wilson told the Senate Armed Services Committee. The AF picture:

• Planned build up from the present 127 wings will continue;

• All the services' combat wings, except those with B-36 heavy bombers, would be jet equipped;

• Several B-36 wings would be converted to B-52 jet bombers. Conversion is being speeded up. The present planned build-up of the Strategic Air Command forces will be completed by June 30, 1956. The medium bomber wings "are already fully equipped with B-47 jets;"

• The service would increase the number of air early warning squadrons for the continental defense system;

• Air defense squadrons would receive "substantial" numbers of supersonic aircraft. The number of interceptors equipped with Falcon air-to-air guided missiles would be "substantially" increased.

DOD Portion Set To Total $35.5 Billion

Washington (AFPS)—President Eisenhower has sent to Congress the administration's annual budget message in which expenditures to run the government during the 1957 fiscal year are estimated at $65,865,000,000.

Defense Department spending was placed at $35,547,000,000 for the year, an increase of nearly $1 billion over fiscal 1956.

The President said the defense allocation is geared to give the nation "the greatest military power in its peacetime history."

About $6.8 billion will be earmarked for the procurement of new aircraft for the Air Force and Navy. The message said there will be stepped-up production of the Air Force's B-52 jet bomber and F-101 and F-104 supersonic interceptors, and of the Navy's new F8U fighter.

Another $1.3 billion will be spent on guided missiles, the largest amount so far, and a one-third increase over fiscal 1956.

For the first time since fiscal 1951, the budget is balanced. This means that total federal revenue from taxes and other sources will be larger than the cost of operating the government.

During the period between June 30, 1956 and July 1, 1957, the government will receive about $400,000,000 more in revenue than the $65.8 billion which it intends to spend. This surplus will permit some reduction in the national debt.

In his message, the President requested $35,692,000,000 for the DOD, a figure slightly larger than the amount which will be spent in fiscal 1957. Of the total request, $785,000,000 is to be financed by the transfer of funds already available to the DOD.

This will leave a net of $34.9 billion to be appropriated to the DOD by Congress.

Of the $35.6 billion proposed for the DOD by the President, Congress was asked to approve $33.7 billion now. Approval of the remaining $1.9 billion will be requested soon.

Here is the breakdown of how the $33.7 billion will be divided among the armed forces:

• Army—$7.7 billion.
• Navy and Marine Corps—$10 billion.
• Air Force—$15.4 billion.

An additional $600,000,000 will be allocated for inter-service activities.

Of the further $1.9 billion to be requested, the DOD expects about $1.6 billion to be allotted for public works and the balance to support legislation bolstering the career incentive program.

The President said that the navy shipbuilding program for fiscal 1957 will call for the construction of a sixth Forrestal-class carrier, more nuclear powered submarines and the experimental atom-powered cruiser.

The manpower strength of the armed forces is expected to show a slight increase during fiscal 1957, according to the budget message.

Introducing the newly instituted work simplification training program, Maj. Gen. Riley F. Ennis, deputy commanding general, Sixth Army, recently addressed a group of 175 executive officers, section and division chiefs in a meeting at the Presidio Theater. The program, it is estimated, will train about 210 first-line supervisors in ten weeks.

Ten Classes!

DCG Opens New Course In Work Simplification

Over 210 first-line supervisors will receive instruction over the next two months in a new work simplification program, conducted by the Sixth Army Comptroller. Before a group of 175 executive officers and division chiefs, Major General Riley F. Ennis, deputy commanding general Sixth Army, recently opened the ten-class schedule.

During the two months from 16 January to 9 March, the six-hour course will be taught each week in three two-hour sessions.

Although the training is planned primarily for first-line supervisors, enrollment will not be limited. If section chiefs desire, they will be permitted to send other personnel, as well, to the training sessions.

Class appointments for eligible personnel may be made by section chiefs through Mr. Earl R. Reinke, Management Assistance Branch, Sixth Army Comptroller, Ext. 3845.

The classes are held in the Small House of the Presidio Service Club, Building 135, with morning classes beginning at 0830, afternoon session at 1330 hours.

On successful completion of the course, participating personnel will be awarded certificates of training.

17 Western States Offer Outstanding Job Opportunities

The U. S. Civil Service Commission has announced examinations for Engineering Aids, Draftsmen, and Construction Inspectors, grades GS-5, GS-6, and GS-7, for filling positions in the Bureau of Reclamation. Salaries for these positions are $3,670; $4,080 and $4,525 a year. Vacancies exist at Bureau offices and projects in the 17 western states.

Application Form 57 and Form 5001-ABC should be sent to the Executive Secretary, Central Board of U. S. Civil Service Examiners, Bureau of Reclamation, Denver Federal Center, Denver, Colorado. Further information and application forms may be obtained at the U. S. Post Office.

List Critical Civilian Job Openings

In the Sixth Army Area, a number of civilian positions regarded as critical have remained unfilled, according to a recent report by the United States Civil Service Commission.

An intensive recruiting campaign has been begun by civilian personnel offices, screening job applications and surplus personnel lists.

Ranging from GS-5 to GS-11, the positions include at the Presidio those of mechanical, general and electronic engineers; accounting clerk and illustrator. Camp Irwin needs a general engineer, two O&M examiners and an engineering draftsman.

Camp Hanford offers jobs for a supervisory accountant, an administrative assistant (commissary), a supervisory analytical statistician (comptroller office), a voucher examiner and a librarian.

Fort Lewis lists an opening for a mechanical engineer while at Fort MacArthur a vacancy calling for a civil engineer is considered critical.

Information concerning Presidio positions may be obtained by calling Ext. 2349 or 4233.

Refrigerated Bank on wheels from the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank stops twice a week at the Letterman Army Hospital to take new deposits for the LAH account. As Major Frank H. Smiley handed over this tray of eight pints to Irwin custodian and bank teller Vernon Scott, LAH credit with the city blood center rose to 84 pints. Two of the donations were made by Pfc. Howard E. Watkins and Sp-3 Dick Jones (right), both from Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 30th Engineer Group. For their pains, donors after giving blood, have a choice of fruit juice or bourbon as a restorative.

From 0 to 84 Plus!

Presidio Blood Donors Add Safe Margin To LAH Credit

Diagnosed as in critical condition only two weeks ago, the Letterman Army Hospital Blood Bank this week shows a rapidly rising progress chart. Suffering earlier this month from a sinking credit rating at the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank, the LAH Blood Center made an appeal for emergency donations to which Presidio units replied immediately with over 60 pints of blood. At the same time, Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, instituted through Post S-3 a new plan for supplying the LAH Bank with a permanent daily flow of whole blood, contributed at regular intervals by Presidio units.

Since the new plan went into operation, Letterman's credit at the Irwin Memorial Center has risen from 10 to 84 pints, even though local withdrawals continued this month at regular rates, according to Major Frank H. Smiley, LAH Blood Bank director.

Because whole blood has a limited storage life—only 21 days—supplies must be constantly replenished. In 1953, with the development of synthetic substitutes, like plasma and albumen serum, the Army eliminated its Blood Donor Centers. The Letterman Bank has therefore attempted to supply immediate local needs and at the same time maintain a credit account of 300 pints at the Irwin Memorial.

While ministering to local needs, the LAH Bank has managed in the past two weeks to build its credit to 84 pints. Average withdrawals from the Irwin stocks, according to Major Smiley, have averaged 60 to 100 pints per month.

Under the new plan, drawn up by Post S-3, each post unit is assigned a monthly quota which is broken down into fixed and on-call figures. This is further divided into weekly and daily schedules. Unit commanders are contacted, as fluctuating needs dictate, for on-call reserves.

Also participating in the Letterman Blood Bank system, Parks Air Force Base has pledged 200 pints every four months, according to Major Smiley.

Sixth Army Honors Engineer Pair For Outstanding Accomplishments

Two veteran civilian employees of the Army were honored this week by Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Sixth Army commander, for their outstanding accomplishments while serving with the Sixth Army Engineer Section.

Virgil J. Rush, 551 39th Street, Richmond, Calif., was presented with a Department of the Army commendation for meritorious civilian service and a check for $300.00, and Archer L. Goss, 930 Grape Avenue, Sunnyvale, Calif., received the Sixth Army Certificate of Achievement and a check for $200.00 from General Young.

Mr. Rush, chief of the administrative and management branch of the Engineer Section, was cited for his work in developing engineer plans for Sixth Army installation. An employee of the federal government for over 20 years, he has been at the Presidio of San Francisco for nearly ten years.

Mr. Goss was cited for his outstanding work as chief of the manpower and statistics branch and acting chief of the accounting branch of the management division of the Engineer Section, holding both positions simultaneously following loss of personnel due to a reduction in civilian employees. He has been employed at the Presidio for six years and has been in federal service more than 13 years.

DOD Asks Funds For Badly Needed Military Housing

Washington (AFPS)—The Defense Department has submitted to Congress a $2,012,383,000 military public works authorization bill, which includes the proposed construction of 3,740 family housing units in the U.S. and overseas.

The new housing would cost $80,590,000. An additional $300,000 would be spent on housing for certain personnel of the Joint Chiefs of Staff here.

The DOD asked for $29,533,000 to build 1,794 family units in the U. S., while $51,057,000 would be spent for 1,946 new homes overseas.

Of the new housing, the Air Force would get 3,144, the Navy, 396 and the Army 200 units.

Army (U. S.): Fort Lewis, Wash., 100. Army (Outside U. S.): Schofield Barracks, T. H., 100. An additional $75,000 will be spent for trailer sites at Camp Rucker, Ala.

Public Relations Man!

"The Soldier Among Civilians" Next Troop Information Topic

In a nation like the United States, often noted as one of the most "civilian minded" in the world, the soldier is something of a marked man.

Despite America's pride in the achievements of its Army, despite the nation's love of military trappings—the excitement of a parade and the sound of martial music, Americans have also tended to see the military from a somewhat negative viewpoint, regarding it perhaps as sort of necessary evil.

Unlike more militaristic nations, America has tended in the past to reduce its Army almost to the point of elimination the moment a war is ended. Americans have often been more concerned with bringing their boys back home and taking them out of uniform than with maintaining a strong Army, however necessary.

In part because of this tendency, the Army needs to maintain the best relations with the civilian community of which it is a part and which it is committed to defend.

And the individual soldier is the most powerful spokesman the Army has, according to next week's troop information topic, "The Soldier Among Civilians."

Purpose of the topic is to make the soldier aware of the responsible role he plays in the civilian community. Not only does his personal behavior determine his own relationship to the public but his actions also help to form the citizenry's attitude toward the Army.

In uniform, he is conspicuous, set apart as a soldier and an example of the United States Army. To the people observing him at any particular moment, he is the Army.

Public opinion can strongly affect both the individual and the Army as a whole. It may affect the soldier both at home, in the town in which he is stationed or in which he takes his leave.

Getting along with the civilian community is as important as having friends in the Army community. The public expects basic manners and courtesy, respect for local customs and traditions, interest in community activities. In return, it gives its good will and willing support.

The topic concludes, "You, the individual soldier, are a powerful spokesman for the Army."

Saga Of Courage!

Army Employee Credits 'Dimes Drive' For Remarkable Recovery

Completely paralyzed by polio at the age of five! Survivor of 28 major corrective orthopedic operations since that time. Orphaned with her eight brothers and sisters on the death of their parents in 1947-48; widowed during World War II when her husband was killed in action—and now a self-reliant and valued Civil Service employee assigned to the Sixth Army's G-2 Section in the Presidio of San Francisco.

Such in part is the star-crossed history of Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Ward whose courage and endurance are stronger even than the steel brace which holds her spine in place or the unyielding strip of metal encompassing her immobile right leg. She drives a car with dual gas pedal and a special hand brake in which she has visited during her regular vacations, 45 of the 48 United States. She drove to Canada last summer, and Mexico is on her travel agenda for the coming summer.

"I hope to catch up with Florida, Oregon and Washington before I quit," she tells you, "if I can ever take time out from my spare time cooking and oil painting which I love."

Now a very youthful 35 years old, Mrs. Ward's alert face shows no trace of the physical and mental agony she must have endured since childhood.

"Why should I let it bother me?" she asks wisely. "It would be ungrateful of me, in view of the courage and strength that faith gave me to rise above such widely-shared sorrow."

By the time Mrs. Ward was 21 years old she had undergone 26 operations and needed two more

Surviving 28 orthopedic operations to conquer the ravages of polio, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Ward was totally paralyzed after she was stricken at the age of 5 years. Her husband was killed in action during World War II, and now, at the age of 35, she has rehabilitated herself to the extent of becoming a valued Civil Service employee at Sixth Army Headquarters, G-2 Section, Presidio. Before entering the Federal service, Mrs. Ward served for eight years as County Recorder in her home town, Salina, Kansas. On the death of her parents during 1947-48, Mrs. Ward further distinguished herself by raising the three youngest of nine brothers and sisters orphaned at that time. She is shown above with Master Sergeant Eugene R. Moyer, a co-worker in her section.

for corrective surgery on her feet. During the initial operations, she was under the medical sponsorship of the Kansas Crippled Children's Commission in her home state. Because the age limit for such aid had been reached while the final two operations were still pending, she was not financially equipped to meet the cost of further surgery without community aid. It was here that the National Foundation for Polio adopted her as one more member of its stricken legion.

"Without the foundation's aid," she continues, "I wouldn't be standing on my own two feet today. I would probably have given up and become a continuing burden on my state's already overloaded hospitals."

After her parents' deaths, Mrs. Ward committed herself to the upbringing of her three youngest brothers while other family members took the older five.

"Losing my parents was fairly shattering for all of us," she recalls, "but it somehow served as an added challenge to me. The children's daily needs permitted me no time to be aware of my own handicap."

The woman who so valiantly conquered the scourge of polio is now on duty with the Sixth Army's Headquarters Clearance Division. She maintains an apartment with Patricia Cline, another former polio victim, now rehabilitated and employed.

Before coming to the Presidio, Mrs. Ward served as County Recorder in her home town of Salina, Kansas.

"If facilities for the care and treatment of polio cases were as advanced in 1927, as they now are," Mrs. Ward states, "I wouldn't even have to wear my back or leg braces, but I thank God and the Polio Foundation every minute. A contribution to the March of Dimes fund should be as much of a 'first' on any citizen's list, as his donation to the church collection every Sunday."

Nice Work, Boy! says Colonel Louis Gershenow, executive officer for Sixth Army's G-3 Section, to his son, Earl Gershenow, Explorer Scout, after the boy received his Eagle Scout award at the recent Scout Court of Honor held at the Presidio. Soldier Sourdoughs

Won Fortunes During Early Days of Great Gold Rush

By Pfc. William H. Cohn
Post T.I.&E. Division

This week marks the 108th anniversary of James W. Marshall's discovery of gold on the American River in the Sacramento Valley. Although the existence of gold was known before 24 January, 1848, it was Marshall's discovery that ignited the fire of the subsequent gold rush.

There are innumerable stories of soldiers who made in only a week's time a sum of money greater than the amount received in pay, clothes, and rations during the whole of a five-year enlistment. Those who took advantage of the liberal two to three-month furloughs quite often returned with $10,000 to $15,000 worth of gold.

What can be said of the soldiers in the period following the discovery of gold in 1848?

Colonel Richard B. Mason, the American military governor in California at the time of the discovery of gold, had the duty of protecting an area 600 miles long and 200 miles wide with a handful of troops, at one time numbering barely over 100 men. In addition to the almost impossible task of rounding up deserters, it was the job of the military governor to see that the miners in the gold fields were protected from Indian attacks and, when necessary, to protect the Indians from abuse by the miners.

The military governor was also responsible for all the functions of a civil administration such as the conducting of criminal trials, operation of ports, the collection of duties, and the prevention of smuggling. All these duties and many more were carried out by Colonel Mason and his successor, General Bennett Riley.

The protection and care of the thousands of persons who came overland to California during the gold rush became the major activity of the Army. In this field the military did their most outstanding work. Few of the emigrants were aware of the hardships that they would meet on the journey to California. Their supplies of food were always inadequate, because they underestimated the distances that had to be travelled. Add to this the lack of water, the epidemics, the cold winters, and the Indian attacks, and it is easy to imagine the suffering that took place.

Major D. H. Rucker of the Presidio of Monterey had charge of relief operations. Company C, First Dragoons, from the Presidio of San Francisco were among the troops that participated in relief work. A sum of $10,000 for supplies was allocated from a general fund, collected from custom duties, set up and maintained by the military governor to be used at his own discretion.

New Phonetic Alphabet In Official Usage By 1st March

You can say goodbye to Able, Baker and other standbys of the old phonetic alphabet after the 1st of March. Except for Charlie Mike, Victor and X-Ray, a new alphabet will be officially in vogue for all services.

Designed to eliminate words which might be misunderstood by foreign personnel working with the U.S., the new alphabet has been used by the Air Force and international airways overseas for the past several years.

So it's Tare-How-Item-Roger-Tare-Yoke for the old and Whiskey - Echo - Lima - Charlie - Oscar - Mike - Echo for the new.

Here's the new alphabet:

Alpha	Juliett	Sierra
Bravo	Kilo	Tango
Charlie	Lima	Uniform
Delta	Mike	Victor

Presidio Woman's Club Features New Creations At Spring Hat Show

A Spring hat show featuring advance models in Easter millinery was the theme presented by the ladies of G-1 Section, Sixth Army Headquarters, on the occasion of their hostessing the monthly luncheon at the Presidio Woman's Club this week.

The hat show displayed over 50 hats designed by Mr. Roger Hockett of the Marina Millinery shop. They were modeled by Mrs. Delmas White, Mrs. Robert Webster, Mrs. Carl Sabo, Mrs. James Reynolds, Mrs. Robert Rhine, Mrs. Thomas Seigler and Mrs. Laurence Brownlee.

Against a background of piano music by Mrs. George Tozier and a commentary by Mrs. John Beck, models introduced hats sporting unusually deep crowns, with added height achieved either by the hat itself or through its elongated trimming.

Mr. Hockett, the designer, studied at the American Academy of Art in Chicago and later worked in the New York shop of Lily Dache, the famous French milliner. His hat emporium on Chestnut Street is popular with fashion-conscious society women in San Francisco.

The Presidio Woman's Club luncheon and fashion show terminated with a bridge game.

Chairman Mrs. Lester B. Johnson had on her committee Mrs. John Beck, Mrs. Neil F. Cramer, Mrs. Robert E. Divine, Mrs. John Daujat, Mrs. Thomas Sibley and Mrs. Joachim J. Specials.

Hostesses were Mrs. Charles Allan, Mrs. Ernest Bierrs, Lt. Colonel Anna Sweeney, Major Hedwig Cadell, Major Elizabeth P. Hoisington, Mrs. Max McCarthy, Mrs. Charles Rogers, Mrs. Milton Schneider and Mrs. Donna Wells.

The next meeting of the woman's club, 2 February at 1400 hours, features a program tea. Speaker will be Katharine Hanrahan, research attorney for the Supreme Court of the State of California. Her discussion will include family-type legal problems.

Mrs. Hanrahan is presenting her lecture free of cost, and it is desired that as many club members as possible be present.

Post Choir Needs Voices

Officers, enlisted men and women, and Department of the Army civilians connected with the Presidio are urged to join the Post Choir rehearsals in preparation for the Lenten and Easter music programs.

The choir director, Pvt. Gary Hall, announced today that the famous cantata honoring "The Seven Last Words of Christ" will be presented on Good Friday night at the Post Chapel. Rehearsals for the special programs are slated to take place at the Post Chapel every Thursday evening at 1900 hours.

Because of the enthusiastic reception accorded the excerpts from The Messiah, sung by the chapel choir at Christmas, the chaplain has decided to arrange for the Resurrection theme from the same cantata to be offered at the chapel, possibly on Easter Sunday.

A post-Easter choir concert is also planned by Director Gary Hall, to include sacred, secular music, and spirituals.

Highlighting this program will be Johann Sebastian Bach's "Jesu Meine Freude."

Trained and potential singers are welcome to sign up for the rehearsals incidental with both programs.

PRESIDIO BRIEF—During the 1850's the Army, on the recommendation of a Navy Lieutenant, imported camels from Egypt to be used as pack animals in the Southwest. The experiment proved to be a failure and the camels were sold or turned loose. As late as 1890 wild camels were reportedly seen.

Thrift Shop Cash

Supports Local Youth Programs

Thrift is a tiresome word to many people but to the handful of volunteer workers at the Presidio Thrift Shop as well as to the Youth groups of the Presidio who benefit from its practices, Thrift is a very noble endeavor.

Located on Montgomery Street, Building T-92, the post Thrift Shop is a project of the Presidio Woman's Club. Under their administration it undertakes the sale of used and frequently new household furnishings including radios, vacuum cleaners, television sets, tricycles, typewriters, floor rugs and trunks.

Open from Mondays through Fridays, the Thrift Shop is a modern version of the Old Curiosity

Shop where at one time or another, one can secure any needed item from a thimble to a trumpet at a fraction of their original cost.

A clearing house for families placed on travel orders, incoming and outgoing, the little place on Montgomery Street is a mecca for wives and mothers who need a crib for junior; an extra high chair, or a pair of candlesticks for the dining room table.

Entire proceeds from the sale of all Thrift Shop items go to the maintenance of Post Youth projects, including the Girl Scouts and the Brownies, Boy Scouts and Cubs, the Teen Age Club, the Nursery and Nursery School, Vespers, and the Little League baseball teams, including the 1956 team just sponsored by the ### Thrift Shop group.

Following is an account of the funds acquired and administered by the Thrift Shop women through the sale of items during the past year.

Thrift Shop operations from 1 January to 31 December, 1955, brought in a total of $33,293.75 with a profit of $6,149.21.

Listed below are activities and the amounts contributed by the Thrift Shop:

Army personnel may apply now for consideration as candidates for the 1956 United States Olympic teams.

These teams are participating in the VII Winter Olympic Games being held 26 January to 5 February in Cortina, Italy, and the games of the XVI Olympiad from 22 November to 8 December, this year, at Melbourne, Australia.

According to DA Circular 28-19, recently published, those interested may apply by letter, through channels to The Adjutant General, Department of the Army, Washington 25, D. C.

Information required in the application and details on the Olympic trials are listed in this circular and AR 28-50.

Two Rock Tops Class 'B' League

A look at the Bay Area Armed Forces Class 'B' League shows the Two Rock Ranch Station currently holding down the top spot with a 6 and 0 record in league competition.

Letterman Army Hospital is in the second slot with a 5 and 1 mark, Oakland Army Terminal with a 4 and 2 record holds third and Fort Scott with a 2 and 5 mark is in fourth place.

Fifth and sixth places are in the hands of the Sacramento Signal Det., with a 2 and 5 record and Fort Mason with 0 and 6.

First place will probably be decided on 10 February when Letterman journeys to Petaluma for an important clash with the league leading Two Rock Ranch team. If Letterman wins this one a play-off tilt will probably be arranged between the two.

scouts win

The Fort Huachuca Scouts swept to four more victories in a recent road trip over the southern part of the state. The Scouts beat Yuma Test Station, 77-44 and 91-61; March Air Force Base, 102-92, and Arizona State Frosh, 81-61.

Del Coleman scored 97 points in the four games, including 29 in the second win over Yuma, to spark the victories. The four wins brought Huachuca's record to 9 wins and 4 losses.

From 14-17 February the southern division of the Sixth Army Basketball tournament will be held at the Yuma Test Station. The winner of this tourney will represent the southern division in the Sixth Army Cage Tournament which will be held here in San Francisco with the Presidio as host.

Don Lofgran Scores 52 As Presidio Wins Two

By Pvt. Bob Malone
Star-Presidian Sports Editor

Led by their great center Don Lofgran the Presidio Red Raiders raced to two more wins this past week to virtually clinch first place in the Northern California Armed Forces and the Bay Area Armed Forces Leagues. The twin wins extended the local win streak to 20 straight over the current season.

Tonight Coach Hal Fischer's soldier squad journeys to Parks Air Force Base for a must win. Parks holds down second place in both local leagues and is the only team capable of beating the Presidio for the loop flags. The Red Raiders edged the Parks "Blue Devils" 70-65 in an earlier meeting this year.

First to fall this week to the smooth shooting Presidio crew were the Treasure Island Pirates 107-73. Lofgran paced the local attack with 28 tallies followed by Mike O'Neill with 16. The fast breaking Raiders literally ran away with the contest as the Pirates never threatened.

On Tuesday evening the San Francisco Marines invaded the local gym and were blasted into defeat to the tune of 92-43. Lanky Lofgran again led the scoring parade with 24 points followed by Bob Harbertson with 15 and Chuck Lynch with 14. Reserves played most of the contest after the Presidio got off to a 19-0 lead early in the first frame.

A look at the leading scorers in the Bay Area Armed Forces league shows four Presidio players in the top nine positions. On top is Don Lofgran with 134 points in the first five games. Don tossed in 56 field goals and 22 free throws for his high point average.

In second place is last year's leading scorer, Mike O'Neill, with 78 tallies. Mike had 32 field goals and 14 free throws during the first five tilts.

In eighth place is Presidio forward Bill Davis with 51 points on 20 field goals and 11 free throws. Ninth spot on the list belongs to Bob Harbertson with 42 points including 17 field goals and eight free throws.

It was announced this week that free bus service from the Presidio to the Kezar Pavilion will be provided for the All-Sixth Army basketball tourney. The Presidio was named as host for this important sports event.

Posts in the northern half of the Sixth Army will compete in the northern playoffs to be held at Fort Lewis from 14-17 February.

Teams in the mountain division will tangle in Dugway, Utah, and clubs in the south will meet at the Yuma Test Station on the same date for the right to enter the cage finals.

All posts in the central division will be entered in the tourney with the local Presidio Red Raiders looming as early favorites.

The tournament will get under way at 1230 hours on 27 February with colorful opening ceremonies including music by the Sixth Army Band.

A new Army ruling in effect this season states that an individual must be assigned to the unit that he plays for.

In July, 1918, he was ordered to the Officers' Training School at Langres, France, and after being commissioned was assigned to the 39th Infantry Regiment, with which he participated in the Meuse-Argonne offensive.

In June, 1940, General Shepard was assigned to the War Department General Staff and served in Washington until he became Chief of Staff of the 7th Armored Division, with which unit he served at the Desert Training Center, California, and Fort Benning, Ga., until November, 1943, when he joined the 16th Armored Division.

Recent Ruling!

Per Diem, Travel Pay Must Be Included In Tax Return

Washington (AFPS) — Military personnel must include all per diem and travel allowances received for temporary duty assignments as gross income on their 1955 tax returns, a recent Internal Revenue Bureau ruling states.

The Army has issued a supplementary message informing commanders that, in view of the lateness of the tax ruling, the "best available figures" may be submitted on 1955 returns where there are no exact records of payment or disbursement.

Money spent on necessary expenses, which may include meals, lodging and travel is deductible under the ruling. Expenses for personal side-trips or delays cannot be deducted.

The change will mean more income tax to pay in some cases, less in others.

Example No. 1

If a man received $9.00 per diem allowance for a trip that was completed in one day, he might spend only one or two dollars on meals. The amount he could deduct for expenses would be less than the $9.00 he added to gross income—leaving more taxable income.

Example No. 2

A man making a longer trip might find that hotel bills and food expense added up to more than his allowance. He would add only the amount of the allowance to his gross income, but he could deduct all his expenses.

The result would be a lower taxable income than under the old system, where the allowance wasn't reported at all.

Tax officials suggested that servicemen keep some record of their expenses, in case deductions are questioned later.

Disbursing officers will not change W-2 forms, which list only regular pay. Gross income for filing purposes should be the amount on the W-2 forms plus per diem and travel allowances received.

The Army and Air Force have issued bulletins explaining the new procedure. The Navy covered the change in its annual pamphlet on federal income tax information.

General Taylor Resolves:

To Make Army Better Place To Serve

Washington (AFPS)—General Maxwell D. Taylor, Army chief of staff, has resolved "to do more for our good people that make up the Army" during 1956.

He listed this as one of four "New Year's resolutions" he had made to help the Army do a better job. The others were to push army modernization, to put increasing drive into the reserve forces and to increase the deterrent power of U.S. military might to avoid war.

Gen. Taylor told a Pentagon press conference that discussions of new arms, equipment and gadgets "run the risk of putting too much thought on things, and not enough on people."

Despite new developments, he declared, "the Army will never be any better than the 1,500,000 men and women in and out of uniform who compose its ranks."

He said the Army "needs better housing, improved living conditions for our families and more stability of assignment" and pledged that the service would do whatever it could along these lines itself and ask for legislation for the rest.

One thing he said now being worked on was greater stability make a real drive to see if we of tours of duty. "We want to can't stabilize people around the world," he said.

Gen. Taylor said concrete recommendations would emerge from the soon-to-be-complete analysis of Sagebrush. "Within the coming months," he asserted, "we shall make some basic decisions affecting the structure of the Army of the future."

The 101st Airborne Division to be activated in June at Ft. Campbell, Ky., will be organized on "an entirely new basis," he said, and its structure would be tested in the airborne field just as the organization of the 1st Armored and 3rd Infantry Division was tested.

Retirement Ceremony

Colonel Williams' next assignment, prior to reporting to the Presidio of San Francisco and his present duty in 1954, was as Assistant Staff Judge Advocate in Osaka and Otsu, Japan.

A native of Ireland, Major Kelly began his military service with the New York National Guard in 1926. Following early World War II service in the United States, he served in the Pacific from 1943 until 1945, when he returned for a three-year tour of duty at Camp Kilmer, N. J. He served in Hawaii with the Army Transportation Corps from 1948 until 1952 and was then assigned to the New Orleans, La., Port of Embarkation. Prior to reporting to the Presidio of San Francisco for duty with Post Headquarters he served from 1954 until 1955 in Otsu, Japan.

A native of Donnenarie, France, near Paris, Sergeant Ray enlisted in the 7th Infantry Regiment at Vancouver Barracks, Wash., in March, 1924. He served in Australia and New Guinea with the Army Air Corps from March, 1942, until October, 1943, then returned to the United States. In April, 1944, he went to England and served there and in France until November, 1946, as an interpreter with the Western Base Section.

Following duty at Fort Hood, Tex., he spent two years in Japan with the 1st Cavalry Division, returned to the United States for two years' duty at the Presidio of San Francisco, and then returned to Europe for duty with the Army Engineers in France from September, 1952, until August, 1955. While waiting for retirement he has been assigned to the 505th Military Police Battalion at the Presidio.

Texas Asks Poll Tax!

Servicemen Vote In State Primaries

Members of the Armed Forces from Texas who wish to vote in the 1956 elections by absentee ballot must pay a poll tax of $1.75 by 31 January.

Military voters may mail the fee to the Tax Assessor in the county of residence at the time of entering the service.

The remittance should be accompanied by a statement, signed under oath, containing sufficient information for the Tax Collector to fill out a poll tax receipt.

The following information is required: (1) name; (2) age and race; (3) length of residence in the state; (4) whether native born or naturalized citizen; (5) the state or country of birth; (6) length of residence in the county; (7) the voting precinct of the applicant (if this is unknown, the address is sufficient); and (8) applicant's occupation and present complete post office address.

Servicemen or their wives also may sign poll tax applications for each other.

Servicemen from Louisiana, Minnesota and New Hampshire may vote in their home state primary elections to be held in February or March.

The Louisiana voting on 21 February will be a runoff election to nominate state officials who did not receive a majority vote in an earlier primary conducted this month.

Minnesota will hold a Presidential primary 20 March to nominate party candidates for President and Vice President of the United States and delegates to the Democratic and Republican National Conventions.

New Hampshire, holding a Presidential primary 13 March, also will nominate party candidates and delegates to the National Conventions as well as voting on proposed state constitutional amendments.

Presidio Dimes Drive Nears Record

Double-Timing the March of Dimes, pretty WAC Pvt. Katherine McClain, MRU, helped to collect $316 from the men of Headquarters Company, Sixth Army. M/Sgt. Edward J. Kenney and M/Sgt. Francis M. Murphy, both of Headquarters Company, found themselves dropping dollars, rather than dimes, into the pickle jar. At Pvt. McClain's own Company D, 6000 SU, the WAC's over-subscribed, contributing more than $200.

505th MPs Lead Other Units; Supply Sergeant Donates $53

With returns in from 53 out of a possible 75 units, the Presidio March of Dimes campaign had already exceeded $6,000 this week and was well on its way to achieving a record high for single campaign contributions.

With two-thirds of the totals in, a final tally won't be available until next week. The 505th Military Police Battalion led other units with the astounding total of $971.13.

Sergeant First Class Jessie Gosnell, Headquarters Company supply sergeant, 505th MPs, made the highest individual donation when he stuffed $53.00 into his unit's dimes canister. A Regular Army sergeant, who lives in the barracks, Sgt. Gosnell is single. Asked about the generosity of his gift, he stated that the March of Dimes had always been his special charity and that each year he made every effort to be really generous.

Presidio mothers, in a door-to-door collection, turned in the sum of $601. The Sixth Army G-2 section contributed $337.38, while the 16th Base Post Office came through with $300.

Contributions in the states competition, a large scale map designed by the post training aids section and displayed at key points, garnered $236.76. California nosed out Texas for first place with a total of $26.75 to $22.88. South Carolina was third with $17.03 and Michigan drew $10.44.

The Post Special Services theater collections amounted to $397.38 and the Teen-Age Club members gave $20.24.

Pay table donations from the 6002nd SU Wacs totalled over $200.00, with individual contributions still coming in.

Headquarters Company, Sixth Army contributed $322.37.

Money realized from single and group enterprises such as cake and candy sales and raffles, had not been tabulated at press time. When these and the remaining unit contributions are tallied, it is anticipated by the Presidio March of Dimes fund committee that the garrison's gift to the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis will far exceed similar financial assistance rendered by the Presidio in recent years.

An appraisal of the present financial figures credited to the Presidio in the fund drive, show that in all cases, even those concerning relatively small units, the percentage is nearly twice as high as last year.

Northern California's goal in the National Foundation's Fund drive is to assure the treatment of 100,000 polio victims. The Presidio drive has been underway since the first of January.

Bronze Star was presented Friday to Sgt. Felino P. Viray, former member of the famed Philippine Scouts, who was captured on Corregidor and held a prisoner of war by the Japanese for three years. At the same parade and decoration ceremony, the Army Commendation Ribbon with metal pendant was awarded to Capt. Thomas P. Sechrest, 30th Engineer Group for meritorious conduct as operations and logistics officer with Task Force Alaska. Master Sergeant James W. King, Station Complement, Company E, and combat veteran of two wars, also received the Commendation Ribbon with metal pendant for meritorious service with the 3rd AA Battalion in Korea.

Suggestion Winner

MRU Specialist Wins Citation for $$ Saving Ideas

Specialist Third Class Wendell Kopf today basks in the admiration and well-wishes of his 102nd MRU buddies for a job well done.

The Tacoma, Washington, soldier early this week received from Colonel Robert S. Nourse, Sixth Army Adjutant General, a Department of the Army citation for "the official recognition and appreciation for the contribution of a beneficial idea which has improved operations."

Utilizing his knowledge as an IBM trained service engineer, Kopf put through channels a suggestion that would save the Army an hour and half work a day and increase the efficiency of key punch operators by 15 per cent.

Kopf, who plans to seek a reserve commission, is a tabulating equipment repairman in the AG machine records division with a total of six years' Army service.

After the presentation, Colonel Nourse personally expressed his appreciation of Kopf's idea. Kopf was accompanied by Major Robert D. Jones, chief of the AG machine records division, at the presentation.

No Change!

Study Completed; Army Will Continue Once Monthly Pay

After an exhaustive study, the Army has decided to continue paying its military personal once a month. The Air Force, Navy and Marine Corps pay twice a month.

The Army cited the following reasons reached by the study group for not adopting a twice-a-month pay policy:

1. Based upon a strength of 1,200,000, an estimated 640 additional finance personal would be needed at an increased annual expense of about $3 million.
2. Loss of productive time from primary duties.
3. Adjustment of training schedules.
4. More opportunities for clerical errors.
5. Not so practical as the present system in combat operations and at remote or isolated stations.

new gi bill asked

Washington—A new GI Bill may be in the offing for peacetime veterans of the armed forces, it was announced today.

Senator Richard L. Neuberger (D. Ore.), said he plans to introduce a bill whereby World War II education and other benefits would be extended to enlistees and draftees. World War II benefits were more liberal than those of the Korean war.

late flash

Washington—Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson is considering a six-month slash in active military service—from two years to 18 months—for some 100,000 draftees.

At the same time, Secretary Wilson said monthly draft calls would be increased. He explained that his program, if put into effect, would let men out earlier if they agree to remain in the active reserve for at least 2½ years.

Such a program, still only under consideration, he cautioned, would build up the ready reserve.

Mandatory Lectures Outline Security Regs For Presidio Civilians

What subjects lie within the province of security restriction will be outlined to some 1500 Presidio civilian employees by Post S-2 through a series of four mandatory orientation sessions scheduled during February.

It is particularly difficult to maintain security provisions, according to Lt. Col. Carlyle R. Williams, Post S-2, on an open installation like the Presidio which is also a public thoroughfare.

The February briefings are intended to keep Presidio personnel aware and up to date on classified categories and pertinent restrictions. To be held in the Post theater, orientations are scheduled for 1500 hours, 2, 9, 16 and 23 February.

Army Shifts Members Of Guerrilla Outfits For Better Efficiency

Washington (AFPS) — Several hundred members of special units trained to jump behind enemy lines and organize resistance groups are being reassigned to other units, the Army has announced.

The transfer will affect two-thirds of the 10th Special Forces Group, based in Germany, and one-fourth of the 77th Group, stationed at Ft. Eragg, N. C.

The Army said the shifts were part of the normal plans to utilize available manpower as efficiently as possible. No announcement was made as to which units will get the special forces men, all long-term volunteers with para-troop training.

Better Service

Post Commissary Gets New Look

The Post Commissary Store is in line for repairs and re-furnishing, Col. Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, announced today.

To speed service to patrons, new steel shelving will be installed and necessary repairs done on the floor during a three-day period in mid-February.

In order to complete the project, the DFC declared, the store will be closed starting on Monday 13 February and continuing through Wednesday 15 February.

Post Quartermaster and Post Engineer personnel—both military and civilian—will work the weekend of 11 and 12 February so that a longer closing period will not be necessary.

Commissary personnel expect the improvements will permit a greater selection of authorized and popular items to be stocked, thus providing a better flow of traffic in the store.

Normal operations will resume on Thursday 16 February.

State Tax Series!

Home State Income Taxes Vary; Relief Act Protects Servicemen

(This is the first of a series of articles on state income tax laws.)

New York (AFPS)—Payment of federal income tax, in most cases, takes care of the serviceman's tax responsibility. This is true because:

1. Some states do not have an income tax.
2. A great number of those that collect income taxes do not tax service pay.
3. Even if the state does tax service pay many servicemen do not have to pay the tax because of sufficient exemptions or deductions.

Under the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of 1940, amended and still in force, servicemen legally resident in one state but serving in another are not liable for state income tax on their service pay in the second state.

However, they can be liable in the second state if they are employed on an off-duty job. Their wives or children are liable if working in the state of their temporary residence.

Liability in two states is rare but possible, even if the serviceman did not return to his home state during the entire year. For example, even if his service pay were tax exempt, sale of stocks in his home state may provide sufficient income in the state to pay a tax; and, an off-duty job in the state in which he is serving might provide enough income for a tax in that state.

Fourteen states do not have an income tax and in two others — Ohio and Pennsylvania — only certain localities collect taxes.

If you maintain a home in one of these states or if you are serving in one of them, none of your income—from the service or from an off-duty-hours job—is subject to state income tax.

The states where no tax is assessed are: Connecticut, Florida, Illinois, Maine, Michigan, Nebraska, Nevada, New Jersey, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Texas, Washington, West Virginia and Wyoming.

Here briefly are the income tax setups in the other states and territories.

ALABAMA—Returns must be filed for a net income of at least $1,500 if single, at least $3,000 if married or head of family. Personal exemptions are $1,500 if single, $3,000 if married or head of family and $300 for each dependent. Return and declaration are due by 15 April. Payment may be made in installments. Members of the armed forces outside the U. S. may defer filing until 30 days after they return to the U. S.

ALASKA — All active-service pay is exempt. Returns must be filed on an income of at least $600 from sources within the territory. Exemptions are $600 for taxpayer, $600 for spouse and $600 for each dependent. Return and payment are due 15 April but a serviceman can pay as late as six months after discharge if his ability to pay is impaired because of his service.

ARIZONA—$1,000 active service pay is exempt. Returns must be filed if you are single and had a net income of at least $1,000, if you are married and had a net income of at least $2,000. A gross income of $5,000 also is taxable. Exemptions are $1,000 if single, $2,000 if married or head of a household and $600 for each dependent.

Returns are due 15 April but payment may be made in installments. Members of the armed forces outside the U. S. may defer payment and filing returns until 180 days after release or termination of the emergency, whichever is earlier.

stress safety

Even though the Presidio hewed its personnel accident rate down to below the target figures in 1955, the year's experience indicated further material cuts in frequency could be made in 1956, according to a recently released annual safety report.

Examination of the tabulated 1955 figures on Army motor vehicle accidents indicated that 56.8 per cent of vehicle mishaps were caused directly by Army driver actions.

The report also demonstrated that injuries to both military and civilian personnel were caused mainly by "improper handling, slips, falls and tripping."

Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, said accident and injury trends would be closely observed during the coming year, and any unfavorable experience will be referred to the responsible individual for correction.

USF, UC Schedule College Courses For Evening, Saturday Study

Evening and Saturday morning college courses, available to servicemen, will begin this month at both the University of San Francisco and the University of California Extension.

Two 15-week reading improvement classes will begin 13 and 15 February at the University of San Francisco. Both courses will be taught from 1930 to 2120 hours. The classes will be held on Monday and Wednesday evenings.

The Saturday morning schedule includes courses in biology, chemistry, physics, and mathematics. Further information may be obtained by calling the University of San Francisco, Evening Division, SK 2-1000, or by contacting the Presidio Army Education Center, Building 122, Ext. 2974 or 3189.

The University of California Extension will offer a number of evening classes including courses in engineering, business and the liberal arts.

On his return to the United States, Colonel Rees entered the Infantry School at Fort Benning, Georgia, to complete the Advance Infantry course.

He was later appointed Professor of Military Science and Tactics for the Los Angeles city schools.

Colonel Rees also served with the United States forces in Austria, completing his tour there to enter the Command and General Staff College (associated), from August to December, 1955. He was assigned to Sixth Army's G-1 Personnel Section early in January of the present year.

Colonel Rees' military schools include the Rifle and Heavy Weapons Company Officers Course, at Fort Benning, the Infantry School (Advanced Officers Course) and the General Staff Course (associated).

He was graduated from Washington State College and did graduate work at U.C.L.A.

Colonel Rees' military decorations include the Distinguished Service Cross, the Bronze Star Medal and the Army Commendation Medal.

Captain RICHARD M. WILDRICK has recently been assigned to the Sixth Army's G-2 Section at the Presidio. In Korea, the captain was assigned to duty with the First Field Artillery Observation Battalion in which capacity he served for 16 months.

The new Sixth Army officer took Basic Officers Course and the Artillery Officers Advance Course at Fort Sill, Oklahoma, and was later appointed instructor in the Department of Observation at the same post. He attended the Radar and Electronics School at Fort Bliss, Texas.

From 1947 to 1950, Captain Wildrick served with the 7th Field Artillery Battalion in Schwabach, Germany. He is married and resides with his wife and their son and daughter in Wherry Housing.

Tax Services!
Count Dependents Carefully; Each Exemption Worth $600

(This is the fifth in a series of articles on federal income tax filing for the year 1955. This article is based on information furnished to AFPS by the American Institute of Accountants, the national organization of certified public accountants.)

This year's redesigned tax forms make it easy for you to indicate the personal exemptions to which you are entitled.

Every taxpayer is entitled to one exemption, which means a deduction of $600. This applies to both husband and wife on joint returns. In addition, you are entitled to one exemption for each qualified dependent.

- To qualify for an exemption a dependent must:
1. Have received more than half his support from you, unless you file a multiple support agreement (see below). In figuring support, scholarships received by your child do not count.
  2. Have less than $600 gross income unless he is your child and under 19 or a student.
  3. Not file a joint return.
  4. Have been a member of your household or closely related to you, as defined in the official instructions.
  5. Have been either a citizen of the United States or a resident of the United States, Canada, Mexico, Panama, the Canal Zone or, in some cases, a serviceman's child living in the Philippines.

Your exemptions usually depend on whether you and your dependents qualify under these rules at the END of the year.

However, if your husband or wife died during the year you may file a joint return and take the same exemptions that both of you would have otherwise had. Similarly, if a dependent died during the year, the rules are applied as of the time of his death.

If you shared with others in the support of a dependent, but none of you provided more than half, you may still be able to arrange among you for one of the group to have the $600 exemption. You might agree, for example, to take turns in having the exemption from year to year.

The one who claims the exemption must have contributed more than 10% of the support, and he must have been a member of a group who altogether provided more than half the support. Each member of this group must have been entitled to claim the dependent except for the requirement of providing more than half the support.

In order for one of the group to have the exemption all other members of the group who contributed over 10% must sign declarations that they will not claim the dependent. The Internal Revenue Service provides Form 2120 (Multiple Support Agreement) for this purpose.

Be sure to claim all the exemptions you properly can, because each one reduces your taxable income by $600.

If you are supporting dependents, but are not able to file a joint return, you may qualify as the "head of a household" and be entitled to use a special schedule of tax rates that give you half the benefits of income splitting.

Better Pay, Improved Housing Would Help Enhance Career Service, Says Civilian Poll

Washington (AFPS) — The armed forces would be more successful in attracting and retaining the high quality personnel they need by increasing financial benefits, improving housing conditions and encouraging a more normal family life.

This was indicated in a survey of civilian attitudes toward military service as a career conducted by Public Opinion Surveys, Inc., of Princeton, N. J., for the Defense Department's Office of Armed Forces Information and Education.

The analysis is now being studied by the DOD and the military services to find where improvements can be made in present policies and programs affecting military personnel. The findings also will be used as a basis for action on correcting any public misconceptions revealed by the survey.

The survey used two groups—adult civilians and 16 to 20-year-old males—to measure public attitude toward a military career.

The DOD said the study also sought to establish "a baseline from which a program could be launched to enhance the prestige of a military career in order to attract and retain high quality personnel."

Five major conclusions were drawn from the sampling of adult civilians. They are:

1. A military career, whether as an officer or an enlisted man, does not carry great prestige among adults at the present time. In the public mind inadequate financial rewards, dislike of service discipline and regimentation, lack of adequate family life and less opportunity to advance than in civilian life are the greatest drawbacks.
2. The best educated group held a lower opinion of both officers and EM than did those with less education.
3. The civilian public does not have a clear idea of the role of the various branches of the service during wartime.

4. Civilian attitudes toward military service are based mostly on reports from people who have been in uniform and from personal service experience. The influence of mass communications media appears to be of secondary importance.
5. The military services would be more likely to attract and retain top quality personnel by raising financial benefits, encouraging a more normal family life wherever possible and improving housing conditions.

The survey among teen-agers shows young people saw little prestige in life as an enlisted man. Greater opportunities to advance in civilian life, lack of adequate family life and inadequate financial rewards were the main reasons given why more officers and EM did not stay in the service. "They get bored," was an oft-stated reason.

Teen-agers held careers as officers in higher regard than did the adult group.

Most of the male teen-agers were inclined to look upon their military service as an "onerous obligation" to get over with as quickly as possible. Despite their over-all favorable attitude toward the new reserve program, less than one in 10 said he planned to take advantage of it. However, this can be traced in part to a wide lack of understanding of the reserve program.

The youths selected the Air Force as their favorite branch of service, with the Army and Navy following. Most of them expect to see the U.S. in another war during their lifetimes.

Half the adults and 40 per cent of the teen-agers listed education and training as the major advantage of a service career, while about 30 per cent of both groups said the outstanding disadvantage was the lack of an adequate family life.

Of the civilians questioned, 71 per cent considered military personnel to be desirable members of the community, while 11 per cent believed they were not.

The survey among civilian adults also indicated that:

1. Only about 27 per cent definitely would be displeased if their sons took up a military career.
2. Seventy-four per cent believed the officer places duty above personal welfare. Only 11 per cent said officers placed personal considerations first.
3. On the matter of military pay, 42 per cent of the teen-agers and 39 per cent of the adults thought the military should be paid more than civilians in comparable jobs, 34 per cent of the teen-agers and 43 per cent of the adults said they should be paid about the same, 16 per cent of the younger men and 11 per cent of the adults thought military men should be paid less.

Adults and teen-agers agreed on the initial importance of air power. On teamwork in defense, one-fourth said all services are equally important.

Distaff Side of the Presidio Army Community again took parade honors last week but had to wait until Tuesday to collect the award. Because the Friday parade was squeezed in between cloudbursts, Lt. Col. Winston A. Jones, Sixth Army G-3, waited until this week to bestow the coveted plaque upon Capt. Virginia I. Engles, commanding officer of WAC Company D, 6000 SU. This was the WAC's seventh win since the parade competition began.

Local Service Club Takes Top Honors In NRA Contest

The Presidio Service Club is a recent first place winner in a contest judged by the National Recreation Association of New York.

Winning theme for the Presidio Service Club was an entertainment program entitled "Knowing Your World," planned with a view to correlating an educational display with a festive dance typifying the country being featured on any given night.

Running over a three-month period, the Presidio Service Club armchair and dance travelogue introduced to its guests, through music and poster display, customs and courtesies peculiar to the United States, Ireland and France.

Decorations and refreshments suggestive of the country being spotlighted were used in the club during the full cycle of the program.

Movies, singers and dancers of the given nations were presented at the club to illustrate the particular theme of the evening.

Fort Baker Service Club took third place in the same recreation contest for its theme entitled "Around The World In Springtime."

The Presidio Service Club's winning program, complete with display posters and photographs, was published in the January, 1956 edition of National Recreation Association's magazine, "Recreation."

Bill Of Rights

The Constitution And You, II, Next Troop Information Topic

In 1789 the American States ratified the document which was to become the supreme law of their new and revolutionary nation, a nation whose government would rest upon the consent of the people and in which the "natural rights" of all men would be guaranteed.

It its preamble, the Constitution stated the purposes of the founders, "... to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare and secure the blessings of liberty for ourselves and our posterity. . . ."

To insure further, the blessings of liberty for themselves and us, their posterity, the founding fathers soon added ten amendments, the Bill of Rights.

Next week's Troop Information session will take up the topic of that Bill of Rights and Personal Freedom, Part II of the U. S. Constitution and You.

After two centuries of interpretation and amendment (for which the Constitution itself provided), the Constitution remains the supreme law of the United States. Despite adaptations to nearly 170 years of change, it continues to guarantee a republican form of government resting upon the consent of the governed. It continues to insist upon a division of powers among the branches of government, and between the state and the people.

Through the original ten amendments, enforced by 12 provisions added since 1791, the Constitution continues to guarantee the personal liberties of every citizen. The Bill of Rights forbids Congress to make any law abridging freedom of religion, speech, press, assembly or petition. It secures the people's rights to keep and bear arms, gives them freedom from search and seizure, protects their rights in due process of law.

Among the later amendments were the XIII which in 1865 effected abolition of slavery and the XIV which in 1868 forbade any state to abridge in any way the privileges or immunities of American citizens or to deny them equal protection under the law.

By Amendments XV and XIX, the right of citizens of the United States to vote cannot be denied on account of race, color or sex. The most recent amendment, XXII, forbids any president from being elected for more than two terms.

The Constitution and the Bill of Rights delegate those powers which lie within government jurisdiction and those which must remain lodged in the people. The continuing success of that government established by the Constitution of 1789 depends ultimately, as it did in 1789, upon a citizenry which knows its rights, values them, and accepts the responsibilities of preserving them.

Tiny Army Jeep Radio Boasts 2,000 Mi. Range

Washington (AFPS)—The Army has unveiled a new radio that's small enough to fit in a jeep, tough enough for parachute drops and has a range of more than 2,000 miles.

The transmitter-receiver unit will replace sets used in WWII and Korea. Besides being more compact and powerful, it is easier to operate and service.

Forward area communications will be more flexible with the added range and mobility of the new radio.

Forces spread over a large area—as they often were in the mountains and valleys of Korea—will be able to keep in touch without relay stations. An airborne group parachuting a few hundred miles inside enemy lines can report almost immediately to command headquarters.

The radio sends voice and teletype messages at the same time with the addition of a lightweight 100-word-a-minute teletypewriter. A remote-control rig also is available.

Pre-set channels permit easy push-button operation. An untrained man can learn to use the radio in 10 minutes. Repairs are simple, too—just unplug the faulty part and plug in a new one. Replaced parts are repaired later at depots.

Power for the set comes from the regular battery of the jeep, tank or reconnaissance car in which it is carried, with a boost from a special generator. The radio works in snow, rain, sleet and temperatures ranging from 40 below zero to 149 degrees.

The Signal Corps Engineering Laboratories at Fort Monmouth, N. J., and the Collins Radio Co., Cedar Rapids, Iowa, worked together to develop the radio.

Navy Trained Diver Boasts Exciting Army Career

Star-Presidian Staff Writer

The United States Army taught him soldiering! The Corps of Engineers taught him Military Equipment Maintenance. The United States Navy taught him deep sea diving—and it might readily be added that Russia gave him a post-graduate course in the value of democracy.

In the Battle of the Bulge he fought as a platoon sergeant with his Company. "We went over as a full complement," he says, "and we came back the same way. Never lost a man!"

He was a deep sea diver on the S.S. Gordon Manchester, an Army Engineer wartime repair ship in European waters, during heavy land and sea bombardment; later, a fighting man in Korea with the 833rd Ordnance Company, yet he came up and out alive, without "the bends," the "torpedo tremors" or the "buzz bomb blues."

Unscathed in every hazardous land and sea operation to which he was committed as an enlisted man in wartime, he came home from Europe on rotation and was soon on his way to Russia, as a non-com in the Office of the Miliitary Attache, United States Embassy, in Moscow. His immediate supervisors were Lieutenant General John W. ("Iron Mike") O'Daniel, Major General Robert W. Grow (USA retired), and later—Admiral Alan G. Kirk (USN retired).

"In Russia," he states, "we had to have special permission to travel beyond the U. S. Embassy. We talked to no one outside that magic circle; we discussed nothing—in a very purposeful manner."

"I recommend a few years in Russia," says Warrant Officer William C. Hundley, the subject of this odyssey, "to man, woman or boy who doesn't believe that democracy and freedom are conditions to be loved and prayed for."

Mr. Hundley is a career soldier of 12 years' active service. Tall, lean and affable, he is presently assigned as an engineer maintenance officer for the 561st Engineer Company (Port Construction), at Fort Baker.

He received his warrant last August, and came to his present berth from Redstone Arsenal, Huntsville, Alabama, via the Engineer Equipment Maintenance School at Fort Belvoir where he took the prescribed course for officers in his field. He served earlier as chief of Motor Vehicle Inspection at Aberdeen Proving Ground in Maryland.

Army Diver comes to the surface in Moscow. Warrant Officer William C. Hundley, now assigned to the 561st Engineer Company, Port Construction, Fort Baker, began his military career as a Navy-trained Army diver. He served in that capacity during World War II, returned from sea duty to be assigned to the American Embassy in Russia, and fought later with the 833rd Ordnance Company in Korea.

Soon after he entered military service, the Army sent Mr. Hundley to the Navy Diving School in New York where he was graduated as a diver, 2nd class. Since that time an Army-administered diving school has been established. But it would seem that Hundley was fated to share his career interests between the Navy, the Army and the Diplomatic Corps, from the beginning.

His first sea assignment was with the 1074th Engineer Group on a port repair ship in Seattle, from which he received training in underwater cutting and welding at the Bremerton Navy Yard.

As a certified salvage diver, the sea-going soldier was sent to an Army Engineer Specialist School in Fort Belvoir, Virginia. Other preparatory courses took him to the Boston Navy Yard, in Massachusetts, and to the Ordnance Research and Development Program at Devil's Lake, North Dakota, to study cold water diving techniques.

Eventually, Warrant Officer Hundley shipped out with his unit, to Greenock, Scotland, from which port their vessel was engaged in salvage, repair and demolition work on seaways across war-torn Europe.

Rest assured, that Bill Hundley and his fellow-divers were well oiled during their maritime mission to Europe. "The harbors of Greenock, Antwerp and Le Havre were littered with wreckage," he tells you; and covered with a tanker slick that made us feel like canned sardines. We salvaged everything from old ships, to row boats, submarines, hoisting cranes and false teeth. And we had to be Johnnies-on-the-spot whenever an Allied ship lost a gun, a rudder or an anchor."

Warrant Officer Hundley and his wife now live with their four-year-old daughter, Catherine Julie, at Quarters 428-A, Amatory Loop.

"The Army and the Navy gave me a fine education," he declares, "but I can in no way be thought of as a hero. The only remarkable thing about my service is that although we worked and traveled under the most hazardous conditions, those of us deployed as a unit came back to the last man, in one piece!"

An Outstanding Civilian rating award was presented this week to Mr. George Goldfine, Sixth Army Library and Library Depot. Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, made the award for Mr. Goldfine's "High standards of professional service" and his "personal attention to the needs of commands and staffs throughout the Sixth Army area." Mrs. Elizabeth Bock, library supervisor (right), nominated Mr. Goldfine for the commendation.

Invaluable Assistance!

Civilian Librarian Wins Outstanding Rating For Diligent Dedication To Duty

From behind the towering stacks of books at the Sixth Army Library and Library Depot, Mr. George Goldfine, research librarian, stepped into the office of Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, this week, to receive the civilian outstanding rating award.

For the past six years, Goldfine has worked quietly among the 50,000 reference works, periodicals and monographs, making them yield to the Sixth Army command staff the information, experience and insights which an Army requires to solve new and unexpected problems.

From materials for the commanding general's speech on national military policy to answering an inquiry on the Battle of Booby's Bluff, Goldfine has usually managed to ferret out the pertinent reference materials.

In presenting the commendation, Colonel Lundquist said, "This award has been made in recognition of the exceptionally high standards of professional service you have displayed, and your personal attention to the needs of commands and staffs throughout the Sixth Army area. Your research activities, in particular, have been widely commended."

One of the testimonies in support of Mr. Goldfine's selection had come from Maj. Gen. William F. Dean, former deputy commanding general, Sixth Army. Said General Dean, "... the Army is fortunate to have a civilian employee of your outstanding professional qualifications and 'can-do spirit' here at Headquarters Sixth Army."

Goldfine came to the Sixth Army Library and Library Depot six years ago, following two years' experience as a librarian with the U. S. Naval Ordnance Station at China Lake. He took his degree in library science at the University of Southern California.

In his research activities, Goldfine has worked with members of the Sixth Army Command, military advisory groups to the Far East, instruction - demonstration teams and management survey organizations. When in some cases, references have not been available, said Miss Elizabeth Bock, library supervisor, "George has gone out and opened new sources—not only through other libraries but with consulates and public service agencies of all kinds."

Besides the major research problems which come to Goldfine's attention, individual questions are constantly being tossed at the Sixth Army Library Staff. A few examples cited by Goldfine include: What was General Pershing's insignia in his rank of General of the Armies of the United States? Who won the Battle of Booby's Eluff? (Or for that matter, who fought it?) What are tragedy plums? Where does the flag fly 24 hours a day?

Regardless of the question, Goldfine digs in and usually comes up with a reference.

As one contented library customer put it, "if you have a research problem, Mr. Goldfine will find a solution somehow. But he doesn't stop there. He remembers your interests and six months later will call you up and let you know about a new book in the field."

Sixth Army Vocal Group Has Need For Additional Talent

A stepping stone to a soldier's civilian career, or his medium of entree to university social functions as a student, is the Sixth Army's all-male chorus, now under the direction of Mr. Don Bishop.

A post-graduate student at the University of California, Mr. Bishop studied music under a private tutor in his home city of Philadelphia. He also directs the Post Chapel Choir and is featured soloist for special religious programs.

The Sixth Army Chorus was initiated at the Presidio during the war years. Under guidance and supervision of the Post Special Services office it has continued as a medium of formal vocal expression and recreation for hundreds of trained and potential male singers from the Presidio and its related units.

Ample time for rehearsal is provided for chorus members at the Presidio Service Club every Tuesday and Thursday afternoon from 1400 to 1600 hours. Formal appearances before the public are scheduled through the Post Special Services office.

Due, however, to the almost constant turn-over in military personnel from within and beyond the Sixth Army garrison, there is a constant need for new voices to meet the requirements of maintaining a minimum 30-man chorus.

At the present, there are openings for first tenor and second base singers, but membership is not limited to these only.

Trained and potential singers interested in joining the Sixth Army all-male Chorus are urged to call the Post Special Services office, Ext. 2002.

Presidio Captures Cage Crown

PRESIDIO WACS took over the top spot in the Bay Area Armed Forces this week with a pair of victories. The local lassies now boast an eight and one record in official competition. From 20-24 February Coach Julian Kite's cagers will enter the Sixth Army Women's Basketball tourney that will be hosted by nearby Letterman Army

Wacs Trim Hamilton AF In Thriller

Another victory went on record this week for the lady hoopsters of the Presidio Wacs basketball team as they rolled over the Hamilton Air Force Base Wafs 34-22. The local ladies ran up a lead in the first half and increased the point spread throughout the tilt to the final winning score.

The league win put the Presidio girls in first place in the Bay Area Armed Forces Women's League with an 8 and 1 record. Mather is in the second slot with a 7 and 1 record and Hamilton is third with a 7 and 3 mark.

In the recent match with the Hamilton girls, forwards Shirley Harvey and Mary Phillips led the team in scoring. The guards proved the big difference however, as they limited the Wafs to but ten field goals through the game. The guards were Yvonne LaDue, Edith Wark, Peggy Harris, Vivian Brill and Nina Hefner.

Next home game for the local Wacs will be Tuesday night against the Letterman Army Hospital Wacs at the Letterman gym. Although the hospital girls have yet to win a league game this season they are improving rapidly and should give the Presidiennes a good game.

From 20-24 February, Coach Julian Kite's smooth shooting cagers will enter the All-Sixth Army Women's Basketball Tournament. Nearby Letterman Army Hospital was named as the host team for the tourney that will draw teams from throughout the Sixth Army area.

volleyball

As Army volleyball is being started at an earlier date this year due to possible Olympic demands, all companies and units on the Presidio and its sub-posts are urged to begin practice at once. An intra-mural league is being formed with information available at the Post Sports Office, Bldg. 122, or Ext. 3968.

Free Passes For Local Sports Events

Approximately 300 free passes to attend the weekly boxing bouts at Winterland are available to Presidio servicemen through courtesy of the San Francisco USO committee. Men availing of such free tickets are asked to pick them up at any of the USO clubs and be at Winterland by 1930 hours on Thursday evenings.

Roller skating Derby enthusiasts may also attend the Friday and Saturday performances at Cow Palace, or a Sunday afternoon performance at the same place. Only 50 free tickets are available for the skating Derby, so, as in the case of the free boxing show tickets, they are to be distributed on a first-come-first-served basis.

USO clubs are located at the Market Street YWCA-USO, the Embarcadero YMCA-USO, 166 Embarcadero and the JWB-USO, 3200 California Street, and the NCCS-USO, 70 Oak Street.

'56 Sport Show Set For March

Dates for the 1956 San Francisco National Sports and Boat Show have been set for 2-11 March, at the San Francisco Civic Auditorium, Thomas R. Rooney, the exposition's manager announced this week.

More fishing tackle, guns, outboard motors, boats, camping gear, tents, trailers, marine accessories and resort exhibits will comprise this year's show than any in the exposition's eleven-year history, Rooney stated.

The sporting goods and boating industries regard the San Francisco show as the kick-off date for California's huge and prosperous outdoor and vacation season.

fish catch

The state-wide catch of salmon, yellowtail, white seabass, barracuda and halibut was much smaller this year than last. Various species of rockfish taken in sport fishing was 45 per cent greater, producing 185,000 fish.

Search For Sport Stars Commences

With the arrival of the sun this week, the first call goes out for talented fellows for spring and summer sports. Men are needed for baseball, track and field, boxing and golf. A call to ext. 3968 or a visit to building 122 will bring the desired information.

Next Monday, 6 February, is the starting day for all hardball stars or would-be stars. Last year's Presidio squad under Coach Hal Fischer won the Bay Area Armed Forces Title and placed third in the All-Sixth Army tournament.

Cinder performers will be interested to learn that a triangle meet with the University of San Francisco and the S.F. Olympic Club has been made for 10 March in Kezar Stadium. The track squad will be handled by Lee Schroeder, former University of Nevada flash.

Early next month the Bay Area Armed Forces boxing championships will be conducted at Hamilton Air Force Base.

And last but not least, golfers are wanted for the Presidio divot team as well as competition in the Sixth Army golf tourney which will be held at Fort Ord in early June.

Ten top service and AAU clubs have entered the tournament including such power houses as Fort Ord, March Field, San Diego NAS, and the defending champions, San Diego Marines. The Presidio edged the Marines 69-61 in an inter-service clash last month.

On Monday night the Alameda Naval Air Station invades the Let-

The U. S. team physician estimated that Streeter, a 22-year-old native of Northfield, Vt., would be sidelined about 30 days.

Rau For Geiser!

New Presidio Executive Officer Has Colorful Military Record

Colonel Charles G. Rau, who served his first tour of duty at the Presidio as a lieutenant with the 30th Infantry Regiment in 1932, today was named post executive officer by Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander.

He replaces Colonel John E. Geiser, post executive officer since November 1953, who received orders to a new post as chief of the training team Military Assistance Advisory Group to the Imperial Iranian Army in Teheran.

Now in his third tour of duty here, Colonel Rau comes to his new assignment fresh from Operation Sagebrush at Fort Polk, La., and as acting assistant to the assistant chief of staff, G-2, Headquarters Sixth Army.

The Colonel, who attended the regular and tank courses at the Infantry School, Fort Benning, Ga., the advanced tactics course at Fort Knox, Ky., and the Army Staff College, participated in the North African, Sicilian and European campaigns during World War II.

He served with the 2d Armored Division in battalion and regimental command roles up to the invasion of Normandy. Then transferred, Colonel Rau assumed command of the 7th Armored Group with the 19th Corps, in which organization he also acted as armored officer.

He also wears the Order of the Orange Nassau with Swords, in Degree of Commander, awarded by the Netherlands, and the French Croix de Guerre with Palm.

Greatly interested in competitive firing, Colonel Rau has held several positions as leader of outstanding marksmanship groups.

Prior to leaving his post in the office of the assistant Secretary of the Army for duty here, he was executive officer for the National Association for the Promotion of Rifle Practice. Other appointments include coach of the United States Shooting Team, which won a world's championship in 1952; coach for the U.S. Olympic sharpshooting team the same year; and executive officer for the U.S. Shooting Team participating in a meet at Caracas, Venezuela.

Colonel Geiser, who began his Army career with the Montana National Guard in 1923, is expected to leave for Iran late this month. He previously served in Japan and the Philippines.

Commenting on the outstanding service of Colonel Geiser as post executive officer, Colonel Lundquist stated, "Your service here has been of the quality that expedites and facilitates the administrative responsibilities of the deputy post commander. Speaking for myself and those who have known and served with you in your Presidio assignment, let me wish you the best of luck in your new position."

LAH Nurse Among First To Win College Residency

Under the Army's new "final semester" plan, nurse Capt. Edythe M. Dyer, Letterman Army Hospital, will be among the first officers to receive Army assistance in the last six months of full-time study toward a baccalaureate degree.

With the announcement of AR 355-30, Change 1, dated 18 October, some 100 officers and warrant officers will be selected each semester to complete the final term of courses leading to a bachelors degree, according to Col. Robert M. Connolly, Sixth Army Troop Information and Education officer. 3189 or 2974.

Purpose of the new ruling is to enable officers to satisfy the residence requirements demanded by most accredited civilian colleges and universities.

If an officer or warrant officer has six months work remaining for a baccalaureate, he may be eligible to take a full time course of study while receiving full Army pay. He will, if chosen, however, have to foot the bill for all tuition, fees and books.

Candidates for the plan must be on active duty in the continental U.S. with three years active duty behind them. They must agree to remain in the active Army for at least three years after completing their studies.

Applications accompanied by a copy of the college transcript must be submitted to the Adjutant-General's Office, Department of the Army, Washington 25, D.C. Further information may be obtained through the Presidio Army Education Center, Building 122, Ext. 3189 or 2974.

New Book Will Cover History of Medal Of Honor Winners

A new book on the Medal of Honor, covering the winners of the coveted medal from 1862 through the Korean War, will be published in April. Entitled "Heroes of the Army: The Medal of Honor, 1862-1953," the book is the first comprehensive work of its kind.

Its author, Bruce Jacobs, is an Army Reserve Officer who has had a tour of active duty in Magazine and Book Branch, Public Information Division. He has also written a series of popular Army division histories.

Final Salute from the Sixth Army Honor Guard marked the end of a 38-year career of military service for Maj. Gen. Whitfield P. Shepard, former assistant commander of the 3rd Infantry Division in World War II, and one-time Deputy Chief of Staff of the United Nations and Far East Commands. General Shepard retired this week in formal ceremonies on the Presidio. Escorting General Shepard, Captain Eugene J. Gasior, Honor Guard CO, accompanied him to the reviewing stands. General Robert N. Young, Commanding General, Sixth Army, read the retirement orders, ending a long and distinguished military career.

DOD Asks Raise In RA Officers

Washington (AFPS)—Congress has been asked by the Defense Department to increase regular officer ceilings in the Army and Air Force to 49,500 and 69,425 respectively, over the next two years.

The additional vacancies would be filled by giving certain reserve officers regular commissions along with additional civilian appointments.

The bill would give the Army

18,900 more regulars while the Air Force would have an additional 41,925.

The present regular officer ceiling in the Army is 30,600, while the Air Force is limited to 27,500.

However, both services are slightly below their authorized regular officer strength at the present time. The latest DOD figures place regular officer strength in the Army at 26,280—in the Air Force at 23,810.

Staff Assignment

CG Names Ondrick To Replace Hunter As Sixth Army DCA

Colonel John G. Ondrick, former Assistant Chief of Staff, G-4, Eighth Army, Korea, has been named deputy chief of staff for Administration and Management Headquarters Sixth Army by Lieutenant General Robert N. Young.

Colonel Ondrick, a 1932 graduate of West Point, succeeds Colonel Charles N. Hunter, who was ordered to SHAPE, Fountainebleau, France, recently.

The colonel assumes his new post with extensive training and experience. He is a graduate Regiment, 78th Division, which saw heavy action in the European Theater of Operations.

Participating in the Ardennes, central Europe and Rhineland campaigns, Colonel Ondrick won the Silver Star, Legion of Merit, Bronze Star with Oak Leaf Cluster, Commendation Ribbon, the Combat Infantry Badge and the French Croix de Guerre with Palm.

At the conclusion of hostilities, the colonel served on the faculty of the Command and General Staff College and the Army War College. He also served a tour of duty with the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Following the outbreak of the Korean War, Colonel Ondrick was ordered to AFPE and was awarded the Order of Ulohi with Silver Star by the Republic of Korea, for services there.

Colonel Ondrick married the former Patricia Bernice Hodgins of Chicago, Illinois. The couple have two daughters, Patricia Hodgins, nine, and Mary Kathleen, seven.

Ease Restrictions On Overseas Tours For First Four Graders

Restrictions fixed by prior foreign tours have been relaxed for enlisted personnel in the four top pay grades who desire to volunteer for duty in the Far East Command, it was announced today.

The new policy, in which men in paygrades E-4 through E-7 may now request assignment to the Far East at any time regardless of the area of their previous overseas service, is made clear in a recent change to AR 614-30.

Sweet, Sweet charity benefitted when Mrs. Aubrey Conrad of the Plans and Operations Division, G-3, was awarded $300 and a Certificate of Achievement by Lieutenant General Robert N. Young. Mrs. Conrad, a San Francisco resident, divided her cash award between the Red Cross and the Salvation Army Flood Relief Fund. She was recognized for work during recent Armed Forces flood disaster activities.

Tech Needs!

Infantry Officers Slated for More Com-Trans Training

Developments in modern warfare demand that more career Infantry Officers be trained in communications and motor transportation, the Army has announced.

To meet the need, the Infantry Branch, Career Management Division, is ordering officers to the Infantry School, Fort Benning, Georgia, to attend courses in these fields.

Graduates will be sent to troop units in sufficient numbers to allow yearly rotation of officers performing communications and transportation duties without repetitive assignments.

Officers who appreciate the increasing importance and necessity for this training in future higher level command and staff assignments are being urged to request admission to these schools.

In making selections for the Benning courses, the career requirements of the individual will be given first consideration.

In either case, an officer will be ordered to these schools only when it is consistent with the needs of his career and to further his development.

Extend Furlough Rates On Servicemen Travel To January, 1957

Furlough fares on Stateside rail and bus lines have been extended to 31 January, 1957, for military personnel on leave or pass.

The provision of the law authorizing tax-free travel on commercial transportation for servicemen must be renewed yearly. There are no changes in the new extension.

Purchasers of reduced-rate, round-trip tickets must be traveling in uniform at their own expense on official pass, leave or authorized delay in route, as in the past.

New EM Policy

Few Long-Timers Face Ouster During Program's Early Stages

Regulation Requirements Will Allow Retention Of Many Key Noncoms

New separation policies for enlisted personnel, designed to increase readiness of the top three grades for atomic-age mobilization and to improve promotion opportunities for young career soldiers, have been adopted, the Department of the Army announced this week.

The program, similar to one now affecting officers, will be accomplished primarily through retirement of personnel with more than 30 years' service and those over 55 years old, provided they have served 20 years.

Reductions in strength have emphasized the need for young, capable first three graders in today's peacetime Army who are capable of playing a long-term role under mobilization.

At the same time the large numbers of men in the top enlisted grades (E-5, E-6 and E-7) remaining on active duty since the Korean conflict have caused virtual promotion stagnation at the top of the enlisted structure.

For some time, the Army has denied initial enlistment to individuals who could not complete 20 years' service prior to age 55.

New regulations to implement the program are being issued and provide that:

(1) Reenlistment or extension on active duty will be denied enlisted personnel if (a) they have 30 years' service or more or, (b) they are over 55 years of age and have completed 20 years' service.

(2) Indefinite enlistees affected by the program will be discharged after serving 6 years in an indefinite status or by December 31, 1957, whichever is later.

(3) Retired personnel on active duty will revert to retired status at completion of current tour.

(4) Enlisted personnel of the Reserve components on active duty in the top two grades (E-6 and E-7) will be required to enlist in the Regular Army at completion of current tours in grades prescribed by regulations or be relieved from active duty.

Tours or enlistments which expire this year will be extended to December 31, 1956, if requested by personnel affected.

Theater or Z1 Army commanders are authorized to exempt certain individuals in divisions or smaller tactical units from the age and service provisions of the regulations, but they may not be retained beyond the last day of the month in which they attain age 60.

Those who may be exempted are: (1) Individuals awarded either the Medal of Honor, the Distinguished Service Cross or the Navy Cross.

(2) Individuals who have been in their current unit more than 10 years and add considerably to morale and prestige of the organization through their long service.

(3) Individuals, not to exceed 5% of those considered, whose performance of duty is outstanding.

Relatively few personnel will be separated by the retirement features of the program during its first few years of operation.

8th Infantry Division Has Gyroscope Slots; Slated For Europe

A new opportunity to join a Gyroscope unit is being offered through enlistment and reenlistment for direct assignment to the 8th Infantry Division, Fort Carson, Colorado, the Army has announced.

The 8th Division will rotate to Europe next July when it starts to switch home stations with the 9th Infantry Division in Germany.

Although "hitches" of four or more years are encouraged in order to get full benefit of a stabilized assignment in the 8th, three-year enlistments will be accepted.

Additional information on this enlistment option for Regular Army members in Operation Gyroscope may be obtained at Post Classification and Assignment Section, Room 14, Bldg. 220, Ex. 3412.

Colonel J. G. Ondrick

He served at various stations in the United States and abroad prior to World War II. Colonel Ondrick was military attache to Iran at the time of United States entry in the war.

Recalled, the colonel assumed command of the 309th Infantry

Commanding an LST, Commander Fowler transported natives from the Communists to the Saigon area in 1954.

(This is the first in a series of editorials on communism.)

The communist enemy threatens the free world today not only at boundary lines but also within our countries:

To defend ourselves against communists in our own country we must understand what makes them tick. What kind of people join the Communist party?

They're the kind of people who are deeply dissatisfied with life. They believe communism is a cure-all.

Most of them are young—they don't know much about life yet and are looking for guidance. They aren't told directly what the real purpose of the party is—to help take over the country for Soviet communism.

They keep on repeating the party's doubletalk slogans—and then one day they discover what the real "line" is. Then most of them get disgusted and begin to drift away from the party. This isn't easy to do—but a lot of members do leave. Sometimes it takes years.

But the other few men have become really corrupt. They sell out their own country and their souls—they join the "hard core" of the Communist party. (AFPS)

Our boy Sturdley has done it again. Sturdley, you may remember, is the guy who gives just enough—and not a drop more.

Sturdley does his share of griping on all matters and saluting is no exception. But Sturd is a smart cookie. He puts an extra snap into the highball when his CO, or another officer on post, passes by.

When our boy is off on a pass or on leave, however, he conveniently forgets about the salute. No one is going to go to the trouble of stopping him in town, he figures.

As in other matters, Sturdley misses the point. Saluting, basically, is a military courtesy. It's a greeting between comrades in arms.

A confident serviceman doesn't shun the salute. He knows that when you exchange salutes it gives you a feeling of really belonging to the honorable profession of arms. (AFPS)

Most servicemen approach their ETS date in a balanced frame of mind. Most of them have been conscientiously doing their job since they entered the service and they don't "goof off" as separation day approaches.

There is a minority, however, that seems to mark off the last 90 days or so as "let down" time. The serviceman who figures that because he is leaving he has the right to back-slide will probably do the same thing when he enters civilian life.

The difference is that in civilian life only he will suffer. As a serviceman, however, his lackadaisical performance directly can hurt his group's mission and, indirectly, the defense effort.

Whether a man is in a training platoon, at an office desk or on a combat mission, his job and duty are as important to the service the day he leaves it as it was the day he entered. (AFPS)

$100,000! Contract To Study A-Power Transport Awarded By Army

Washington (AFPS) — A contract to determine how nuclear power might best be adapted to army transportation equipment used in land and water operations has been awarded to the Nuclear Development Corp. of America, White Plains, N. Y.

Maj. Gen. Paul F. Yount, army chief of transportation, described this contract as "an expeditious means of determining the technical, economic and military desirability" of nuclear powered transportation equipment.

The study will include certain rail locomotive equipment, several types of army harbor and inland waterway craft and special large cargo-carrying land vehicles.

The Army said it considered the application of nuclear power to the field of military transportation one of great potential and it would "materially assist in attaining the degree of strategic mobility required for modern warfare."

The $100,000 contract was awarded by the Army Transportation Research and Development Command, Ft. Eustis, Va.

3 'Copter Companies Set For Eucom Duty; 587th First To Leave

Washington (AFPS)—In a move to increase helicopter strength in the European Command, the Army has announced it will transfer three companies of the versatile "whirly-birds" from the U. S. to Europe before next June.

The first switch will take place this month when the 587th Cargo Helicopter Co., at Ft. Sill, Okla., departs.

Consisting of 21 Sikorsky H-34 light cargo-type 'copters, the unit will be ferried overseas by a navy aircraft carrier. The company has a manpower strength of nine officers, 34 warrants and about 100 enlisted men.

Names of the other two companies to be transferred are expected to be announced later.

The H-34s are capable of transporting 14 combat-equipped soldiers or about one and a half tons of cargo.

The Army said the transfer will "provide additional tactical air mobility" for the U. S. Seventh Army.

Smash Record In Dimes Drive Here

Sandy Assignment!

Local Engineers Enjoy Desert Balm While Mapping Yuma, Palm Springs

Across the parched desert flats surrounding Yuma Test Station, Fort Scott's 660th Engineer Battalion unravelled its measuring tapes last month in the opening phases of a four-month cartographical training expedition.

Commanded by Lt. Col. W. W. Walters, members of the 660th Topographical Engineer Battalion between now and April will sharpen their map-making skills by recording the lay of the desert land in the Yuma-Palm Springs-Indio area.

It was the same 660th, reactivated in March, 1954, which spent two summers as part of the 30th Engineer Group's map-making mission to Alaska.

The 272-man training group at Yuma consists of a Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment with elements of the 537th, 542nd and 549th Base Survey Companies. A flight detachment of the Stockton-based 521st Topographical Aviation Company will back up the ground survey crews with aerial support.

Object of the Yuma exercise is to give the engineers practical experience in producing a finished topographical map of a given area. On completion of training in the Yuma area, the battalion will move on to a similar mission, working on different species of terrain.

In 1955, the 660th helped to chart the Arctic Slope from Canada to Point Barrow and the Seward Peninsula, part of the final 88,000 square miles of Alaska mapped by the 30th Engineer Group last year alone. The survey companies at Yuma participated in all six years of the Alaskan expedition.

Results of the ground survey and aerial photographic work on such expeditions in the field are turned over to photomapping and map reproduction units for completion of the finished charts.

Reaffirm Policy!

DOD Backs Exchanges, Commissaries

Washington (AFPS) — The Defense Department stands firm in its position that exchange stores and commissaries benefit military personnel and should be continued.

This policy was reaffirmed in a recent report by the DOD following an extensive study of the Hoover Commission's recommendations on business enterprises within the military structure.

The DOD agreed with nine of the commission's 12 major recommendations on business enterprises and said that many of its proposals already had been adopted.

However, the DOD termed detrimental to service morale recommendations that would limit commissaries and exchanges only to isolated areas; prohibit the selling of luxury items such as

Last NG Outfit Completes Duty In K-Emergency

Washington (AFPS) — The Army has released from active duty the last of 2,161 national guard units called to serve following the outbreak of the Korea war.

The 115th Engineer Combat Bn. at Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo., will revert to state control as part of the Utah National Guard.

The transfer from federal status will involve the return of the battalion's designations, flags and standards to the Utah NG. Its original guard personnel have long since been released from active duty.

Men last serving with the battalion have been transferred to other active units.

During the Korean hostilities, 165,197 guardsmen were called to active duty. Of that number, 119,603 were in 1,675 army NG units. The remaining 45,594 were air national guardsmen summoned from 486 units which included 22 wings.

Army Center Develops Mobile Water Purifier; One Man Operation

Ft. Belvoir, Va. (AFPS) — The Army Engineer Research and Development Center here has developed a mobile water purification unit that makes radioactive water safe to drink in 30 minutes.

Three men can put the truck-mounted unit together in an hour and a half and it takes only one man to operate it.

A spokesman said the unit offers a solution to the problem of water contamination produced by the fall-out from an explosion of atomic or hydrogen weapons.

In addition, the unit is effective in preventing contamination by enemy chemical, bacteriological and radiological weapons.

The machine has demonstrated its effectiveness by turning out 3,000 gallons of drinking water an hour from one of the nation's most polluted rivers.

Handing Over his contribution to the March of Dimes drive is Sfc. Jesse Gosnell, Hq. Co. 505 MP Bn. supply sergeant (left). Receiving the contribution is M/Sgt. Cristobal Seva, Hq. Co. 505 MP Bn.'s first sergeant. Gosnell gave what is probably the top amount of any EM on post—$53.

MP's, 16BPO Tops

Post Polio Campaign Garner's Highest Total In Local History

Nearly 100,000 dimes marched out of the Presidio and into the National Polio Foundation fight against Infantile Paralysis last week, as the Post campaign netted a record-breaking single fund contribution of $9,834.29.

Of all the units and sections on the Post, the highest company contribution to the local

March of Dimes campaign came from the 505th Military Police with a donation totaling $976.13.

Broken down on a per capita basis, however, the Sixteenth Base Post Office topped the MPs with a $7.00 per man average.

The Security Courier unit averaged $5.94 in a similar tally, while Company E of the 6002nd SU is credited with an average of $3.10 per person. Likewise, Detachment 2 of the 6002nd SU Dispensary and Dental unit gave at the rate of $2.91 from each contributor, while men of the 60th Military Police Company gave $2.57 each.

Headquarters Company, 6400th SU accomplished a rate of $2.20 per soldier, with smaller units contributing more than twice what they gave last year.

The Bay Area Exchange gave eight times more money than was collected in the last polio fund drive, and Special Services, including theater and Service Club collections more than tripled other annual contributions.

The Post Engineer Section, Post Transportation and the Post Quartermaster Sections also far outdid any former collections to date.

The Adjutant General Section, including MRU, contributed $444.60 as compared to $262.23 which was last year's figure.

Finance and Accounting, the Chemical Section, Chaplains' Section, TI&E and other lesser units almost universally doubled and frequently tripled last year's donations to the dimes fund.

G-2 and G-3 Sections, in kind, varied to the extent of $129.48 this season as against $23.31 for G-3, and $337.38 for G-2 in comparison to last year's total of $160.00.

Group projects separate from all-military participation include an $111.00 tab collected by the Officers Wives of the California Military District on Post. Their candy raffle brought $79.00 for a five-pound box of candy while a cake raffle by the wives of G-4 Section realized $12.50 for a single cake.

The given figures do not include extra donations made by individuals at the military pay tables on 31 January.

PRESIDIO BRIEF—As an economy move in 1861, the Commander of the Department of the Pacific announced that communication by telegraph with his headquarters, except in extraordinary circumstances, was forbidden. All telegrams that were sent had to be prepaid.

Reenlisting, M/Sgt. Ferdinand Johnston, Post sergeant-major, was sworn in this week by Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander. With 17 years' duty behind him, this three years will complete his twenty. Colonel Lundquist administered the oath in a surprise ceremony Wednesday.

Surprise Ceremony!

DPC Administers Oath As Post's Top NCO Reenlists

In a surprise ceremony yesterday, Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, swore in M/Sgt. Ferdinand Johnston for another three-year hitch in the Army.

Johnston, post sergeant-major since 1954, expected his reenlistment to be just another item on his daily routine.

But when he reported to the colonel he was surprised to hear him ask:

"Sergeant, I understand you're up for reenlistment today."

"Yes sir," replied the stocky, well-groomed Johnston.

"Do you mind if I swear you in?" The sergeant grinned and said, "I'd like that very much."

Then before a small group of reporters and a photographer, Lieutenant Colonel W. A. Leary, CWO Theodore Roberts, and Johnston took the oath as administered by Colonel Lundquist.

The DPC then shook the sergeant's hand and congratulated him on the start of his 18th year of service.

Then, joking, the Colonel asked, "Is this your last time, Sergeant?" "Yes sir."

"Well," chuckled the Colonel, "It's my last time, too."

Sergeant Johnston, a former resident of Norfolk, Va., where he was a newsman for eight years, enlisted in the Army in 1939.

Commissioned as a captain in the Adjutant General's Corps, Sergeant Johnston served in the Asiatic-Pacific theater of operations during World War II and in the Army of Occupation in Japan after the instrument of surrender was signed on the USS Missouri in Tokyo Bay in 1945.

Following his tour of duty in Japan, the Sergeant, who is married and lives on post with his wife and son, was ordered to Korea. He was assigned to the Presidio in 1953 where his first duty was with Detachment 1, 6000 SU, Headquarters, Sixth Army.

PFD Wins Second Place Award For Top Prevention

Presidio Fire Department personnel added another triumph to their already long list of laurels today when it was announced that they took second place honors in a national fire protective contest.

Colonel William T. Cathcart, post fire marshal, announced that the post firemen were adjudged second in competition with more than 125 other stations to determine the Army post with the best fire protection record during 1955.

Colonel Cathcart praised the Presidio firemen for the part they played in the post's fire protection program.

"Two factors contributed to the success of the Presidio's fire safety activities," said the Colonel. "The Fire Department's continuous fire prevention efforts and the whole-hearted support and participation of personnel, both military and civilian."

Fire Chief George Geller declared that a vital part of the program was in youth activities. "The department gave a great deal of its time and effort to counselling Boy and Girl Scouts in fire safety. Hundreds of Scouts received special training in fire prevention during the past year," he said.

The award of a certificate of merit will be made next month.

Army Curbs Travel Of Certain Personnel In Russia, Satellites

Washington (AFPS) — Army personnel with special intelligence information now are forbidden to travel in Russia, Soviet bloc countries and other sensitive areas.

A new regulation states that the interrogation of such persons "by foreign forces could constitute a substantial risk to the security of the U.S."

The order specifically prohibits travel or assignment to Russia and her satellites; Yugoslavia, Finland, Berlin, Macao, Quemoy, Matsu, Laos, Cambodia, and South Vietnam, except for the Saigon urban area.

Exceptions to the ruling will only be granted by the senior field commander in "cases of extreme necessity," the Army said.

Travel restrictions will be placed on the individual at the time he is granted access to the special intelligence information, and can only be terminated when considered appropriate by the Army's G-2.

Further information is given in AR 614-21 of 20 December, 1955.

New California Trailer Law Could Affect You

A recently enacted California law, qualified somewhat in the case of servicemen, requires that all trailer coaches within the state be registered with the Bureau of Motor Vehicles (Cir, 18-2 3 February, 1956).

Until passage of the new act, it was unnecessary to license a trailer unless it moved on public highways. The revised code, however, requires registration of trailers whether occupied or not and regardless of where they are stored or located.

(By the law's definition, a trailer coach is "a vehicle without motive power" constructed "for human habitation and for carrying persons and property" and designed to be drawn by a motor vehicle.)

Among the exceptions to the law is a stipulation that trailer coaches located on military installations are subject to federal rather than state requirements. The moment the trailer is moved from military property, however, it is subject to the California law.

As applied to military personnel, the law provides that a non-resident military owner of an out-of-state vehicle within California will be exempted from registration requirements, if the trailer is registered and displays the license of the person's home state. The exemption lapses, however, when the plates expire.

If the home state does not require license plates, the non-resident military person need not have them in California either.

Checking Sector for scout car patrolling, Lieutenant Leslie Davison, operations officer for the 505 MP battalion concurs with Sfc. Redden Crisp, Desk Sergeant, the best available routing of their vehicles to give as complete a coverage of the area as possible.

Spot Decisions!

Unusual Vies With Routine In Post MP's Daily Duties

By Pfc. Walter Heil
Star-Presidian Staff Writer

Lieutenant Leslie Davison, operations officer in the Provost Marshal's Office, is a man accustomed to making fast decisions.

He picked up his phone one day recently and—as is often the case—the voice on the other end of the wire demanded instant action and decision. In terse tones, the Military Policeman speaking to Lieutenant Davison explained that a railroad car had gone off its track near the Gorgas gate.

The accident, the MP said, was causing traffic near the commissary store to become hopelessly ensnarled.

The lieutenant, who doubles in brass as the 505th Military Police Battalion's daytime duty officer, scanned his commitment chart to determine just where he could find the necessary men to stand at emergency traffic control points near the scene of the incident.

He made his decision and dispatched one patrol to the scene. Traffic soon resumed its normal flow with the presence of additional MPs on the scene and another small crisis in the every-day routine at the PMO was solved.

Lieutenant Davison, along with Sfc. Jerasimas Scourtis, his veteran operations sergeant, is in charge of supervising the entire MP operations on the Presidio.

Included in his duties are law enforcement, daily supervision of the MP desk in the PMO, traffic control and the placement of traffic signs controlling vehicular movement on post.

To fulfill this obligation, Lieutenant Davison has five enlisted personnel, including Sfc. Scourtis, to assist him. Daily they keep tabs on the 95 to 107 MPs on duty as building guards, gate guards, patrol car riders, motorcycle patrolmen and other tasks.

In addition, the lieutenant has one other big job on his hands—ceremonies and parades in which MPs are required to act as flag bearers, chrome jeep drivers, door guards, escort drivers for the visiting personnel and gun salute detail.

As in his daily operation, Lieutenant Davison works with the battalion operations officer, Major John F. Kwock, in order to fulfill his commitment.

The lieutenant cited the retirement ceremony of Major General William F. Dean as an outstanding example of special requirements needed to bring the ceremony off without a hitch.

He said additional MPs were needed for traffic control to direct the anticipated civilian visitors on post to parking lots and details for crowd and courtesy patrol to guide them to the parade ground.

"Those," said the lieutenant, "are merely two examples. We have the machinery set up so we're ready for almost any ceremony, however large or small it may be."

The phone started ringing again and as he answered, Lieutenant Davison began jotting notes. He concluded his conversation and looked up, grinning: "Branch of a tree, probably torn loose during the recent storm, fell, blocking a road. Have to get a detail to clear it."

PRESIDIO BRIEF—During the 1820's a school was operated for military dependents at the Presidio. The Mexican administration paid the teacher $10 per month.

Plan Gala Celebration

Ft. Cronkhite Service Club
Will Reopen Next Wednesday

Men of the AAA and Ordnance detachments in the Fort Cronkhite area have marked their calendars for the big re-opening of their service club, 15 February, at 2000 hours.

Closed for the past year, the Fort Cronkhite Service Club is now completely refurbished and redecorated in Spring pastels and carries a host of recreational facilities including a newly-stocked library, writing room, game room and dance floor.

Key military figures from the Presidio have been invited to attend the club opening for which a gala entertainment program is now in process of completion.

Director for the newly-opened Service Club will be Miss Eileen Pierce, well-known and popular hostess at the Presidio Service Club.

Miss Pierce has been connected with Special Services since 1953. She was graduated from Holy Name College, Spokane, Washington, in 1952, and taught school in her home city prior to entrance to military Service Clubs management.

Presidio personnel are cordially invited to attend the reopening of the Fort Cronkhite Service Club on 15 February.

Army Colonel Named
"Chaplain of the Year"
By B'nai B'rith Order

Army chaplain (Colonel) Edwin L. Kirtley, senior chaplain USA-REUR, was one of three chaplains recently honored by the Alexander D. Goode Lodge of B'nai Brith in New York. Each received a citation and a cash award of $500.

Chaplain Kirtley, along with a Navy and Air Force chaplain, was honored as "Chaplain of the Year" for "consecrated service and idealism" to interfaith goodwill.

The award is presented annually in memory of the four service chaplains—two Protestant, one Roman Catholic and one Jewish—who gave their lifebelts to troops and went down with the USS Dorchester in World War II.

Sick Pay Is Deductible
Can Save $ On Taxes

(This is the sixth in a series of articles on federal income tax filing for the year 1955. The articles are based on information furnished to AFPS by the American Institute of Accountants, the national organization of certified public accountants, and tax information available from the Navy's Bureau of Supplies and Accounts.)

Nobody likes to be sick. But if there was sickness in your family during 1955, you may have some compensation tax-wise.

First there is the question of sick pay. A service member who was absent because of sickness or injury may exclude pay for the period from his gross income in figuring out the 1955 income tax.

But, if the absence was due to illness, you may not exclude amounts received for the first seven calendar days. However, if you were hospitalized for at least one day during the illness, or were injured, pay may be excluded from the first day of absence.

According to the law, the first complete day away from duty will be considered the first day of absence. When a serviceman is hospitalized, the day of admittance will be included as a day of hospitalization but the release day will not.

You may exclude not more than $100 a week. If your pay is more than that, you determine the amount to be excluded as follows: multiply the amount received for the applicable period by 100, then divide the result by your weekly rate.

You should attach to the tax return a statement showing your computation and indicating the period of absence, nature of illness or injury and whether you were hospitalized, according to the Internal Revenue Service.

Nontaxable income, such as allowances and pay excluded for active service performed in a "combat zone," is not considered in the above application of the formula.

Because pay for sick periods is included in the wages shown on your withholding slips you should subtract the proper amount from your income in the place provided on the first page of the tax return (Form 1040). You are entitled to exclude this amount even if you do not itemize your deductions.

Apart from sick pay, you may have received payments covering medical expenses for yourself and your dependents. Don't include these in your income, but don't deduct the medical expensgs covered by these payments either.

If you itemize your deductions, you may be able to save tax money by listing medical and dental expenses you paid for yourself and your dependents.

This year you list your medical and dental expenses on a separate sheet, rather than on the form itself. Space is provided on the form for figuring the amount that is allowable as a deduction.

You are allowed a deduction for your medical expenses beyond three per cent of your adjusted gross income. This applies to any medical expenses you pay for your dependents.

Your deduction is limited to a maximum amount for the year, as explained in the instructions. Medicines and drugs may be included in your medical expenses only to the extent they exceed one per cent of your gross income.

Among the items to include in your list of medical expenses are fees of doctors, dentists, hospitals and nurses. List premiums for Blue Cross and other health, accident or hospitalization insurance, but remember you cannot deduct medical expenses paid or reimbursed by insurance.

Three Servicemen Star In Indoor Track Meets

New York (AFPS)—Two more indoor track carnivals—the Philadelphia Inquirer and Washington Star Games—have gone by the boards and three servicemen who bear watching in future meets are Tom Courtney, Lou Jones and Rod Richard.

With the winter track season still in its infancy, this trio already has accounted for the following: Courtney, a private at Ft. Dix, N. J., has won the 1,000-yard races in the Knights of Columbus Games at Boston and at the Washington Star meet. He finished third in the 1,000-yard event at Philadelphia.

Pvt. Lou Jones of Ft. Meade, Md., was fourth in the 600-yard races at Boston; third at Philadelphia and first at Washington. He also ran with the Pioneer A.C. of New York team which won the one-mile club relays at Philadelphia and Washington.

Lt. Richard, a sprinter from Ft. Lee, Va., bolted to victory in the 50-yard dash at Philadelphia in 5.4 seconds. At the Washington Star meet he placed third in the 70-yard dash and fourth in the 80-yard dash.

Here's a rundown on how other service track stars fared at the Philadelphia Inquirer and Washington Star Games:

Presidio To Meet Ord In Opening Cage Clash

By Pvt. Bob Malone
Star Presidian Sports Editor

Led by their twin scoring aces, Don Lofgran and Mike O'Neill, the Presidio Red Raider basketball squad left early Tuesday morning for Las Vegas, Nevada, where the local cage stars will enter the 1956 Southwestern Invitational Basketball Tournament this week. The Presidio will open the tourney against the Fort Ord Warriors.

The Presidio casaba men have rolled to 22 straight victories this season in winning the Northern California Armed Forces League and hold a three game lead in the Bay Area Armed Forces loop, which will wind up action this month.

In the Nevada tourney the local soldiers will meet probably their toughest opposition of the current year. Ten top service and AAU clubs have entered the tournament including such powerhouses as Fort Ord, March Field, San Diego NAS and the defending champion, San Diego Marines.

Oddly enough, the closest anyone has come to the Red Raiders this year was the 69-61 total turned in by the San Diego Marines in an inter-service match last month. The Marines downed the Presidio 74-61 in the first round of the Las Vegas tourney last year.

The fast breaking Raiders have been paced by Don Lofgran, former All-American from USF and Mike O'Neill, former PCC and AAU All-Coaster from the University of California. Other Presidio stars have been Bob Harbertson, former Utah State flash and Norm Ellenberger, Butler University.

The Presidio melon men are coached by Hal Fischer, University of Nevada, and 1951 Pan-American Olympic Games coach.

Starting on 28 February through 3 March, the Presidio will host the All-Sixth Army Basketball Tournament which will be held at the Kezar Pavilion. Free bus service will be provided both to and from the post for spectators.

Posts in the northern half of the Army area will compete in the northern playoffs at Fort Lewis, 14-17 February. The mountain area squads will have playoffs on the same date at Dugway, Utah, and the southern clubs will meet at the Yuma (Arizona) Test Station.

Each of these divisions will send their champion team to the local tourney. All posts in the central division will field teams in the five day hoop clash. The winner will go on to the All-Army finals, as the Sixth Army champion.

The tournament will get underway at 1230 hours on the 28th with colorful opening ceremonies by the Sixth Army Band.

volleyball

Intramural volleyball will begin action on 12 March it was announced this week by the Post Sports Office. A meeting of all company representatives will be held on 6 March at 1000 hours in Building 122. All units on the Presidio and its sub-posts are urged to begin practice at once.

One of the leading scorers on the Fifth Army Hq. basketball team is Pfc. Dick Rosenthal of Notre Dame and Ft. Wayne Piston fame.

'56 Sport Show Set For March

Colorful travel exhibits with scale models and live animals will be among the outstanding attractions of the San Francisco National Sports and Boat Show at the Civic Auditorium, 2-11 March.

British Columbia and Alberta Government travel bureaus have announced that they will exhibit jointly for the first time, and they intend to show to the best advantage the "wonderland of the Northwest," according to Arthur Peers, Canadian Consul here. Peers stated, "Fish are still plentiful in Canadian streams and lakes, and generous catch limits continue to be in effect."

A live deer, raised in captivity and fully trained, will be featured by the High Sierra Packers Association at their corrals and exhibit. Daily packing demonstrations with pack horses, a full-scale replica of a pack station, and movies showing the fun and excitement of pack trips into the high Sierras will also be part of their exhibit.

A replica of the Mount Lassen volcano, complete with smoke and lava, and two live baby cougars will highlight the exhibit of the Shasta Cascade Wonderland Association of Redding. The association's exhibit, featuring the Mount Lassen, Shasta Lake, Shasta Dam and the Trinity Alps regions, will be the most elaborate they have ever displayed.

Coming to the West Coast for the first time to exhibit at the San Francisco National Sports and Boat Show, will be the Wyoming Travel Bureau Commission, representing all the travel facilities of that state, with special emphasis on big game hunting and fishing, the Grand Tetons, Yellowstone National Park, and dude ranching.

Area Fencers In Berkeley Clash Today

This afternoon at the Berkeley Fencers Club, two Presidio-Letterman Army Hospital fencing teams cross swords in the Berkeley Intermediate Epee Team event.

The first squad entered by the locals is made up of Colonel Laurance Brownlee, Jose Tafoya and Herb Rhodes. The second team will be composed of Leo Thompson, George Kester and Frank Dama.

Another first place medal was added to the teams' collection last week when Jose Tafoya took the top place in the Northern California Intermediate Sabre Meet. The sabre clash took place in the Letterman Army Hospital sports center.

Stars Wanted For Baseball, Track, Golf

The Post Sports Office announced this week that more players are needed for the Presidio track and field, baseball and golf teams. A visit to Building 122 or a call to 3968 will bring the desired information.

One month from today, on 10 March, the Presidio cinder squad under the direction of Pfc. Lee Schroeder will enter a triangle meet at Kezar Stadium with the University of San Francisco and the S. F. Olympic Club. More speedsters are needed as the strength of the squad is only ten men at present.

Golfers will be interested to learn that Captain Rollin Kapp was named as golf coach for the 1956 divot season. Prospective Ben Hogans will have the remainder of the month to sign up with play slated to commence early in March.

Early baseball practice started last Monday. However, there is still room for more players and anyone interested should contact the Sports Office immediately.

Army Star Wins Race In Boston

Boston (AFPS) — Pvt. Tom Courtney of Ft. Dix, N. J., was the lone serviceman to win an event at the 67th annual Boston A.A. Games, breezing to a victory in the 1,000-yard run in 2:11.9.

Four other servicemen, Pvt. Charles Pratt, Ft. Dix, N. J.; Lt. Rod Richard, Ft. Lee, Va.; Pvt. Lou Jones, Ft. Meade, Md.; and Lt. Gene Maynard, Ft. Monmouth, N. J., placed second in the 45-yard high hurdles, 50-yard dash, 600-yard and 1,000-yard runs, respectively.

In his 1956 indoor debut, 2nd Lt. Wes Santee from Quantico, Va., who has been nursing a bad calf muscle, could do no better than fourth in the Hunter mile.

Villanova's Ron Delany passed Lt. Len Truex of Lockbourne AFB, Ohio, on the backstretch and beat the former Ohio State runner to the finish line by yards. He was clocked at 4:06.3. Joe Dady, who last year was in the Air Force, ran third.

In the mile run, Lt. William Taylor—Santee's teammate at Quantico—ran the first quarter in 58.6 seconds. After setting a blistering pace for six laps he dropped out. Santee led the field at the half-way and three-quarter marks but then began to tire.

Fifteen Teams Entered In Intramural Cascade Play

The second round of Presidio Intramural basketball action got underway this week with 15 units entering teams in two separate leagues. The cage clashes will be played in the Fort Scott gym nightly at 1800, 1930 and 2030 hours.

The new leagues will continue play till the end of February when a single elimination play-off will be held for the top two teams in each league.

There will be no rule changes for the second round of play with one exception; which is that no members of the post basketball team will be authorized to play with company squads.

The first round of play saw the Headquarters Company, 505th Military Police capture the top spot in the Pacific League. Able Company of the 505th walked off with the honors in the National League and the Machine Records Unit won in the American loop.

Following is the lineup for the two leagues with first results appearing in next week's Star Presidian.

Sports Car Show Set For 21 Feb.

A trophy winning hot rod roadster, built by Jerry McKenzie at Indianapolis near the "500" speedway, will compete for the award as "America's most beautiful roadster" at the seventh annual National Roadster Show, 21-26 February at Oakland Exposition building.

McKenzie's reddish-brown roadster trimmed in yellow is regarded in mechanical circles as a masterpiece of detailed handcraft. It was one year and a half in the building.

The car has won two first places and a special award, respectively, in its three competitive show appearances—the fifth annual Indianapolis Custom Show, the Purdue University Auto Club Show and the Motor World Fair.

Starting with a 1927 Ford roadster-pickup, McKenzie proceeded to build his own turtle-deck from the top of the cab off of a 1939 Dodge panel truck. Rear axle assembly is a 1941 Ford unit (3.78 to 1 gearing) turned upside down and backwards, placing the spring in front of the axle for a shorter wheel-base.

McKenzie used Hoosier ingenuity to incorporate 1934 Ford front axle, spring and perches; 1941 Mercury spindles, brake drums and backing plates; 1951 Ford V8 engine back of a Miller Special race car grille; and 1939 floorshift transmission on a new, shorter driveshaft of chrome moly steel, into the beautiful roadster he expects to win the nine-foot high gold trophy for America's best.

Show hours on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday are 1800 to 2200 hours and on Wednesday (Washington's birthday) and Saturday and Sunday 1300 to 2200 hours.

Sharpshooters Sixth Army Pistol Stars In Ft. Benning Matches

Approximately eighty pistolers started training this week at Fort Benning, Ga., for the National Mid-Winter Pistol Championships at Tampa, Fla., 6-10 March. Competition will continue at Benning until 2 March.

Presidio sharpshooters at the Benning tryouts are Colonel L. J. D. Rouge and M/Sgt. James Wade of Sixth Army Headquarters.

Arrival of the pistolmen represents the first group of more than 1,000 of the Army's best rifle and pistol shooters scheduled to fire in matches at Benning during the spring and summer in preparation for the national matches at Camp Perry, Ohio, in August and September.

The Mid-Winters, being held for the 25th time this year, consists of 26 events. Col. (Ret.) Perry D. Swindler, former president of the Benning Rifle and Pistol Club, is match executive officer.

After the competition for the All-Army is finished, six of the highest scoring Sixth Army men will form a team that will represent the local Army area in the Mid-Winters and the Flamingo matches in Coral Gables, Florida.

The Sixth Army squad was chosen late last month in a week-long tournament held here at the Presidio under the direction of Major W. F. Dwyer, G-3 Section, Sixth Army.

Ex-Fordham thinclad Tom Courtney, U. S. 800-meter champ, is now taking basic at Ft. Dix, N. J.

Top Army Wrestlers To Train At Dix

Ft. Dix, N. J. (AFPS) — The Army's top wrestlers from all over the world are heading for here to begin training for places on the all-Army team which will compete in the Olympic tryouts at Los Angeles in May.

Approximately 22 grapplers will work out under the supervision of Lt. Al Paulekas, who won the 191-lb. championship in last year's Pan-American Games. He coached and wrestled with the Ft. Campbell, Ky., team which won the 1954 National AAU Roman-Greco championship.

Three of the candidates vying for berths on the 16-man all-Army team are Dick Mueller, 123-lb. national collegiate champ from the University of Minnesota; Wenzel Hubel, 174-lb. National AAU champ, and Vito Perrone, Big Ten champ from Michigan State.

In his first bout since his discharge from the Army, middle-weight Joey Giambra decisioned Al Andrews in a 10-rounder at Norfolk, Va.

Baby, It's Cold Up There!

Moosehorn Troops On Last Lap Of Arctic Maneuver Trip

Tanacross, Alaska (AFPS)—A 1,200-man battalion combat team in the process of making winter Army history has passed through here on the last lap of its 2,600-mile icy trek from Ft. Lewis, Wash., to the Exercise Moose Horn maneuver site 83 miles east of Fairbanks.

The cold-weather caravan, 215 army trucks, was 40 miles long. The BCT involved is part of the 5th Infantry Regt.

The soldiers looked hearty and healthy despite their 19 days on the road, and morale was high.

Lt. Col. Donald M. Callahan, BCT commander, called the hike uneventful except for minor damage to a few vehicles and injuries suffered by several of his men.

Two men suffered broken legs, one contracted mumps and a fourth was treated for possible appendicitis in a Canadian hospital.

Before starting in the trip the men took a special training course in driving, skiing, snowshoeing, marching and living in the snow at Mt. Rainier, Wash.

"We sure know how to pitch a tent in the Arctic now," commented SP3 Richard Sorensen. "The snow is usually knee deep. We pack it down with our feet and then set the tent up. It's really cozy inside our tent once we get the Yukon stove going."

The troops were carried by trucks for two hour periods and then discharged to move up the Alcan highway a quarter of a mile on skis, snowshoes or by foot. This was the stretch break devised to loosen muscles and relieve monotony.

Meanwhile, 100 officers and enlisted men of the 71st Signal Co. moved in a 30-vehicle convoy from Ft. Richardson to Ft. Greeley, Alaska, in three days and two nights.

All expert electricians, linemen and communication technicians, the men were to lay 70 miles of wire for all communications during the exercise.

This convoy experienced temperatures that dipped to 72 degrees below zero. "The only big problems we expect to have throughout the exercise is the destruction that moose and buffalo can do to wires which are laid close to the ground," Capt. Richard Winn, the CO, reported. "Their hooves get tangled in the wires and rip them out."

About 20,000 Federal employees work in the physical sciences, nearly 50,000 in engineering, 10,000 in the social sciences, 66,000 in medicine and allied fields, and 18,000 in mathematics and statistical work.

Expert Panel on Hand!

Sixth Army finals in the Sixth Interservice Photography Contest take place at the Presidio Service Club today when a panel of nationally-known judges assembles to determine the winning entries from a photo group surviving the Post semi-finals conducted here two months ago.

Judges participating in the local phase of the international contest slated for Washington this summer, are Miss Imogene Cunningham, professional photographer; Mr. Bev Pasqualetti, San Francisco City College instructor, and Mr.

Depicted is one orbit around the earth along which the first man-made earth satellite may travel. It will be launched at Patrick AFB, Fla. The satellite's orbit will shift within apparent latitudes of about 40 degrees on either side of the equator, according to the National Academy of Sciences. This will allow observations by nearly all nations participating in the international geophysical year during 1957-58. The first satellite is expected to be about 30 in. in diameter and weigh about 21 pounds.

New Film Series Titled I&E Sportsreels Now At Film Library

A new series of films entitled "I&E Sportsreels" is now available at the film equipment exchange branch, Post Signal.

Under a block of numbers beginning with AFIF 200, the movies will cover the high points of the professional, amateur and military sports world. Intended for distribution to all members of the Armed Forces, AFIF 200 telescopes the 1955 sports year in 34 minutes running time.

Officer's Call Slates "Soviet Armed Forces," "Active Duty Program"

Two new Officer's Call pamphlets, "The Soviet Armed Forces" and "The Long Range Active Duty Program," will be available for distribution in the near future.

In addition to the two pamphlets, an Officer's Call and Troop Topics, dealing with General Maxwell Taylor's principal ideas on today's Army will also be published for use by Public Information offices and Troop Information and Education sections.

George Allen Young, editor and publisher of Camera Craft magazines.

According to Mr. C. T. Sena, Sixth Army staff Arts and Crafts director, there is a favorable chance that the command will repeat last year's photographic history by again bringing home a first place winner from the national judging contest.

An innovation introduced in this year's contest is a pictorial essay comprising three separate photos, the quality and continuity of which tell a complete story without words.

Lower Court Decision!

Defense Appeals E. A. Tamm Ruling To Higher Courts

Washington (AFPS) — The Justice Department, acting for the Defense Department and the Air Force, has lodged an appeal with the Supreme Court to set aside a federal court ruling that the armed forces have no jurisdiction over civilians in foreign lands.

The appeal will be on the ruling of Judge Edward A. Tamm, who held that the AF had no right to try Mrs. Clarice B. Covert for the alleged murder of her sergeant-husband in Naples, Italy.

It will test the constitutionality of that section of the Uniform Code of Military Justice, which states that the services have the right to try by court martial "all persons serving with, employed or accompanying" the armed forces for crimes committed overseas.

The case is expected to be argued before the court sometime next May.

The federal judge based his decision upon an earlier Supreme Court ruling that the AF could not court martial a discharged airman for a crime committed while in uniform.

Sen. Thomas B. Hennings (D-Mo.) has announced that he will introduce a bill at this session of Congress to make former servicemen subject to trial in civil courts for crimes committed while in the armed forces.

VA Extends Home Loans For Veterans From 20 To 30 Years

The government has extended repayment time on guaranteed or insured home loans to 30 years.

The Veterans Administration and the Federal Housing Administration said the two per cent down payment of GI loans and the added two per cent on FHA-insured loans remains the same.

The maximum term of mortgages was cut to 25 years June 30, 1955. Now that the building boom has slowed, the VA and FHA said, 30-year loans can be allowed without danger of "over-extension of credit."

VA-guaranteed loans not closed and FHA loans not yet insured can be financed over a 30-year period.

The two organizations pointed out that mortgage terms still must be determined by the borrower and the private lender.

Sociology Major!

Sixth Army Signal Officer Wins BA In Swift Study

When the June graduating class mounts the stage at San Francisco State College this year, 28-year-old Capt. Paul N. Simon, Sixth Army Signal, who has telescoped two years' studies into barely more than two semesters' work, will receive a Bachelor of Arts degree in Sociology.

Returned from the Far East only 15 months ago, Captain Simon carrying all As and Bs, last month finished the final exams which will entitle him to a baccalaureate in June.

It was during a brief civilian interlude in his nearly ten-year Army career that Captain Simon picked up his freshman and sophomore years' credit at Oklahoma City University in 1950-51.

He had entered the Army as an enlisted man in 1945, serving nearly two years with the 33rd Infantry Division in Panama. After OCS at Fort Benning in 1947, he took the Basic Officers Course at Fort Monmouth, then served nearly two years in Tokyo.

It was in Japan that he met his wife, a former WAVE and also a specialist in communications. Today they have three children, two boys and a girl.

"Our major point of disagreement," Captain Simon said, "is whether the boys (ages three and five) will go to West Point or Annapolis."

When he returned to active military duty in 1951, Captain Simon went to Korea with a Signal Company of the 25th Infantry Division. From there, he had another stint in Japan before returning to the States.

Induction Centers Will Use New Aptitude Tests By 1 July

Induction stations will use improved tests for measuring the mental abilities of inductees and initial enlistees coming into the Armed Forces after 1 July, 1956. "Armed Forces Qualification Test, five and six will provide a more effective and fairer index of general military learning ability, according to the Army.

"Preceding World War II, there was no procedure for evaluating the mental acceptability of servicemen. The expansion of the Armed Forces and the increased complexity of military jobs necessitated the development of a screening process.

"The AFQT has been altered several times since the enactment of the Selective Service Act of 1948. The latest revision will give the services better control of the quality of new personnel in accordance with their manpower requirements."

Bachelor of Arts degree in Sociology will be awarded this June by San Francisco State College to Captain Paul N. Simon, Sixth Army Signal. Through night classes, Captain Simon recently completed his final requirements for an undergraduate degree, carrying a B-plus average. Above, he scans incoming messages on Signal Reperforators.

During the same 15 months that Captain Simon wound up his undergraduate work, he has also found time to take up the bagpipes. His teacher was Sgt. William Allen, formerly of the Sixth Army Bagpipe Band.

At the same time he has been studying by correspondence a number of military extension courses from the Command and Staff School at Fort Leavenworth. He is currently occupied with the 60 series.

With 15 hours military credit, Captain Simon earned his remaining credit hours at S. F. State combined with USAFI offerings through the Presidio Army Education Center.

"I am particularly indebted," Captain Simon said, "to Ralph McElroy and Kathryn Mason of the Education Center."

Captain Simon said he plans an advanced degree at some time in the future but recently he applied for Airborne School.

"I like my work here at the Presidio," he said, "but I think I've been pushing a pencil too long. At my age, I think I should be out with the troops."

Assistant Secretary Here!

Impetus Given New Financial Program As Key Planners Visit

A new financial program—designed to increase efficiency and save the Army money—went into effect at the Presidio and California Military District yesterday, with the arrival on post of the Honorable Chester R. Davis and Lieutenant General Laurin L. Williams.

Mr. Davis, assistant secretary of the Army for financial management, and General Williams, comptroller of the Army, arrived here yesterday afternoon to introduce the operation of the system in the Sixth Army area.

More than 200 officers met with Mr. Davis and General Williams in Harmon Armory to open the conference. The meetings will continue through today.

Known as the Army Command Management System, the program will establish new accounting procedures, based on recommendations of the Hoover Commission and studies made by business and industrial leaders.

The system, whereby control of costs is given over directly to commanders responsible for making operating decisions, gives the commander data on workload and costs, improves control of appropriated funds, and simplifies accounting.

The conference here will introduce the operation of the system in the Sixth Army area where it will be directed by Colonel Paul A. Mayo, Sixth Army Comptroller, under the over-all supervision of Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Commanding General.

General Young welcomed Mr. Davis and General Williams to the post. Mr. Davis was accorded a 17-gun salute and guard of honor. After the formal ceremony, Mr. Davis and General Williams accompanied General Young to his office for a brief meeting prior to the start of the conference.

Participants in the conference will include members of General Young's staff from Army headquarters and members of the staffs of Brigadier General Claude F. Burbach, chief of the California Military District, and Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander.

When the system is extended throughout the Army, it is expected to make additional savings in manpower, supplies and equipment and to effect economies in contractual services and appropriated funds.

promotions

Nearly 40,000 enlisted promotions have been authorized for February, making the ninth straight month that the Army has promoted more than 30,000 men.

For only the seventh time in two years, promotions to E-7 have been authorized—141 during February. The February allotment also provides for 1,439 to E-6; 4,980 to E-5; 15,563 to E-4, and 17,035 to E-3.

Although the total authorizations for February is 12,000 under last month's, it is larger than the total number of promotions provided in the first five months of 1955. From January to May of last year, only 37,878 enlisted men were promoted.

1600 Dentists, Doctors Slated for Captain's Bars Next 2 Months

A revised promotion policy will advance about 1,600 doctors and dentists, now serving as Army first lieutenants, to the temporary rank of captain within the next two months.

Beginning in April also, doctors and dentists with a year or more experience, will enter the Army as captains. Military interns will continue to serve as first lieutenants.

The new policy will not interfere with promotion of non-medical officers, according to the Defense Department, since a separate quota for doctors and dentists has been established.

DOD Seeks Amendment

Next of kin surviving soldiers who die on active duty would receive money from active leave owed to the deceased, if Congress enacts new legislation recently proposed by the Department of Defense. The DOD proposals would amend the Armed Forces Leave Act.

As the law now stands, survivors are not eligible to receive leave money.

Dollar Savings!

505th Leads Single Units In Presidio Economy Drive

Savings from the Presidio's first full month of concentrated economy efforts totaled $28,414.44, according to a recent tally of unit reports for January. Of the major Post units, the 505th MP Battalion leads the cost-trimming competition with a total savings in January of $12,940.65.

At the direction of Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, the Presidio opened its budgetary battle in December, planning its campaign for the last six months of the fiscal year.

Units will submit monthly conservation reports on the fifth of each month through June.

The January unit reports indicate, according to Lt. Col. Albert M. Wunderlich, Post conservation officer, that the area of supply yields the largest economy opportunities. Close inventories have in most cases turned up excesses of supplies and equipment.

A breakdown of unit reports showed savings in supplies and equipment of $22,710; transportation, $597.70; medical, $326.97; service (including maintenance, construction, utilities, communication, etc.), $3,546.67, and miscellaneous, $1,383.

The figures are based on the estimates in dollars and cents submitted by unit conservation officers, usually the commander or the S-4 Officer.

Other leading units in the economy program include the Post Ordnance, with January savings of $5,558; the 30th Engineer Group, $3,147, and Post Signal, $2,131.82.

"So far, the program has been most successful," said Colonel Wunderlich. "Its continued success will depend upon the cooperation and sensitive cost consciousness of the entire Presidio community."

With the January figures tabulated, units will have a yardstick by which to gauge their monthly progress, Colonel Wunderlich said.

Pilot Training!

Army Will Train Colonels, Lt. Cols. For Flying Duty

Washington (AFPS) — A "limited number" of colonels and lieutenant colonels will be trained as army aviators in fiscal 1957, the Department of the Army has announced.

Officers selected for this training will attend a special course in fixed and rotary wing flight instruction of approximately 35 weeks duration at the Army Aviation School, Ft. Rucker, Ala.

When the course is successfully completed, the officers will be designated army aviators in the MOS 1981/1066, placed on flying status and assigned to army aviation duty.

To be eligible, officers in the two grades must currently be serving on active duty in a branch authorized aviation, have successfully completed not less than one year of command duty of a battalion or higher level organization, have not less than one year of general staff level experience and meet the general physical standards for class 1A prescribed by AR 40-110.

The physical examination must be completed within the preceding 90 days from the date of application. Officers selected for attendance at a service school normally will not be accepted for flight training.

Cir. 624-14, dated Jan. 26, 1956, contains further information on requirements and selection. Applications must reach The Adjutant General, Department of the Army, Washington 25, D. C., before April 15, through appropriate command channels.

New Inspector General

Major General David A. D. Ogden has succeeded Major General Wayne C. Zimmerman as Army inspector general. He was appointed to the position by Army Secretary Wilbur M. Brucker when General Zimmerman retired in January. General Ogden had been deputy IG since May, 1955.

Unveiling of the Air Force's first giant C-133A turbo-prop cargo plane took place recently at Long Beach, Calif. The plane, expected to be one of the fast air freighters, is designed primarily for cargo, but can transport more than 200 troops or 10 loaded jeeps.

"My Vote, My Country" Will Be '56 Freedom Letter Contest Theme

"My Vote and My Country" will be the theme of a new letter-writing contest to be sponsored during 1956 by the Freedoms Foundation, Valley Forge, Pa. The Department of the Army will lend its support in promoting the contest Army-wide.

As one of the prizes, the Army has already authorized transportation to Washington, D. C., for the winning contestant to witness the 1957 Presidential inauguration. Further details will be announced in the near future.

Nearly $10,000 was handed over to the National Polio Foundation this week, the contribution of the Presidio community to the March of Dimes. Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, presented a check for $9,907.48 to Mr. D. V. Nielsen, executive secretary and campaign director of the San Francisco drive. The Presidio's March of Dimes contribution this year represents the largest single fund donation in Post history. (Photo by Dempsey)

We have a defense job inside our own country as much as we have along the borders of the free world.

We have to defend the U.S. from communists in the country. To handle them we have to know why they joined the party.

One large group is people who are maladjusted—they have been called "damaged souls" by one writer.

Many of them are weaklings. They want to be told what to do and what to think—and that, the Communist Party certainly does for them.

So these unfortunates obey the party and ask no questions. They have little jobs under the party, but they feel useful.

Some of them belong to minority groups and feel discriminated against. Some are lonely, frustrated persons, failures of one kind or another. Feelings of insecurity and hostility well up in them.

The Communist party—which also has a hostile, destructive attitude toward society—is a natural haven for such individuals.

But—sooner or later—they're going to find out that communism isn't going to give them the square deal they're looking for.

That's when a lot of them quit the party. We need to speed up the day they find out the truth.

And we must get through to as many damaged souls as possible before they take the big misstep. (AFPS)

Sixth Army Bands Will Join Yuba City's Unique 'Christmas in February'

The Sixth Army band and pipe band is making preparations today to participate in Yuba City's "Christmas in February" celebration.

Denied a regular Christmas celebration when their homes were wiped out by the Christmas Eve flood, 15,000 children in the area will celebrate the event on 25 February. The sponsoring organization—the Yuba City Lions Club—has invited a host of groups to help make the event a success.

The two Sixth Army musical organizations will participate in a parade Saturday, 25 February, along with Beale Air Force Base troops, a vaudeville show and circus for the children in the afternoon. The groups will also play at a repeat performance for adults in the evening.

Of the 300,000 civilians employed by the Army in foreign countries, only 14,000 are American citizens.

Needs Real Doer!

Defense Secretary Seeks Guided Missile Assistant

Washington (AFPS)—Defense Secretary Wilson has announced he is looking for a top-level executive to serve as his special assistant in directing the guided missile program, particularly in the long-range ballistic field.

The new post will be known as the Special Assistant to the Secretary of Defense for Guided Missiles.

In a Pentagon press conference Mr. Wilson told newsmen he needs "more doers" and the man he chooses for the position "must be in that category."

"If I can't find someone, I think I will maybe have to do it myself or Reuben Robertson (deputy defense secretary) will have to take it on.

"But we have come to the conclusion that if we could find the right man, it will help us to get the job done promptly and efficiently," Mr. Wilson added.

He declared in answer to questions that he did not believe the Russians are any smarter or more capable of producing guided missiles faster than the U.S., but said he would not under-estimate them.

"They have a great deal of capacity if they concentrate and in their form of government, they can pick out any particular thing and make a great deal of progress with it.

"But I don't think they can make a great deal of progress with everything like we do in the free world," he added.

Mr. Wilson described the current U.S. missile program as "a good stiff" one backed by all the money it needs. But he said "some of the technical developments take some time."

Should Be Chary!

VA Warns Vets On Loan Violations

The San Francisco manager of the Veterans Administration Regional Office sounded two important warnings to former military personnel buying or selling homes under the GI Bill.

J. Glenn Corbitt said veterans will run afoul of Federal statutes if they purchase a home with a GI loan intending to turn a quick sale at a profit rather than occupying it as the law requires.

In a prepared statement Mr. Wilson outlined some of the duties of his special guided missiles assistant.

In addition to helping the defense secretary in direction and coordination of research, development, engineering and production of guided missiles, he will act as chairman of the DOD Ballistic Missiles Committee.

He will give advice to the Armed Forces Policy Council, the service secretaries, the joint chiefs of staff and other DOD agencies.

He will also make regular periodic reports to Mr. Wilson, and is charged with the preparation and presentation to the National Security Council and the President of DOD reports on guided missiles.

Aerocycle Offers New Mobility

Soldier To Travel On Standup Perch; Totes 300 Pounds

Washington (AFPS) — The Army, envisioning a new concept in battlefield mobility, has unveiled its own flying carpet, a 200-pound "Aerocycle" that will give the foot soldier an airborne personality.

Combining principles of the helicopter and motorcycle, the Aerocycle has two rotary blades under a stand-up perch that carries the infantryman to his destination.

To guide the Aerocycle, the pilot stands on the platform and simply leans in the direction he wants to travel. The control mechanism that governs vertical motion and speed is similar to that of a motorcycle.

Capable of landing on either ground or sea, the Aerocycle is relatively easy to operate. The Army said initial tests at Camp Kilmer, N. J., 15 December, 1955, showed that soldiers without any previous flying experience could become proficient operators after only 20 minutes of instruction.

motor with a 44 horsepower rating can lift the machine into the air in a matter of seconds. It can carry a payload of 300 pounds, has a maximum speed of 65 mph and a range of about 150 miles.

The Army already has obtained 12 Aerocycles and shortly plans to conduct experimental tactical tests with them.

The machine was developed by DeLackner Helicopter, Inc., Mt. Vernon, N. Y.

Defense Secretary Wilson

Announces New Supply 'Single Manager Plan'

Washington (AFPS)—A far-reaching change in supply management—the "single manager plan"—has been announced by Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson.

In introducing the plan, Mr. Wilson said its "clear purpose . . . is to promote increased economies in the utilization of manpower, material and services."

The plan is the result of three years of intensive study of defense department supply systems. DOD officials feel it is the most significant move towards unification of supply activities since passage of the National Security Act in 1947.

This act established the DOD and placed the three military departments under the defense secretary.

The single manager concept already has been partially applied.

Last November, the army secretary was designated single manager for subsistence for all the services. Mr. Wilson's recent announcement also assigned responsibility to him for clothing and textiles and traffic management.

The navy secretary was assigned responsibility for petroleum, oil and lubricants, medical and dental supplies and the Military Sea Transportation Service.

To the AF secretary, Mr. Wilson assigned responsibility for photographic supplies and the Military Air Transport Service.

The new plan will require only a few changes in existing arrangements under which the Army has been responsible for subsistence, the Navy for MSTs and the AF for MATS.

Essentially, this is how the plan works:

It assigns full responsibility for supply management of a specified commodity or service to a single military department secretary.

It thereby places the authority for the three basic supply functions—requirements, purchasing and distribution—under one specially designated person.

Mr. Wilson said "this plan will be an effective way . . . to achieve economies without putting another overlapping layer of paperwork over the operations in the services" of the DOD.

He also indicated that defense officials feel the plan will eliminate duplication existing in the supply systems.

It was further stated that substantial savings should result from the plan since central management of inventories and procurement will be established.

As a single manager for a commodity or service, a departmental secretary would establish a definite agency to handle the responsibility. An executive director would head the agency.

To handle POL, for instance, the Navy would have an executive director for petroleum. This director would be responsible for putting together requirements for POL submitted by the various military departments.

He would be responsible for applying supplies of a petroleum product, which might be available from one department, against the needs of another service. After this, he would decide the quantities which must be procured.

Mr. Wilson stated that he intended to have a basic organizational pattern that could be applied to all single manager assignments.

He said that the practicality of further use of this management technique will be determined later after careful study of possible savings and the advantages and disadvantages of this type of operation.

Mr. Wilson concluded this would be done "recognizing that the primary mission is to support effectively the military effort of the country."

Followed Sounds in Valley!

Sgt. Survives 4-Day Ordeal After Jump Into Wilderness

Eaton, Wash. (AFPS)—A 24-year-old army paratrooper survived a rugged four-day ordeal in a snowbound wilderness recently when he had to parachute from a plane that was temporarily out of control.

S/Sgt. John M. Horan, who was flying west to meet his Japanese wife and three children, was ordered to jump by the pilot when the plane went out of control.

Ironically, his wife arrived in Seattle two days after the incident only to learn that her husband had been reported lost on a flight to meet her.

Sgt. Horan, who hiked his way out of the mountains here to safety, told reporters he had to cut his shoes open to relieve his swollen feet so he could travel through snow four feet deep. He said he fashioned snowshoes from refrigerator shelves he found in a summer mountain cabin where he holed up for two days.

He bound the shelves to his numbed feet with strips from his parachute. The sergeant reached here after a search party was forced back by a blizzard. The party had been seeking him on a ridge 50 miles to the northwest.

"I was following the sounds of trucks and trains and various other sounds I heard down in the valley," explained Sgt. Horan when he finally reached safety.

One of his first thoughts was for his wife and children.

Shortly after his rescue, Sgt. Horan phoned Ft. Lawton, Seattle, where his wife and children were waiting to hear news about him.

The 82nd Airborne Division's "Little Airborne Academy" at Fort Bragg, N. C., graduates 1,300 new parachutists, jumpmasters and aerial delivery specialists each month.

CMD Civilian Awarded $200 for Superior Job Performance

A $200 award for sustained superior performance has been presented to Miss Shiyeko Murata, a California Military District employee at the Army Reserve office in Stockton, California. She also received a letter of commendation from Brigadier General Claude F. Burbach, District Chief.

Miss Murata received the award for her outstanding performance of duty as a Clerk-Stenographer during the period of September 1954 to September 1955. She has been with the Reserve office since March 1951, and recently was promoted to Administrative Assistant to the Reserve units in Stockton.

Dislocation Costs Paid Households Shifting Stations

To meet costs of moving households from station to station, the Army pays a dislocation allowance to service members based on the individual's monthly allotment for quarters.

The policy applies to personnel with dependents and in pay grades from E-5. The allowance has also been extended to E-4s with four or more years of service.

Payment is not made, however, until dependents have completed their travel to the permanent change of station and the service member has reported officially for duty. The money is in addition to all other allowances authorized by Joint Travel Regulations.

teachers wanted—

A program to recruit retired officers and other veterans of the Armed Forces into teaching positions in the nation's secondary schools has been initiated by the United States Department of Labor.

Designed to mitigate the shortage of teachers in science, math, industrial arts and commercial courses particularly, the Labor Department program seeks to encourage former service members to apply with local officers of the public employment service.

The applications will then be made available to school authorities.

Promotion Initiative Still Company Commander's Below Grade E-5

Unit commanders of 6002, SU, have been instructed to insure that promotion of enlisted personnel in Headquarters, C and D Companies are made on a "best qualified" basis, according to a policy directive issued this week by Post Headquarters.

passover

Passover, the Jewish holiday commemorating the exodus of Israel from Egypt to the Promised Land, will begin at sundown Monday, 26 March, and end Tuesday, 3 April.

Unit commanders have been instructed to cooperate in granting three-day passes to Jewish personnel wishing to attend Passover services.

On the Presidio, opening services will be held at 1900 hours Monday, 26 March, in the Post Chapel. They will be conducted by Rabbi William Z. Dalin, Chaplain (Major) USAR, Sixth Army Auxiliary Chaplain.

46th Ordnance Group Completes Course on Work Simplification

The officers of the 46th Ordnance Group today completed a six-session course in work simplification, conducted this week by the Post Comptroller's Office. Designed to instruct officers in management improvement and job analysis techniques, the course was presented in six two-hour classes conducted at Stillwell Hall.

On the basis of the course materials, each of the participating officers from the 46th Ordnance is required to prepare a management and improvement handbook, analyzing his own job operation and recommending simplification of the procedure.

Slate Keel Laying For First Pacific Coast Built Atom Sub

A nuclear-powered submarine, first of its kind to be built in Pacific waters, will be constructed at Mare Island Naval Station, Vallejo, California, according to a recent announcement by the Navy. The keel will be laid 21 February.

The Navy's fifth atomic-powered submarine, the new construction follows by just a month the completion of the Swordfish, built at the Portsmouth, New Hampshire, Naval Shipyard.

As yet unnamed, the Mare Island ship will be one of six nuclear-powered sisters to the highly successful Nautilus.

Clarifying promotion procedures, the letter states that appointment authority for pay grades E-3 and E-4 remains with Detachment and Company commanders. Power to raise EM to grades E-5 through E-7, however, is reserved to the Commanding Officer, Special Troops.

The memo states that unit commanders "will adhere strictly" to appointment standards set down in paragraph 6, AR 624-200. Unit commanders have been instructed to see that individuals selected for appointment have, "by exemplary conduct and performance of duty, proved themselves capable of assuming the additional responsibilities imposed by the appointment."

No enlisted personnel, assigned to duty with staff sections, will be promoted without the dual recommendation of both the section chief and the unit commander.

Each recommendation for appointment will be submitted by the unit commander to the Post Military Personnel Division to be checked against the individual's personnel records. Purpose of the examination is to insure that "the records have not been flagged under any regulation precluding favorable personnel action," the memo states.

Selections for appointment to grades E-5 through E-7 will be made by the Deputy Post Commander on recommendation of a promotion board established on the Presidio.

Theology Students Can Qualify As Officers

Washington — More than a thousand Army commissions are available for theology students — potential chaplains — who can qualify for appointment as second lieutenants while completing their education.

These young men, who will be trained to fill vacancies for first lieutenants and captains in the Army Reserve and National Guard, must be full-time students at recognized theological seminaries to qualify for appointment. In addition, each candidate must:

Have completed 120 undergraduate semester hours at a recognized college or university;

Have the approval of his church denomination;

Be over 18 but not have reached his 30th birthday prior to appointment;

Sign an agreement that, if appointed in the grade of second lieutenant, he will accept a commission as first lieutenant, if offered upon ordination;

Agree to serve a minimum of two full years on active duty upon appointment as a first lieutenant if the Department of the Army requires his services;

Meet the general requirements for appointment as a commissioned officer in the Army Reserve.

The Army's "second lieutenant" chaplain program is designed primarily for first and second-year seminarians, since senior students may apply directly for the grade of first lieutenant in the latter part of their senior year. However, seniors who will not be fully ordained immediately after graduation may make application for appointment in the grade of second lieutenant if they wish to attend The Chaplain School, Fort Slocum, N. Y., during the summer following their graduation from the seminary.

All second lieutenants in the Chaplains Branch of the Army will be eligible to take the eight-week summer course at The Chaplain School, either between terms at the seminary, or after graduation. In addition to this training, they may take courses offered by the Extension Department of the School.

During the eight weeks active duty at The Chaplain School single second lieutenants normally will earn $677, while married students may receive approximately $711. In addition, the officers will receive a uniform allowance of $200 when they have completed 14 days of the eight-week course. They will be given travel expenses to and from the school.

After graduation from the seminary, and appointment as a first lieutenant, it is possible for the Reserve Chaplain to earn from $500 to $1,000 per year as a member of the organized reserve while serving a civilian parish and training with the local reserve unit.

Qualified individuals who are interested should write to the Office, Chief of Chaplains, Department of the Army, The Pentagon, Washington 25, D. C., for application blanks and instructions.

Buttressing its lead, the Honor Guard took marching honors again in last week's regular bi-monthly retreat parade. Lieutenant Colonel George Stump, Plans Division, Sixth Army G-4, presented the prize plaque to 1st Lt. Monroe G. Thomas, executive officer of the Honor Guard.

Soldier's-Eye View!

Sfc. Helped Make History In Both 'Old' and 'New' Armies

By SP3 Hugh Dempsey
Star-Presidian Staff Writer

"When I joined the Army in 1916, I had one week of basic training and the next thing I knew, I was down on the Mexican border fighting Pancho Villa."

This was the first of a series of events in the life of Sfc. Oscar S. Griggs, who will retire in April after 31 years' service in the U.S. Army.

The Mexican War was the first campaign for the silver haired sergeant and right on its heels came WWI. After arriving in England, he was assigned to the 26th Division, often referred to as the "Yankee Division," and it was with this unit that he became proficient in the use of the French Hotchkiss machine gun, which he used during the war while serving side by side with a French Army unit.

Fighting across France, he engaged in such battles as the Marne, Meuse Argonne, Verdun and Chateau Thierry, where, on July, 1918, he was severely wounded by enemy rifle fire. This was his last campaign of the war.

Next came duty in Panama where he served with a Signal Corps unit of the 14th Infantry Regiment, and with this same outfit went on to Nicaragua to put down an uprising within the country.

Coming back to the States in 1930, he found himself assigned to a new kind of duty, that of a plain-clothes military policeman in New York City. "Before we could go out in civilian clothes on this job, we had to train for six months in a police academy and they made it just as tough as possible."

Reflecting on how promotions were made in those days he said, "I might make sergeant in one outfit, but whenever I got transferred, I reverted to private again. You didn't take your rank with you then, and each time you went to a new unit, everything started over."

Re-enlisting in 1933 at Plattsburg Barracks, New York, Sgt. Griggs was sent to a machine gun company in the 26th Infantry Regiment of the First Infantry Division. Here he qualified as an expert marksman with the water-cooled 30's, staying with this organization until 1940, when he was re-assigned to Governors Island, New York.

Later he trained combat MP's at Camp Custer, Michigan. "Those boys knew they were headed straight for combat, and it was our job to get them trained, and tough as shoe leather," said Griggs.

However, the highlight of his Army career came in 1948 when he was assigned the job of Desk Sergeant with an MP unit stationed at the West Point Military Academy. "Everything was strict there, and there were no mix-ups, but with all its rigid controls, I think if they were to send me back there now, I'd just forget about retiring from the service," he said with a wistful look in his eye.

In 1951 Sgt. Griggs went back to Panama where he served at Quarry Heights with the 7442 SU, acting as Provost Sergeant until 1954.

His next assignment orders brought him to his present duty station at the Presidio, where he was appointed Inspector of Quarters and Sanitation at the BOQ. Now, he is the over-all supervisor of these quarters.

During these 31 years of service, Sgt. Griggs has been awarded the Purple Heart, Good Conduct Medal, Mexican Border Ribbon, WWI Victory Medal with four clusters, American Defense Ribbon, and three French decorations for participation in the engagements at Verdun, Meuse Argonne and Chateau Thierry.

He is also an avid hobbyist specializing in constructing exact scale models of early model vehicles which include Wells Fargo stage coaches, Ford automobiles, and an old 20 mule wagon team with each of the miniature mules perfectly harnessed.

Two of his models were displayed in museums after having won for Griggs a letter of achievement signed by the Secretary of the Army following an all-Army contest. At the present time he is working on a 1906 Columbia electric car.

news in books

New additions to the shelves of the Sixth Army Reference Library have been announced this week. Titles among them include:

"THE NORTH REPORTS THE CIVIL WAR," by J. C. Andrews, is a scholarly yet readable account of how ingenious newspapermen pioneered techniques of combat reporting, as revealed in their diaries, dispatches, news stories and other documents, with press relations described as they existed then.

"PACIFIC NORTHWEST INDIAN WARS," by R. H. Glassley, describes each of the eight major campaigns from 1840 to 1879. A graphic account!

"THE FIRST ENLISTED WOMEN," by E. J. Dessez (1917-1918), gives a brief record of the 11,000 women recruited by the U.S. Naval Reserve Force.

"JULIUS CAESAR," by A. L. Duggan, gives the story of a great life in brief. It presents the man and the history which made his career meaningful.

"YEAR OF DECISIONS," by Harry S. Truman, presents volume 1 in the former President's memoirs. It is a record of his tumultuous years in office, his early days in Missouri, glimpses of his family life, appraisals of world leaders, and the background of national and international events.

"AMERICA'S RISE TO WORLD POWER," 1898-1954, by F. R. Dulles, deals not only with the bare diplomatic story but the movement of public opinion, the more general background of ideas, the interplay of political and economic forces, and leading personalities and their contributions.

"WITHOUT THE CHRYSANTHEMUM AND THE SWORD," by Jean Stoetzel, presents a study of the attitudes of youth in post-war Japan. The book is the result of a field-research conducted by a two-man team sent to Japan in 1951-53 under the auspices of UNESCO.

Further titles and reviews of new books at the Sixth Army Reference Library will be published in the next issue of the Star Presidian.

New Memo Says:

Unsoldierly Avoirdupois Must Go!

Stylish stout or the Ivy League "natural look" may be de rigueur in San Francisco's Post Street apparel emporiums—but for Army personnel they're strictly out.

That much was made clear when Memorandum Number 12, Presidio of San Francisco, was issued from post message center.

The memorandum sets forth minimum and maximum weight limits for all military personnel from 18 to 64 years of age. It was issued to implement principles set forth in a letter from General Maxwell D. Taylor, chief of staff, United States Army, regarding physical fitness of Army personnel.

Complying with General Taylor's letter—and indorsements by Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commanding General, and Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander—an individualized weight control clinic is about to be established at the Post Dispensary "for those individuals whose weight is beyond the maximum or minimum range for age and weight."

Income Tax Series

'Deduction' a Favorite Word; Itemize For Possible Savings

(This is the seventh in a series of articles on federal income tax filing for the year 1955. The articles are based on information furnished to AFPS by the American Institute of Accountants, the national organization of certified public accountants, and tax information available from the Navy's Bureau of Supplies and Accounts.)

"Deduction" is the taxpayer's favorite word. Every dollar you can deduct in figuring your tax puts 20 to 91 cents in your pocket, depending upon the tax bracket you're in.

Medical deductions were discussed in a previous article. Here are some of the other deductions you may be able to take if you itemize them instead of using the short 1040A form or the standard 10 per cent deduction:

You can deduct your contributions to religious, charitable, scientific, literary and educational organizations, and to non-profit cemeteries.

Deduct contributions of goods at their fair value, as well as cash, but not your personal services (blood donations are regarded as a personal service and not deductible).

If you contribute stocks, real estate or other property, you can deduct their value at the time of the gift, even if it is considerably more than the original cost to you.

You ordinarily are not permitted to deduct a contribution which you have only pledged and not paid during the tax year.

You can deduct up to 20 per cent of your income for any eligible charitable contributions, and up to 30 per cent if at least 10 per cent was in gifts to religious organizations, schools or hospitals.

Interest you pay on personal loans and other indebtedness is deductible.

If there is a mortgage on your home, be sure to find out what part of your payments is interest and deduct it on your tax return. The same applies to automobile financing and installment purchases.

If some of your credit buying involves "carrying charges" instead of specified interest, you are allowed to deduct such charges up to six per cent of the average monthly unpaid balance if they are listed separately in your contract or bills.

Most taxes you paid for yourself or a member of your household, except federal taxes, are deductible. However, taxes are not deductible when included in the price and not separately charged to the customer.

If you paid someone to care for your child under 12 because that was necessary while you were at work, you may be entitled to a "child care" deduction of as much as $600. This deduction also applies to the care of any dependent who was mentally or physically incapacitated. Check the instructions to see whether you qualify.

Don't overlook deductions for losses due to storms, shipwrecks, fires, floods, theft, and accidents not due to your own negligence.

The way to figure such losses is explained in the instructions. Any insurance or other compensation you may have received for the damage must be subtracted from the amount of loss.

Miscellaneous deductions to which you are entitled include the cost of uniform equipment like insignia, braid, collar devices, etc. The cost of the uniform and its alteration and laundering is not deductible, however.

Also deductible are some alimony payments, amount of re-enlistment bonus refunded by reason of termination of enlistment, dues to professional societies and subscription to professional journals. Also, a tenant stockholder in a cooperative apartment house corporation may deduct his share of the real-estate taxes and interest paid by such corporation.

The instructions that come with your tax forms give further information. Help is also available from the Internal Revenue Service, which urges you to consult a properly qualified advisor if you need outside assistance.

Sumo Champion Kagimizato might find it difficult to fit into the 'streamline role' assigned the modern American soldier. Still, just to show you can't judge a pot by its cover, Kagimizato threw enough weight around during a 15-day tournament to win the coveted Sumo championship of Japan, recently. He holds the Emperor's cup, symbolic of his second straight national wrestling title.

In order to implement the program, unit commanders will submit a one-time report by 1630 hours today of all individuals in their organization who are not within the weight standards and all personnel who volunteer for the weight control clinic.

Authorities at the dispensary said they expect to call in personnel whose names have been submitted for consultation. Following the private conference, individuals will be given special diets to reduce or gain, as the case may be. A basic weight-height chart has been issued with the local memo.

More Housing Oked

Of 1,381 newly authorized Capehart Act homes for military families, some 559 dwellings will be built at installations in the Sixth Army area, according to a recent Defense Department announcement.

At Yuma Test Station, Arizona, 209 of the Capehart housing units will be built in the near future. Another 350 will be constructed at Camp Irwin, California.

Lofgran Hurt; As Raiders Lose Finale By 1 Point

By Pvt. Bob Malone
Star Presidian Sports Editor

Topping five Western States' service teams and five star-studded Industrial League teams, Presidio's bristling Red Raiders came within an eyelash of scoring the most sensational upset of the young AAU season when they dropped a single point decision (58-57) to the Wickland Manufacturing club (Los Angeles) in the thrill-packed finale of the Southwestern Invitational Basketball Tournament, in Nevada last week.

A full house of over 2,000 fans roared their approval as the Los Angeles AAU squad and the Presidio battled down to the wire. Los Angeles guard Jack Stone's free throw with 2:46 remaining was the deciding break, breaking a 57-57 deadlock. Stone was also the games high point man with 24 tallies.

Even so the Presidio might have won it had Don Lofgran, Presidio center, been able to play the last nine minutes. Driving in through the key, the former All-American was dumped making a layup and sprained his ankle. He left the game limping badly and was never able to return. Without his great backboard work and outside shooting Los Angeles caught up to the Red Raiders.

The Red Raiders, after trailing throughout the first half, caught up early in the third frame when Mike O'Neill hit on a jump shot to put the Presidio ahead 38-36. Roaring on, the local soldier cagers moved out into a six point lead, paced by Norm Ellenberger and Bob Harbertson with ten minutes left to go, but when Lofgran went out the superior height of the Los Angeles team proved the margin of victory.

Big Mike O'Neill led the Raider scoring attack with 19 points, closely followed by Lofgran with 15 and Harbertson with 12.

The Presidio opened the desert tourney by edging the powerful Fort Ord Warriors 72-70 in an exciting overtime victory.

Fort Ord played its best game of the year and it was almost good enough to drop the high scoring locals out of the single-elimination tournament. The losers were ahead by as much as 16 points in the second half but gradually wilted under the Presidio full court press and the steady point making of Lofgran and O'Neill.

Next home game for the Presidio Red Raiders will be Tuesday night, 21 Feb., when the Treasure Island Navy Pirates sail into Letterman Army Hospital gym for a Bay Area Armed Forces Basketball clash. Game time will be 2000 hours and all Presidio fans are urged to come out and support a winning team.

sidio full court press and the steady point making of Lofgran and O'Neill.

Fort Ord, using a tight zone defense, held a 32-19 half-time lead as the Red Raiders were unable to hit from outside the zone. Bob Harbertson hit four buckets in the first half to keep the Presidio in the ball game.

After a halftime pep talk by Coach Hal Fischer, the Presidio men roared back on the court to score five straight points to draw close at 32-24.

OUTJUMPING his rival center for the tipoff is lanky Presidio star Don Lofgran (No. 17). Waiting to snare the casaba is Red Raider ace, Norm Ellenberger (No. 20). Although Lofgran was out of action this week the Presidio cage squad rolled over the San Francisco Navy Shipyards 91-56. Ellenberger sparked the local soldiers in the league tilt with 18 points.

Rolling on, scoring by O'Neill and Bill Aires closed the gap, and then Lofgran tossed in two free throws to make it 58-54 with six minutes remaining, Ord still ahead. O'Neill sank a free throw, then Lofgran leaped high to reach Ellenberger's errant set shot and smash it down through for 58-57 with 5:34 left.

Lofgran tied it at 58-58 with a free throw, and after Ord scored, tossed in a two pointer to tie it up once again.

Action went on like this till the regulation gun sounded with the score standing at 68-68. Bill Davis bagged a follow shot to open the overtime period only to have Ord tie it up with two free throws. Then with four seconds remaining, Harbertson's layup rolled off the rim and rangy Lofgran pushed it in for the game's most important basket.

Don Lofgran was top point man with 28 and O'Neill was second with 19. Bob Harbertson hit for 13 for third place honors.

The battling soldiers raced to a 70-62 win over the Pasadena (Calif.) AAU team for their second victory of the tourney, by putting the clamps on Bobby Hopkins, Pasadena guard, and springing Mike O'Neill loose for 29 big points.

Hopkins tossed in 21 tallies in the first half to keep the AAU team in the game but close guarding in the second frame limited Hopkins to but one goal.

Lofgran with 14 and Harbertson with 14 were the other Raider scoring stars. They were helped by a nine point outburst by Bob Moran.

Two Presidio players were honored by being selected on the All-Tournament team. They were Don Lofgran at center and Mike O'Neill at the guard slot. Mike O'Neill with 67 points in the three games played, ended up as high scorer for the tournament.

Latest report from the hospital is that Don Lofgran is expected to be released today with his sprained ankle showing much improvement.

Starting on 28 February the Presidio melon men will host the All-Sixth Army basketball tourney, which will be held at the nearby Kezar Pavilion. Free bus service will be provided both to and from the Presidio for spectators. The tournament will get under way at 1230 hours on the 28th with colorful opening ceremonies by the Sixth Army Band.

Sports Car Show Set For E. Bay

The fastest accelerating car in the world will be a feature exhibit in the National Roadster Show to be held 21-26 February in the Oakland Exposition Building.

Known as the Riley Special, the 500 horsepower "dragster" set the astounding record of from zero to 143.95 miles per hour in one quarter of a mile with Calvin Rice at the wheel. The run was made at the National meet at Phoenix in November.

Records are set with either of two engines, a 331 cubic inch Chrysler or a 293 cubic inch Mercury. Painted yellow and black, the car will be displayed in the National Hot Rod Association exhibit.

Declared a mechanical monster of perfect precision workmanship and performance by experts in automotive competition, the Calvin Rice car is expected to prove one of the highlights of the show. More than 130 custom cars, hot rods and handbuilt sports cars will vie for public attention, according to show manager, Mary L. Slonaker.

The show will open the evening before Washington's Birthday for a six-day exposition of "personalized" automobiles brought here from coast to coast. The 1956 presentation will be the seventh annual of the only major auto show of its kind in the United States.

The largest number of auto clubs in show history will participate. Last year's winners of the nine-foot gold trophy, the largest in the world, will be exhibited in a special area with the "big cup." Ray Anderegg of Merced and Blackie Gejeian of Fresno tied in 1955 for the cup and title as "America's most beautiful roadster."

Show hours will be 1800 to 2200 on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, from 1300 to 2200 on Washington's Birthday, Saturday and Sunday.

AR 28-52

Army AR Limits Pros On Post Athletic Teams

According to a recent article in the Army Times a new Army Regulation, 28-52, dated 3 January, 1956, is now being distributed to the field. It contains an outline in detail of the entire Army sports program including the number of professional players on Army baseball, basketball or football teams and the number of days the teams may operate in any season.

In baseball, basketball and football, not more than 25 per cent of the men on the team can be what is called "restricted" professional players. In basketball and football, a restricted player is anyone who is or has been under contract to a professional league team. In baseball, a restricted player is anyone who is or has been under contract to a Class "A" or higher league.

The maximum amount of time, including pre-season training, which may now be devoted to the four major sports is as follows: 150 days for baseball, 90 days for basketball, 105 days for boxing and 120 days for football.

These periods do not include competition in Army area, All-Army, inter-service, national or international championships. Nor do these time periods apply to regimental level competition.

The new regulation repeats the schedule restriction of 30 games per season for a basketball team and 50 games for a post baseball team.

Elsewhere in the regulation the administrative and financial end of the Army Sports Program is outlined as well as command tournaments, All-Army tournaments, trophies, officials, civilian sports directors, etc.

The regulation supercedes AR-680-30, dated 23 Feb., 50; Cir. 3, dated 30 Sept., 54; and DA message 371360, dated 8 Feb., 55.

Fourteen soldiers from the Third Army are among the 50 students enrolled in the twentieth annual session of George Barr's Umpire School, which opened at Longwood, Fla., January 19. The GIs will attend the classes for three weeks.

Top S-3 NCO Reups For Six; Will Complete Thirty Years

Master Sergeant Michael L. Bray, chief clerk with Post S-3, became the second top Presidio non-commissioned officer within a week to sign on the dotted line for another hitch in the Army.

Sergeant Bray, completing 24 years' service, was sworn in for a six-year hitch by Major Jack Peterson, his superior officer in the section, in an informal ceremony earlier this week.

His most recent award came in April 1955 when Brigadier General John W. Harmon, commanding general of the 69th Infantry Division, awarded him a Certificate of Achievement for services rendered that organization from September 1954 to February 1955.

Major General Henry Clay Hodges, who recently celebrated his 95th birthday, is the oldest living graduate of the United States Military Academy. He has missed only two West Point graduation exercises in the past 35 years. Hodges retired from the Army in 1920 after 43 years' service.

Grand Opening!

Angel Islanders Get New Exchange And Service Club

On security-bound Angel Island the 9th AAA held the grand opening this week of its new unit exchange and service club with an evening dance and cake baking contest. Renovated and redecorated by the AAA men during off-duty hours, the exchange is the first in Angel Island history.

The service club and exchange were converted from the old Fort McDowell Officers Club, closed since the end of WWII. The new facilities make it no longer necessary for islanders to commute with the mainland to obtain personal supplies and entertainment.

Wives and families of both officers and enlisted men attended the Wednesday night opening, along with 28 hostesses, supervised by the San Francisco Red Cross.

Among the sponsors were Colonel Dallas F. Haynes, commanding officer of the 9th AAA Group; Lt. Lyman D. Burkett, CO of the 9th AAA Battalion; Capt. Allen S. Bowen, CO Btry. D, and Major B. F. Muse, Bay Area Exchange Officer, who cut the ceremonial cake.

The Ayala Room of the club, in which the dance was held, is named after Lt. Don Juan Ayala, who in 1775 claimed the island for Spain. He named it Our Lady of Angels Island.

Highlight of the evening was the selection of Mrs. Bessie Curtis as winner of the baking contest. She is the wife of WO Joseph C. Curtis.

Tactics and Technology

The Army In The Atomic Age Next Troop Information Topic

What is the role of the Army in the atomic age? The Army's own view of its mission in a world which has unleashed the power of the atom will be the subject of next week's Troop Information topic.

From the Army's standpoint, despite revolutionary changes in the technological means of making war, its fundamental mission remains unchanged. The Army's prime military function, according to the information topic outline, is still to defeat enemy forces in ground combat and gain control of the land and its people.

But there are new and unsettling factors which the Army must consider in tactics, techniques and weapons of atomic warfare.

First, the potential enemy also has nuclear weapons and the American margin of superiority in atomic arms can no longer be guaranteed.

Therefore, the information outline argues, the threat of "Massive Retaliation" and its implication of hyperbolic, atomic warfare cannot be counted on as a deterrent to conflict.

The Army must be prepared to fight limited as well as general wars—controlled conflicts (like Korea) in which conventional weapons only are employed or in which nuclear arms are restricted to tactical use.

It is the Army's objective in the atomic age to make those adaptations necessary to remain strong, strategically positioned and mobile, capable of deterring military aggression, whatever its form.

In an era of revolutionary change in weapons, organization and concepts of employment, the Army seeks to develop the combinations of those factors required to meet the challenges of tomorrow's wars.

Army Engineers' Role In Geodetic Survey Slated for Mag Spread

An illustrated 35-page article on the U. S. Army Engineers and their part in the Inter-American Geodetic Survey will appear in the March issue of National Geographic Magazine.

Said Colonel Hettrich, "We appreciated the opportunity to witness the nature of these operations and were particularly impressed by the competence with which the 30th AAA organization handles its complex mission."

The 12th Coast Guard District will have on hand a motor surfboat, breeches buoy, a helicopter and other equipment.

A torpedo, submarine net demonstration tank and a driver-training safety bus will be displayed by the 12th Naval District.

From the Naval Air Station, Alameda, there will be a carrier float, two engine cutaways and a primary landing trainer.

Oakland's 361st Infantry Regiment of the 91st Infantry Division, Army Reserve, will demonstrate infantry weapons, including recoilless rifles, 4.2 inch mortars, rocket launchers, and automatic weapons.

The California Air National Guard's display will include communications equipment, an emergency fire truck, and air-sea rescue and survival equipment.

Auxiliary fire equipment, a rescue truck, supply unit, and a mobile radiological unit will be displayed by Oakland's Civil Defense.

The colorful Sixth Army Pipe Band from the Presidio of San Francisco will play in the Auditorium at 3 p.m. and following its appearance the crack Sixth Army Drill Team from the Presidio, the "Presidians," will give a demonstration of precision marching.

At 1400 hours the 12th Naval District Band will play a concert, and other musical offerings will include the Hawaiian Band and Male Chorus from Parks Air Force Base.

In a dispatch from Valley Forge, Pa., the Armed Forces Press Service announced that Rosenblum has been awarded a $100 cash prize and Gold Medal in the Freedom Foundation's third annual letter writing program.

Rosenblum, a member of the Star Presidian staff since August, 1955, was awarded the third place prize along with 78 other servicemen for his essay on "My Stake in the American Way."

A member of Headquarters Company 6002 SU, Rosenblum was agreeably surprised when Editor Kenneth S. Erwin read the dispatch to the staff.

"I'm very happy," grinned Rosenblum, "and very surprised and flattered. Especially surprised."

He indicated he was especially pleased to become the first soldier stationed at the Presidio to gain more than honorable mention in the contest.

His essay was one of 132 adjudged of high enough caliber to win an award in the all-service, all-world program open to both officers and enlisted men. He based his essay, reprinted on Page 2, on the "Freedom and Responsibilities" inherent in the American way. It was his first attempt in the contest.

Rosenblum, who holds a B.A. degree in journalism and a Master's degree in History from Wayne University in Detroit, will be given his award in the near future, the dispatch said.

Immediately after he received the good news, Rosenblum phoned his wife, Nancy, at their home at 1870 Jefferson Street, San Francisco, and passed on to her the good tidings. She in turn informed her mother, Mrs. Eleanor LeRoy, and Rosenblum's mother, Mrs. Irene Rosenblum, both of whom are visiting the couple for the first time here this week.

Rosenblum, who met his wife on the Wayne University student newspaper, worked on the East-side Shopper, a large district weekly in Detroit, before being drafted into the Army.

He took eight weeks' basic training with the 1st Infantry Regiment at Fort Ord and then, because he holds a Scientific and Professional rating, was assigned to Post TI & E, where he served briefly in the history section before joining the Star Presidian staff.

Erwin declared he was "pleased as punch" that one of his staff members was selected for the award.

"Rosenblum wrote a fine piece for the contest," he said. "It's gratifying when a member of the staff distinguishes himself as he did."

My Stake in the American Way

By Sanders F. Rosenblum

"My Stake in the American Way" is an investment in its historic traditions of freedom. As a soldier, who has necessarily surrendered a portion of his personal liberty, perhaps I am in a position to appreciate more fully the privileges as well as the responsibilities of that freedom.

For in America, the idea of human liberty has come to mean also responsibility. Liberty is not license. It implies an interplay of personal privilege and individual duty. The abstract "freedom" means many things to many Americans—and perhaps represents still other ideals to thousands of Cold War refugees who have fled from behind the Iron Curtain to seek American freedom.

To me, however, freedom means the exercise of choice—to choose my own manner of worship, the home in which I will live, my neighbors, my political party (or to ignore politics altogether), to select the newspapers I will read, the movies and television programs I will see, to join or not to join a labor union.

The American need not accept an assigned pigeonhole; he has mobility both of person and of intellect.

But the right to such freedom involves corresponding responsibilities. The freedom to choose my religion would be essentially meaningless if the same freedom were not extended and protected for all. The newspaper editor must accept the legal and moral responsibility not to distort the truth. Freedom to join a labor union would be nonsense, if the employer were free to discharge an employee because he belonged to such an organization.

As a soldier or a civilian, I as an individual citizen in making whatever choices, must recognize responsibilities as well as rights. They are interdependent. This is the freedom which I and my fellow Americans enjoy—the freedom which was won by our fathers' sacrifices in a struggle which continues today. It will be the inheritance of tomorrow, only if the responsibility for this freedom falls upon a nation of individuals who recognize their heritage and wish to see it the birthright of their children.

The responsibility includes not only exercising the vote but using it intelligently. It is my obligation and that of my fellow citizens to be informed on local, state and national affairs. I must be concerned for the rights of every minority, not merely my own. In my daily living, I must be aware of myself as a citizen among a nation of free individuals whose rights must also be my consideration.

This responsibility of freedom requires even personal sacrifice.

Certainly it is the soldier who is often called upon to make the heaviest sacrifices. In peacetime, it may mean that he delays his education and his career, or accepts separation from home and family. On the battlefield, he accepts the possibility that to secure his stake in America, he will be called upon to assume the ultimate responsibility of freedom.

Burgett, acting Post Engineer. His idea concerned an automatic switching device which would be beneficial in power shortages.

Cash for Ideas! Two Sixth Army Civilians Win $$$ For Suggestions

Two Sixth Army civilian employees earned cash awards totalling $25 recently for time and money-saving ideas submitted under the Army Suggestion Awards program.

Mrs. Alice C. Fratessa of the Sixth Army Adjutant General's Section won $10 and an Award Certificate for her idea to supply clerks in the AG Machine Records Division with portable filing shelves.

A Presidio employee for nearly eight years, Mrs. Fratessa received the award from Col. Alton V. Arnold, Sixth Army A-G executive officer. Since she began her federal service with the Navy in 1942, Mrs. Fratessa has earned an even $100 under the Incentive Awards Program.

For "contribution of a beneficial idea which has improved operations," Robert D. Moran, Post Engineer Maintenance foreman, received a $15 award from Lt. Col. George M. Burgett, acting Post Engineer.

An idea for eliminating communications outages resulting from power failures, Moran's suggestion has already been implemented at the Davis ACAN station.

Using cash awards and citations as an incentive, the Army Employees Suggestion Program seeks to encourage Army personnel, civilian and military, to submit ideas for promotion of efficient and economical operations.

Time Saving idea is shown Colonel Alton V. Arnold, executive officer, Sixth Army Adjutant General's Section by Mrs. Alice C. Fratessa. # Three New Wac Officers Get First Assignments In Presidio Billets

By Sfc. Debra O'Hanlon
Star Presidian Staff Writer

The public schools of North Carolina and California lost two women teachers to the United States Army, and the enlisted branch of the military lost a distaff first sergeant to the officers' ranks, when three newly-assigned officers to the Presidio received their commissions at Fort McLellan, Alabama, recently.

Lieutenant Dorothy A. F. Miller was first to break the tape in the flurry of a Presidio assignment. She replaces Lieutenant Eva L. Ossenkop, as executive officer to the 6002nd SU WAC Company D. (Lieutenant Ossenkop is going to a new post in Sandia Army Base, Albuquerque, New Mexico.)

A graduate from the Agricultural and Technical College, Greensboro, North Carolina, and resident of Gastonia, in the same state, Lieutenant Miller taught in the North Carolina public schools before her entrance into the military service. She was graduated from the Officers Candidate School at Fort McLellan, and her present duty tour at the Presidio marks the first in her military career.

Lieutenant Norma F. Webb, is second of the three young women officers to report here for duty within the past two weeks. She also is a former public school teacher in the California schools, coming to active duty as an officer on a direct commission achieved through her Reserve component in Sacramento, California. She served in the enlisted Reserves for two years and completed her last summer tour as a corporal at the Presidio, in 1955.

Lieutenant Webb is presently assigned to duty at Post Headquarters where she serves as assistant to the Adjutant and carries extra duties as Transfer Officer, Personnel Services and Reenlistment Officer. Her nephew, Captain Orville Scribner, of the United States Air Force, is presently assigned to the Pentagon. Lieutenant Webb makes her home in New Mexico.

Last, but not least in the three-some of women officers launching their officer careers at the Presidio, is Lieutenant Patricia Ellen Flynn. Not new to the military service is Lieutenant Flynn, who was commissioned from the ranks after a three-year tour as an enlisted woman, part of which she fulfilled as Company First Sergeant at the WAC Training Center in Fort McLellan.

Lieutenant Flynn is a native of Denver, Colorado. She is now assigned as Classification and Assignment officer at Post Headquarters.

American Forces Deployed To Back U.S. Foreign Policy

Underwriting The Free World, a network of treaties, mutual defense agreements and military pacts commit American Armed Forces to a global strategy, scattering them throughout the free world and along the periphery of the Sino-Soviet land bloc.

"Where We Serve," next week's Troop Information Topic, will outline American commitments in the Cold War struggle and their consequences for the Armed Services which back them up.

By a sheaf of regional security agreements and mutual defense treaties, the United States is bound to protect the nations of six continents.

The 1947 Rio Pact was the first of America's reciprocal defense contracts in which the United States and most of its Latin American neighbors agreed that an attack against one would be considered an aggression against all. At Rio the signatory states also agreed that in the event of such aggression they would cooperate in meeting the attack.

Less than two years later, Rio was followed by the North Atlantic Pact which now binds 13 European powers and the United States to a mutual defense organization. With headquarters in Paris, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization is committed to mutual defense of the free world from the tip of Norway to French North Africa, from the Atlantic seaboard to the eastern edges of Turkey.

Responsible for the defense of America's European associates, General Alfred M. Gruenther is the present Supreme Allied Commander in Europe, heading the land, naval and air operations of four subordinate commands. They include Allied Forces Central Europe, Allied Forces Northern Europe, Allied Forces Southern Europe and the Mediterranean forces.

A lacework of pacts and agreements in the Pacific with Korea, the Philippines, the ANZUS nations and SEATO extend America's military concerns to the Far East as well.

Organized in a system of regional commands, the American military is postured to meet American foreign policy commitments. The information topic will sketch the organization and disposition of American troops throughout the world, considering the Atlantic, Caribbean, Northeast, Alaskan, Pacific and Far East Commands.

The topic will consider the role of the entire military in meeting America's global obligations.

In each case, the topic declares, America's alliances with other nations under the principle of collective security, its advanced bases abroad, serve as a double purpose—to deter Communist aggression, and failing that, to make defeat a certainty should attack come.

That is why American participation in the Korean War, its support of NATO, and the Mutual Security Program was, and is, essential.

That is why the Sixth Fleet is stationed in Mediterranean waters and the Seventh Fleet patrols the Formosan Straits.

"It is our way of showing how we stand on the issue between tyranny and freedom," the information topic concludes.

Lauds Facilities

DA Librarian Visits Post, Sixth Army Operations

"Sixth Army's libraries are among the finest in the service," said Miss Caroline Stanley, Department of the Army assistant staff librarian, Special Services, on an inspection tour of Fifth and Sixth Army library facilities last week.

Miss Stanley scanned the book shelves of the Post Main and Sixth Army Library and Library Depot. Her recent tour took her also to Ft. Lewis, Fort Lawton, Camp Hanford and Fort Ord.

While on the Presidio, Miss Stanley visited the Sixth Army Library and Library Depot, accompanied by Wendell B. Coon, Sixth Army librarian. At the Post Main, Miss Stanley noted with approval its growing library of jazz collectors' items for the individual listener, a special project of Mr. Coon and Miss Mary Jane Bustruck, Presidio chief librarian.

Army libraries, Miss Stanley said, average nearly twice the per capita circulation of civilian libraries, circulating about 18 volumes per reader each year. Since their beginnings during World War I, Army libraries have multiplied to 545 in the Zone of Interior and overseas.

Employing some 374 professional librarians, the Army libraries today carry a varied selection of over 3,000,000 cloth-bound volumes.

Most frequent calls are for fiction—westerns, mysteries and science fantasy. In the non-fiction field, readers' tastes are varied, calling for works on military science, history, religion and popular psychology. Another much-perused shelf is the "How-to" section on home and furniture repair, TV, radio and machine maintenance.

teenage fete

Presidio teenagers will hold an open house for parents and guests at 2000 hours on Saturday, 25 February, in the Presidio Teenage Club at Bldg. 562. Planned and presented by club members, this year's open house will acquaint parents with each other, as well as with club activities.

Among the invited guests is Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, whose daughter, Jean, is a club member.

Big Celebration Marks Opening Of Ft. Cronkhite Service Club

The new Fort Cronkhite Service Club, refurbished and decorated at a cost of $12,000 drawn from unappropriated funds, opened its doors to the fort's enlisted men last Wednesday night.

Among ranking officers attending the club's formal presentation ceremonies were Brigadier General L. J. Rumaggi, Sixth Army chief of staff; Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, and Colonel Dallas F. Haynes, 30th AAA commander.

Special guests at the opening included the battery commanding officers and the full complement of unit non-coms wearing their new military dress blue uniforms, and officers and their wives from Fort Cronkhite and the Presidio.

"It is a $12,000 dream come true," said Colonel Lundquist in his introductory address; "a dream realized through funds generated by the individual soldier's purchases at the military post exchanges and the commissaries."

A brief address to the club guests by General Rumaggi carried congratulations from Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commanding General, and the headquarters staff, with the wish that the new Fort Cronkhite Service Club continue in the tradition of its kind, in being a place for soldiers to relax and enjoy their leisure hours at the end of each day.

Opening club ceremonies were marked by presentation of a large "gold" key by Lieutenant Colonel Freeman F. Gage, Jr., the Presidio Special Services officer, to Miss Eileen Pierce, the club director.

A fruit punch, cake and ice-cream party and a dance wound up the opening ceremonies for the new Fort Cronkhite Service Club.

The Army performs an important role in helping to teach the indigenous forces of 44 free countries how to use and maintain the equipment made available under the military aid programs, and in assisting them to develop over 200 combat divisions.

"ANYTHING GOES" presents Bing Crosby as a musical comedy star who leaves for Europe to find a girl star for his next Broadway show. Crosby's partner also picks a girl for the same part and then the complications follow.

"RED SUNDOWN" describes an outlaw's last violent hour, when Rory Calhoun pins a sheriff's badge on his reputation, turns his back on the woman he loves and springs the trap that was set for himself.

"PLEASE MURDER ME" shows Raymond Burr in the part of a brilliant criminal attorney who makes only one mistake and must pay the supreme penalty.

"OVER EXPOSED" introduces Miss Moore as a professional model who turns photographer to get pictures for "confidential" magazines. She uses her skill with a camera, her feminine charms, and an easy conscience to advance her career.

561st Engineers Prove Outstanding on Annual 'Danger' Big Part of 561st Routine

Unit Completes Three Missions During Test Run

By Pfc. Walter Heil
Star Presidian Staff Writer

Another of those "mysterious" explosions boomed across San Francisco Bay one crisp, clear night last week.

Immediately the MP Charge of Quarters at Fort Baker—where the reverberations were strongest—was besieged by phone calls from sleepy residents demanding, in outraged tones, the facts behind the blast.

The CQ, almost as much in the dark as the persons calling, put their minds at ease with one simple sentence.

"Oh, that," he said, "just the 561st Engineers on a night problem."

He was correct, too, for the 561st Engineer Company (Port Construction), a 200-man unit of highly trained specialists, was conducting its annual Army Field Test at Kirby Beach, just west of the Golden Gate Bridge, and the Fort Baker waterfront.

The 561st, under the command of 1st Lieutenant Alvin L. McDowell, had three big missions to complete during the 72-hour run of the problem. These were:

1. Erect two finger piers on the Fort Baker breakwater.
2. Repair a six-ton marine tramway for the Harbor Craft Detachment.
3. Survey the Fort Baker parade ground for erection of a 96 by 300 foot warehouse and railroad spur.

In addition, the unit set up a bivouac area on the steep slopes overlooking Kirby Beach, maintained a security watch and battled an aggressor force.

A highly versatile unit, the 561st seized the opportunity to show its mettle with relish, working two shifts of construction gangs around the clock. The first big problem was construction of the finger piers. And that's where the blast came in.

Second Lieutenant Neil M. Cline, construction platoon leader, started his crew working on the pier at 1355 hours, shortly after the troops had repulsed an aggressor attack on a 561st motor convoy with smashing success.

He ran into a problem almost immediately.

A seven-pile dolphin blocked the way where the piers were to extend out over the water. It had to be removed. By 1645 hours, divers, using chain saws, had cut four piles of the seven-pile dolphin.

Next, a generator and lighting set were brought to the pier for use in night operations. By 2300 hours, as troops in the bivouac were kept alert by prowling aggressors, Cline was ready to blow the dolphin from the water with an explosive charge. As the lights glared down on the scene, divers placed the charges under water and demolitions men rigged the lines that would send the pilings skyward.

With a roar, the piles were blown out of the water and the way cleared for the piers.

By 0500 hours the next morning the piles for the new pier had been driven into the bay floor and the cat-walk started.

Meanwhile, the scene at the bivouac area was far different. No construction crews labored here. And as the troops braced themselves for aggressor attacks, they looked across the Golden Gate and saw the twinkling lights of San Francisco's Sea Cliff and Sunset district homes.

When finally the aggressors were checked for keeps and the sun rose, the beach area took on the aspects of a private preserve, though the presence of troops in field gear and the clash of gears on trucks dispelled the notion.

As the sun rose higher, Cline and his construction NCO, Master Sergeant Herman Stapp, supervised work on the construction of the piers, which was now relatively routine.

Second Lieutenant James C. Hardy, the unit's diving officer, gathered his men and started work

Demolitions Men, Divers Tasks Are Frequently Tough

A Hollywood script writer, casting about for a story line on a picture title, "Danger Is My Business," might well contact troops of the 561st Engineer Company at Fort Baker for background material.

If the scenarist had been willing to tear himself from the white sports car and martini drinking set and join the troops on their annual Army Field Test last week, he would have gathered human interest material to go into a regular two-hour wide screen feature.

To begin with he would have met one of the unit's 17 top demolition men, stocky, 24-year-old Robert LeBleu of Roseburg, Oregon.

The scenarist could have met LeBleu sitting quietly in the company's command post in an old coast artillery bunker near Kirby Beach, just west of the Golden Gate Bridge.

LeBleu, a Regular Army specialist second-class with more than seven years' service, has developed a high respect for his working materials—explosives of all types.

Veteran of four and one-half years' experience with explosives, LeBleu has had his share of narrow escapes. Once when supervising a class in demolitions in Europe, LeBleu almost was killed when a student failed to check his equipment as he prepared to set off the charge.

Luckily, LeBleu caught the error in time.

"After working with the stuff for a while," he says, "you breed a contempt for powder. But that particular occasion taught me never to be careless with my gear. It made me want to check everything before setting off the charge."

LeBleu has handled every known kind of explosive during his service career, including nitro, which he says, "has to be handled with kid gloves."

While observing the problem, the scenarist could also have met two of the unit's highly-rated divers,

Story Material for the Star-Presidian is gathered by Pfc. Walter R. Heil as he interviews members of the 561st Engineer Company's construction platoon. Heil's feet dangle

Master Specialist John A. Cook and Specialist First-Class Charles W. Holland.

The two were engaged in a routine assignment during the 72-hour long maneuver—repairing a small marine tramway on the Fort Baker water front.

Using shallow water gear, the two divers dropped into the bay to bolster the piling on the tramway. At the most, they never descended more than ten feet into the murky waters.

But both men, veterans of many years of deep sea diving, have descended up to 300 feet during their careers.

Holland boasts a dive of 325 feet in the Straits of Japan, while Cook has visited Davy Jones' locker at 175 feet in a mission whereby he helped recover an anchor in waters off Japan.

Since their mission on the problem was routine, neither feared the divers' traditional enemy—the bends brought about by pressure of water during the rise to the surface.

But in their deep sea diving experiences both men had to be cautious and come to the surface in easy stages.

Father Swears Son Into Army Reserve In Local Ceremony

West Point via the Army Reserve is the goal of Dan Buttolph, son of Colonel and Mrs. Loren D. Buttolph, of the Presidio. Dan enlisted in the Reserve Corps this week, with his father administering the oath.

Young Buttolph is aiming for entrance to the United States Military Academy at West Point in the coming year. He is a junior at Lowell High School, where he is also a cadet captain in the Reserve Officers Training Corps.

Other honors won by young Buttolph are membership in the National Rifle Association, in the ROTC Honor Guard and in Explorer Scouting in which he has attained the Eagle award and is eligible for its Silver Award. The boy is currently assigned to Company G, 362nd Infantry Regiment, 91st Infantry Division.

Military, Civilian Ideas Save Army 19 Million During Fiscal '55

Washington (AFPS)—Suggestions by army military and civilian personnel saved an estimated $19 million during 1955, the Army has announced.

Of 66,468 suggestions received, 16,676 were adopted.

Army civilian employees who contributed 13,465 of the successful ideas received cash awards totaling $362,955. Military contributors are usually given letters of commendation by their commanding officers.

There were over 7,000 more suggestions during 1955 than were made in 1954. These additional ideas led to a $4 million increase in estimated savings from the suggestion program.

measure up?

The average soldier, according to the Army Quartermaster Corps, weighs in at 153½ pounds, stands five feet eight and a half inches tall and wears a size 38 uniform. His shoes run size 9½ D; shirt, 15-inch collar and 32-inch sleeves.

From a 36.2 inch chest, he tapers down to 30.5 inches at the waist. Hips measure 36.5 inches.

The average soldier reaches maximum height at age 21, which he maintains for a brief period, after which his height begins a gradual decrease.

DOD Announces Dip In Armed Forces Strength Standings

Armed Forces strength figures stood at 2,837,272 at the end of December, showing a drop of 28,762 from the month before, according to a Defense Department announcement. Shared by all the services, the decrease included a dip of 11,376 men in Army strength.

Most recent preliminary reports estimate Army manpower at 1,083,592; the Navy, 666,625; the Air Force, 937,200, and the Marines, 199,855. During December, reenlistment rates were led by the Air Force with 11,490. The Army followed with 10,620; the Navy, 6,669, and Marine Corps, 1,113.

Room For One More The Army's newest helicopter—the H-34 Sikorsky—is also the biggest; it can carry 17 combat-equipped soldiers plus pilot and co-pilot, and can lift cargo-loads of approximately 5,000 pounds. The photo was made at the Army Aviation Unit Training Command, Fort Sill.

Army Aviators Taking 'Graduate' Work On Big New Helicopter At Fort Sill Training Command

Fort Sill, Okla.—Army aviators from installations all over the country are coming here for advance study in one subject—the big Sikorsky H-34 helicopter—newest member of the Army aviation family.

They take their schooling at the Army Aviation Unit Training Command, organized in July, 1955, for the sole purpose of familiarizing pilots experienced on other Army helicopters with the characteristics and capabilities of the H-34.

This takes some doing, as even the ground-minded can appreciate when they consider the size of this new 'copter as compared with older rotary wing aircraft.

The H-34, 58 feet long and weighing 13,300 pounds when loaded with fuel and cargo, can carry 17 combat-equipped troops, plus a pilot and co-pilot; its older brother in the Sikorsky clan, the 42-foot, H-19, carries only eight soldiers, in addition to the pilots, and has a gross weight of 8,000 pounds. The standard two-place Bell reconnaissance H-13 helicopter on which most Army pilots get their "basic training" is a midget by comparison, capable of a gross weight of only 2,500 pounds.

Training on the new aircraft falls into two patterns, as Lieutenant Colonel Charles Ernest of Carmel, Calif., commanding officer, says:

"One course, 18 weeks long, covers the new Army helicopter pilot—usually a warrant officer and a recent graduate of the Army Aviation School at Fort Rucker, Ala.—and is a transition from command of the small reconnaissance-type to the large transport helicopter. These aviators must have both preliminary and advance instruction.

"Our other job is to train Army helicopter transport companies who have formerly operated Sikorsky H-19's, the three-bladed forerunner of the larger, four-bladed 'copter, the H-34. These men are trained as a unit; because of their knowledge of transport helicopters, they require only four weeks of instruction here."

Instruction on the H-34 itself, conducted by Army warrant officers with extensive transport helicopter experience, begins with a stage field—known to the pilots as the "idiot's circle." This is an abbreviated airfield with several rows of steel landing pads painted white and measuring approximately five by ten feet each.

Here the students practice landings and takeoffs for three or four hours daily, using different approaches to and from the pads, acclimating themselves to the bulk of the new aircraft, learning to handle it with ease.

Should the beginner miss the landing pad—and he will often during the first few weeks of training—he tries and tries again until he's letter-perfect.

"The 'idiot's circle' is monotonous," said Ernest. "But it's the best and only way to learn how to handle those big jobs."

In addition to landings and takeoffs, student-pilots spend hours of practice in evacuation, night flying, operating in confined areas, landing on slopes and autorotation. (This last is the method of producing "lift" with the spinning rotor blades after the engine of a helicopter is turned off; serves the helicopter pilot for emergency landing in event of engine failure.)

During the afternoons, the pilots are busy with ground school where the emphasis is on aircraft maintenance, weather studies, navigation, tactical problems and flight safety.

Where units are being trained, the company mechanics attend maintenance school while the warrant officers and officers are getting their flight and tactical training. Successful helicopter operations are as dependent upon skilled mechanics as on experienced pilots.

"The Army has had the H-34 only since September," Ernest said, "so this training command has been on a learn-as-you-go basis.

"We are still, indeed, testing the capabilities of the aircraft. We have found out, for instance, that we can lift a 105mm howitzer complete with tube—set it down ready to fire, that is—a weight of approximately 5,000 pounds. This is more than we expected of the H-34.

"The Army helicopter, as you know, is not designed to replace conventional modes of conveyance entirely, but to provide a more rapid means of moving men and equipment from one place to another where road-nets are poor or nonexistent; and to deploy troops in the field under combat conditions.

"We have great confidence in the H-34; with its increased troop and load capacity, it should be able to fill this combat role most efficiently should the need arise."

In 22 permanent arsenals, the Army is developing weapons and equipment required either today or by the possible exigencies of the future.

Armed Forces Wives Clubs Slate Meeting For Treasure Island

An open forum of the Associated Clubs of Armed Forces Wives is slated to take place on Treasure Island, 14 April.

Family problems, including housing, legal matters, community, foreign duty, education, voting, morale, and club programming are among the subjects to be discussed during the forum.

Conducted on a question and answer basis, the meeting will be carried out through selected speakers to whom written questions will be submitted in advance.

Mrs. Joseph Coolidge, the club president, requests that such queries be put in writing and deposited in suggestion boxes located in the Presidio Officers Open Mess, or mailed to Mrs. Willet Ware, Jr., 327B, Infantry Terrace, Presidio. They must be in Mrs. Ware's possession before February first, so that she can meet with outlying club representatives and establish the forum subjects.

All Presidio Woman's Club members are urged to attend the meeting.

The Army's Adjutant General section has microfilmed 11,000 file drawers of Army records and put the finished films in 55 filing cabinets—making mole hills out of mountains.

Original Models of the first Parachute Test Platoon, M/Sgt. Thurman L. Weeks, M/Sgt. George W. Ivy and SFC Lester C. McLaney (l. to r.) are still on jump status at Ft. Bragg, N. C. The three were privates when they joined 47 other men at Ft. Benning, Ga., to form the test platoon in 1940. Its mission was to determine if the Army could utilize parachute jumpers and whether the parachute could deliver men into battle. Here the sergeants are looking at a photo of the platoon.

Strong Man

Lt. Parry O'Brien Tops World Shot-Put Record

New York (AFPS)—Parry O'Brien, the burly AF second lieutenant from Travis AFB, Calif., who recently toured "down under" and shattered numerous Australian shot-put and discus records, came up with a new meet and world record at the New York A.C. Games here.

O'Brien, competing indoors for the first time this year, made six tosses with the 16-lb. shot and on his fourth attempt hit 59' 9", erasing his old world indoor mark of 59' 5½" which he set last year. He also bettered James Fuchs' five-year-old meet record of 58' 3½" on four tosses.

Sharing the spotlight with O'Brien's spectacular feat was Charley Jenkins' 500-yard world indoor mark of 56.4 seconds. The Villanova junior was never challenged from start to finish. Second place honors in the record run went to Pvt. Lou Jones of Ft. Meade, Md. The old record for this distance was 56.6, set by Mal Whitfield in 1953.

The Halpin half-mile turned into a duel between two old-time rivals, Pvt. Tom Courtney of Ft. Dix, N. J., and Arnie Sowell, army ROTC student at the University of Pittsburgh. The Panther star set his own pace and led all the way.

Courtney, formerly of Fordham, challenged him about 250 yards from the tape but Sowell turned on the heat and won by five yards in 1:51.8. Courtney finished second and Lt. Gene Maynard of Ft. Monmouth, N. J., was third.

Achievements by other servicemen:

Pole vault—A/1C George Matos, March AFB, Calif., second place tie with Jerry Welbourn, Ohio Track Club, Don Bragg, Villanova and Earl Poucher, University of Florida, 14' 6".

Shot-put—Lt. (jg) Thompson, San Diego NTC, Calif., third, 54' 4".

One mile walk (handicap)—SP3 John Humcke, Jr., Ft. Meade, Md., (scratch) second; Pfc. Eugene Chi-chura, 3rd Inf., Regt., MDW (50 yards) fifth.

New York A.C. 1,000-yard run—Lt. William Taylor, Quantico, Va., third; Lt. Michael Stanley, Lockbourne AFB, Ohio, fourth.

60-yard high hurdles—Pvt. Charles Pratt, Ft. Dix, second. Ens. Jack Davis, San Diego NTC, Calif., pulled a hamstring muscle prior to the trial heats and was forced to withdraw.

Baxter mile—Lt. Len Truex, Lockbourne AFB, Ohio, third.

Toussaint two mile—Seaman Joe Tyler, San Diego NTC, fourth.

Five Service Trackmen On All-American

New York (AFPS)—Five army, air force and marine corps track stars—Lts. Rod Richard, Wes Santee, Parry O'Brien and Pvts. Charles Pratt and Lou Jones—have been named to the 1955 men's All-America track and field team.

The star-studded squad, selected by Daniel J. Ferris, secretary-treasurer of the National Amateur Athletic Union, is published in the 1956 AAU official track and field handbook.

Mr. Ferris listed Richard of Ft. Lee, Va., at the 220 yard dash; Santee, Quantico, Va., one mile run; O'Brien, Travis AFB, Calif., shot put; Pratt, Ft. Dix, N. J., 220 yard low hurdles, and Jones, Ft. Meade, Md., 440 yard run.

The 1956 U.S. Open golf championship will be held at the Oak Hill Country Club in Rochester, N. Y., 14-16 June.

Reduction In Trout Limit Recommended

Recommendations by the Department of Fish and Game for a reduction in the trout bag limit from 15 to ten fish, a year round trout season in eight southern California counties, a reduction in the striped bass limit from the present four fish to three, and an increase in the minimum striper size limit from 12 to 16 inches highlighted the 6 January meeting of the Fish and Game Commission in Sacramento.

Hundreds of recommendations were received from the Department, from organized sportsmen's organizations, other recreational groups, and from individuals.

All will be considered by the Commission, which will make public its tentative determinations at least 15 days before 24 February, at which time regulations will be adopted in Los Angeles. The public still may protest the determinations at that time, or make counter proposals.

steelhead

Anglers were reminded today that the winter salmon and steelhead season ends at one hour after sunset 29 February.

Exceptions are the Sacramento River, where the season is open the year around from a point 650 feet below Keswick Dam to the Carquinez Bridge, and tide-waters of designated north coast streams.

Some of the smaller coastal streams have receded to normal flows, as have a few of the tributaries to the Sacramento River. In general, floods have washed out most steelhead angling.

Armour James has been named the IX Corps' "Athlete of the Year." The clever bantamweight has won 21 and lost three this year against top service and civilian pugilists.

Cinder Star

Army Thinclad Wins 880 At Millrose AA Games

New York (AFPS)—Tom Courtney, the Ft. Dix, N. J., private who ranks among the nation's top track performers, gained his fourth victory of the indoor season by winning the 880-yard run at the 49th annual Millrose A.A. Games at Madison Square Garden.

The Fordham grad took an early lead over his four rivals and, after applying a burst of speed near the finish, won by seven yards in 1:53.2. In third place was Lt. Gene Maynard of Fort Monmouth, N. J. Lt. William Taylor of Quantico, Va., was fourth.

Lt. Len Truex of Lockbourne AFB, Ohio, the only service entry in the classic Wanamaker Mile, led the field at the three-quarter mark but fell back to second place when Villanova's Ron Delany bolted down the back stretch.

Delany, running the final quarter in 58.8 seconds, was clocked at 4:09.5.

Results of other service competitors:

60-yard dash semi-finals—Lt. Rod Richard, Ft. Lee, Va., and Pvt. Willie Williams of Ft. Knox, Ky., finished third and fifth respectively, failing to qualify for the 60-yard dash final.

60-yard high hurdles—Lt. (jg) Jack Davis, San Diego NTC, Calif., second.

Mel Sheppard 600-yard run—Pvt. Lou Jones, Ft. Meade, Md., third; Lt. James Lea, Edwards AFB, Calif., fourth.

Two-mile run—Seaman Joe Tyler, San Diego NTC, fourth.

Pole Vault—A/1C George Matos, March AFB, Cal., second place tie with Don Bragg of Villanova, Jerry Welbourn, Ohio Track Club, and Earl Poucher, University of Florida, 14' 6".

High jump—Lt. Charles Holding, Sheppard AFB, Tex., third place tie with Phil Reavis, Villanova, George Dennis, Morgan State, Robert Fendler, Pomona-Claremont Colleges, and John Gibson, Pioneer Club, 6'6".

6 Servicemen In Training For Trials

Tryon, N. C. (AFPS)—Six servicemen are in training here for the U.S. team which will compete in the Olympic equestrian events at Stockholm, Sweden, in June.

Final trials for the three groups of equestrian candidates—Three-Day, Grand Dressage and Prix des Nations—will be held here mid-March.

The service candidates are: SP3 Phillip Jennings, Ft. Lewis, Wash.; SP3 Gerald van Amburgh, Ft. Campbell, Ky.; Pvt. Daniel Creary, Ft. Benjamin Harrison, Ind.; Maj. Jonathan Burton, Ft. Polk, La.; Seaman Hugh Wiley, U.S. Naval Reserve Training Center, Ft. McHenry, Md., and A/2C Frank Chapot, Donaldson AFB, S. C.

jackrabbits

In reply to many queries received in past weeks, the Department of Fish and Game reiterated that there is no closed season on hunting jackrabbits, and no bag or possession limit.

The only requirement is valid hunting license and observance of local regulations on discharging firearms in certain built up areas.

Santee's Loss Won't Hurt U. S. Chances

Three Top Distance Runners Bolster Yanks, Says Zellers

MP Officer Rated High

By Pfc. Walt Heil
Star Presidio Sports Writer

Contrary to general opinion, 2nd Lieutenant Francis L. Zellers, himself one of America's foremost distance runners, doesn't think the suspension of top miler Wes Santee from amateur competition is going to make a whit of difference in the nation's chances for winning the 1956 Olympics.

The thin-shanked 505th Military Police Battalion officer doesn't hold any sympathy for Santee who was barred from further amateur competition early this week for expense irregularities.

Zellers, former Indiana University ace now preparing for the Presidio's upcoming track and field season, emphatically stated that Santee's absence from the American squad will hardly be noticed when the Games get underway in Melbourne, Australia, late this year.

"I don't think Santee's suspension is going to hurt us in the least," Zellers declared yesterday. "Two or three of our runners could possibly have beaten him this Spring had he not been barred by the AAU."

"Santee could have been our number one miler in the Olympics if he hadn't been suspended, but even so we have several other good boys who may just do better," Zellers said.

Zellers did not cite himself as one of the top distance aces who could better Santee's American record of 4:00.5 for the mile, but pointed to Bob Seamen of UCLA, Bob Dillinger of Oregon and Lynn Truex, ex-Ohio State star, as definite possibilities.

Zellers, mess officer in Company A, 505th MPs, declared that Santee, a Marine Corps 2nd Lieutenant, should have abided by the rules regarding expenses for amateur athletes.

"I don't see how Santee can think about suing the AAU," he said with a shake of the head. "Last year I believe he made about $5,900 on expenses; in short made his living that way."

Despite the fact he doesn't number himself among claimants to Santee's throne, Zellers is definitely a hot prospect to bring a

Ace In Top Condition

Gold Medal victory home from Down Under.

His 4:09.5 record for the mile is right among the top performances for that distance ever recorded in the Nation. The 137-pound Zellers, hopeful of landing a berth on the U.S. team, currently works out two hours daily on the University of California track at Edwards Stadium in Berkeley.

There, under the watchful eye of Brutus Hamilton, California coach and head man of the 1952 Olympic track and field squad, he runs with Lon Spurrier and Len Simpson. Hamilton has set up Zeller's entire campaign designed to land him on the squad.

Zellers expects to run his first competitive race for the Presidio track and field forces on 15 March. Thereafter he plans to compete in the Stockton and Modesto Relays, Sixth Army and All-Army events—and, come June, the National AAU and Olympic Trials.

Despite his frail appearance, Zellers considers himself in top physical condition. Prior to conditioning work at Berkeley, he ran daily on the Presidio golf links, strengthening his legs and building his stamina.

"I hope," said Zellers, "I'm given an opportunity to run representing the Army in either the 1500 meters or the 5000 meters events."

Zellers, a native of Tobinsport, Indiana, a tiny hamlet on the banks of the Ohio River, has been running for six years.

He started running on a bet. Accustomed to a great deal of running on his father's farm, Zellers challenged all the distance men on his high school team, claiming he could run them all into the ground. He won and thus started on his track career.

wacs win

The Presidio WAC basketball squad under the able coaching of Julian Kite captured the Bay Area Armed Forces Championship last weekend when they defeated the Mather Air Force Base WAFs 46-32 at the Oakland Army Base. Peggy Harris sparked the locals to victory with her all around play at her forward position.

Early Drills Begin For Baseball

Headed by hard hitting second baseman Dick Shannon, the Presidio baseball team opened early trials this week with workouts in the Fort Scott gym. Some 14 players have turned out so far for the squad with plenty of openings remaining for interested hardball prospects.

Returning from last year's Red Raider team that captured first place in the Bay Area Armed Forces baseball league are pitcher Rog. Collins, outfielder Rex Willis, pitcher Bill Davis, and catcher Mike Rubcic.

Among the promising newcomers to the Presidio team are three members of last year's champion Fort Ord team. They are pitcher Charlie Matzen, first baseman Al Casino and center fielder Harry Williams.

Fort Ord won the Sixth Army title last season with the Presidio Red Raiders finishing a strong third.

There is also a need for an equipment manager for the baseball team. Qualified persons should contact the Post Sports Office in building 122.

Swimmers Wanted For Post Teams

Despite the inclement weather this week, the Post Sports Office still needs athletes for track and field, golf and swimming. Presidio personnel that are skilled in the sports should contact the sports office in building 122 or by calling 3968.

Last year's Presidio swim team captured first place in the Sixth Army under the able coaching of Major Ken Myer. Back from last season's title winning squad is Norm Van Herzen in the 100 and 200 meter sprints.

With the first track meet of the season set up for the 10th of March more track stars are needed on the post cinder squad. The triangle meet will pit the locals against the University of San Francisco and the S. F. Olympic Club and will be held in Kezar Stadium.

With Captain Rollin Kapp as head of the Presidio golf team, great things are expected of the Post divot takers in local Armed Forces competition. Action is slated to begin early next month.

tko winner

Matt Jackson, a tough heavyweight from Fort MacArthur, came up with a fistie surprise last week when he TKO'd favored Tommy Harrison in the fourth round of a scheduled ten-rounder in the San Diego Arena last Monday night.

The victory was Jackson's 25th in his last 27 fights and was knockout number 18. Jackson, an Sfc., is stationed with the 551st Headquarters Battery at the Southern California Fort.

Sports Car Show Starts In E. Bay

Brigadier General Alfred F. Kalberer, USAF, has accepted the role of honorary chief judge at the National Roadster Show, now under way for a six-day showing at Oakland Exposition building. Gen. Kalberer is commander of the 14th Air Division, Strategic Air Command, at Travis AFB.

He will participate in the gold trophy ceremonies next Sunday night (26 February) for winners in eighteen divisions of hand-built, original cars, officials announced, and take an active interest in the Strategic Air Command exhibit, displaying their experimental gas turbine Saffirebird for the first time.

Skilled personnel from General Curtis E. Lemay's Headquarters Hobby Shops near Omaha are on hand to explain SAC's Firebird principles and operating thrust on JP-4 jet fuel.

A fantastic $52,000 handmade fiberglass Cadillac, plated in 24 karat pure gold, is due to attract crowds as a special exhibit in the competitive show, according to director Mary L. Slonaker.

Exquisitely customized by George Barris' body, metal and paint experts, with expense no object, the gold plated car, owned by Harry Karl of Hollywood, features a hand made, chromed dash worth $10,000 and a complete refreshment bar in formica blond grain wood, mirrors and gold leaf glasses back of the front seat.

Astounding refinements include handmade platinum hood ornaments and medallions, full chrome engine, clear panel three-piece bubble and removable top finished in red leather, gold and chrome, gold buckled safety belts, TV, telephone, refrigerator, molded gold-trimmed trunk with special tire mount molded in, and 30 coats of crushed platinum dust and polychromatic base paint job.

Nearby hot rods, glowing in a kaleidoscope of metallic color, chrome and beauty of design, rival the custom cars for crowd attention. There are ten divisions of individually styled hot rods.

Show hours are as follows: today, 1800 to 2200 hours; tomorrow and Sunday from 1300 to 2200 hours.

The national mid-winter pistol championships at Tampa, Fla., 6-10 March, will be followed by the Coral Gables flamingo open pistol tourney, 13-16 March.

Schmutz Stars

Presidio Volleyball Team Wins 2d At Hamilton AB

Sparked by the outstanding spiking of Matt Schmutz and Joe Gonzales the Presidio number one volleyball squad, defending All-Army champions, came within two games of victory last Saturday in the Hamilton Air Force Base Open Volleyball Tournament, before dropping a 10-15, 14-16, 12-15 match to the Embarcadero YMCA.

The hard spiking locals had topped five other high net teams in winning their division of the day-long round-robin tourney, which included a 11-3, 11-4 win from the San Francisco Central YMCA prior to running into the Embarcadero squad.

The tournament drew twelve teams from throughout northern California which were divided into two divisions of six teams each. Volleyball action was continuous from 1000 hours in the morning till 2145 hours at night.

Presidio players on the first team were player-coach Major Bob Jones, Matt Schmutz, Bob Noel and Joe Gonzales spikers. Setters were Dick Godino and Harry Matthews.

The Presidio number two team didn't fare as well as they were edged by the powerful Embarcadero "Y." Highlight of the team's play was winning one game from Embarcadero 11-7.

Squad members of the second team were Jerry Steiner, Frank McDonnell, Berry Miller, Phil Kilmer, Catalino Ignacio, Bob Moran, Dan Anderson and Bill Nichols.

Catalino Ignacio, besides playing, refereed in several other matches as he is the only member of the team to hold an Official's Badge in the U.S. Volleyball Association.

The two local squads will practice until the 24th of March when they will enter the Stockton Open Volleyball Tournament. Hosting the matches will be the powerful Stockton "Y," two-time national champion. The Presidio dropped a close match to the national champs early this month in the Berkeley Invitational tourney.

Official Army competition will start on the 17th of April at Fort Ord in the central division playoffs. The winner there will go to the All-Sixth Army finals on 30 April at Fort Lewis.

volleyball

With intramural volleyball slated to commence action on the 12th of March, all companies and units on the Presidio and its sub-posts are urged to begin practice at once. A meeting of all team representatives will be held in the Presidio Sports Office on 6 March at 1000 hours in Building 122.

Hannon was the nation's top rebounder in 1951 and 1952.

Esh Paces Signal Rollers To Upset Win In Pacific

The smooth rolling Sixth Army Signal bowlers, behind the 196 roll of Esh, took three games from the first place Keystone Kops last week to extend their hold on the second spot in the Pacific Bowling League. Mahon's 186 was high for the losers.

The third place Post Dispensary pin splitters captured three tilts from the G-2 rollers. Macias was top man for the winners with his 186/505 score and Walsh headed up the losers with a 187/471 mark.

The fifth place 102nd MRU came up with the upset of the week when they dumped the fourth place All-Stars 3 to 1. Burns led the records men to the victory with a 171/474 mark. Williams was high man for the stars with a 184/539 mark.

The eighth place Cherry Pickers took the Headquarters Company, Station Complement team into camp to the tune of 4 to 0. Pasko topped the winners with a 182 score while Chapuis was high man for the headquarters men with a 152 mark.

Over in the National loop the hard charging Hilltoppers upset the odds by defeating the league leading Masonites 4 to 0. Walker headed up the winners with a great 229/649 score while Alba led the men from Mason with a 188/499 score.

The third place Keystone Kops No. 2 club, behind Dickey's sizzling 244/570 roll, took a 3 to 1 victory from the fourth place Hooks. Alexander paced the losers with a 194/559 mark.

The seventh place King Pins came up with the upset of the week when they edged the fifth

Boxers

All boxers on the Presidio and its sub-posts are urged to contact the Post Special Service, Sports Office, immediately. The Bay Area Armed Forces Boxing Tournament will be held in March at Hamilton Air Force Base. Personnel interested should call Ext. 3968 for information.

wacs lead

With the Sixth Army WAC Basketball Tournament going full blast this week at the Letterman Army Hospital, the Presidio girls looked like the team to beat as they raced to three opening round victories. Under Coach Julian Kite the local lassies raced past the Oakland Army Base 40-22, Fort Lawton 45-25, and Fort Ord 50-25.

Cage Trials For Service Basketball

(AFPS)—The Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps will compete in a basketball tournament in Louisville, Ky., 22-24 March to select an armed forces all-star team for the Olympic trials.

According to Harry D. Henshel, chairman of the U. S. Olympic basketball committee, the American quintet will be determined by a round robin tournament among an armed forces team, one college and two Amateur Athletic Union teams in Kansas City, 2-4 April.

In explaining the method of selection, Henshel said the winning team in the round robin tourney will place at least five, but not more than seven, on the Olympic team.

The remainder of the 12-man U. S. team will be chosen from the other squads in the tournament. Two coaches will be selected, with the coach of the winning team heading the Olympic quintet. Alternates will also be chosen in the event some of the players are unable to make the trip to Australia.

The Air Force has a 12-man squad working out under former Oklahoma coach Bruce Drake, at Eunker Hill AFB, Ind.

Sixth Army Squads Will Battle In Kezar Pavilion

By Pvt. Bob Malone
Star Presidian Sports Editor

Led by their twin scoring aces, Don Lofgran, former all-American from the University of San Francisco, and Mike O'Neill, former PCC and AAU star from University of California, the Presidio Red Raider basketball team will boast a light edge with the oddsmakers when the 1956 Sixth Army Basketball Championships get underway in San Francisco's Kezar Pavilion at 1200 hours this Monday.

The fast breaking Raiders, Bay Area Armed Forces Champions and runnersup in the recent Southwestern Invitational Tournament at Las Vegas, Nevada, have lost only one game this year.

Lofgran is currently leading the Red Raider scoring attack with 24 points per game while O'Neill is rattling the hoops with 22 tallies per contest. Other Presidio stars are Bob Harbertson from Utah State and Norm Ellenberger, Butler U.

Ranking Sixth Army military and civilian dignitaries are expected to attend the championship's colorful opening ceremonies. Highlights of opening game activities will include all teams on the court in a uniform pre-game salute and music by the Sixth Army Band.

Free transportation for local military personnel both to and from the games will be furnished. Buses will leave from the Post Special Services Office, building 122, corner of Riley Ave. and Lincoln Blvd. The times of all games and the teams competing will be announced the day prior to the date of play in the Daily Bulletin.

Toughest competition for the local hoopsters appears to be last year's champion Fort Lewis "Chiefs" and the always strong Fort Ord Warriors.

The Lewis club boasts the nation's top rebounder for 1951-52 in Clarence Hannon, a 6 ft. 4 inch center who played four years at West Point and captained the Black Knights of the Hudson in both his junior and senior years.

The rest of the starting lineup for the northern invaders includes Martin Zaninovich, Stanford; Keith Farnum, Oregon; Bruce Goodrich, Utah; and Frank Reveter, Harlem Globe Trotters.

Although the Fort Ord Warriors have a so-so record for the season, they came up with a brilliant game against the Presidio last week in the Las Vegas Tournament and lost by two points in an overtime thriller.

Pacing the men from Ord is their 6 ft. 6 inch center, Emory Barnes, forward Jerry Rocco and guard Bill Scheng. Barnes captured 22 rebounds against the Presidio last week and should be the Ord player to watch.

Dugway Proving Ground (Utah) will represent the mountain division of the Sixth Army and the southern representative will be chosen tonight in the finals of the southern playoffs at the Yuma (Arizona) Test Station.

coach

Bill Abbey, who coached Ft. Ord, Calif., to the 1955 national service football title, has accepted the head coaching job at Monterey Peninsula JC in California. In two years at Ft. Ord his Warriors had posted a fine 23-2-1 record.

THE 1956 PRESIDIO RED RAIDERS enter the Sixth Army Basketball Tournament this Monday as slight favorites on the basis of their strong showing so far this season. The fast-breaking cage men tuned up for the tourney by blasting the Treasure Island Pirates 91-63 in their only game this week. The Raiders are (front row, l. to r.) 2d Lt.

Bob Moran, Pfc. Lowell Bassett, Pfc. Bill Aires, 2d Lt. Bob Harbertson, Pfc. Norm Ellenberger and Pfc. George Hatzis. Back row (l. to r.) Pfc. Mike O'Neill, Pfc. Bill Davis, Pfc. Don Lofgran, Pfc. Jerry Davis, 2d Lt. Chuck Lynch and Coach Hal Fischer. Fischer coached the Oakland Bittners from 1948-52 and was head man on the 1951 Pan-American Olympic Games team.

Now Is The Time To Consider New Deductions For Next Year's Tax Bill

(This is the eighth and final article in a series on federal income tax filing for the year 1955. This article is based on information furnished to AFPS by the American Institute of Accountants, the national organization of certified public accountants.)

The previous articles in this series were intended to help you in preparing your federal tax return for 1955. This article deals with your taxes for 1956 and beyond.

When the time comes to make out your tax return for 1956 it will be too late to take advantage of some possible tax savings. There are some possibilities for reducing your tax which you might consider now:

If you are providing nearly half the support of someone who might qualify as a dependent, remember that if you provided more than half the support you would be entitled to a $600 exemption.

Remember that unless a dependent is under 19 or a student, you will lose the exemption if his income is $600 or more. Be sure to check the income of everyone you expect to claim as a dependent.

Remember, too, that you may file a joint return for 1956 if you are married anytime during the year before midnight, 31 December, 1956.

A baby born up to midnight 31 December qualifies as an exemption for the full year.

If you foresee a great deal of medical expenses during the year—more than three per cent of your income—and expect the expenses to be less in 1957, you might consider paying as many bills as possible before the end of the year—up to the maximum allowable deduction. If you borrow to do this, remember that you can also deduct the interest.

If your medical expenses are over the maximum deduction, perhaps you can defer part of the payment until after the end of the year.

Borrowing to pay your taxes can sometimes let you take the deduction a year earlier.

If you sell your home at a profit, remember that you do not have to pay a capital gains tax if you pay more for a new home within a year than the price you get for the old one.

When investing money, remember that stock in a domestic corporation offers the possibility of dividend exclusion and credit.

If you sell securities or other "capital assets" at a profit, it is usually better to wait until you have held them at least six months so that the profit will be taxed at the capital gains rate instead of as ordinary income.

When buying bonds, consider not only the interest rate but the fact that interest on state and municipal bonds is exempt from federal income tax.

If any of these points is likely to make a substantial difference in your tax, it will probably pay you to discuss your problems with the Internal Revenue Service, or to seek professional tax advice. Anything you pay for assistance in preparing your tax return is deductible from your taxable income.

But beware of any "tax expert" who claims that he can cut your tax below the amount you really owe. It's a good idea to pick someone who has had experience in dealing with the revenue service, just in case the government should raise some question about your return.

Fort Belvoir, Va., has installed a dictating and recording system with 15 substations, five recorders and six transmitters. The medical officer at a remote location may record an X-ray analysis, for example, and transmitters play back the recording at a central location where typists are available. Similar systems have been installed at Valley Forge Army Hospital, Pa., and at Camp Hanford Army Hospital, Wash.

New Service Club Director Has Had Varied Experience

Anthropology—the study of Man—was a well-chosen one for Miss Patricia J. Malone, who majored in that fascinating subject at the University of Arizona, and is now senior Service Club director for the Presidio of San Francisco.

Her professional occupation in that capacity calls for a wide and varied knowledge of what the off-duty soldier appreciates in the line of recreational interests, of his whims, his personal problems and his quiet moments when all he craves is a closed door and a record player.

A native of Arizona, Pat Malone came to the Presidio early in February. Army Service Club duty tours have taken her to Marburg, Heidelberg, Berlin, Bremerhaven and Fulda, Germany; intervals which she describes as being laced with color and quite rewarding in the experience she has gained from them.

Pat's work at the Presidio involves the coordination of activities planned by the junior club directors here for the purpose of presenting a well-balanced off-duty recreational program for the enlisted men serving at the Presidio, Fort Baker and Fort Cronkhite.

Her own interests tie in admirably with the demands placed on her through the nature of her assignment. She likes people, dancing, swimming, sports, music and photography.

Her proudest possessions are a collection of German, French and Italian recordings, and she has collected more than 1,000 colored photo slides covering her five years of foreign service.

Miss Malone came to the Presidio from David Monahan Air Force Base in Tucson, Arizona, where she managed the Service Club.

Sixth Army Reenlistment NCO Reups For Six Years

By SP3 Hugh Dempsey
Star Presidian Staff Writer

"We've got a call for you Sergeant. One of your reenlistment people at Fort Lewis hit a snag on a regulation. Seems some fellow wants to reenlist for Greenland." The mild mannered Master Sergeant turned and answered, "Tell him to call me back, I'm getting reenlisted myself in a few minutes." And with that he left and walked into the office of Brigadier General Louis J. Rumaggi, Sixth Army Chief of Staff, who swore him in for six more years' of Army service.

Receiving phone calls from all over the Sixth Army and other parts of the United States is nothing new for Master Sergeant Albert Q. Rodriguez, who heads the reenlistment section for the entire Sixth Army and coordinates the activities of some 80 reenlistment stations at the various installations scattered throughout the Sixth Army area. Yet, most of the confidence and wisdom he possesses has been gained by hard work and determination.

During the years 1948-49-50, Sergeant Rodriguez made his first and somewhat permanent mark on the recruiting hall of fame. Starting out in recruiting work at the San Antonio, Texas, recruiting center, his driving ambition to secure new soldiers for Uncle Sam's Army gained him a top spot in the All-Fourth Army Recruiting Team.

In 1949, still another laurel was awarded him, as he was rated by the Recruiting Journal as the second top recruiter in the nation. "My quota was only 18 men a month but I was averaging 379 men a year when I received this award," he said.

Then came Korea, and in 1951 he was assigned to the 3rd Infantry Division. Here he served as the Field First of Baker Company, 15th Infantry Regiment, seeing combat from the day he arrived until 11 months later when he left Korea for the states.

His activity in Korea gained a star which he proudly wears on his Combat Infantryman Badge for seeing combat in two major wars. The first was during WWII when he fought in the CBI as as member of the Morse Task Force.

"When I came back from Korea, I went to the Southwest Signal School at San Luis Obispo, which was a basic training camp and signal school combined. It was here that I once again started reenlistment work," he remarked.

It was also here that Sgt. Rodriguez brought an almost dormant reenlistment program back to life. By getting out with the troops, giving lectures, showing motion pictures and taking an individual personal interest in the men, he brought an enlistment program that was getting only two to three men a month up to a point where over 100 men each month were reenlisting.

Finally, when the camp closed, Sgt. Rodriguez was appointed to his present post as the Chief Reenlistment Supervisor for the Sixth Army.

However, with all the burdens of his work, he still finds time to conduct a series of instructions running for a period of 15 days to familiarize his field representatives with the current reenlistment trends.

Evidently all his hard work has certainly paid off, for at the present time, the Sixth Army has the highest rate of reenlistments for all component permanent party personnel in the United States Army, over any other Army unit in the U. S.

Army High Finance was discussed last week when the Honorable Chester R. Davis, Assistant Secretary of Army for Financial Management (left), and Lt. Gen. Laurin L. Williams, Army Comptroller (right), visited the Presidio last week for conferences with the Sixth Army Command. The two finance officials chatted informally with Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commanding General, after Honor Guard Ceremonies Thursday. The Army's new Command Management System, designed to save money and increase efficiency, is to be effected immediately within the Sixth Army area.

1st 3-Graders Face MOS Reclassification

Shortages Must Be Filled, Says 6 Army Order

First three graders in overage military occupation specialties can soon expect to be reclassified and placed into shortage MOS groups, Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, announced today.

In a letter to units on the Presidio and sub-posts, Colonel Lundquist outlined Post policy following directives from Headquarters Sixth Army designed to eliminate overstrength in various MOS groups.

The directive from the DPC is applicable only to units from whom Post Headquarters maintains personnel records. Separate units stationed here, such as the 505th MP Battalion and 30th Engineer Group, must also accomplish the reclassification, although they will be permitted to carry it out by their own methods, Colonel Lundquist said.

Post Headquarters will carry out a three-step program with the view of reducing the assigned strength of first three graders holding a surplus MOS. The program:

1—Personnel holding an overage MOS primary who also possess an additional MOS which is not surplus will be required to appear before a Classification Board. If they are considered qualified in their secondary MOS, these persons will then be reclassified by designating extra MOS as primary.

2—Upper three graders who hold overage MOS but who do not meet requirements as far as secondary MOS is concerned will be interviewed and encouraged to request transfer to a unit for retraining in a shortage MOS or make application for attendance in a service school.

3—Further classification into surplus MOS will be prohibited until further notice.

Personnel affected by the program will be given every assistance in applying for reassignment should they desire it and the ensuing retraining in a shortage MOS.

A total of 23 major overages were listed in the Headquarters Sixth Army circular which outlined the program for units in its command. These, with authorized and actual assigned personnel of top three grades listed in parentheses, are:

Recreation Specialist (24-67); Lineman (128-138); Ammunition Storage Specialist (16-56); Construction Foreman (43-112); Utilities Foreman (23-59); Duty Foreman (101-147); Subsistence Storage Specialist (30-108); Wheeled Vehicle Mechanic (304-508); Automotive Repairman (118-229); Truckmaster (158-318); Postal Clerk (37-104); Medical Records Clerk (35-74); Personnel Specialist (415-597); Administrative Specialist (676-1063); Ordnance Supply Specialist (26-128); Quartermaster Supply Specialist (30-179); Signal Supply Specialist (16-74); Medical Supply Specialist (37-95); General Supply Specialist (588-875); Medical Specialist (142-280); Meat

New Library Slated For 1956

Architect's Sketch of the new Post Main Library, to be constructed and open to its readers by the end of the year, shows it as a reinforced concrete structure in a modern Spanish style. It will be built on the lot adjoining the Post Exchange. Equipped with the most modern library facilities, the new building will be roofed in mission tile and given a rough brush finish to match the surrounding PX and Presidio Officers' Club. Two years in the planning, the new library will be financed out of non-appropriated funds, proceeds from Post Exchanges, theatres, and commissaries.

Engineer Brigade Returned By Air Force to Army Control

More than 3,000 Army Engineer troops at Beale Air Force Base marched in review at the Marysville installation yesterday in a ceremony marking the transfer of the 136th Engineer Aviation Brigade to Army control.

Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Sixth Army commander; Brigadier General Louis J. Rumaggi, Sixth Army Chief of Staff; Colonel Francis H. Falkner, Sixth Army Engineer, and Colonel John J. Livingston, Brigade commander, participated in the transfer ceremony.

One of several SCARWAF (Special Category Army with Air Force) units which were assigned to the Air Force after that service was separated from the Army in 1947, the brigade has more than 5,000 members serving at Beale, Norton and Edwards Air Force Bases in California.

SCARWAF units were organized and trained by the Army specifically to provide construction and major repair of overseas air bases, with Wolters Air Force Base in Texas and Beale serving as the primary training sites.

Under a new Department of Defense policy, these Army troops serving with the Air Force will return to Army control and the Army will send its own engineer construction units as required to effect construction and repair of air bases.

With a single engineer service for the Army and the Air Force, it is anticipated that savings to the Government and more efficient utilization of available manpower will result.

new management

The Bay Area Post Exchange yesterday resumed control of snack bars, cafeterias and other eating facilities on Bay Area military installations, after more than seven years of civilian management, according to Major B. F. Muse, Bay Area Exchange officer.

Until 1 March, such concessions were operated at Bay Area posts by the civilian National-Wide Food Service.

SF Mayor Makes Visit To Post Today

Mayor George Christopher today will make his first official visit to Sixth Army Headquarters at the Presidio since taking office. He will be accompanied by members of the San Francisco Board of Supervisors.

On arrival at the Presidio, where he will be welcomed by Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Sixth Army commanding general, at 1130 hours, he will be invited to inspect a guard of honor.

Included in the guard will be the Sixth Army Band, Sixth Army Pipe Band, and Sixth Army Honor Guard.

The Pipe Band and the "Presidians," precision drill unit of the Honor Guard, will perform during the ceremony, and the entire honor guard will then pass in review.

The event will take place opposite the Presidio's flag pole in front of the Presidio Officers' Open Mess. The Mayor and the Supervisors will be General Young's guests at a luncheon at the Officers' Mess after the ceremony.

Army Daughters Plan Party for Orphans

A theater and luncheon party for 15 orphan girls will be held by the Junior Army Daughters at the Presidio Saturday. The guests, from St. Joseph's School in San Francisco, will attend the morning matinee at the Post Theater before lunching at the Girl Scout House.

more pamphlets

Because of popular demand, "The Star Presidian" makes available for the second week Veterans Administration pamphlets on home buying.

And the price is right—free.

In addition to last week's popular pamphlet, "Pointers for The Veteran Homeowner," "The Star Presidian" makes available another VA pamphlet—"To The Home-Buying Veteran," a comprehensive guide.

Interested parties may get copies of either or both pamphlets by stopping in "The Star Presidian" office, Building 87-A.

General Wyman Takes Command Of Continental Army

Lieutenant General W. G. Wyman, former Sixth Army commanding general, became Continental Army Commander yesterday, succeeding Gen. John E. Dahlquist who retired last month.

Recently nominated for a fourth star, General Wyman commanded the Sixth Army from 1 March, 1954 to 1 July, 1955, when he was succeeded by Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, as Sixth Army commanding general.

During the Korean War, General Wyman had commanded the IX Corps and in August, 1952, he was named Commander of the Allied Land Forces Southeastern Europe.

statesman's visit—

President of Italy Giovanni Gronchi will be met at the airport by the Sixth Army Honor Guard when he arrives in San Francisco Tuesday evening, 7 March. At public ceremonies before City Hall Wednesday, the Sixth Army Band will also play tribute to the visiting Italian statesman.

On an American tour, President Gronchi recently completed talks with President Eisenhower in Washington.

Private Firms To Make Bids Next Tuesday

A new $140,000 Post library will be constructed by the end of the year on the lot adjoining the Post Exchange. Competitive bids for the contract to construct the single-story, 6,000 square-foot structure will be opened Tuesday.

Approved by Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, some 30 to 40 sets of plans have already been distributed among eligible contractors. Selection of a builder will be made on the basis of the lowest satisfactory bid, according to William E. Utiss, Post Engineer.

Planned to include all the facilities of a modern library, the new building is designed in a modern Spanish style, fashioned to blend appropriately with the Officers' Club and the Post Exchange. The reinforced concrete structure will be roofed in mission tile and treated with a coloring additive to lend it a rough brush, antique finish.

But the interior of the new library will provide ultra-modern facilities for reading, research and relaxation, according to Miss Mary Jane Bostruck, Post main librarian.

"In planning this building," she said, "the Post engineers and the architects have worked closely with the library staff. We think this library has everything we need. It's both beautiful and functional," she said.

Stacks and storage facilities will allow the Post main library to expand from a 13,000 to a 30,000 volume capacity. A separate reference and military arts and science section will provide quiet and comfortable surroundings for serious research and reading. The room will be graced by an elevated hearth fireplace, decorated in Mexican tile mosaic.

Another feature planned for the new library is the inclusion of four glass-enclosed and soundproof listening booths for users of the library's extensive record collection.

The building will also provide for a full windowed room for children.

Following the lead of many civilian public libraries, the new Post book center will include a night and weekend book depository for patrons returning volumes after hours. Above it, an illuminated display case has been planned.

For the library staff, the designers have created spacious stacks, staff and work rooms. The building will be equipped with a self-contained heating and ventilating system.

Financed with non-appropriated funds, proceeds from PX, theater and commissary services, the new library has been two years in the planning, Miss Bostruck said.

Soldiering Needs Learning

Soldiering is more complicated than it used to be.

In the early days of our country, almost every man kept a musket over the fireplace—and he knew how to use it.

Most of these Americans were skilled in the things that made them good soldiers when soldiers were needed. They proved such good soldiers, in fact, that their battles for our freedom gave Americans a reputation for being naturally good soldiers.

This reputation has been passed on to us, so that some of us tend to take it for granted.

But is there today such a thing as "naturally good" soldiers? The answer is "No."

True, there are many men who have the ability to become good soldiers. But you don't step up and fire a mortar naturally without any previous training.

And it takes more than common sense to be a member of a rifle squad if you don't know how a squad functions.

The weapons and equipment of modern war can be used with success only when we know what to do with them.

The belief that Americans are naturally good soldiers has led us to believe other things that don't stand up under close study.

One of these ideas is that Americans who are brave and self-reliant as individuals will always show these qualities when gathered together as soldiers.

This does happen—but only after each man has learned how to live and fight alongside the other members of his team.

Another common idea is that our patriotism is enough by itself to make us good fighters. We don't have to look far into history to find proof that green untrained troops, regardless of their patriotism, cannot win against a better trained enemy.

We are patriotic—and proud of it. But love of country is the spark, not the whole engine. Patriotism makes us want to train hard at the skills that enable us to fight successfully for the things in which we believe.

People of free nations fight only to preserve their freedom. And the soldier who fights for freedom has to be better than his enemy—or he cannot win.

He must know and love what he is fighting for—which is patriotism, but he must also know HOW to fight.

The United States must be defended against communists who imperil our way of life within our borders. Idealists comprise a segment of the party. To cope with the communist threat we must know why they joined.

Idealism can be an admirable quality. But the man with vision should maintain a tie with reality.

The communist idealists have no such tie. They operate with blinkers on. They refuse to see that communism in practice means enslavement, forced labor camps and a total disregard for the well-being of the individual.

Idealists join the party because they want a "cause" and they accept the propaganda picture of communism as the real thing. They fail to see that the communist "utopia" can come only through bloodshed and the complete suppression and destruction of all dissenters.

Disillusionment leads many idealists to leave the party. Many of them who joined during the depression came to their senses when they watched communism in action. Others, however, stayed blindly on. They became part of the hard core. Their heads remain in the clouds while a pool of blood laps around their knees. (AFPS)

'Creepy-Peepy' Created As Remote Battlefield.TV

Washington (AFPS)—The "Creepy-Peepy," a television version of the famed walkie-talkie, has been developed by Signal Corps engineers at Ft. Monmouth, N. J.

The television camera, which is hand-supported, enables a soldier scouting a battle area to transmit pictures directly to his command post. The Army said the "Creepy-Peepy" produces an image "equal to or better than commercial quality."

By carrying his own battery pack, the soldier with the TV camera is freed for the first time from cumbersome cable connections that had previously harnessed him to a source of power and limited movement afoot.

The camera weighs only eight pounds, while its transmitter, which is back-carried, scales 47 pounds complete with its built-in power supply.

The "Creepy-Peepy" has numerous military advantages. Signal Corps cameramen now will be able to reach previously inaccessible areas, moving at will through all types of terrain. When one mission is completed, the TV scout can proceed to a new location, taking his electronic eye with him.

It was pointed out that the camera might also be used commercially.

The Army said that the voice accompanying the picture might be supplied by the handy-talkie radio, which is smaller than the walkie-talkie.

Pictures up to a mile away can be picked up by the flat, cigarbox-shaped camera and sent to a receiver another half-mile away. The latest TV combat aid was built to Signal Corps specifications by the Radio Corporation of America.

Scout, Cub Troop 178 Marks 2nd Anniversary With Awards Dinner

One of the most haunting and compelling love stories in the history of Spanish-California, was born at the Presidio of San Francisco in 1805.

Principles in this star-crossed romance were the 16-year-old daughter of Luis Arguello, the Spanish commander of the San Francisco Presidio—and Nikolai Petrovich Rezanof, a Russian nobleman.

An imperial inspector sent by the Russian government to Alaska during its colonization in 1805, Rezanof came to California from Sitka to obtain food and general supplies for the czarist troops who had crossed Siberia and claimed Alaska. His ship, the Juno, reached San Francisco in April, 1806.

The Russian garrison at Sitka was scurvy-ridden and starving. Rezanof was hardly thinking of romance when his ship reached the Presidio. His mission was to save the Russian Alaskan settlement.

Historians say that his entrance to the harbor of San Francisco was accomplished through the following ruse:

"What ship goes there?" challenged the Spanish guard from the fortress. "Russian," answered Rezanof.

"Let go your anchor," came orders from the fort.

"Yes, sir!" Yes, sir," Rezanof replied, while keeping his ship under way until it had gone beyond range of the Spanish cannons. He had thus broken Spanish-California law, and there was not even a rowboat in the inner harbor to question his entry.

Rezanof's arrival in San Francisco was concurrent with orders which had come through to the Spaniards, announcing a Russian round-the-world voyage of discovery and calling on the authorities to extend every courtesy to the foreign navigators.

Actually, Luis Arguello was only deputy commander to his father, Jose Dario Arguello, who was in Spain at the time.

As a house guest of Commander Arguello, Rezanof was feted in San Francisco social circles. Handsome, tall and a unique personality in the Presidio's Latin atmosphere, he became the most appealing young bachelor in the Spanish garrison.

But it was Donna Concepcion Arguello, the 16-year-old daughter of the Spanish commander, who captured his heart. An acknowledged beauty among the provincial girls, Concepcion was fascinated by his alien charm and the stories he told about the glories of the St. Petersburg Court.

Concepcion has been described as a sparkling, dark-eyed Madonna,

Ft. Mason Civilian Honored by Army

An outstanding record of superior work performance for two years was recognized by the Army in the presentation of a $300.00 cash award to Russ R. Lloyd at Fort Mason.

The award was presented by Col. Roland S. Watts, head of the Army's San Francisco oversea supply agency. Lloyd is chief of management for the agency.

A veteran of World War II, Lloyd entered civilian service at Fort Mason on his discharge in 1946.

haunted by the fervor of her first love, accompanied by her duenna, while Rezanof held her hand in the shadows of the evening courtyards.

Approved by the girl as a husband-to-be, and by her father as a prospective son-in-law, Rezanof, a non-Catholic, overcame, even the religious objections of the Spanish monks.

Rezanof's love interest may have had ulterior motives but his method was honorable. After a fantastic six-week courtship, his engagement to Concepcion was announced by her father.

"From the time that we became betrothed," said Rezanof later, "I managed the port of San Francisco as my interests dictated." The alliance turned the tide of fortune for the Russian colonists in Alaska.

In 1806, Rezanof bid Concepcion what was to be a temporary goodbye while he took his cargo of supplies to Sitka. His constancy was neither tested nor proven. He was taken ill in Siberia while en route to Russia — and unknown to his bride-to-be—he died before completing the journey.

But Concepcion remained faithful to him! A Spanish version of Cho-Cho-Span in Madame Butterfly, she spurned her Spanish suitors while the tides of history bore her father onward to the Governorship of Lower California.

In her early twenties, Concepcion took the black and white robes of a Catholic nun and devoted her life to works of charity. When she was 38, she received the news of Rezanof's death from Sir George Simpson, a Hudson's Bay Company executive, and dinner guest in her father's house.

Lines from Bret Harte's epic poem to Concepcion and Rezanof have made them a permanent epitaph:

"Forty years on wall and bastion, swept the hollow idle breeze, since the Russian Eagle fluttered on the California seas.

"Two dark eyes in haunted orbit, gleamed beneath her nun's white hood;

"Black cloth hid the wasted figure, bowed and stricken where it stood."

News in Books

Recent additions to the shelves of the Sixth Army Reference Library include the following titles:

"A HISTORY OF SOVIET RUSSIA," by E. H. Carr, tells of the momentous period in the rise of the Soviet State covering the last months of Lenin's fatal illness and ending with the convening of the thirteenth party congress in May, 1924.

WAC Noncom Surprised, Gets Raised to Master Sergeant

Sfc. Mary E. Richmond, Company D, Det. 1, Station Complement, sat tensely, her back rigid against a wooden chair in the Post Unit Personnel section.

"Colonel Lundquist will see you now," said Lieutenant Colonel Archie R. Traynor, Post S-1.

'Crusade' Drive Aimed at Red-Held Countries

In pay lines all over the Presidio and sub-posts, American troops this week put down cash on the barrelhead to help 70 million persons behind the Iron Curtain.

And the cause was a worthy one.

Along with millions of other Americans, soldiers here participated in the Crusade for Freedom's annual campaign to raise funds for operation of Radio Free Europe and Free Europe Press.

Given pamphlets and donor envelopes, troops plunked down their contributions to help keep the Crusade's 29 radio transmitters and language papers in operation for another year.

The Radio Free Europe daily broadcasts news of the free world to the Communist-dominated nations of Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Romania, Bulgaria and Albania. In addition, the Crusade sends millions of miniature newspapers across the Iron Curtain each month to provide the only free press these people know.

Participating in the campaign are volunteer committees in 48 states, 70 major national membership organizations, 154 federal area chairmen for the solicitation of federal agencies and military establishments, newspapers and the Advertising Council.

"Every dollar," said Eugene Holman, head of the campaign, "contributed to the Crusade for Freedom is enlisted in the fight to keep alive the spirit of resistance among the 70 million people behind the Iron Curtain. The Crusade offers each of us an opportunity to participate."

MacArthur Avenue is named after Lieutenant General Arthur MacArthur, the Commanding General of the Department of California from 1903-1905. He was the father of General of the Armies Douglas A. MacArthur.

The matter-of-fact announcement from the straight-faced Colonel Traynor ended the curious half-hour Sergeant Richmond had spent wondering why, with no explanation, she had been summoned to the office of the deputy post commander.

"Are you Sergeant Mary E. Richmond?" asked Colonel Lundquist stiffly as he returned the young WAC's nervous salute.

"Yes, sir."

"I have here orders," the deputy post commander said, breaking into a smile. "They promote Sfc. Mary E. Richmond to the rank of Master Sergeant. Congratulations."

With a sigh of relief and surprise, M/Sgt. Richmond accepted the orders and the two sets of three rockers attached to the official papers.

"We promote a lot of Majors and Colonels here," said Colonel Lundquist, "but I can't remember ever promoting anyone to Master Sergeant since I became deputy post commander."

According to W/O Ernest W. Childers, assistant personnel officer, M/Sgt. Richmond's promotion to E-7 is the first on the Presidio in something more than three years.

"At any rate, our records don't go back far enough to turn up another," he said.

First Sergeant of the WAC Company since January 1955, M/Sgt. Richmond joined the Woman's Army Corps in 1945. Before coming to the Presidio as a supply sergeant in February 1954, she had been stationed at Camp Pickett, Va., Fort Monmouth, N. J., and Fort Lee, Va.

Rigged by Col. Traynor, W/O Childers and members of unit personnel, the surprise ceremony was kept secret until the stripes were presented. Not even Captain Virginia Engels, her CO, knew why she too had been called to the DPC's office until her first sergeant appeared.

"I didn't have the slightest idea of what it was all about," said Sgt. Richmond. "I thought maybe I'd been transferred."

Sew On Stripes is the chore facing former Sfc. Mary E. Richmond of Company D, Detachment 1, 6002 SU. Sergeant Richmond became the first new Master Sergeant on post within the last three years. Colonel Carl E. Lundquist checks to see just how well they'll look on her sleeve.

Finds Shower Wine's Fine!

Camp Bussac, France (AFPS)—M/Sgt. George McElroy came home the other day, shucked his clothes, grabbed a bar of soap, stepped into his shower, turned the faucet—and in a matter of minutes was knee-deep in wine.

Mrs. McElroy, the sergeant's wife, preparing dinner in the kitchen, turned the faucet—and had a sinkful of wine.

Sgt. McElroy stepped out of the shower, dressed and dashed next door to tell his story to the landlady. The landlady shrugged her shoulders, "Why tell everybody? Do you want to share it with the neighborhood?"

The landlady called a Bordeaux crew that earlier in the day had refilled the water well in McElroy's backyard. A workman explained, "A wonderful mistake must have been made."

Another workman, of the more informative mold, had this explanation. He must have used a barrel half filled with wine, filled it with water and poured the contents into the well. He also thought it was a "wonderful mistake."

McElroy? He never had it so good.

3 Cavalry Outfits Will Be Retained In Japan Proper

Washington (AFPS)—The Army will retain three reduced-strength regiments within the 1st Cavalry Div. in Japan rather than reduce one regiment—the Seventh Cavalry at Camp Haugen on central Honshu—to token strength as previously announced.

The current plan will continue the triangular organizational concept in the division, with the 5th, 7th and 8th Cavalry Regts. remaining at approximately two-thirds of full strength.

Army officials said this arrangement offers the best deployment with respect to existing training facilities and the most economical use of available troop and dependent housing.

strength decrease

Washington (AFPS) — The numerical strength of the armed forces was 2,916,028 at the end of November, a decrease of 6,964 from the previous month, the Defense Department has announced.

Preliminary reports based Army strength at 1,094,955; Navy at 668,345; Air Force at 951,710 and Marine Corps at 201,018.

A Company MPs Hold 'Open House' For Thirty Cub Scouts

Military Policemen, noted for their adaptness at handling traffic of all kinds, Friday were confronted by a new problem in the form of 30 Cub Scouts who took over Able Company of the 505th.

During a recent meeting of the Cub Scout Pack, Sfc. Robert G. Scranton, Mess Sergeant, an active worker in scout activities, suggested a plan could be worked out whereby the youngsters could get an idea of how an Army unit operated, and the 505th became the target.

Arrangements were made and coordinated between the scout unit and Lieutenant Robert N. Anderson, Able Company CO, and his men made ready to receive the Cubs.

The scouts were taken to a Kid-die Matinee at the post theatre. Following that, they received a demonstration on the uses of various weapons from the men.

After the youngsters had fought their private war they were ushered to the company mess hall where lunch was served.

Having finished their lunch and a cake baked by Sergeant Theron J. Feight, Supply Sergeant, the group gathered around Sfc. George G. Pitts, Desk Sergeant at the Provost Marshal's office, who took them on a guided tour of the Presidio grounds.

Last stop for the scouts was at the Letterman swimming pool.

Seven Honor Grads Top MP Trainees

Men of the 505th Military Police Battalion this week welcomed almost 250 new MPs into the organization with the completion of a six-week training cycle at Fort Baker.

Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, and Lieutenant Colonel Fred C. Smith, commanding officer, 505th and post provost marshal, presented certificates to the graduates at ceremonies in the Fort Baker theatre last week.

Seven graduates of the course were accorded special recognition at the ceremonies.

They were Pfc. Thomas Chat-ham, Pfc. John Klink, Pvt. William Borrer, Sp/3 Timothy Booser, Pfc. Kenneth Glines, Pvt. George Steiert, and Pvt. Alan Jardinski. The seven men were judged tops in the course.

None of the graduates had previous Military Police training. But during the cycle's duration they displayed special aptitude on MP subjects.

Following a brief message from Colonel Lundquist the men were given a party in Company C mess hall.

In 1846, Captain John C. Fremont named the entrance to San Francisco Bay, The Golden Gate.

Local MPs to Start Field Tests at Baker

A stepped-up training program — designed to refresh fuzzy memories — gets under way Monday for troops of the 505th Military Police Battalion.

Lieutenant Colonel Fred C. Smith, in a directive to unit commanders, declared that henceforth MP line companies will alternate in weekly field training exercises at Fort Baker and Fort Cronkhite.

Lieutenant Colonel Smith, commanding officer of the 505th and Post provost marshal, announced the program in order to provide better training for his troops.

Starting Monday, the 505th's Company A will train at Fort Baker in a variety of military police subjects, including prisoner handling, patrols, squad tactics, approach to vehicles, motor convoys, et. al.

Post military police duties will be taken up entirely by Company B, which goes on a 24-hour alert basis.

Baker Company MPs will be responsible for the entire security of the post. Duties in this category, said Lt. Colonel Smith, include all post patrols, building security guards, Letterman Army Hospital detail, all traffic points, Lombard and Fort Baker Information gates, Parolee NCO and men stationed at the Post Stockade.

The only post duties the company in the field will be required to perform will be at the Post Stockade in prisoner handling roles.

Once Able Company has completed its week's tour in the field, Baker Company will be relieved of Post details and begin on the refresher course.

In the hopper for future operations is a week's bivouac which will include use of aggressor forces, night problems, convoys, etc., said Lt. Colonel Smith.

Information Topic

Words Employed as Weapons In Global Conflict of Ideas

In the global struggle between rival ideologies, propaganda is a major weapon in the Cold War arsenals of both the East and the West. Wielded by a skillful Communist enemy, propaganda presents as serious a threat to American security as do atomic and conventional weapons of war.

Propaganda also demands techniques for protection and counter-attack, according to next week's troop information topic, "Defense Against Enemy Propaganda."

The challenge of the Communist Propaganda war requires that the American be armed with the ability to recognize enemy techniques and the ideas to counter them.

Whether in a cold or a hot war, the aim of propaganda is to win over the minds and allegiances of enemies and neutrals. It is calculated to weaken the enemy's belief in himself and finally to destroy his will to resist.

Particularly skillful in ideological warfare, the Communists have developed a number of propaganda methods which the information topic will outline. Among them is the technique of selecting racial, national, political or economic minorities as target groups, inciting discontent for its own sake.

By manufacturing emotion-laden slogans like "Asia for Asians" and "land for the landless," the Communists have spread and intensified conflict, playing havoc with positive efforts to remedy inequity.

In propaganda offensives against the soldier himself, the dissemination of false rumors and misinformation is calculated to demoralize the fighting man, making him distrust his leaders and their motives.

The best defense against enemy propaganda is discipline and leadership, supported by knowledge, the information topic argues.

"By knowing what enemy propaganda is, what its purpose is, who develops it, how it is disseminated and why it exists, men can be exposed to it and still meet its challenge," the topic concludes.

'Pushbutton' War Labeled Myth by Sec'y

Chicago (AFPS)—"The notion that wars can be fought and won by remote control, with machines and pushbuttons, is a dangerous myth," Army Secretary Wilber M. Brucker has declared in a speech here.

"If encouraged," he said this conception "can lead only to psychological, spiritual and physical unpreparedness for the realities of military conflict."

Speaking before the Executives' Club of Chicago, Mr. Brucker emphasized that in the last analysis "soldiers will always be the men of final decision."

He said that artillery, atomic and conventional; tanks and machine guns, mortars and bazookas and the rest of the military arsenal are helpful, but they represent "... power only in the hands of trained and organized men."

"It takes men on the ground to resist troops on the ground," the secretary declared.

Mr. Brucker said that today's Army is equipped with both atomic and conventional weapons and has great versatility, and added that it can apply force "great or small with measured discrimination."

He pointed to the fact that the U. S. Army is helping to train more than 200 foreign divisions and said "our allies are convinced by the sheer presence of our troops that we are in this together and intend to see it through together."

The Army's present strength of 1,034,500 men was termed sufficiently large enough by the secretary to give the U. S. a proper margin of safety "under existing circumstances."

However, he added that a strong reserve force "organized, trained and equipped, which can be ready to fight with a minimum of delay, is essential to our security."

Ten Auto Accidents Listed For January

Excessive speed, following too closely, improper turns, misjudging clearances and other improper actions on the part of military vehicle operators caused 10 accidents during the month of January.

A total of 11 first aid cases were also reported during this month. Four were incurred by military personnel, and the remaining seven by civilians. Ten cases occurred to personnel while on the post, and one was sustained off post.

These accidents came about as a result of mechanical or structural defects, improper lifting and handling, and through operation of high pressure fire hoses.

Unit commanders are continuing to stress the importance of defensive driving, and plans are now being formulated to inaugurate a driver retraining course.

During World War II, the Army shipped by sea transport some 144,000,000 tons of cargo.

For Superior Performance, Edward A. Moniz, chief of the division received $200 cash under the Army's Incentive Awards Program. Colonel John E. Stewart, Post Comptroller, made the presentation in an informal ceremony recently. Miss Elizabeth Antoine, secretary of the Incentive Awards Committee, also tendered her congratulations. Moniz has held his position at the Presidio only eight months.

Civilian Manpower Chief Wins $200 For Outstanding Contributions to Job

For a succession of "outstanding contributions" during his first six months with the Post Comptroller section, Mr. Edward Moniz, chief of the budget and manpower division, received a $200 cash award recently under the Army's Incentive Awards Program.

A Civil Service employee for 15 years, Moniz was presented the prize by Col. John E. Stewart, Post Comptroller, at an informal ceremony.

The Army Incentive Awards Program seeks to give special recognition to individuals whose contributions either outside or in the line of job duties have been of exceptional merit.

Moniz attended St. Louis College in Honolulu, T. H. After graduation, he became an administrative assistant with the Public Works Department at Pearl Harbor Naval shipyards.

From 1950 to 1955 he served with the Military Sea Transportation Service Pacific and the 12th Naval District in San Francisco.

He came to his Presidio desk in June, 1955.

In 1926, by an act of Congress, the United States deeded approximately 10 acres of Presidio land occupied by the Palace of Fine Arts to the city and county of San Francisco.

Pride In Achievement was the theme of Master Sergeant Adriano Salangsang (center) as he accepted the Best Mess Award for January from Colonel Carl E. Lundquist (left) in the DPC's office. ## Ord Library Wins 6A Contest

Of a dozen installations entered in the fourth annual Sixth Army Library Publicity Contest this week, Fort Ord, Fort Lewis and Tacoma's Madigan Army Hospital libraries won $225 in cash awards and stakes in the Army-wide contest to be held later this year.

A board of five area experts in the public relations and library fields assessed the scrapbook entries at the Sixth Army Library and Library Depot which provided the facilities for the Sixth Army competition.

Sponsored by the Adjutant General, the yearly publicity contest is designed to stimulate Army librarians and Special Service officers in improving and expanding library publicity programs.

Judges based their selections on the effectiveness of the overall publicity program, the quality of special publicity events and the utilization of available publicity media. The winning scrapbooks were chosen not for beauty but for their contents, according to Wendell B. Coon, Sixth Army, and host to the judging committee.

Taking the first prize, Fort Ord's library system won $100; Fort Lewis in second place, received $75, and Madigan Army Hospital library received the $50 third prize.

The panel of judges included Major Helen A. Hart, Sixth Army Public Information Office; William H. Brett, Oakland Public Library, adult education librarian; Mrs. J. ## Cage Tourney at Kezar

Ft. Lewis Edges Presidio 75-74, As Lofgran Hurt

By Pvt. Bob Malone
Star Presidian Sports Editor

Sparked by some terrific outside shooting from Bruce Goodrich and James Westbrook, the defending champion Fort Lewis Chiefs edged the Presidio Red Raiders 75-74 Wednesday night to take the lead in the All-Sixth Army double-elimination Basketball Tournament being held in Kezar Pavilion this week.

The cage contest was nip and tuck all the way with the Presidio ahead 36-33 at half time and was all tied up 67-67 with five minutes remaining. The thriller continued till Fort Lewis forward Goodrich hit on a 15-foot set shot with seconds remaining.

The Presidio suffered a severe loss when center Don Lofgran re-injured his sprained ankle in the third period and was forced to leave the game.

Forward Mike O'Neill again led the Red Raiders in scoring with 20 points to his credit.

At press time yesterday morning the remaining casaba action had Two Rock Ranch meeting Fort Huachuca, with the winner playing the Presidio late yesterday afternoon for the right to meet Fort Lewis in today's championship game. Assuming the Presidio wins they will battle Lewis at 1500 hours today for the title with a second tilt scheduled for 1900 hours if necessary.

The Red Raiders opened the five day tourney by blasting out a 101-65 win over Letterman Army Hospital. Lofgran led the Presidio scoring parade with 20 points followed by O'Neill with 19 and Bob Harbertson with 17. Brooks was high point man for Letterman with 21 tallies.

The second Presidio win came at the expense of the powerful Fort Ord Warriors 80-64. Big O'Neill with 23 and Norm Ellenberger with 18 tallies apiece led the locals to victory.

The Raiders led by only two points at half time but gradually pulled away in the final game to

Presidio Edges Fort Ord In Thrilling Finale, 25-17

Starting with a 40-22 victory over the Oakland Army Base WACs the Presidio Women's basketball team, under the able coaching of Julian Kite, went on to capture the All-Sixth Army Women's Cage title in a week-long tournament held at nearby Letterman Army Hospital.

The Presidio girls won the title crown by taking the final game from Fort Ord whom they had previously defeated 50-25. The locals were forced to go all out in the final clash to earn a 25-17 victory and it was coach Kite who came into the game in the final period and scored three buckets to clinch the victory.

Presidio started off the tourney with a win over the Oakland Army Base girls by using an unbeatable defense. Oakland did not score a field goal from the floor in the first half. Leading 21-6 at the half, the locals eased up slightly in the second period with Georgia Kelly taking high point honors with 14 tallies.

The second Presidio victory came at the expense of Fort Lawton, 45-25. Mary Phillips led the local lassies in scoring with 17 points followed by Georgia Kelly with 12.

Rolling on, the Presidio girls continued to show championship form by blasting Fort Ord from the unbeaten list, 50-25. Delores Argue came through with 23 points to pace the Presidio victory.

The final clash for the title against Fort Ord was a tough defensive battle with the Presidio having to overcome a determined Fort Ord team to earn a hard fought 25-17 win.

Presidio guards Peggy Harris, Yvonne LaDue and Edith Wark were the stars of this defensive battle as they limited Fort Ord to two points in the first period, one point in the third and two in the final quarter.

With time running out in the final period Presidio coach Julian

Kite came into the contest and scored three quick goals to clinch the game and the championship for the Presidio.

In the final game played prior to the WAC cage tourney the Presidio girls whipped the Mather Air Force WAFs 46-32 to win first place in the Bay Area Armed Forces Women's Basketball League.

Presidio Keg Team Enters Oakland Tilt

PSF Track Squad Drills For Meet

Under the capable direction of Pfc. Lee Schroeder the Presidio Track and Field squad is busy working out for its first meet of the 1956 cinder season. There is still room for more talented track stars and interested men should contact the Post Sports' Office in Building 122.

Similar contests will be staged at Forts Baker and Cronkhite, but as yet no date has been set.

Winners in Presidio competition will travel to Fort Ord to compete against winners in the Southern Division, Sixth Army. They will climb that rung on the ladder to New York, 19 and 20 April.

Top talent from this show will return to the Presidio Service Club for the All-Sixth Army contest, 22 to 25 April.

Talent will be picked from outstanding vocal soloists, instrumental soloists, individual specialty performers, vocal groups, instrumental and specialty groups of not more than five individuals.

A recorded entertainment contest will see judges picking the top recorded barbershop quartets, country and western groups (four to seven members), Army band choruses (not less than 12 members), battalion or regimental choruses (not less than 12 members), post or division choruses (not less than 20 members) and singing platoons (not less than 20 members).

Redesignation!

DA Drops Division Tags On All Stateside Training Sites

In order to more clearly indicate basic training centers, the Department of the Army has announced the discontinuance of division designations to identify training organizations.

Four training centers will be affected by this action, DA said in a news announcement through Department of Defense.

Divisions heretofore identified as the 69th at Fort Dix, New Jersey; 5th Armored at Camp Chaffee, Arkansas, and the 6th Armored at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., will be inactivated and termed: US Army Training Center, Infantry, Fort Dix; US Army Training Center, Field Artillery, Camp Chaffee; and US Army Training Center, Engineer, Fort Leonard Wood.

The training center at Fort Ord, which has been identified as the Sixth Division, will be discontinued and the organization designation withdrawn.

A new division, the 5th Infantry, currently gyroscoping into Fort Ord from Germany, will replace the Sixth later this year. It will be a TO&E division, but will also have a training mission, according to Sixth Army G-3 here.

The training center at Fort Jackson, S. C., now known as the 101st Airborne Division, will be redesignated as the US Army Training Center, Infantry. The 101st will be transferred to Fort Campbell, Kentucky, less personnel and equipment for activation as an operational unit later.

In addition, Armored and Antiaircraft Artillery replacement centers at Fort Knox, Kentucky, and Fort Bliss, Texas, will henceforth be known as US Army Training Center, Armor, Fort Knox, and US Army Training Center, Antiaircraft Artillery, Fort Bliss.

The training centers at Fort Dix, Jackson, Knox, Leonard Wood and Camp Chaffee will also conduct advanced individual training in the designated branches, in addition to basic combat training.

Operation 'Spring Buckup' Hits Post; Will Stress Military Dress, Conduct

With the announcement of Operation "Spring Buckup" at the Presidio this week, the young soldier, or old for that matter, whose thoughts turn annually to lighter things may find it necessary to depart from his customary timetable.

Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, has ordered all unit commanders to put fresh emphasis on standard regulations governing personal appearance, military courtesy and to generally shape-up their charges into better soldiers.

Finding that floods, holidays and the general demeanor of Old Man Winter had demoralized the timetables of some units, the DPC ordered a standardization of all military calls and stressed the responsibility of the unit commanders to have their troops on hand at the regulation times.

He further emphasized that blanket excuses for absence from duty calls would not be acceptable. However, he left the decision on acceptable individual excuses up to the discretion of the company commanders, stressing that those men with "cogent" reasons should be excused when it was necessary.

"The Presidio soldier often forgets he's in the Army," said the colonel. "His daily contact with civilians, his civilian-like occupation and the in-the-city location of the Presidio tend to draw him away from his soldierly obligations. About once or twice a year it is necessary to bring him back to earth."

13 Sites Affected!

Slate 33 New Housing Units for Two Rock Ranch

Washington (AFPS) — The Defense Department has authorized the construction of an additional 2,672 Capehart Act homes for military families at 13 Army installations, housing officials here have announced.

The new units bring to 47,176 the total number approved under the act since last December.

Of the new homes, 1,021 are earmarked for seven anti-aircraft sites in the US. It marks the first time AAA installations have received approval to build Capehart Act homes, which are financed with rental allowances normally paid military personnel.

Other Army installations getting the new units and the number at each are:

Two Rock Ranch Station, Calif., 33; White Sands Proving Grounds, N. M., 134; Ft. Benning, Ga., 1,000; Quartermaster Research and Development Center, Natick, Mass., 50; Camp Stewart, Ga., 388, and Philadelphia QM Depot, 46.

pamphlets

In the past week, the Star Presidian has made available over 400 copies of two Veterans Administration pamphlets for the home-buying serviceman and veterans. Because response to the offering was so enthusiastic, we ran out of pamphlets early in the week. However, we hope to have more of the popular booklets on hand by today. It would be wise to call us before making the trip to the Star Presidian office. The extension is 4244.

New Post Exec Has Top Troop, Combat Record

Colonel Charles G. Rau recently became post executive officer, replacing Colonel John E. Geiser, now training chief of the Military Assistance Advisory Group to the Iranian Imperial Army.

On his third tour of duty at the Presidio, the new executive officer served his first assignment at the Presidio early in his Army career in 1932.

The much decorated Colonel Rau served during World War II in the North African, Sicilian and European campaigns. Until the Normandy invasion, he held battalion and regimental commands in the 2d Armored Division. He was then assigned to command the 7th Armored Group with the XIX Corps.

A competitive firing enthusiast, Colonel Rau has held several positions as leader of outstanding marksmanship groups.

Among his decorations are the Silver Star, the Soldier's Medal, the Bronze Star with three oak leaf clusters, the Army Commendation Ribbon, the Purple Heart, the Combat Infantryman's Badge and the Arrowhead of European Duty. He also wears the Order of the Orange Nassau with Swords and the French Croix de Guerre with Palm.

Effective Now!

Hike Per Diem Rates for Some Serving Overseas

The Joint Per Diem and Transportation Committee here announced the new rates became effective 1 March.

Under the revision to Joint Travel Regulation 48, enlisted men in all pay grades who are in this category will receive an extra $1.70 a day in addition to their regular station allowances.

The officer and warrant rates are as follows:

O-8 and O-7, $4.55; O-6, $4.00; O-5, $3.40; O-4, W-4, $3.15; O-3, W-3, $2.85; O-2, W-2, $2.55, and O-1, W-1, $2.30.

Near Duty Site!

AAA NCO Occupies First House Under New Army Leasing Plan

Sergeant First Class Paul J. Tate, antiaircraft section chief assigned to the defenses of the San Francisco Bay area, moved his attractive family into a government-leased private home in Alameda last week. The comfortable seven-room house is one of the first to be leased under the Army Antiaircraft Command's plan to rent houses for officers and enlisted men in the close vicinity of their antiaircraft defense positions.

Antiaircraft troops across the nation have long suffered from a serious lack of adequate family housing. The troops that man the guns and guided missiles of the Antiaircraft Command are on alert 24 hours a day, seven days a week. The married officers and men must live within 10 minutes time-distance of their duty stations.

In the past this has often meant that antiaircraft troops must be separated from their families for long periods of time, or live in inadequate housing or housing that is beyond their means.

The Tates' new government leased house is located at 2815 Otis Drive in Alameda, just 9 minutes from Sergeant Tate's duty station at Battery C, 752d AAA Gun Battalion on Government Island. Mrs. Doris Tate and her daughters Sharon, 13, and Debra, 3, are enthused over the plan which permits them the same housing privileges they would receive if stationed on an Army post.

Fifteen civilian houses will be leased in the San Francisco area at this time under the present plan, according to Colonel Dallas F. Haynes, antiaircraft defense commander for the San Francisco Bay area. Some gun and missile units in the defense have quarters on nearby Army installations, and quarters will be constructed on the sites for others. The Army announced earlier this month that 60 family housing units would be built in the near future on isolated

Crossing the Threshold, Sfc. Paul J. Tate, 7520 AAA Battalion, and his family recently moved into quarters at 2815 Otis Drive, Alameda, the first housing of its kind to be provided under the new government leasing program. Under the new plan, the government leases private housing for occupancy by military personnel and their families. With Sfc. Tate are Sharon, Mrs. Tate and Debra.

Nike sites in the San Francisco Bay area.

Both Sergeant and Mrs. Tate agree that they couldn't have asked for a more congenial neighborhood. Many of their new neighbors have already stopped by for a visit and to welcome them to the community. Sharon is already a favorite with the teen-agers of Alameda, and Debra wasted no time in finding some new friends.

"Shopping centers, schools, playgrounds are all just around the corner," said Mrs. Tate delightedly. "We are certainly pleased with the happy results of the Army's new antiaircraft leasing plan."

The leased houses are selected on standards set up by the Army and the leases are negotiated with the civilian owners by the San Francisco District Engineer. The authority to acquire quarters for officers and enlisted men in the near vicinity of duty stations was approved by the Department of Defense last month. Over 200 family housing units for antiaircraft troops will be leased in the Pacific Coast states. As the plan progresses, additional leases may be authorized by the Army Antiaircraft Command.

Sergeant First Class Tate's military career began back in World War II when he served as a Gunner's Mate, 1st Class, in the U.S. Navy, from November 1942 to November 1945. After a few years of civilian life, Sergeant Tate enlisted in the Army in 1949 at Fort Bliss, Texas, and started an 8-year association with antiaircraft artillery. Just in time for the little "hot" war in the Far East, Sergeant Tate went to Korea with the 15th AAA Battalion of the 7th Infantry Division.

State Regulations!

Tax Changes In Iowa Noted; Other State Deadlines Near

6th Army Bands, Honor Guard Welcome Italian President Gronchi to SF

His Excellency, Signor Giovanni Gronchi, President of the Republic of Italy, was met Wednesday evening at San Francisco's International Airport by Major General Riley F. Ennis, Sixth Army deputy commanding general, and an array of Sixth Army and Presidio troops.

As the Italian president stepped off the plane, he was greeted by the Sixth Army Band and Pipe Band, flanked by the Honor Guard.

Chief of Staff, Sixth Army, Brig. Gen. Louis Rumaggi, on a visit with Maj. Gen. Paul L. Freeman, Jr., 2d Infantry Division and Fort Lewis commanding general. General Rumaggi observed training progress of Europe-bound 2d Division Gyroscopic units and toured Fort Lewis' new construction areas.

The greatest reason why we remain under arms is to deter possible communist aggression throughout the world. But the communist does not operate only with weapons. He seeks to subvert free government through political means.

In many foreign countries the communist candidate appeals to poverty-stricken people who have lost hope. If questioned, many of these peasants and workers would readily admit they wouldn't want their country to become part of the Kremlin chain-gang.

Ill-clothed, ill-housed and ill-fed, however, they are ready bait for the Red candidate and often vote communist because the party promises reform. Some actually become party members in protest against the way things are rather than out of a positive belief in communism.

Once the communists gain control of the government it is almost impossible to dislodge them. Their opposition is silenced—frequently permanently with a bullet in the head. Civil and political rights disappear. Slave labor camps dot the countryside. Liberty-loving citizens have had it.

The governments of these countries are trying to meet the problems of poverty and despair. But, with the after-effects of WWII still evident, their resources are limited.

Therefore, the United States has joined hands with these governments to offer hope to the people. Through our economic aid programs we help farmers raise better crops, businesses return to life and industries' wheels turn.

We lend our moral support and defense aid to democratic governments in these countries. And we offer the example of our democracy for possible reforms. We try to help the nations remain truly free and independent. By doing so, we reinforce our own freedom. (AFPS)

Children of Service Personnel Can Use This Good Advice

New York (AFPS)—“A word to the wise is sufficient,” is an old saying that applies to all of us.

The Police Department, County of Nassau, N. Y., has published a graphic message to civilian parents and their children that concerns the military as well.

Some of the do's and don'ts parents were asked to impress on their children are:

- Don't ride with strangers.
- Don't take gifts from strangers.
- Do get a license number.
- Do tell your parent, teacher, or police officer when a stranger loiters near any place where children gather.

- Do remember that the police officer is your friend.

The pamphlet also had some good advice for youngsters. They were asked to report to the police or have someone else report:

- Any stranger who tries to join in your play.
- Any stranger who offers to take you for a ride or walk.
- Any stranger who approaches you in the movies to talk to you or touch you.

6-Month Reserve! Active Duty Plan Now Available For Certain Skills

Washington (AFPS) — Certain skilled jobholders will be able to participate in the six-month active duty reserve program, although they are past the normal 18 and one-half year age limit, the Office of Defense Mobilization has announced.

The ODM said some personnel in critical industries and occupations were so essential to the nation that they could not be spared for the usual two-year draft term.

In the past, all the occupations listed have been recommended for deferment by local draft boards. At the end of their deferment jobholders still faced two years of active duty.

Occupations in which personnel are eligible for the six-month program include: design engineer draftsman, jig and template maker, laboratory apparatus glass blower, foreman in a critical industry, and college, vocational or high school teacher of science or mathematics.

Men whose skills are in great demand by the armed forces are not eligible for the six-month reserve plan. In this group are: aircraft and engine mechanics, electronics technicians, instrument repairmen and machinists.

Arguello Boulevard is named after Lieutenant Jose Arguello, the Spanish commandant of the Presidio from 1781-1806.

History of History! Probing Presidio Past Has Been A 37-Year Project

The history of the Presidio has a considerable history of its own, according to Sp-3 William H. Cohn, information specialist for the Post Troop Information and Education section and part-time investigator into the dimmer episodes of the Presidio's past.

For the past six months, working with Major Earle K. Stewart, Post I&E officer, Cohn has been ferreting out material to fill in the historical blanks left by a series of military predecessors.

The first concerted efforts to compile a Post history, according to Cohn, were made in 1919 under Colonel William P. Burnham, commanding officer of the Presidio and Angel Island's Fort McDowell. When Colonel Burnham assumed command, he found no one either on or off the Presidio with any knowledge of its historical background.

In the five years that Colonel Burnham commanded the Post, a start at uncovering the Presidio's past was made. Fort Scott's commanding officer, Lt. Col. John P. Spurr, named Fort Scott's maze of undesignated streets after historical personalities associated with the Presidio. During the same five years, Captain Nelson H. Holderman found time sporadically to compile a limited history from the Spanish founding to the Presidio of his own day.

Little was done with the Post history after Colonel Burnham's retirement in 1924 until the depression years of the thirties. Under the command of Colonel Douglas Potts, Captain Barney Meeden in cooperation with the University of California and a Specialist Third William H. Cohn, Post Troop Information and Education section, has his hands full with research into the history of the Presidio. In his spare time, Cohn, an information specialist, has been working with Major Earle K. Stewart, Post I&E officer, to bring knowledge of Presidio history up to date.

Part-Time School Needs Full-Time Study

As much as an hour before most of the Post has reported to work each morning, a small group of NCOs gather in Building 563 to get a head start on their morning duties.

Each of the men has the same mission—to obtain an intermediate education for himself—the minimum requirement for all career NCOs and the stepping stone to a high school certificate.

Building 563 houses the Post Troop Information and Education classrooms where SP-3 Walter Cutler teaches a class of 22 and Pvt. William Ensminger instructs an evening session of 15 NCOs in the elements of a basic, formal education.

But to acquire the information and the training which he missed earlier in life can be a difficult job for a soldier anywhere from one to 25 years beyond school age. (Students' ages range from 20 to 45, ranks from Private to Master Sergeant.) It takes time and effort and often the official four-hour morning session may not be quite sufficient.

So some of the students arrive early and on Saturdays, meeting informally with instructor Cutler to iron out the more perplexing problems of the week's lessons.

Toughest subjects in the five-course curriculum are Math and English, according to instructor Cutler.

“It's difficult to learn the intricacies of formal English grammar after speaking your own way for a lifetime. And spelling can be a mystery even to a Ph.D.,” Cutler said.

Four Hours a Day is hardly long enough sometimes to master and digest several years' education telescoped into a few months. Taught by SP3 Walter Cutler, Post TI&E, a class of 22 men works on the intermediate educations they were unable for various reasons to acquire before entering the Army. Study long after a man has passed school age can be hard work. Many of the men come early in the morning for extra help and coaching from SP Cutler or Pvt. William Ensminger, who teaches a similar class in the evenings.

“In Math, this class is wading through two years' work in four or five months. It's hard but the men get considerable satisfaction out of problem-solving.”

For many of the men who have traveled a good deal during their Army careers, Geography is often a snap. General Science, because it's often related to mechanics and daily technical problems is a favorite subject. American history rounds out the program.

In the morning classes, the men are officially assigned and the studies are part of their work day. But even though attendance is technically compulsory, they show serious and willing attitudes toward their work, Cutler said.

The 15 men who attend Pvt. Ensminger's night sessions study on their own time, after putting in a full day on the job.

When the students are ready, they will undergo the USAFI end-of-course test. If they pass, they are then eligible to work at Army's high school program.

Despite handicaps—the lack of training aids and ideal conditions for study, said Cutler, “It's a rewarding experience to see men take and complete the course to the mutual benefit of both the Army and themselves as individuals.”

number of historical societies gathered the information which was utilized by the Works Project Administration to reconstruct the Presidio Officers Club.

Part of the WPA project, a sketchy manuscript, traced the Presidio's history from its founding in 1776 to the early thirties. But the WPA history, according to Cohn, is somewhat inaccurate and ends with the thirties.

In the past year, at the direction of Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, the historical research program has been renewed under Major Stewart. Since then Cohn and Major Stewart have at every opportunity sought out pertinent information from every known available source.

“We've worked through UC's Bancroft library, the San Francisco and Sixth Army Reference libraries and the storehouses of local historical societies. We've rummaged through basements of some of the oldest buildings in the area, turning up a number of old records, photos and handbooks. We've even interviewed a few veterans who can 'remember the Presidio when.’

“But there are still a great many gaps, particularly in the history of the past 50 years,” Cohn said. “We'd be glad to hear from anyone who has information we might use. Our phone number is 3735.”

Cohn, who graduated with a Master's Degree in History from Ohio State University in 1955, said a tentatively planned product of the revived research project might be a more complete written history of the Post.

In 1933 the Army withdrew all troops and equipment from Alcatraz and turned the Island over to the Department of Justice.

The roads and streets at Fort Scott are named after artillery officers who served there. Lieutenant Colonel John P. Spurr, commanding officer at Fort Scott in 1923, selected the names.

Officer Candidates M/Sgt. Robert V. Cunningham and Sfc. Keith L. Reber of the 30th AAA Group will begin training for commissions 12 March. Former Personnel Sergeant, 30th Group, Sgt. Cunningham will attend Artillery School at Fort Sill, Oklahoma. Sergeant Reber will go to Fort Benning, Georgia, for infantry training. Both men enlisted in the Army at age 17. Col. Dallas F. Haynes, congratulates men on new assignment.

Success Story

AAA Pair Win Appointment To Officers Candidate School

Two sergeants from the 30th AAA Group, who joined the Army at 17 and worked their way up through enlisted ranks, left this week for Officer Candidate School training. They are M/Sgt. Robert V. Cunningham, personnel sergeant, 30th Group, and Sfc. Keith L. Reber, First Sergeant, Headquarters Battery, 9th AAA Battalion.

Two years with the 30th AAA, Sgt. Cunningham will begin training 12 March at the Fort Sill Oklahoma Artillery School. During his nine years in the Army, he has managed to complete requirements for a high-school diploma and gone on to earn two years of college credit under the Army education program.

He also served the 30th AAA as First Sergeant, Headquarters Battery.

Sergeant Reber will begin 22 weeks of Infantry training 12 March at Fort Benning, Georgia. During his eight months with the 30th AAA Group, his efficiency on the job was in large part responsible for his selection as an officer candidate, according to Colonel Dallas F. Haynes, 30th AAA commanding officer.

"Both men are outstanding examples," said Colonel Haynes, "of the opportunities available to men of the San Francisco AA defense."

44th Birthday

Presidio Plans Celebration Of Girl Scout Anniversary

Presidio-planned ceremonies marking the 44th anniversary of the founding of the Girl Scouts of America begin on the morning of 13 March when junior and senior Scouts attend religious services at the Post Chapel and the Chapel of Our Lady.

Mass will be conducted in the smaller chapel at 0930, for which a special section is being reserved for Girl Scouts of the Catholic faith. Chaplain Ferdinand B. Demsher will be the celebrant.

Protestant services honoring the Girl Scout anniversary will be conducted at the Post Chapel by Chaplain Henry C. Butt, at 1100 hours with another in the Fort Scott Chapel during the same hour, by Chaplain Deane F. Babbitt.

On Sunday afternoon of the 11th, the Presidio Girl Scouts will further honor their 44th anniversary with a mass appearance of the eight local units at Harmon Armory, at 1400 hours, where they will join larger contingents of San Francisco Girl Scouts to hear a congratulatory address by Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, commanding the Sixth Army.

After the invocation by Chaplain Butt, and the commanding general's address the Girl Scouts will participate in an entertainment program presided over by Major Elizabeth Hoisington, Sfc. Virginia Chaffee, Mrs. James Enmire, Mrs. George Masters, Mrs. John Wrigley, Mrs. Varnard Garald and Mrs. Harry Nelson.

Gala Debut

General Young To Attend Opening Of Non-Com Club

Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commander, is slated to cut the tape marking formal opening of the new Presidio Non-Commissioned Officers Mess, on the evening of 17 March.

Located in Building 69, which formerly housed the YMCA, the newly-launched social club for top three-graders and their families, is elaborately appointed in quiet tones of pastel against a backdrop of oak-finished walls.

Leather trim and fabric upholstery combine to lend an air of unobtrusive comfort to the club which boasts an enormous ballroom, two cocktail bars, wall-to-wall carpeting, indirect lighting and a well-appointed dining room.

For the opening event on Saint Patrick's night, the club Board of Governors has arranged to present two bands, one in the downstairs lounge, and one for modern dancing in the upstairs ballroom. A floor show featuring top-drawer talent will lend added vigor to the opening night festivities which are scheduled to continue from 1930 to 0100 hours.

Either a buffet supper or a more formal dinner may be obtained at the new club on 17 March.

Christ's Last Words

Cantata To Climax Lent

Climax of the penitential season of Lent will be marked at the Presidio with a Post Chapel choral presentation of "The Seven Last Words Of Christ," famed sacred cantata composed by Theodore Dubois.

Second major liturgical work to be presented by the Post Chapel Choir in the past three months, the cantata is being introduced by a 35-voice chorus of trained singers drawn from the ranks of officers, enlisted men and women, family members and civilians in this area. It takes place at the Post Chapel on Good Friday evening, 30 March, at 1930 hours.

Created for soprano, tenor and baritone soloists with chorus,

35 Win Annual Top Safety Awards At Motor Pool Ceremony

Thirty-nine military and civilian vehicle operators and mechanics, comprising part of the Post Motor Pool force who drive and maintain 275 military vehicles, received safety awards Monday afternoon from Major Joseph P. O'Connor, post transportation officer, in recognition of their exemplary service and clean slate for accidents during the past 12 consecutive months.

Operating on a "round-the-clock" basis, seven days a week, these drivers have covered nearly 8,000 miles without incurring an accident of any type or violating a traffic regulation.

The mechanics receiving the awards have kept these vehicles operating in first class condition without sustaining any accidents in their shop work during the past year.

One of the most significant operations of the motor pool is the school bus service which handles some 1050 Presidio youngsters daily. Over a two-year period, these drivers have taken children to some 34 schools scattered throughout the San Francisco area without having one reported accident while the youngsters occupied their vehicles.

Seeking to give recognition to the men who have established these safety records, Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, set into motion this award program.

Colonel Lundquist hopes to instill this safety factor in all individuals operating military vehicles so that the annual accident rates will be reduced, and a more safe and cautious driving program will be fostered among the vehicle operators.

Complete New Type $190,000 BOQ For Oakland Army Terminal

A new Bachelor Officers Quarters, first permanent type of its kind at Oakland Army Terminal, was turned over to the base this week.

The two-story reinforced concrete structure provides living accommodations for 30 officers. It was built at a contract price of $190,000, with the work project beginning last May.

Colonel Wilber M. Gaige, Jr., Terminal Commander, will formally accept the new BOQ from the San Francisco District Army Engineer. It is located on the southeast corner of the reservation and will be ready for occupancy in the near future.

Wac Sfc. Wins Player Plaudits For Top Job As Local Sports Czar

By Sfc. Debra O'Hanlon
Star Presidian Staff Writer

"She could easily be credited with doing the work of four men," says Captain Warren G. H. Crecy, the Presidio Sports officer. "She is an asset to our section, and I'm sure she would be equally valuable to any military unit, anywhere!"

"She" is a 31-year-old Wac whose laurels do not end with being an officer's idea of a good non-com. Holding one of the most unique assignments for an enlisted woman anywhere, she has—as coach for all women's Post and intra-mural level games—seen more trophies brought home to the Presidio by its men and women teams than a good mess sergeant can count meals served to the troops in a month of Sundays.

Dedicated to her duty assignment as Sports NCOIC, she might rightfully be designated the Army's all-around Jill-of-all-trades, for it seems that she can master any and all of them, provided they have something to do with the skilled performance of an athletic team in action or in preparation.

Buxom, good-natured and easy-going, Sergeant Julian L. Kite, despite the first name, is very much a woman.

"There isn't any need for a girl to drop her feminine qualities because she enters the field of athletics," declares Sergeant Kite. "Most of the Nation's great women athletes have managed to remain feminine as powder puffs!"

Under supervision of Mr. Hal Fisher, Post Sports director, "Julie," as she is known in the Wac Company, carries out a formidable list of duties.

She supervises an office staff of seven enlisted men, plans all engagements for intra-mural and

Post-level games, including the pinpointing of 20 mixed basketball teams, and 14 intra-mural teams; she schedules all Post games, such as softball, volleyball, track, tennis, badminton, baseball, football and swimming.

She also arranges travel and initiates pay vouchers, arranges victory banquets and refrains only from using man-language when the team flubs a goal or a point.

An artist in the techniques of spurring her teams to victory, Julie is currently glorying in the recent Sixth Army Basketball Championship crown for the Presidio by the enlisted women of the 6002nd SU Wac Detachment. This was the second championship to be achieved under her direction of coach. The first was the Sixth Army Softball crown for last season.

Julie herself holds several trophies for her victories in competitive games of tennis, ping-pong and badminton. She reminds you proudly that the Presidio male athletes are no slouches either. "They won the Northern California and the Bay Area Armed Forces Basketball championships this season," she says, "and I have a hunch that 1956 will be one of the most victorious years sports-wise in the history of the Presidio."

Now serving her second year of duty here, Sergeant Kite has been in Army Special Services since 1951. She has been on foreign assignment in Heidelberg, Germany, and began her military career with the U.S. Army Air Force before it was created a separate entity 11 years ago.

A former teletype operator and newspaper proofreader in her home city of Weir, Mississippi, Julie was graduated from Weir High School and from Draughton's Business College in Jackson, Mississippi. She served in the U.S. Army Signal Service as a teletype operator before sports, her first love, drew her into the field of Army athletics.

"There's nothing like a competitive game in any sport, to bring out the team spirit, which is such a legend in the Wac corps, Sergeant Kite thinks. "You can usually tell how good the Company morale is by the way its sports teams play the game."

Team trophies on display down at the Wac Day Room tell their own story of fine teams and a super-fine coach. They include gold and silver cups won in basketball, softball, volleyball, ping-pong, badminton and bowling. Synonymous with good morale and good sportsmanship.

Presidio Glee Club Still Needs Many More Voices

Close to 30 enthusiastic young soldiers reported to the Service Club last week in answer to a Star Presidian request for singers to become members of the Presidio Men's Glee Club.

Among the group were bass, baritone and tenor singers, but still more are needed to swell the ranks of the all-male vocal-ist chorus.

Mr. Don Bishop is the Presidio Glee Club director. He has a wide range of experience in voice training, so it isn't necessary to be a professional or even semi-professional singer to join the club.

All types of male voices are welcome to try-outs and rehearsals for the Glee Club Chorus, held at the Post Service Club on Tuesday and Thursday evenings at 1730.

Prospective singers are invited to call Miss Pierson at the Service Club, Ext. 2000, or to show in person at the club on either of the given evenings.

News in Books

Recent additions to the shelves of the Sixth Army Reference Library include the following titles:

"THE MAN WITH THREE FACES," by H. Q. Meissner, is the story of Richard Sorge, who ran a fantastically successful Communist espionage outfit in prewar and wartime Japan, while appearing to be a devout Nazi foreign correspondent.

"THE CALL TO HONOR," by C. A. de Gaulle, (translated from the French) by J. Griffin, is a narrative covering the period 1939 to mid-1942. The heroic French General portrays with moving candor his military and political roles as leader of the Free French.

"RED PLUSH AND BLACK BREAD," by Marguerite Higgins, the prize-winning reporter, describes her book in the introduction as "an eye-witness account of Russia as I saw it and Soviet policy as I have experienced it."

"A NIGHT TO REMEMBER," by Walter Lord, is an almost minute-by-minute account of what happened when the ocean liner Titanic struck an iceberg and sank on the night of 14 April, 1912.

Local Lady Soldiers Win Certificate for Unique Safety Accomplishments

A safety record considered unusual in local history, was scored by members of the 6002nd SU Wac Detachment this week when a Certificate of Achievement was presented to officers and enlisted women of Company D.

The citation, signed by Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, was in recognition of the fact that during the past year, no single major accident, either to person, property, pedestrian or motor vehicle, has occurred in the Wac company in that time.

According to the post safety officer, the Wac unit is the only company-sized unit within the garrison to achieve the distinction during the current survey.

The presence of the U. S. Army troops along the Iron and Bamboo Curtains, ready to fight if necessary, is a constant reminder to any potential aggressor that he will be met promptly by an American soldier.

Basketball

Chiefs Edge Red Raiders 80-73 In Cage Finale

A sturdy, well coached quintet of Fort Lewis Chiefs downed the pre-tourney favorite Presidio Red Raiders, 80-73, for the Sixth Army basketball championship at Kezar Pavilion last Friday afternoon despite Presidio forward Mike O'Neill's 26 points.

Before a wildly partisan crowd, that threatened to erupt as the hometowners began to weaken in the stretch drive, the smooth-functioning Lewisites kept cool under the collar and hot under the basket. It was this irresistible combination of teamwork and levelheadedness that gave the champions a 76-67 point lead with some three minutes left in the contest.

That was all she wrote! With big Mike O'Neill out on fouls, the locals never got back into the game.

The first half was nip and tuck all the way with the score seesawing back and forth as the Presidio, using their fast break, and Lewis sharpshooting from outside and controlling the backboards, battled up to the halftime buzzer with the Red Raiders walking off the floor with a one point lead.

Action continued hot and heavy in the second period but the loss of 6:6 center Don Lofgran earlier in the tournament hurt the Presidio hopes as Fort Lewis dominated the rebounding despite some great play by Bob Harbertson and Bob Moran for the locals.

Bruce Goodrich, a 6:3 forward, led the Lewis Chiefs in scoring with 21 tallies, followed by Bud Hannon with 17 and Martin Zaninovich and Jim Crosley with 16 points apiece.

The Fort Lewis Chiefs by reason of their victory will enter the five-day All-Army basketball tournament on Monday at Fort Leonard Wood, Missouri.

The Red Raiders blasted the Two Rock Ranch squad, 82-59, earlier for the right to meet Fort Lewis in the finals.

Bob Harbertson led the locals in scoring with 22 tallies from his guard position, followed by Mike O'Neill with 19.

Carl Gray paced the outmanned two Rockers with 19 points and was ably assisted by Tom Carroll with 17 tallies.

The Presidio Red Raider cage team closed out the season with the ending of the tournament as their last scheduled game in the Bay Area Armed Forces League was forfeited to the locals by the Moffett Field Flyers this week.

Thus the Presidio emerged champions in the BAAF league with a perfect 14-0 record for the season. Parks Air Base and the Alameda Naval Air Station tied for second with a 10 and 4 mark.

Earlier in the year the Red Raiders captured the Northern California Basketball title with Parks Air Base again finishing second.

tournaments

Dates and host commands for All-Army championship competitions during 1956 have been announced as follows: Basketball, 11-17 March, Fifth Army. Bowling (men and women), 27-29 March, Fourth Army. Triathlon and track and field, 1-3 June, Sixth Army. Swimming and Diving, 26-29 July, Sixth Army. Golf and Tennis (men's open, men's senior, women's), 12-18 August, Third Army. Baseball, 16-22 September, First Army. Boxing, 1-6 October, Second Army.

CHAMPIONS for Sixth Army, 1956, are the Fort Lewis Chiefs, who won the coveted crown by edging the Presidio Red Raiders, 80-73, in last Friday's finale to the Sixth Army Basketball Tournament. The Fort Lewis quintet will enter the All-Army Basketball tourney on Monday at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo. Team members with their schools are front row (l. to r.) S. Dambrot, Duquesne College; J. Crosley, Butler U.; F. Reveter, Globe Trotters; R. Geise, Ohio, and H. Westbrook, Lawrence Tech. Back row (l. to r.) Coach Peterson, West Point; M. Zaninovich, Stanford; C. Hannon, West Point; B. Goodrich, Utah; K. Farnam, Oregon; D. Evans, Utah Southern, and N. Brown, manager.

2 PSF Men Chosen For Honor Team

The champion Fort Lewis Chiefs gained further honors last Friday night when three of their players were chosen on the All Tournament Team for last week's All-Sixth Army basketball tourney.

The Presidio and Two Rock Ranch finished second in the voting with two players each, while Fort Huachuca, Letterman Army Hospital and Fort Ord placed one man each on the mythical squad.

The ten men selected by the players in the tournament with their station and school are:

Fort Lewis, Clarence Hannon, West Point; Martin Zaninovich, Stanford, and Bruce Goodrich, University of Utah.

Presidio, Mike O'Neill, University of California, and Norm Ellenberger, Butler University.

Two Rock Ranch Station, Tom Gray, Manhattan College, and Carl Gray, AAU and Service ball.

Letterman Army Hospital, Carleton Brooks, Wylie College.

Fort Ord, Emery Barnes, University of Oregon.

Fort Huachuca, Delphard Coleman, East Texas Baptist College.

PSF Baseball Team Still Needs Talent

Under the expert coaching of second baseman Dick Shannon, the Presidio baseball squad finished its first week of outdoor drills this week and announced that its first practice game of the season will be next Thursday against San Francisco City College.

The team still needs more players to round out what appears to be a topflight ball club. Experienced players should contact the Presidio Sports Office in building 122 or call ext. 3968.

Last season's Red Raider nine captured first place in the Bay Area Armed Forces baseball league and wound up third in the Sixth Army playoffs.

swimmers

The Presidio Sports Office announced this week that an urgent need exists for swimmers and divers. The Presidio, as defending Sixth Army Champions, needs swimmers to back up ace churner Norm Van Herzen, last season's number one man. The squad will be coached by last year's head mentor, Major Ken Myer, of the California Military District. Interested personnel should contact the sports office in building 122.

ace discharged

Miler Fred Dwyer was recently discharged at Ft. MacArthur, Calif. He's busily working himself back into shape after being sidelined with an injury most of the indoor season.

Wacs Take Second In Keg Tourney

The Presidio Wacs finished second to a powerful Fort Ord squad last week in the Sixth Army Central Division Bowling tournament, which was held at the Oakland Army Terminal.

Representing the Presidio on the Oakland alleys were Captain Virginia Engels, Sp2 Edith Wark, Sfc. Nina Hefner, Sfc. Ola Baker, Sfc. Gloria King and Sgt. Beatrice Van Houten.

By reason of their finishing second the local keggers will leave this Monday for Fort Lawton, Washington, along with the Fort Ord girls, for the Women's Sixth Army Bowling Championships.

A Hint to the Wise . . .

"If I should lose, let me stand by the road and cheer as the winners go by!" B. Braley.

Military commanders down through all of history have been in accord on the manifest need for high competitive spirit and physical fitness in the moulding of a successful soldier.

True, there has been some disagreement on the best method to inculcate these ideal soldierly qualities.

Some have held that a strict regimen of calisthenics, obstacle courses, forced marches, field competitions and other realistic soldierly pursuits were the best answer.

Others contend that, this side of basic training, a mandatory intra-mural sports program, with year round competition at post, Army and interservice levels, not only offers the best physical advantages to the many, but also gives both player and spectator special unit identification and engenders greater esprit.

Still others believe a well-balanced program of both offers the best and most reasonable solution.

Despite these program differences all agree on one thing—the tail should never wag the dog! In other words the program should never become bigger than the unit it represents. Should never interfere with the unit's mission, and to be worth its salt should contribute rather than extract those tangibles for which it was formed.

So a soldier is first a soldier and only incidentally a basketball player, albeit an outstanding one. The team he plays on is first an Army team and win or lose must be consistently conscious of a higher obligation to Army standards of fair play and sportsmanship.

So too must the individual soldier always be aware that though he may be wearing the uniform of sport at the moment, he is only a spectator's length away from his real uniform. A uniform that identifies him and thousands of others as members of a team dedicated to the ideals of freedom and fair play.

In the heat of competition, the spectator and player alike may become over-zealous in his support of the home team. However, his spirit and desire to win should never outweigh his first responsibility to the uniform he wears.

It's tough enough to be a good winner. It is still harder to be a good loser. But these are the qualities that the senior services demands of her soldiers of all ranks—play the game hard; play it to win, but only by the rules; and if you must lose, lose gracefully!

Local Wacs Edge Mather Wafs, 52-49

The Presidio Wac basketball squad, under the capable coaching of Julian Kite, closed out the 1955-56 cage season last Saturday night by trimming the Mather Air Force Wafs 52-49.

The contest played in Sacramento was a benefit game for the Knights of Columbus and was the first half of a twin bill that featured the San Francisco 49ers basketball squad in the second half.

With basketball winding up action this week the Wacs will commence practice on Monday for volleyball competition in the bay area and in the Sixth Army Tournament.

441st AAA Cagers Win Benicia Title

The third time proved to be the charm for the Nikes of C Battery, 441st AAA Missile Battalion, stationed at Benicia Arsenal, as they finally defeated the Hayes Paint Co. in Benicia City League play. This win proved to be the most important of all, being gained in a special playoff game staged Saturday night, 3 March, at the high school gym. The final score was 62-45 with the Nikes leading all the way.

Both teams had finished their regular City League season with identical 8-2 marks, necessitating the playoff game.

A crowd of 300 came to see another in a hard-fought series of Nikes-Hayes games, but this time the Nikes was changed. The Nikes composed entirely of personnel stationed at Battery C, 441st Anti-aircraft Missile Battalion, Benicia Arsenal, romped to an early lead, with their big boys, Hank Clark and Swede Anderson hitting from all angles.

Clark scored 22 points while his side kick, Anderson, meshed 19. Al Endriss tanked 20 for Hayes.

Clark, a 6-foot 4-inch center, received the league's Most Valuable Player award while the Nikes were presented with a handsome team trophy and individual trophies.

Clark and Anderson of the Nikes led the league in individual season scoring with 225 and 185 points, respectively.

Presidio Keg Squad Wins At Oakland

The Presidio Men's bowling team captured first place in the five day central division rolloffs last week over the Oakland Army Terminal bowling alleys. Second spot in the keg tourney was taken by the US Disciplinary Barracks, from Lompoc, California.

The Presidio pin splitters, by taking first place, will leave this Monday for Fort Lawton, Washington, for the Sixth Army Bowling Championships, which will be held from 13 March to 16 March.

Team members are Major Williams Murphy, Sgt. Harry Hoffacker, Sp2 James Walker, M/Sgt. Bernard Owens, M/Sgt. Lewis Taylor and CWO Ray Burns.

Top finishers in the All-Sixth Army Tournament will go on to the All-Army Bowling tourney at Fort Sill, Oklahoma, 27-29 March.

Carmine Regna, 86th Inf. Regt., is training at West Point, N. Y., for the Olympic gymnastics trials which will be held at Penn State, 26-28 April.

Fighters Needed

Post Boxing Squad Busy Working Out For Tourney

Coached by a former All-Army and All-Service champion, Nick Lopez, the local boxing squad is busy working out in the Presidio gym with plans calling for them to enter the Bay Area Armed Forces Boxing tournament, which will be held at Hamilton Air Force Base, 19-23 March.

Sergeant Lopez, the 1949 All-Army and 1953 All-Service flyweight champ, is in need of three or four more fighters to round out what appears to be a good team. Any personnel interested, especially flyweights, bantamweights, lightweights and middleweights, should contact the Post Sports Office in building 122 or call Ext. 3968.

One of the brightest stars in Coach Lopez's stable is featherweight Sammy Moreno, the defending Sixth Army titleholder from Fort Ord.

Sammy, a clever 125 pounder, currently boasts an 18-4 record which stretches back through college and the Army. While attending UCLA, Sammy was runner-up to the National Intercollegiate Champ in 1952.

After winning the Sixth Army crown last season while fighting for Fort Ord, Sammy coached the 1st Infantry Regt. boxing squad to the Ord intramural title.

Primarily a boxer instead of a fighter, Moreno's best offensive weapons are an overhand right along with a left jab.

When asked the question "Is boxing good in the Army?" Sammy replied, "I believe boxing is good for a soldier as it keeps him in tip-top shape and most important teaches him to think under pressure."

Any personnel interested in assisting the 1956 program of the Golden Gate Little League in the capacity of managers, coaches, umpires or scorekeepers are urged to contact Captain Ellis at 2577 or Mrs. Adams at 5216. The only qualification for any of these jobs is a genuine interest in boys.

Standouts for the machine records men on defense during the title tilt were Matt Schmutz, Chuck Burke and John Wilson.

The victory was the fourteenth win in a row for the MRU cagers in the intra-mural league. During this 14-game win streak the records men scored a grand total of 1062 points for a 75.8 average for the season. Their opponents on the other hand were limited to 727 tallies or 52 points per contest.

Trackmen Enter Meet In Stockton

Under the able direction of Lee Schroeder, former University of Nevada flash, the Presidio track and field squad will enter an Olympic Development-All Comers Meet tomorrow in Baxter Stadium, College of the Pacific, Stockton, California.

There is still plenty of room on the local team for talented track men and those interested should contact the Post Sports Office in building 122 or by calling ext. 3968.

Top man for the Presidio squad is Fran Zellers, an outstanding 880 and mile star from the University of Indiana. Zellers boasts a 4:09.5 clocking for the mile which puts him among the nation's best.

Coach Schroeder and Don Baikie will churn the 100 and 220-yard sprints with Schroeder also entering the broad and high jump events. Bob Carver will also perform in the jumps. Purcell Daniels will be the local man in the 440 sprint.

Shot-put chores will be handled by Cliff Wright, former University of California letterman, and Bill Pualson, Washington State College, will toss the javelin.

Gold medals will be awarded to first place winners in the field events and silver medals to the top men in running events.

Two weeks from tomorrow, 24 March, the Presidio thinclad team will enter a triangle meet in Kezar Stadium. The opposition will be the San Francisco Olympic Club and the University of San Francisco.

Brains, Not Equipment, Is Special Asset Of Unique Engineer Unit

By Sp3 Walter Heil
Star Presidian Staff Writer

A group of highly trained engineer specialists departed the Presidio's quiet, well ordered streets and by-ways early this week for Hunter Liggett Military Reservation's jagged peaks and steep ravines.

They were officers and men of the 535th Engineer Detachment (Terrain)—a tiny experimental unit in existence barely a year—off to chart HLMR's soils and slopes, vegetation and terrain.

The unit, commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Frank P. Cassidy, was given orders to collect basic information never before gathered about the vast maneuver area and terrain on the Hearst Estate and Camp Roberts.

Basically the detachment's mission is to gather all pertinent data on the three areas which would aid a field commander in his selection of roads, stream fording places and routes for cross country marches.

To the average soldier, HLMR's terrain may be quite familiar and even commonplace. There are steep slopes, brush covered hills, rocky valleys, dusty roads, intense summer daytime heat and chill in the air at night.

But to the six officers and five enlisted men who compose the 535th, Liggett is not a familiar place.

"Sure," says Captain William Sherman, the detachment's executive, "a lot of men have trained and bivouaced there and think they know pretty much what it's like. But then, why do tanks so often get stuck in sand that was thought to be trafficable."

That's the job of the unit—to find routes and roads usable for cross country traffic and at what time of the year.

In their detailed maps, the officers and men pack a lot of information. And thanks to these maps and their appendices, a field commander can determine at a glance the soil, vegetation, water, roadways, and topographic situation in his area.

To accomplish their mission, the men of the 535th are divided into sections—geology, vegetation, hydrology, etc.—to study and analyze their specialty.

Take Private Eldon Walter of Phoenix, Arizona. He does his Army duty in the detachment's topographic section, making up overlays from materials on hand to determine the ridge lines of the hills, the valleys and slopes.

He then takes his overlay and placing it on a regular map of a given area can determine which areas are 45 or more degrees steep and thus considered impassable for vehicles and troops.

Using aerial photographs the vegetation section determines the density of trees, brush and bush in the area. With these camera shots the section can tell the height of the trees, whether a tank could knock them down or become stalled.

Thus, when a unit commander scans his 535th produced map for quick cross country march route the symbols will tell him immediately that a certain area is over a 45 degree slope and on top of that the density of vegetation makes it impossible for troops and tanks to move in quickly and easily.

The field commander then checks his map again to find a route which may be a trifle longer, but one in which men and equipment can move through.

In addition, other and equally important information is packed into the maps.

For instance, a narrow, winding mountain road may be trafficable only during parts of the year and, then only wide and firm enough for oneway movement. It may run across a creek where the bridge is dangerous for vehicles of more than five tons to cross.

Does the creek run high during January and low during June? Is the sand firm enough when wet to support a 45 ton tank, or will it become immobilized in fine, shifting sand during a September dry spell?

Those are the questions the 535th's hydrology, highway engineer and soils experts must answer.

So far, the 535th and its only sister unit, the 517th, have had limited opportunity to prove their worth. Six officers and EM from the 535th did a study in Alaska from May to October, 1955, while the 517th applied its skills toward a specific operation—their other big mission—in Operation Sagebrush last Fall.

But the men of the 535th are ready to show the Corps of Engineers they're worth the time they spend on their work.

And when you see the unit move out for the field, don't look for trucks and cranes or other heavy equipment. Look for pens and pencils, compasses and paper—or the faces of the men. For, "the 535th carries its TO & E in the heads of its men."

Survey Shows:

Most 6-Month Reservists Now Are Glad They Joined Early

Washington (AFPS)—Most of the Army's six month reserve trainees are glad they joined, according to a recent survey announced by the Department of the Army.

Ten times as many reservists liked the program as disliked it, the survey found. One-fifth of the men, quizzed during the last weeks of their basic training at six camps, had not made up their minds about the plan.

Asked the most desirable features of training, the reservists named opportunity to learn a trade, see what an army career offered, and further their education.

Top reasons for enlisting were the chance for useful job training (27 per cent), availability of special training (23 per cent), and reduction of the active duty obligation (23 per cent). Others listed were school plans and patriotic motives.

Individual weapons training won the popularity contest among basic subjects. It made the top three in 87 per cent of the questionnaire. Next in order were first aid and hygiene, and troop information and education.

More than half the trainees liked all the subjects presented.

The Army said the survey was made to improve the six months' training of the reservists and spur enlistments in the new program.

recently assigned

Lieutenant JOHN D. NICHOLS has recently been assigned to the Sixth Army Comptroller Section, Budget Division. He came to the Presidio from Fort Jackson, South Carolina, where he was assigned to the Finance Section.

A graduate of Harvard University in Boston, Massachusetts, Lieutenant Nichols holds a BA degree in Liberal Arts and a Masters Degree in Business Administration. He attended the Army Finance School at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana.

Lieutenant Nichols received a direct Federal commission. He is unmarried and has completed eight months in the military service.

Cadets Will Tour Bay Area In Public Relations Project

Ten outstanding cadets from the United States Military Academy at West Point, N. Y., will arrive on the West Coast by air tomorrow to participate in discussion groups and debates in local colleges and universities. Their week-long visit is part of the training in public and community relations that cadets receive before graduation.

Four of the cadets will make appearances in the San Francisco Bay Area, while three of the others will proceed to Los Angeles, and the remaining three will fly to Portland and then Seattle.

In the group remaining in the Bay Area are Cadets Alan Thelin, Thomaston, Conn.; Richard Mollicone, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Whitney Hall, Amarillo, Tex., and Gerald Galloway, Fort Belvoir, Va.

Their schedule includes the following visits to local schools:

March 12—San Jose Junior College, 12 noon.

13—Mills College, 7:30 p.m.

14—California School of Fine Arts, 11 a.m.

15—College of the Holy Names, 12 noon.

16—University of San Francisco, 8 p.m.

17—San Jose State College, 12 noon.

In addition, the cadets will make radio and television appearances on local stations and visit youth and civic groups to tell about life at the Academy and how appointments are secured.

Project officer is Colonel Robert S. Nourse, Sixth Army Adjutant General.

Service Groups, Not Individuals, May Visit U.S. Parks For Free

Admission charges and additional fees involved in visiting national parks and shrines will be waived for servicemen this year, the Army has announced.

The men, however, must be in organized groups visiting these areas in connection with regular educational or recreational programs sponsored by military centers or the USO or similar organizations. Servicemen do not have to be in uniform to take part in these tours.

Fees will not be waived for individual servicemen, even if they are uniformed, however, DA Cir. 28-21 adds.

Gen. J. Lawton Collins Slated to Retire After 38 Years' Active Service

After more than 38 years of active Army service, former Chief of Staff General J. Lawton Collins, American representative to the military committee and the standing group of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, will retire 31 March, according to an announcement by Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker.

Secretary Brucker also said that Brig. Gen. Wilhelm P. Johnson, chief of staff, III Corps at Fort Hood, Texas, has been assigned to the United States Army Europe in Germany. He will report in April.

The employees of the Army, military and civilian, are considerably more than the combined payrolls of any three or four of our greatest civilian corporations.

shorter way . . .

Presidio troops assigned to U.S. Army Europe may soon go direct and not be required to process in a replacement center.

This was made clear in a recommendation by Brig. General Bruce Easley, adjutant general, Headquarters USAREUR.

The plan, which has been on a two months' trial basis at Fort Dix, New Jersey, would enable the individual soldier assigned to USAREUR to know the name of his unit and save from three to nine days' travel time.

It is up for action and study by Department of Army.

AAA Will Train Some Units National Guard; Not Combat Ready

The Army Antiaircraft Command has assumed responsibility for training support of certain non-divisional National Guard AA units which are not combat ready, the Department of the Army said recently.

Thirty-two states, including California, are involved in the plan whereby National Guard units will be integrated into the antiaircraft defense system.

These units will be trained to assume specific antiaircraft defense missions in an emergency. Many are taking training at sites presently manned by regular army forces. Their training supervision will be an antiaircraft command responsibility.

Guardsmen are using 90mm and 120mm antiaircraft guns and the 75mm Skysweeper, a radar operated ack-ack gun.

Operation "Spring Buckup" underwent a slight revision this week, when Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, announced a 15-minute surcease from evening retreat. A previous announcement had set retreat at 1700 hours. This was amended at midweek to 1645 hours.

However, Colonel Lundquist indicated there would be no change in the efforts to fully implement standing regulations on service calls, uniform wearing and military courtesy.

Alert Mason MP Aids In Capture Narcotic Suspect

A Fort Mason MP's alertness led to the capture of a narcotics suspect attempting to escape from a U. S. Customs agent on a Fort Mason pier 10 March.

The agent had intercepted the suspect when he came off the USNS Gen. Gaffey on which he was employed. He broke away and started to run.

Pfc. Frank Jackson, Jr., an MP on pier patrol, took after the suspect and dropped him with a flying tackle. Although many pounds lighter than the burly crewman, Jackson had the man subdued before the agent caught up to them.

The agent then searched the suspect and reported finding heroin valued at $100,000 on him.

He stressed their leadership responsibilities, as agents of the command, in seeing that these measures were carried out.

The DPC was particularly emphatic on two other points, the proper display of decorations and uniformity of dress at military formations.

New Program

Some ROTC Grads Will Be Selected For 2-Year Tour

Some ROTC graduates attending Service Schools on six-month tours of active duty will be selected for two years of additional service, the Army has announced.

Qualified officers fulfilling Selective Service obligations on the abbreviated tours in basic branch courses may volunteer for the extended active duty if serving in any of the following branches: Infantry, Armor, Artillery, Signal, Ordnance, Transportation Corps and Medical Service Corps.

Selected applicants will not be sent overseas but will be assigned, where possible, to troop units at the same posts at which they have attended school, but will not engage in training Reserve Forces Act volunteer-trainees.

Opportunities for retention will be offered these officers upon completing the two-year tour. An Army circular outlining the program is now being published.

Key Staff Slot!

Allan Will Replace Seigler As DCS For Public Affairs

Sixth Army Commander Lieutenant General Robert N. Young this week named Colonel Charles W. Allan as deputy chief of staff for public affairs.

Colonel Allan, former assistant chief of staff for Personnel and Administration (G-1), replaces Colonel Thomas J. Seigler, Jr., the Sixth Army's first deputy chief of staff for public affairs.

Steps Up - - -

Colonel Seigler, who has handled Sixth Army's public affairs section since July 1954, when he was named to the post by then commander Lieutenant General Willard G. Wyman, has been ordered to Redstone Arsenal, Huntsville, Alabama. There Colonel Seigler will be chief Signal Officer at Army's new Ballistic Missiles Agency.

A graduate of the United States Military Academy, Class of 1929, Colonel Allan comes to his new post with much experience as a combat officer.

His most recent assignment prior to posting here was as commanding officer of Camp Otsu, Japan. During World War II, Colonel Allan served in the Asiatic-Pacific Theatre, participating in the Luzon, Papuan and New Guinea campaigns against the Japanese.

He also commanded the 126th Infantry Regiment during the war and the 504th Airborne Infantry immediately thereafter. Prior to his Japanese assignment, the Colonel was executive officer of the Army Airborne Center and deputy director of the Joint Airborne Troop Board.

Colonel Allan holds the Bronze Star with two Oak Leaf Clusters, the Air Medal, the Combat Infantryman's Badge and the Philippines Liberation Medal.

Colonel Seigler took over the public affairs section because of the ever increasing need to keep the public informed of Army activities.

Test Zone!

AEC Maps Area For Atom Tests In North Pacific

Washington (AFPS) — The Atomic Energy Commission will stake out a "danger area" of about 375,000 nautical square miles in the north Pacific for its coming nuclear tests.

An AEC notice said the area around the Eniwetok Proving Ground will become a danger zone on 20 April, 1956.

Marine, aviation and international organizations are being warned of the danger, the agency added.

The AEC previously announced that the new test series will involve weapons of a smaller yield than those used in 1954. The danger zone will be almost as large as the one used for the latter part of the 1954 series.

There will be a radiological survey of the control area when the tests are over, the commission stated. Although no definite date was fixed, the agency expected most of the "danger area" to be released from control by the end of August 1956.

Four outstanding United States Military Academy cadets complete a week-long tour of duty on discussion panels and debates with Bay Area college and university students tomorrow.

Participating in West Point's training in public and community relations, the cadets, who arrived by air late last week, will wind up their talks with a visit to San Jose State College tomorrow noon.

Two of the cadets, Cadet Sergeant Alan Thelin and Cadet Private Richard Mollicone, were stationed at the Presidio during their week's visit, under the guidance of Colonel Robert S. Nourse, project officer and Sixth Army Adjutant General.

Thelin and Mollicone made appearances at local colleges and universities, along with Cadets Whitney Hall and Gerald Gallo-way.

Their schedule included visits to San Jose Junior College, Mills College, California School of Fine Arts, College of the Holy Names, and University of San Francisco.

To help publicize their appearance, the cadets made radio and television appearances and visited youth and civic groups to explain how appointments to the academy are secured and the life young men entering a military career at West Point can expect.

The four cadets, clad mostly in gray during their visit here, are part of a group of ten sent to the Pacific Coast. Three were ordered to Southern California and three to the Pacific Northwest.

Princeton, N. J. — A majority of the American public would go along with the idea of increasing the pay of all military officers and enlisted personnel who take up a career in the armed services as their life's work, a survey just completed by the institute shows.

The vote in favor is better than 2-to-1. Many military as well as civilian observers believe that one way to keep a highly-trained and efficient defense force would be to make the armed services more attractive as a career by increasing the pay of those who stay in.

Each voter in the survey was asked:

"Would you favor or oppose increasing the pay of all officers and enlisted men who make their career in the armed services?"

Pay Increase for Career Military Men?

Favor	58%
Oppose	22%
No opinion	20%

Two interesting aspects of the survey appear in an analysis of the figures. One is that majority sentiment in every major segment of the population, with one exception, favors the idea. Among farmers, only four out of every 10 are in favor.

The other is that younger people, those in the age group 21 to 29, are considerably more in favor of the idea than are older people.

The vote by age groups:

Soldier, Artist Will Draw Cartoon Series for Newspaper

If the cartoon on page one struck home, it's because the man who drew it, John J. Sackas, Post Training Aids illustrator, combines over 25 years' experience as both soldier and artist.

Creator, organizer and first chief of the Army Arts and Crafts program, Sackas conceived of the now Army-wide program while stationed as an enlisted man at Fort Scott in the late thirties.

A first lieutenant by 1941, he sold his ideas to Washington and for five years devoted his time to establishing arts and crafts facilities throughout the Army in the continental United States and overseas.

Sackas, who is a serious artist in his own right, studied nights at the California School of Fine Arts from 1934 to 1939, while stationed at Fort Scott. He is artistically at home in oils, watercolors and charcoal, as well as pen and ink cartooning. Among his works is a portrait of General Winfield Scott which hangs in the Fort Scott Officers' Club.

As head of the Special Services Arts and Crafts section during World War II, Sackas established his program at over 125 posts and camps in the United States. From private sources, he managed to raise the funds to get craft facilities for American soldiers not only in this country but in Germany, France, Italy and Austria.

Sackas also wrote a number of the Army's training manuals in his field, including "Soldier Art" and a reference work on handicrafts.

Sackas left the Army in 1946 as a lieutenant colonel (a rank which he still holds in the active reserve) to set up an art school and studio of his own in Rutherford, New Jersey.

"But I was homesick for the West," he said, "and returned to San Francisco five years later to establish a new studio which I still operate in my spare time."

AAA Private Rescues Woman In Accident, Near Drowning

A 24-year-old soldier from the 9th Antiaircraft Artillery Missile Battalion at Fort Baker may soon be recommended for the coveted Soldier's Medal, it appeared today.

Authorities at the NIKE Battalion indicated that Private Donald G. Ballard may be in line to receive the medal for his action in saving the life of a San Francisco woman in Richardson Bay off Sausalito.

Ballard, a platter in the battalion operations center, pulled Theresa Sylvia, 138 Sacramento Street, from under the rear end of the car in which she had been riding with Carl Armstrong, also of San Francisco.

Ballard was strolling on Bridge-bay Avenue in Sausalito last Thursday, when he saw Armstrong's car leave the road out of control and crash upside down in shallow water.

He sprinted toward the scene of the crash and, noticing Miss Sylvia partially pinned under the rear of the auto, plunged into the water and pulled her, helpless and unconscious, to safety.

Other witnesses then administered first aid to the stricken woman and, along with Sausalito Policeman John Lund, extricated Armstrong, who had been able to keep his head above water, from the car.

The couple was taken to Marin General Hospital for treatment of cuts, bruises and shock.

Ballard, meanwhile, had slipped into the background after his rescue performance. He ignored all publicity for his heroism and returned to his duty the following morning.

4 Win New Grades On Post Promotion List

A lieutenant became captain, two captains became majors, and a major achieved the rank of lieutenant colonel in an officer promotion list announced at the Presidio this week.

On the lucky list were former Major Harry F. Sproat, now wearing the silver leaves of a lieutenant colonel. Commanding officer of the Sixth Army Area Medical Laboratory at Fort Baker, Colonel Sproat came to the Presidio in December 1955. His previous assignment was as chief of the United States Naval Medical Research Unit Number 3, in Cairo, Egypt.

Sporting the new bronze leaves of major are former Captain William A. Meriwether and former Captain Rollin W. Kapp. Currently assigned as Post Chemical Officer for the Presidio, Major Kapp came here from an assignment as assistant Division Chemical Officer with the 2nd Infantry Division in Korea.

Major Meriwether is presently assigned as chief of the Sixth

Army's Area Medical Laboratory Pathology Branch. He came to duty at the Presidio from a Far East assignment with the 406th Medical General Laboratory in Tokyo, Japan.

Captain BURTON MASON, Jr., fourth in the group to be promoted, is executive officer for Company E, of Station Complement at the Presidio.

A former member of the 180th Infantry Regiment, 45th Division, in Korea, Captain Mason served there consecutively as Company Commander and Battalion S-2. He attended the University of California for the study of Criminology, prior to his entry to Federal service eight years ago.

Mother Thanks Soldiers, Families For Assistance With Crippled Child

Star Presidian Staff Writer

To be a small girl born in May! To be six years old and to have April knocking at your window. To hear a robin sing and not be able to search for its nest. To see a puppy playing and not be able to join him in a game of hide-and-seek!

To be six years old and to know—to be almost "certain-sure" that you can never walk at all! And strangely, to be blessed at such an age—with the twin gifts of laughter and of fortitude.

That's the way it is with small Barbara, the daughter of Sgt. Leonard J. Bickford, of the 505th Military Police, and Mrs. Bickford.

Victim of a childhood disease more treacherous even than polio, Barbara's world revolves around the front window in her mother's home. Her muscles, atrophied by a medical disorder scientifically known as amyotonia, hold her captive in a child-sized wheel chair. Her spine and hip bones are so twisted that she has to wear a steel brace. She has never crawled nor taken her first proud baby steps. She has lived in her chair and her cot since infancy.

Army medical specialists believe that Barbara's condition is incurable. The child, because of her constantly inert position, is subject to frequent attacks of pneumonia. This, and recurrent colds cause fluid secretions to form in her lungs, making it necessary for her to be lifted and turned in her chair and bed several times during the day and night, as a means of bronchial drainage. Otherwise she would suffocate, because her muscles are powerless to cooperate.

If you were to ask Barbara what she would like the Easter Bunny to bring her, she wouldn't ask for a rabbit or a chocolate egg. She would be more than likely to tell you that all she wanted was a small hospital bed so that her mother could raise the bed by leverage rather than by lifting Barbara each time she has to be raised up.

But the Easter Bunny knows about Barbara! Her parents have very wonderful neighbors, and extra wonderful neighbor's children.

Barbara has two brothers, Jimmy, 15, and 7-year-old Lee. She attended the Sunshine School for Handicapped Children until she became too big for the attendant teachers to take care of her.

"I used to feel pretty badly about Barbara," says Mrs. Bickford, "until I saw so many other tots at the school even more badly handicapped than she.

She'll Be Walking pretty soon, says Barbara Bickford to Norman Cannon, as she discusses her doll, Susie and the lamb, Timothy, with her little neighbor. Victim of a crippling muscular disorder, six-year-old Barbara's case is considered hopeless by Army and civilian specialists. She has never walked. The child is the daughter of Sgt. and Mrs. Leonard Bickford of 1504 Wherry Housing, Presidio. Her father is assigned to the 505th Military Police Battalion. Norman is the son of Sfc. and Mrs. James A. Cannon. The boy's dad is also a member of the 505th Military Police Battalion at the Presidio. (SP Photo by Sp3 Hugh Dempsey.)

But if only she could once leave that wheel chair I'd never care about the mischief she'd get into in a day."

The children come to call on Barbara regularly. Tops on her list of miniature swains is Norman Cannon, the son of Sfc. James A. Cannon of the 505th Military Police and Mrs. Cannon. Norman spends most of his time with Barbara. He rolls in, in the full regalia of a junior military policeman, complete with oversized MP helmet. And he fetches and carries and shares candy as a loyal subject should.

All day, there's a parade of big and little people to Barbara's house. And sometimes, Barbara even gets out in her wheel chair to touch a flower or watch a humming bird make magic in the evergreen hedge.

The grown-up neighbors come to see Barbara, too. Among them are M/Sergeant and Mrs. Charles Underwood. The sergeant is a member of the 505th MPs, and his loyalty is just as strong as that of his company. Mrs. Underwood started a fund collection to buy Barbara a hospital bed. Her husband took up the challenge and brought it to his police company.

So—between friends and neighbors and total strangers, the sum of $87.75 was donated toward a gift for the house-bound child who lives at 1504 Pershing Drive, Wherry Housing Unit.

"Their generosity reaffirms my faith in God," says Mrs. Bickford. "I can think of no greater blessing than for us to live in a community like this."

Other neighbors gave a mattress for the bed, and still others are presenting bed clothing.

The second-hand furniture stores in San Francisco have used hospital beds which can be purchased for the generous sum collected by great-hearted friends and neighbors of Barbara Bickford.

But—wouldn't it be wonderful if Barbara could have a span-new bed for Easter? She will probably have need of it all her lifetime!

The Army made about 3,400 commercial shipments daily in 1953, with an average daily freight charge of more than $1,000,000.

A rose is a rose is... Not So, Says Namesake Of Fabulous Frontiersman

By SP3 Hugh Dempsey
Star Presidian Staff Writer

A tall soldier fired his final round into the target on the Fort Ord known distance range one day last year and then smiled broadly as the results were recorded—39 bulls out of 40 shots.

The range officer, visibly impressed, approached the soldier and said: "That's very good shooting, soldier, what's your name?"

"Daniel Boone," replied the soldier.

The officer grimaced and, turning away, strode to the executive officer of Boone's company.

"Lieutenant," he said, "haven't you taught your trainees any respect for officers? I think it improper for a soldier to tell me he's Daniel Boone just because he's fired a good score."

The lieutenant sputtered for a moment and then assured the range officer that the soldier had indeed told him the truth.

For Boone, who now has duty in the Personnel Section at Headquarters, 9th Antiaircraft Artillery Missile Battalion at Fort Baker, the incident was not unusual.

Boone comes by his name honestly—a direct descendant, the ninth generation of the original, legendary Kentucky trail blazer and hunter.

Trouble is, explains Boone, he has difficulty making people believe him.

"Every time I mention my name, people wonder whether I'm trying to be funny or if I'm a trifle balmy," he says.

Boone claims the doctor who delivered him was largely responsible for his being named after the historical figure.

"My mother had another first name in mind, but the doctor was dead set on 'Daniel,' knowing that I was a direct descendant."

When his mother finally gave in, newspapers in New York City picked up the story and the publicity brought the Boone family under a deluge of presents from enthusiastic well wishers.

Feeling the presents should be in line with his name, the senders shipped him old muskets, flint lock pistols, 'coon skin caps, and even a bow and arrow set. The late William Randolph Hearst, head of the vast newspaper empire, sent a letter written by the original Daniel Boone, sealed in glass along with a picture.

The present-day Boone, how-

Meet Daniel Boone

ever, plans to make his mark in another way.

Prior to his induction, Boone earned his Bachelor of Science degree in Business Administration from Menlo Business College. Interested primarily in advertising, he plans to work in this field on completion of his tour of duty.

Boone should be a real huckster, too, when it comes to convincing people about a given item—for he's been well schooled just trying to convince people his name is legitimate.

thank you!

The following letter of gratitude from Sergeant and Mrs. Leonard Bickford was submitted for publication in the STAR PRESIDIAN as a gesture of public appreciation for the generosity of their friends and neighbors. It was the inspiration for the accompanying story on the plight of their child, Barbara, which appears in this issue of the paper:

"We wish to express our gratitude to all the people who contributed money to help us buy a hospital bed for our crippled girl, Barbara; to M/Sergeant and Mrs. Charles Underwood who launched the collection; to Company B of the 505th MP Battalion; to the office force and maintenance men of Wherry Housing, and to friends and neighbors of the Underwoods and ours.

"Particularly, we want to thank the Underwood family, including their daughters Ruth and Lanie, for the many hours of time and effort they have given in helping us to care for Barbara."

Solemn Roman Catholic church rites and liturgy will mark the observation of Holy Week and the approach of Easter, at the Chapel of Our Lady in the Presidio, during the last two weeks in March.

Beginning with the Blessing of the Palm, the Processional, and the reading of the Passion of Saint Matthew during Mass on 25 March, the remaining two weeks preceding Easter Sunday, 1 April, will be dedicated to religious contemplation of the faithful on the tragedy of Christ's death.

On Holy Thursday, 29 March, a Mass will be celebrated at 1930 hours during which part of the ceremony will be devoted to the bathing and anointing of the Following Holy Communion during the Mass will be the Procession to the Repository when priests and acolytes return the sacred Host to the tabernacle for the all-night Adoration being observed by the congregation.

Good Friday, 30 March, heralds a change in Roman Catholic dogma when, for the first time in theological history, the Mass is offered and Holy Communion distributed on that day. The special Mass will be celebrated at 1500 hours on Good Friday which is designated both a time of fasting and of ab-

During Holy Saturday, 31 March, Confessions will be heard at the Chapel of Our Lady from 1500 to 1600 and from 1900 to 2100 hours. At 2230 on the same day, the Blessing of the Fire, of Holy Water, Baptismal Water and the Paschal Candle will precede the Reading of the Prophecies.

A Midnight Mass on Easter Saturday terminates the vigils of Lent and Easter in preparation for the more joyful commemoration of the Resurrection of Christ to be observed at the two Easter Sunday Masses, one at 0930 and one at 1130 hours on 1 April.

DPC's Secretary Wins $200 Award For Outstanding Work

By Pfc. Walter Heil
Star Presidian Staff Writer

Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, straightened his uniform blouse one day early this week and then grinned broadly as his secretary, Mrs. Alice Kmetz, entered his office.

"Mrs. Kmetz," said the Colonel, "there have been many pictures taken in this room since you've worked here, but we've never had one of you."

Then, shuffling through papers on his desk, the Colonel pulled a citation and check from the pile.

"It gives me great pleasure to present to you this award in recognition for superior service and outstanding performance. I congratulate you on an outstanding job," declared Colonel Lundquist, as a photographer's flash bulb popped and onlookers grinned approval.

Mrs. Kmetz, an original "Government Girl," then accepted the citation and $200 cash award from the DPC with a small smile of thanks.

Entering government service in Washington, D. C., in 1936, Mrs. Kmetz worked as Administrative Assistant in the Department of Agriculture and Commerce and other government bureaus before coming to the Pacific Coast in 1949.

Originally she worked in the machine records section here before becoming secretary to the DPC in June 1953. In her almost three years' service in Post Headquarters, Mrs. Kmetz has worked under three different deputy post commanders.

Although she found her work in wartime Washington "very hectic, exciting and challenging," Mrs. Kmetz feels her job as secretary to the DPC "is the best of them all."

Post Bowlers Competing In Sixth Army Tourney

Top Army bowlers from the western states started rolling in the Tenth Annual Sixth Army Championships, which got under way on the eight Fort Lawton alleys Tuesday morning at 0930 hours.

This year the championships, being hosted by the Lawton installation for the sixth year out of the ten, promise to be a hotly contested affair with 16 male and female teams representing 12 Army installations being entered.

On the Presidio's men's team are Major William Murphy, Sgt. Harry Hoffacker, SP2 James Walker, M/Sgt. Bernard Owens, M/Sgt. Lewis Taylor and CWO Ray Burns.

Following a pre-tournament meeting which was held at 0830 hours, Tuesday, 11 male teams will take to the alleys for the men's team event. At 1900 Tuesday night all bowlers were guests of Fort Lawton at a bowling banquet, where they were greeted by Col. Paul B. Nelson, Chief of the Washington Military District, and representatives of Greater Seattle Inc.

The Presidio of San Francisco Wac bowling team won the women's Sixth Army keg crown Wednesday night in Seattle with a grand total of 6920 pins.

The first of the women's events got under way at 0930 Wednesday, with the women's team event, followed on Thursday and Friday by the singles and doubles events for both the men's and women's divisions.

pay expenses

Rep. Torbert Macdonald (D-Mass.) is sponsoring a measure that would have the U.S. government pay all necessary expenses of athletes who participate in the Olympic Games at Melbourne, Australia, next winter.

A nine-letter winner at Harvard where he captained the football team, Rep. Macdonald said passage of the bill would give the U.S. an opportunity to assemble the best possible team.

PSF Team Takes First In Tourney

Sparked by some outstanding spiking by Matt Schmutz, Bob Noel and Joe Gonzales the Presidio number one volleyball squad, defending All-Army champions, captured first place in the Hamilton Air Force Base round robin volleyball tournament last Saturday.

Four teams were entered in the day-long tourney with the locals entering two and Hamilton and Mather Air Force entering one squad apiece. Each team played three 15-point games against the other three squads with the top Presidio team under the capable direction of player-coach Major Bob Jones emerging with a 9-0 record.

Setters on the first place club were Dick Godino and Jerry Steiner with newcomer Tom Green showing good all-around form.

The second Presidio squad behind Bob Moran's spiking ended up the day with three wins and six defeats.

The two local squads will practice until the 24th of this month when they will enter the Stockton Open Volleyball Tournament. Hosting the matches will be the powerful Stockton YMCA, two-time national champions. The Presidio came close to upsetting the champs last month in the Berkeley Invitational tourney.

Official Sixth Army competition will commence on the 17th of April at Fort Ord when the central division playoffs begin. The winner there will go to the All-Sixth Army finals on 30 April at Fort Lewis, Washington.

Armed forces candidates vying for Olympic cycling berths will train at Parks AFB, Calif., for the Olympic trials which will be held at San Francisco, 20-25 October.

Ruth first got the bug for rifles and small arms back in Anacortes, Washington, her home. Here she was a member of several clubs and entered in various competitive events. Her first taste of pistols came after her arrival at the Presidio, when she joined the local gun club. Since that time, she has obtained membership in the Oakland Pistol Club, which boasts over 300 members, both civilian and military, and it was here that she attained second place honors in recent .22 caliber pistol competition, winning for herself a silver medal.

swimmers

The Presidio Sports Office announced this week that an urgent need exists for swimmers and divers. The Post, as defending Sixth Army Champions, needs more talent to back up last season's star churning, Norm Van Herzen. The squad will be under the direction of Major Ken Meyer, who directed the team to the title last season. Interested swimmers should contact the Sports Office in building 122 or call 3968 for information. A meeting will be held in building 122 on Monday at 1300 hours for those interested.

Sixteen military installations have been invited by Ft. Benning, Ga., to compete in an inter-service boxing tournament at the Infantry Center, 28-31 March.

Presidio Wins First Tilt 9-5 Over Santa Rosa JC

The Presidio baseball team under the direction of hard hitting second baseman Dick Shannon made their first start of the season a winning one last Saturday afternoon by coming from behind to beat the Santa Rosa Junior College nine, 9-5, in a game played in Santa Rosa.

The junior college stars got off to a five-run lead in the first three innings only to have the locals score four in the fourth, two in the sixth, two more in the eighth and wound up with one more in the ninth for their nine runs.

Chuck Matzen started on the mound and was followed by Roger Collins, Lee Walker and Dan Cooke for the Presidio. The quartet gave up but four hits, but early season wildness was responsible for 16 walks and the Santa Rosa scoring.

Shannon led the hitting parade with a single and a triple followed Norm Ellenberger and Harry Williams with a single and a double apiece.

This Sunday at the Funston playground (No. 1) the Presidio will play host to the visiting Camp Pendleton Marines. Game time is slated for 1300 hours and Post fans are urged to come out and support their team.

On 25 March the local nine will depart for a ten-day trip through Southern California where they will play leading service and semi-pro teams. Games have been lined up with the Camp Pendleton Marines, the San Diego Naval Training Center and the Portland Beavers of the Pacific Coast League.

Last year the Presidio nine won first place in the Bay Area Armed Forces League and took third in the All-Sixth Army Tournament at Fort Lewis.

Oslo, Norway (AFPS) — Three service skiers, all veterans of the recent Winter Olympic Games, competed in the classic Holmenkollen ski festival here.

Cpl. Andrew Miller of Ft. Carson, Colo., was the first American to finish in the 50 kilometer (31¼ miles) cross-country race. He came in 28th with a time of 3:33.36. The winner, Finland's Arvo Viitaneen, was clocked at 3 hours, 8 minutes, 4 seconds.

Cage Trials For Service Basketball

The Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps will compete in a basketball tournament in Louisville, Ky., next week to select an armed forces all-star team for the Olympic trials.

According to Harry D. Henshel, chairman of the U.S. Olympic basketball committee, the American quintet will be determined by a round robin tournament among an armed forces team, one college and two Amateur Athletic Union teams in Kansas City, 2-4 April.

In explaining the method of selection, Henshel said the winning team in the round robin tourney will place at least five, but not more than seven, on the Olympic team.

The remainder of the 12-man U.S. team will be chosen from the other squads in the tournament. Two coaches will be selected, with the coach of the winning team heading the Olympic quintet. Alternates will also be chosen in the event some of the players are unable to make the trip to Australia.

The Air Force now has a 12-man squad working out under former Oklahoma coach Bruce Drake at Bunker Hill Air Force Base, Indiana. (AFPS)

Trout Limit Setup For Entire State

A state-wide trout bag limit of 15 fish was set for 1956 by the California Fish and Game Commission meeting in Los Angeles.

At the same time Commission President Harley E. Knox pointed out that production of catchable trout would be held to 1955 levels under present income.

Other regulations adopted at the Los Angeles meeting become effective 30 March. Until then 1955 regulations apply.

Trout seasons were set as follows:

19 May to 31 October in the counties of Plumas, Sierra, Nevada, Placer, Yuba, El Dorado, Alpine, Amador, Calaveras and that part of Butte lying south of State Highway 32 and the Butte Meadows Road.

30 May to 31 October in Del Norte, Humboldt (except lagoons), Mad River and Eel River below Lake Pillsbury.

28 April to 31 October, balance of the state.

The bag limit was set at 15 fish, or ten pounds and one fish, or three fish, irrespective of weight.

Pine Flat Reservoir in Fresno County was removed from the year around trout lakes, and trout fishing prohibited except during the regular trout season. It will be open at all times to warm-water species.

HERE ARE the Associated Press All-American basketball team for 1956 as selected by a poll of 329 sportswriters and sports announcers. Named to the first team are Sihugo Green,

Zellers Takes Mile Run, Highlights Stockton Meet

Wiry Fran Zellers, former Big Ten star from the University of Indiana, and now performing for the Presidio track and field squad, led the locals to a commendable early season showing last Saturday by winning the mile run in the good time of 4:14.6. Zellers' win highlighted the Olympic development meet that was sponsored by College of the Pacific in Stockton.

World record holder Parry O'Brien, former University of Southern California star, now competing for the Air Force won the shot put with a toss of 57 feet 11 inches. The Presidio's Cliff Wright took third place in the shot with his heave of 48 feet 2 inches.

Purcell Daniels won a third spot for the locals in the 220-yard dash, finishing just behind Fresno State College's Mike Agostini in the great time of :20.7. Agostini also captured the 100-yard sprint with a time of 9.4.

Presidio sprint star Lee Schroeder turned up with a pulled muscle and was unable to enter the day's events.

Bill Pualson, former Washington State College athlete, now on active duty on the Presidio took a fourth place in the javelin throw. Bob Long of the San Francisco Olympic Club won first place with a toss of 231 feet 3 inches.

There is still plenty of room on the local squad for more talented track and field stars and those interested should contact the Post Sports Office in building 122 or call 3968.

One week from tomorrow the Presidio cinder team will enter a triangle meet in nearby Kezar Stadium. The opposition will be the San Francisco Olympic Club and the University of San Francisco.

Gym Star In Shape For Olympics

Private First Class Joseph Massimo, of Fort Lewis, never defeated in national competition on the still rings, is one of the more promising athletes for the 1956 Olympic Games.

Pfc. Massimo, from Long Island, New York, entered the Army in November of 1954. The 23-year-old star is striving for an all-around program in gymnastics which includes the parallel bars, the horizontal bars, side horse, the free exercise, and his specialty.

In preparation for the 1956 Olympic trials, he competed in the Southern and Central Pacific meets, taking top honors. This year, while home on leave, he competed in the Middle Atlantic Meet at the University of Michigan and the New York YMCA Sectional Meet, winning several honors.

Post Little League Starts 2nd Year Of Operation

The Golden Gate Little League starts their second year of operation on the Presidio this week with registration forms being distributed to the parents of boys in the 8-12 age group. The local Little League was first organized on the Post last year with more than 100 boys taking part in the program.

Parents and interested men and women are asked to join in and help in positions like managers, coaches, umpires and other related jobs that will make this year's Little League season a bigger success than last season's.

Tryouts for the squads will begin the last part of this month and the first half of April. Individual team practice will commence late in April and the regular season will get under way in May.

Uniforms are provided for the players and the parents will have to provide the baseball gloves and shoes.

As this season is the second for the local pint size Babe Ruths the teams will be eligible for the National Little League Tournaments. The tourneys are played locally, by regions and on a national basis with the World Series of Little League being held in Williamsport, Penn., at the end of the regular season.

The league rules are patterned after the regular major leagues with a major-minor setup and trading of players. Foremost theory of the Little Leagues are the teaching of sportsmanlike conduct both on and off the playing field.

Personnel interested in signing up for the Little League program are asked to contact Captain Ellis at 2577, Mrs. Adams at 5216 or CWO Earl Stewart at SK 1-1167 for information.

Three service football stars, Billy Vessels, Buck McPhail and Lou Sorrentino, will join the pro ranks of the National Football League next season. Vessels and McPhail, Ft. Sill, Okla., backs, will play with the Baltimore Colts and quarterback Sorrentino of Ft. Meade, Md., joins the Philadelphia Eagles.

MOS Changes!

240 Top Three Graders Face Classification Board at Presidio

Before a board of three officers meeting in room 3, Building 200, the first of approximately 240 top three graders holding overage military occupation specialties appeared this week for MOS reclassification.

Part of a plan to convert personnel in overstrength occupational specialties to shortage MOS areas, the newly instituted policy applies to Presidio units whose personnel records are maintained by Post Headquarters.

The board of officers consists of representatives from Post Classification and Assignment, S-3, and whenever possible, the commanding officer or section chief of the men affected.

First group interviewed by the board are members of Headquarters Company, Station Complement, who attended a reclassification orientation Monday.

They were informed that persons with overage primary MOS but holding secondary MOS not surplus would appear before the board where their secondary classifications may be converted to primary.

But upper three graders with overage MOS and without secondary MOS qualifications are given three alternatives.

They may request schooling, transfer to on-the-job training positions wherever appropriate vacancies may be available, or request retention in their primary MOS.

A secondary MOS is not accredited, according to C&A, unless it has been awarded and entered under item 32 on DA Form 20. If a man has simply worked at some time in his military career at another occupation specialty, it does not necessarily give him a secondary MOS.

Because a top three - grader cannot be assigned more than one permanent change of station in a fiscal year, according to C&A, it is unlikely that transfer action would be taken before the end of the 1955-56 fiscal year, 30 June.

Another aspect of the new policy will affect officers reverting to enlisted rank. They will no longer be given overage occupation specialties, according to C&A.

In the case of specialists moving to NCO status, a promotion allocation is necessary. But where a specialist, on the basis of past experience, requests an MOS requiring NCO rank, he can be appointed as an NCO with no date of rank.

The MOS conversion process will take about four weeks to carry out, according to C&A.

Visiting Family Could Claim Ancestral Rights To Presidio

If a Mexican land grant of the late 1840's were legally valid, the Miramontes family, which will visit here this Saturday morning, might well be the outright owners of the entire Presidio.

Descendants of a pioneer California family, the Miramontes' ancestors were "the last civilian inhabitants of the Presidio," according to Mrs. Edward H. Miramontes of San Francisco.

"My great-grandfather," she said, "received a land grant from the Mexican government about 1846, ceding him the Presidio reservation."

Aroused by the findings from the research of Mr. Miramontes'

New MOS Regulation Will Prevent Officers From Holding Same Jobs

Washington—A new assignment regulation, designed to prevent officers going overseas from being put in the same job too often has been adopted by the Army, called the "negative MOS."

The new regulation, AR 614-103, adds this to the "Recommended MOS" and the "Directed MOS" which have appeared on officers' orders in the past. The text of the new tool:

"Negative MOSs are designed to prevent repeated assignments in the same job area, prevent semi-specialization when not desirable, qualify officers in sufficient areas to provide for wide latitude for assignments in event of an emergency, control the career development of officers."

Key Position!

Parker Named To Replace Mason As New Military Personnel Officer

A veteran of World War II and Korea, Captain Webster Parker, replaced Captain John H. Mason this week as Post director of military personnel management. Captain Mason, who has held the personnel position since September 1954, has been assigned to Korea.

As director of military personnel management, Captain Parker will assume responsibility for classification and assignment of all officer and enlisted personnel on the Presidio.

Last stationed with the Idaho Military District in Boise, Captain Parker worked in Public Information, S-3 and the Adjutant-General Sections. Entering the Army in 1940 from the National Guard, he went to Officers' Candidate School at Fort Benning in 1942.

He served in Europe with the 20th Armored Division from shortly after the Normandy invasion to the war's end which found him and his unit at the Brenner Pass.

After returning to the United States, he was stationed in Korea for nearly two years. In 1949, after another short hitch in the United States, he was assigned once more brother Ernest of San Leandro, about ten members of the family will tour the post tomorrow under the auspices of the Sixth Army Public Information Office and the Post Troop Information and Education Section.

Brother Ernest's interest in the family's historical heritage sent him rummaging through archives from San Francisco to Washington, uncovering 150 years of family history.

One ancestor, Candelario Miramontes, planted potatoes in the 1830's on property that is now Portsmouth Square. From 1828 to 1837, Vincent Miramontes was a soldier in a Presidio of San Francisco company under the Mexican regime. In 1839, he was an "alcalde" of San Francisco.

Conducted by non-commissioned officers, the next in the series of semi-monthly retreat parades will be led today by a battalion commander and staff furnished from Company A, Station Complement. Adjutant's call will be sounded at 1600 hours.

The order of march will be the Sixth Army Band, Detachments 1 and 2, 6000 SU; Station Complement; Company A, Station Complement; Colors, Company A, Station Complement; 30th Engineer Group, 505th MP's and Company D, Station Complement.

Presidio Marksmen Display Rifle, Small Arms Skills

Two officers and four enlisted men took top scoring honors in the just completed Presidio of San Francisco rifle and pistol competition.

Master Sergeant Peter A. Kuznar, Headquarters Company 6000 SU, nabbed top honors in rifle firing with a grand total of 230 points, while Captain John F. Kallam, Headquarters, Company 505th Military Police Battalion, led pistol shooters with a score of 829.

Following Kuznar as high point men in rifle competition were Master Sergeant Abbott E. Thibodeaux, Headquarters & Headquarters Company, 30th Engineer Group with 228½, and Sfc. Richard E. Alexander, 99th Engineer Company with 223.

Master Sergeant David A. Dewey of Detachment 1, 6000 SU, fired for a 817 total to place as runnerup in pistol scoring, and Captain Henry T. Croonquist tallied 810.

The six top shooters were presented trophies for their efforts by Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander.

Meanwhile, Captain Abram Montes, assistant Post S-3 officer, announced plans were near completion for the Presidio marksmen to train for the All Sixth Army competition at Camp Roberts late next month and early May.

A total of 43 officers and enlisted men have been placed on Nearly $2,000 in donations from the Presidio Community will be used to buffet the Iron Curtain with news and messages beamed by free press and radio agencies in the Western World.

Last payday, Presidio military and civilian personnel contributed a total of $1,968.22 to the Crusade for Freedom Drive, according to Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander.

The near $2,000 mark represents money contributed in pay lines only and does not include individual contributions donated by Presidio personnel directly to the San Francisco headquarters for the Crusade for Freedom appeal.

From the edges of the Iron Curtain, the Crusade for Freedom aims its radio transmitters and foreign language newspapers at the Communist dominated nations of Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Romania, Bulgaria and Albania, bringing them news and ideas from the free world.

The Presidio campaign was part of a nationwide drive for funds led by some 70 major national membership organizations, 154 federal area chairmen for federal agencies and military establishments, newspapers and the Advertising Council.

"Every dollar," said Eugene Holman, head of the campaign, "contributes to the Crusade for Freedom's fight to keep alive the spirit of resistance among 70 million people behind the Soviet Iron Curtain."

Cotton has many uses in the Army, appearing in guncotton, in the webbing and the covers for many types of equipment and the tentages and uniforms of our soldiers.

TDY orders to train for the Sixth Army event, Captain Montes said. The 12 best shooters in each competition will then proceed to Camp Roberts for the Sixth Army firing on April 30 and May 1, 2, 3 and 4.

Presidio personnel who qualify will be sent to the All Army matches at Fort Benning, Georgia, in June. Top shooters there will be sent to the Nationals at Camp Perry, Ohio, in August and September.

New Health Proposal Would Protect Civilians

New Policy!

DA Suspends March Quota; 18 Month Privates Get Break

Designed "to equalize promotion opportunities," a new Department of Army policy will permit unit commanders to boost privates to pfc's without regard to vacancies or monthly allocations. Promotions will be based on a time-in-service criterion, yet to be announced by DA.

First effect of the new policy will be to put the E-2 with 18 months' or more service as of 1 February, 1956, in line for a first set of stripes.

In addition to 18 months' time-in-service, eligible E-2s must be in "appointable status" (as defined by paragraph 6, AR 624-200), and be deemed qualified by their commanders.

Although an objective of the policy is "to permit establishment of a more realistic time-in-grade criterion," the DA announcement states that promotions will not be automatic or based solely on length of service.

At the same time, DA has requested all Army commands to estimate the number of promotions affected by the policy change. In addition, the Sixth Army Adjutant General Personnel section, at DA's direction, will also report on the number of E-2s in the Sixth Army area with 14 to 17 months' service.

Future criteria for promotion eligibility in terms of length of service may vary from month to month. Sixth Army AGP has been instructed to submit its report to Washington by 5 April.

Cutting the Tape Lieutenant General and Mrs. Robert N. Young mark the opening of the new Presidio Non-Commissioned Officers' Open Mess in a formal ceremony. Watching the Sixth Army Commanding General do the honors are Master Sergeant Harry Kellman and Master Sergeant George Van Kirk. Both sergeants were highly instrumental in organization of the club, which opened last week.

Medical Plan Could Bolster Career Needs

(Special to the Star Presidian)

Washington, D. C.—A new group health insurance proposal, which would protect Federal employees and their families against the financially crippling costs of serious or prolonged illnesses, even after the employee's retirement, was discussed recently with representatives of Federal employee organizations by Philip Young, personnel adviser to the President and chairman of the Civil Service Commission.

Designed to supplement the employees' own basic health insurance coverages, the proposal would cover all active Federal employees insured under the Federal employee group life insurance program and their eligible dependents. It would not cover employees retired prior to the date the program would go into effect.

PRESIDIO OF SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA

Friday March 23, 1956

Arrives Monday

Top Defense Department Aide To Visit Local Aviation Units

Making a study of Army aviation, Mr. Hubert H. Hinshaw, civilian representative of the Defense Department Comptroller's office, will arrive at the Presidio Monday evening for a three-day tour of area Army aviation installations and aircraft plants.

Doctor Shortage

Curtail Other Than Medical Duties For Service Personnel

Because of a shortage of officer personnel in the Army Medical Service, Headquarters Sixth Army has announced a new program for utilization of such personnel.

Henceforth, says the Sixth Army circular, officers will not be detailed as members of courts martial, boards or committees, or assigned to other duties which non-professional medical personnel may serve.

Members of the Army Nurse Corps holding certain MOS's will not be assigned night duty except in their specialties. Dietetic, physical therapy and occupational therapy professionals will be supplemented by civilian personnel within the established ceiling of the hospital.

The circular also announced that use of medical officers on duty considered mainly precautionary such as firing ranges, athletic events, etc., was not deemed economical when such duty can be performed by technicians.

During his visit, Mr. Hinshaw will pay a courtesy visit to Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Sixth Army commanding general, Tuesday morning, before leaving for Stockton, headquarters for the 521st Aviation Engineers.

He will be accompanied during his tour by Major Jack W. Ruby, Sixth Army Aviation officer, and Colonel Wayne E. Downing, commanding officer, 30th Engineer Group.

Mr. Hinshaw is a member of a committee to assist the Department of Defense in an analysis of Army aviation.

On Wednesday, Mr. Hinshaw will visit aircraft manufacturers in Palo Alto, then return for a late afternoon conference at 30th Engineer Group Headquarters.

Before leaving for Washington Thursday, Mr. Hinshaw will consult with the Sixth Army Transportation and Aviation officers and a representative of the 30th Engineer Group.

This week, Mr. Hinshaw visited Fort Sill where he discussed the Artillery's concept on the use of aviation and visited the Army aviation training unit there. He also conferred this week with aircraft manufacturers in Fort Worth, Texas.

notice !!

Under the new MOS conversion plan for top three-graders, officers reverting to enlisted rank will not be given overage occupation specialties until further notice, according to Post Classification and Assignment.

A specialist who on the basis of past experience requests an MOS requiring NCO rank can be appointed as an NCO with new date of rank.

JAG Ruling!

EMs, WOs Holding Officer Rank Not Eligible Reserve Call

Until appropriate legislation can be enacted, Regular Army warrant officers and enlisted men who hold reserve commissions will not be called to active duty for training as officers.

According to a recent ruling by the Army Judge Advocate General, the status of a warrant officer or enlisted member of the Regular Army is "incompatible with that of a commissioned officer in the Army Reserve on active duty for training."

The Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel has plans to sponsor legislation which would permit Regular Army warrants and EM to go on active duty as officers for training purposes. But such a proposal can not be submitted to Congress this year.

In the meantime, the Army will provide every opportunity possible for men in such status to take advantage of appropriate Army Extension Courses in order to enhance their promotion possibilities.

Army Designates New Unit To Fire Redstone Missile

Washington (AFPS)—The Army has announced activation of its first unit to fire the new Redstone ballistic missile.

Made up of experienced troops drawn from established Army missile units, the cadre of the 217th FA Missile Bn. (Redstone) will begin assembling 15 April at Redstone Arsenal, Huntsville, Ala.

Army Secretary Wilber Brucker said organization of the unit represents another step in the logical development of the Army's artillery missile weapon system.

Initially, the battalion's cadre will train at Redstone Arsenal where it will benefit from the scientific knowledge of the men who developed the missile.

At first, these soldiers will be concerned with adapting knowledge acquired in other Army missile units and schools to the handling of the Redstone. The Army said, however, that the advanced design of the weapon requires fewer highly trained specialists than needed in other artillery missile battalions.

One of the main tasks assigned to the 217th will be to develop field operating techniques. The cadre will gain experience in test-firing the missile both operationally and for development purposes.

The Redstone, recently unveiled by the Army, was developed under the supervision of Dr. Wernher von Braun, designer of the German V-2 rocket. Dr. von Braun, now an American citizen, is director of the Guided Missile Development Division of the Ordnance Corps.

Redstone's Dr. Werner von Braun, who developed the V-2 rocket for the Germans in WWII, points to a feature of the US Army's Redstone rocket. In displaying this model of Redstone the Army described it as the largest U. S. ballistic missile.

Administration Medical Plan Would Aid Federal Employees In Long Illnesses

Within certain maximums ranging up to $10,000, the plan would provide for payment of 75 per cent of medical, hospital, or surgical expenses which are in excess of certain basic amounts to be paid by the employee or through his own basic health insurance plan.

These basic amounts for active Federal employees under 65 years of age are: $100 (up to $200 for higher salaried employees) for covered medical costs $250 for surgical services, and $500 for hospital costs. For employees over 65 or who retire after the program is in effect the basic amount is $200 total for surgical, medical costs, and hospital costs, except board and room. Use of different formulae in providing the benefits for the two groups is necessary to provide the best possible benefits to each, Mr. Young said.

The maximum benefit payable to an active employee under 65 years of age is $5,000 in any one calendar year for himself or each dependent, with a lifetime maximum of $10,000, and liberal provisions for reinstatement of the maximums. The maximum benefit for employees over 65 or eligible future retirees after the program is in effect is a $2,500 family maximum in any one calendar year with a $5,000 lifetime maximum. There are no provisions for reinstatement of maximums for these employees.

The proposal would amend the Federal Employees Group Life Insurance Act to provide additional protection at no further out-of-pocket cost to the employee and would round out the contributory employee insurance program begun in 1954 with the passage of that Act, Mr. Young said. The 25 cents now contributed biweekly by the employee for each $1,000 of life insurance carried would defray his share of the cost of the expanded program. The requirement for this contribution on the part of the employee would cease after he reaches age 65 or retires on an immediate annuity.

The Government would double its present contribution, which is 12½ cents biweekly per $1,000 of life insurance now carried under the life insurance program. This would result in the employees and the Government equally sharing the cost of the expanded program which would then provide four-point financial protection against the catastrophes of death, accidental death, dismemberment, and major medical expense. The total additional yearly cost to the Government of the expanded program is estimated at $32,500,000.

In discussing the proposed amendment, Mr. Young emphasized that it was designed to supplement the employee's own basic health insurance coverages which generally provide ample protection, for him and his dependents against the costs of illnesses which involve short hospital stays and normal surgical services.

"It will be the Government's policy to encourage all Federal employees to acquire this basic protection," he said. "In a sample survey of Federal employees we found that most of them already have such protection and that it is available at a reasonable cost. In our indoctrination of new employees and our relations with those already on the rolls we intend to encourage them to acquire this protection which is readily available through employee organization or community non-profit plans."

He pointed out that in seeking means to encourage employees to enroll in basic health insurance plans of their own, the Government had considered a plan that would provide for payroll deduction of employees' premiums for their own health insurance plans. This idea was dropped, he explained, because the Government would have been faced with an extremely complicated operation owing to the great variety of health insurance plans now carried by employees:

"The need for protection against the costs of serious illness or injury which may require months of treatment both in and out of the hospital is not being met for or by Federal employees," Mr. Young said. "The cost of major medical expense protection on an individual basis would be prohibitive for most employees. In fact, many employees could not get it even if willing to pay the high premiums because of the stringent physical qualifications they would have to meet to acquire it on an individual basis. It is the type of insurance which can be provided economically only on a group basis."

If the new program is put into effect, it will cover approximately 2,000,000 employees and 2,500,000 dependents, thereby almost doubling the number of people in the United States now covered by major medical insurance, Mr. Young said. He estimated that under the major medical insurance provisions of the expanded program approximately 100,000 claims would be paid each year. This is approximately eight times the number of life insurance claims paid in a year.

The new proposal differs from the one sent to the last session of Congress in that it provides major medical expense protection to all Federal employees who have the group life insurance coverage and extends it after the employees' retirement. It was worked out after consultation with a special health insurance committee representing major employee organizations. Representatives of insurance and health associations and of Federal agencies also were consulted. He said the new program is being offered as an amendment to the Federal Employees Group Life Insurance Act because:

1. It will put all employee insurance benefits in one law.
2. It will permit coordinated and simplified administration of the total insurance program.
3. It will provide a simple and convenient method for financing the major medical expense insurance and will allow the purchase of life and major medical expense insurance from the same fund.
4. It will also permit the use of the employee advisory committee and advisory council already set up for group life insurance.

The basic features of the major medical expense insurance plan are:

1. All employees now covered by the Federal employees group life insurance program are eligible to participate. Those who are eligible for life insurance coverage but who previously refused it will have another chance to enroll. Those who retire after the program becomes effective would have to be eligible to continue their life insurance coverage in order to receive the major medical expense protection.
2. For active employees under 65 years of age, the plan would defray:

cal insurance)—by reimbursement for 75 per cent of yearly covered medical expenses for the employee or for each dependent in excess of $100 for an employee who has $5,000 or less coverage under the life insurance program—$150 for an employee who has from $6,000 through $10,000 life insurance coverage—$200 for an employee who has $11,000 or more life insurance coverage. These major medical expenses include the cost of examinations, diagnosis, drugs and medicines, services of registered graduate nurses, and the services of a physician for other than surgery.

Hospital costs — by reimbursement for 75 per cent of yearly hospital costs in excess of $500 for the employee or for each dependent. Normal short-stay hospital cases involving charges of less than $500 are usually covered in full by a basic hospital plan, such as Blue Cross.

Surgical costs — by reimbursement for 75 per cent of yearly surgical costs in excess of $250 for the employee or for each dependent.

The table below illustrates how the major medical expense insurance plan would work and how it supplements basic hospital and surgical insurance for the average employee under 65 with group life insurance coverage of $5,000 ($100 deductible class) who incurs total expenses of $2,500 in connection with a serious operation.

The employee would receive $2,012.50 in combined benefits from his own basic health insurance

	Medical	Hospital	Surgical	Total
Expenses .....	$1,000	$1,000	$500	$2,500
Benefits paid under employees' basic coverage .....	0	$600	$250	$850
Expenses not paid by basic coverage .....	$1,000	$400	$250	$1,650
Benefits paid under major medical plan .....	$675 (75% of $1,000 minus $100 deductible, or $900)	$300 (75% of $400)	$187.50 (75% of $250)	$1,162.50

Commercial Means!

New Storage Plan Will Save Millions Of Transfer Dollars

Washington (AFPS) — A new commercial storage plan for servicemen's household goods, which is expected to save the Army alone $5,000,000 annually, has been announced by the Defense Department.

A standard contract has been designed by DOD and industry representatives to put into effect a Hoover Commission recommendation that personal goods be stored commercially rather than in military warehouses.

Under the old system, goods were sent to the nearest military depot for short storage and forwarded to central warehouses for storage periods over six months.

The Army expects to save more than $464,000 on the overseas transfer of a single division by cutting out excessive shipping and packing costs. Commercial warehouses do not require such heavy packing as do military depots, which have to store the crates alongside weapons and equipment, thus requiring the utmost protection.

Some commercial facilities have been used since 1950 for military supplies only.

Michigan Pfc. Awarded "Soldier of the Month" Title At 752nd AAA

Private first-class John Jones of Clarkston, Michigan, has been named the 752nd Antiaircraft Artillery Battalion's "Soldier of the Month," it was announced today.

Jones, a member of Battery A and a truck driver in civilian life, was given the honor by the Battalion's commanding officer, Lieutenant Colonel M. E. Waller.

To qualify for the honor, Jones was picked by his battery after selection on that level for appearance, attitude and military bearing. Thereafter he was inspected by Colonel Waller, who made the final selection.

The communist enemy, which threatens democracy within our borders and throughout the world, is led by a dedicated and corrupt group of men. The hard core communists, they understand full well that communism's major aim is to subvert the free world and place these countries in the Kremlin's orbit.

These people joined the party for a variety of reasons. Many were unaware, at that time, of communism's ultimate aim—world domination. Some left the party or were kicked out when they discovered and were revolted by the full meaning of communism. Those that knew its aim and still remained—the hard core—are truly corrupt. With full knowledge, they continue to sell out their countries and their souls to help Soviet communism enslave the world.

The names of some of these people are well known; they proclaim the party line from newspaper offices, soap boxes and in legislative chambers of other countries. Others are not even known to many of their fellow-communists. Spies, saboteurs and master cell-organizers carry on their despicable work more effectively under the cloak of secrecy.

Communism has become their entire life. They accept the ever-changing party-line without question. Everything that promotes communism is good; everything that opposes it is evil. Cold and ruthless, they judge everything in the light of whether it serves the party.

The threat these people spearhead cannot be overstated. Their aims must be exposed for all the world to see. All of us, as servicemen and as ambassadors of democracy, must do our part. We must state and restate our principles. We must try to understand what communism means and what communists have dedicated their lives to do. The struggle for the minds of men continues although the world is in relative peace. (AFPS)

Crashing Through a plywood barrier, an M-47 tank from the 91st Infantry Division (Reserve) opens the new Golden Gate Bridge Freeway and Waldo Tunnel in Marin County. The freeway, constructed at a cost in excess of 5 million dollars, was opened Tuesday to the public. Sixth Army units and color guard, as well as color guards from other services, participated in the event.

Honor Guard, Band, Tank Open New Freeway Tunnel

The new Golden Gate Bridge freeway and Waldo Tunnel was opened to the public one day early this week to the roar of cannon and the scream of low flying jets.

The project, financed at the cost of more than $5,000,000 by the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District and the State Highway Fund, was opened on an auspicious note with military and civilian personnel participating in an hour-long ceremony, climaxed when a 49-ton tank crashed through a cardboard barrier and eight Hamilton Air Force Base jets screeched overhead.

The latest addition to the San Francisco Bay area freeway system took more than two years in construction and stretches four miles in length from the north end of the bridge to a point beyond the bottom of the Waldo grade.

Biggest attractions at the opening ceremonies were provided by Sixth Army units and other Armed Forces organizations.

Sixth Army detailed the Sixth Army band, a platoon of troops from the Honor Guard, a color guard, a gun detail manned by 505th Military Policemen, while the California Military District supplied the barrier-crashing M-47 tank from the 361st Infantry (Reserve) Regiment.

The band played martial music and the MP's rendered a ten-gun salute to mark the occasion.

The ceremonies started with speeches by Lieutenant Governor Harold J. Powers, Mayor George Christopher of San Francisco and bridge director vice president Dan E. London and other civic dignitaries.

Once the speeches were concluded, the MP's rendered their gun salute from twin field pieces and the tank crashed through the barrier.

Although the jets were expected to fly past at that moment, it was several minutes before the whine of jets could be heard by the milling crowd of civic authorities, military personnel, reporters and photographers and other onlookers.

The three-lane, one-way freeway then was opened as California State Highway patrolmen on motorcycles escorted the parade of official vehicles out of the tunnel.

Congratulations Sergeant, your unit did a fine job today, is expressed to Master Sergeant Robert D. Alexander, of Headquarters Company, 6000 SU, by Master Sergeant George S. Van Kirk of Able Company, Sixth Army Honor Guard, who acted as Commander of troops during the recent retreat parade conducted by the non-commissioned officers. Sergeant Alexander, who accepted the award for his unit, acted as platoon leader during the parade.

Courses Under Way

Language School Seeks Qualified Officers, Warrants

Field grade and warrant officers may now apply through the Sixth Army for entry into a specialized language school for interpreters now in progress at the Presidio of Monterey.

The school term, which began in January, will continue through June, and courses in Arabic, Bulgarian, Chinese (Cantonese, Mandarin), Czechoslovakian, Finnish, French, German, Greek, Hungarian, Indonesian, Japanese, Korean, Lithuanian, Persian, Polish, Rumanian, Russian, and Serbo-Croatian are being taught.

Candidates for this school must be company grade officers with a minimum of one year on their current tour, and have a certificate of completion of high school training or the GED equivalent. They must volunteer for this school in writing and submit their request through the CG, 6th Army, Att: AMAGP-2S

Those who submit a request must, by their performance of duty indicate that they have a current and potential value to the service, and have a minimum of three years remaining on their current tour upon entry into the language school. A security clearance for secret documents is also required.

Mixed Feelings of happiness and bewilderment are shown by Mrs. Alice Kmetz, secretary to Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, as she was presented a $200 cash award and letter of commendation for her superior performance of duty. Mrs. Kmetz has witnessed many awards being made in Colonel Lundquist's office, but her award was a well kept secret until she was called in for the actual presentation. Seen at left is Mr. Jack McConaha, Chief, Personnel Division, Headquarters, Presidio, who helped officiate at the award ceremony.

30th Engineer's Occultation Team Busy Smoothing Earth's Surface

By Private Sanders F. Rosenblum

Because the earth is an "oblate spheroid," flattened at the poles, cast like crude iron into an imperfect globe, its exact shape is still a problem for mapmakers. Part of an effort to smooth out some of the cartographical bumps, 18 officers and men of Fort Scott's 30th Engineer Group have been stationed for nearly two years at isolated spots in the Mariannas and Philippine Island groups.

Members of seven Army occultation teams scattered about the Pacific on Project "Flystar," the 18-man detachment from Fort Scott (along with men from the 29th Engineer Group) furnishes partial logistical and administrative support to a seven-man contingent of astronomers from the Army Map Service.

Whatever Columbus may have proven in 1492, he was right only in a general way. The earth is round in a rough sort of fashion, but imperfections in the earth's shape, still unmeasured exactly, have thrown mapmakers off in some cases by miles.

Only recently, Cuba and the Hawaiian Islands have had to be shifted 30 miles from their positions on conventional maps.

Through occultation techniques, Army mapmakers have been able to measure more exactly some of the globe's irregularities. From lonely, makeshift observatories on scattered islands in the Pacific — Guam, Ulithi, Saipan and others, three- and four-man occultation teams turn to the stars for a means of measuring their own planet.

Occultation provides a technique for measuring earth distances by astronomical methods. First discovered by ancient Egyptian astronomers, the theory and application of occultation has only in modern times been perfected to a state of map-making accuracy.

The method works something

Occultation Team of Project Flystar, somewhere in the Pacific, mounts the main casting of a telescope's polar axis. work of Dr. John A. O'Keefe, the Army Map Service has perfected the technique of measuring the time interval between the two occultations to one-tenth of a second. Pursuing precision, occultation experts have devised means to account for differences in elevation and atmosphere of observation points, as well as for surface features of the moon itself.

I&E Hour Slates Unit Day

Part of a program to build morale and foster unit esprit de corps, "Unit Day" will be marked on the Post at next week's Troop Information hours, with I&E representatives from each organization outlining individual unit histories.

The section has provided a topic reviewing the historical backgrounds of both the Presidio and the Sixth Army. With those materials as introductory background, I&E NCOs from each organization will work with unit commanders to recall the histories of their own organizations.

Both the Presidio and the Sixth Army have proud records of difficult and important missions, successfully accomplished.

The individual units which have contributed to those achievements have equally proud histories, worth the telling and the retelling, the information topic points out.

Army Marksman

G-2 M-Sgt. Adds Two More Titles To Sharpshooter Laurels

Sharpshooting Master Sergeant James L. Wade of Sixth Army Headquarters walked off with two more victories in the annual mid-winter rifle and pistol matches at Coral Gables, Fla., it has been announced.

Wade, a photogrammetrist with G-2 and ranked a master by the National Rifle Association, won the .45 cal. timed fire with a perfect score of 200.

He also took top honors in the .45 cal. rapid fire. Both victories were recorded in competition with top Army and civilian shooters in the 19th annual Flamingo Open Pistol Tournament.

The sergeant, who has had five years of competitive shooting experience, holds the Distinguished Pistol Badge and participated in regional and national matches in 1949, 1951 and 1955.

When not participating in firing matches, Wade holds one of the Army's most unusual MOS's.

As a photogrammetrist he makes maps from aerial photographs through the science of measurement by photographs. Presently attached to the Presidio's intelligence section, Sergeant Wade has served in this capacity for 16 of his 19 years of Army duty, both as a non-com and officer.

The top sergeant considers his most vital job came just prior to the Allied landings at Omaha and Utah Beachheads in the province of Normandy, France.

Sergeant J. L. Wade

"The study," said the Sergeant, "of underwater obstacles and of the inundated areas behind the beaches was probably my most exacting and satisfying accomplishment."

During the Korean war, Wade helped make maps for Communist-held territory from photographs furnished him while he was stationed in Tokyo, Japan.

Interested In Leadership?

A selective list of books, pamphlets and magazine articles on the subject of leadership has been culled from the files of the Sixth Army Library and Library Depot and are available to Presidio personnel.

Because the subject of leadership is of continuing interest to the Army, Sixth Army librarians have ranged through a variety of fields to compile a basic bibliography on the topic.

The references have been gathered from books on a number of subjects including human relations, industrial psychology, conference methods, morale, foremanship, supervision and executive development.

All of the works listed are available either in the stacks of the Sixth Army Library itself or through interlibrary loan.

Further information may be obtained by calling Ext. 3760 or 3115.

Clean Up Week

PFD Asks Military, Civilians To Aid Housekeeping Drive

The Presidio of San Francisco Fire Department will launch its 1956 Clean Up Week campaign on 1 April under the banner of "Look Safe, Feel Safe, Be Safe."

Colonel James R. Rundell, post fire marshal, has announced plans for observation of Spring Clean Up Week.

"All personnel, both military and civilian, are urged to participate in the clean up drive," he said. "Cleanliness and good housekeeping increase safety, for yourself and others. Get rid of trash, it is a prolific fire hazard."

Meanwhile, George Geller, post fire chief, listed six rules for Presidio and sub-post personnel to follow:

1. Safe disposal of combustible material should be made as often as necessary. Keep attics, basements, closets and space under buildings and porches clear.

2. Keep matches out of reach of children and away from ranges.
3. Report defective heating systems.
4. Maintain adequate aisle space and clearances where material is stored. Also between electric lights, ceilings and sprinkler heads.
5. Get rid of all junk, including old newspapers, discarded furniture, clothing, mattresses, etc.
6. End careless smoking practices. Don't smoke in bed, restricted areas; check rooms when leaving to determine that no burning cigarettes have been forgotten.

Army Seeks Qualified Cadre For Nuclear Power Program

A cadre which will eventually supervise and instruct crews operating the Army Nuclear Power Program will begin training next month at a civilian institution, Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker announced recently.

"Qualified Army career enlisted men are being sought to apply for the two-year intensive training course in connection with the start-up and test operation of the Army's first nuclear power plant, at Fort Belvoir, Virginia. A total of 12 candidates for the cadre will be selected to report to Fort Belvoir by 23 April."

"Men selected will first receive five months of basic instruction in the fundamentals of nuclear power plant technology at an accredited college. This preparation will be followed immediately by a month of introductory practical training as an apprentice-operator of an existing nuclear reactor. For complete practical training and experience, those picked up for the cadre will then be assigned to either the Army's first nuclear power plant, the Army package power reactor, now under construction at Fort Belvoir, or to the crew of Borax III, an experimental nuclear power plant at the Atomic Energy Commission's Reactor Testing Station near Idaho Falls."

The Army package power reactor is a joint project of the Atomic Energy Commission and the Department of Defense. It is the first prototype of a family of ground nuclear plants being developed to meet military requirements.

During the two-year program designed for the cadre, men selected will be occupied not only with training, but with operation and maintenance of nuclear power plants, refinement of operation and maintenance procedures, preparation of manuals and other training materials, and instruction of replacements. The two-year training period will be followed by nuclear power cadre assignments lasting a minimum of two years.

Applicants for selection as part of the cadre must be of grade E-5 (Sgt. Specialist 2nd class) or higher; be a high school graduate or equivalent as measured by general educational development tests; have credit for course in algebra and trigonometry and have some background in general science, or have a standard score of 45 or higher on GED Tests 3 and 5, High School Level; have previous practical experience and training in equipment similar to that found in nuclear power plants, such as mechanical and electrical equipment found in conventional steam power plants, marine steam machinery, electrical switch gear and instruments, Diesel-Electric machinery, nuclear weapons and instrumentation, and electronics systems; have normal color perception; meet physical qualifications.

Applicants must also have a score of 115 or higher in the Army's General Technical Aptitude Area and 110 or higher in the electronic and maintenance aptitude areas. This requirement may be waived for men having exceptional experience in operating equipment designated above.

Personnel selected must have clearance to see classified material.

Those chosen to take part in the Army's nuclear power program of training must have a minimum of four years to serve in the Army upon their selection. Current enlistments may be terminated, if necessary, in order that men selected may reenlist to meet this requirement.

Enlisted personnel wishing to apply for training under this program have been instructed to submit a letter of application to their personnel officer, through unit commanders.

Representatives of the Army nuclear power program will review all applicants received, make visits to interview personally the most highly qualified applicants, and make final selections.

Good Luck and best wishes, says Lieutenant Colonel Harry V. Heim, commanding officer of the 436th AAA Battalion, Travis Air Force Base, as he reads appointment of SFC Jean R. Morris to Warrant Officer. A soldier with more than five years' service, WO Morris, from Ingram, Wisc., has been assigned to the 436th since April, 1954. His new assignment, however, will send him to Panama for duty with the U. S. Army, Caribbean.

Most Financed Automobiles Can't Be Shipped Overseas

All soldiers entering the Army or re-enlisting are being warned that most automobiles being financed cannot be taken out of the U. S.

Where credit companies do allow overseas shipment, a substantial cash payment for insurance is usually required, according to the Army.

Talent Contest Set For Opening Next Wednesday Nite

Try-outs for the All-Army Talent contest announced in a recent issue of the Star Presidian are slated to take place at the Presidio Service Club, Wednesday evening, 28 March, at 2015 hours. Prospective contestants are asked to contact Miss Pierson, Ext. 2000, for rehearsal Monday evening, 26 March.

Winners in the Presidio contest will travel to Fort Ord to compete with winners in the Sixth Army Southern division. Those surviving the Fort Ord eliminations will return to the Presidio for the All-Sixth Army contest taking place at the Service Club from 22 to 25 April.

The Fort Ord and Presidio preliminary contests are combined to secure winners from the four local areas including Forts Cronkhite and Baker which are planning their contests to coincide with final run-down at the Presidio Service Club on the given dates.

After the Sixth Army finals, the talent contest winners are slated to appear as guest performers on the Ed Sullivan television show at a date not yet announced.

Vocalists, instrumental soloists, specialty performers and vocal groups (of not more than five performers) are invited to sign up at Presidio Service Club at their earliest convenience.

A recorded entertainment contest will judge the tops in barber-shop quartets, country and Western groups (four to seven members), Army band choruses (not less than 12 members), battalion or regimental choruses (not less than 12 members), post or division choruses of not less than 20 members and singing platoons of not less than 20 members.

A choral group of Presidio men is in rehearsal for the competition at the present time.

Further information on entrance requirements and auditions for the All-Army Talent contest may be secured from Service Clubs throughout the Presidio area.

The Seventh Infantry Regiment of the Third Infantry Division is known as the "Cottonbalers" because of its part in the defense of New Orleans behind a barricade of cotton bales in the War of 1812.

Collins Hurls PSF To Second Triumph

Barton Wins Ping-Pong Tournament

Stroking his way through a field of 21 entries Don Barton emerged as Table Tennis Champion for the Presidio late last week, with a hard fought victory over Collin Hunsacker 21-18, 21-15, 12-21 and 21-12 in the finals of a five-day tournament in the Post gym.

Barton then teamed up with Don Wilmot to win the doubles crown from the team of Jones and Winnick 17-21, 21-14, 21-10.

By reason of his impressive showing Barton will head a four-man Presidio team in the preliminary central division Sixth Army Ping-Pong tournament at Fort Ord next Tuesday through Friday.

The rest of the four-man squad is composed of Collin Hunsacker (2d place), Catalino Ignacio (3rd place) and Don Wilmot.

Vivian Brill took top honors locally for the girls with a victory over Mary Dorr in the singles finale. The two teamed up to also win the doubles from the team of Ruby Akers and Pat Doering. All four girls will represent the Post in the Fort Ord matches.

The All-Sixth Army tournament will be held from 10-13 April at Fort Lawton, Washington.

Courtney Sets New Record In 880 Run

New York (AFPS) — Pvt. Tom Courtney of Ft. Dix, N.J., launched a full-scale attack in the 880-yard run of the N.Y. Pioneer Club Games and when the battle had ceased, the young Fordham grad had established a new meet record of 1:52.2. He set the old mark of 1:52.6 last year.

It was Courtney's third straight victory in the Pioneer Club event which is staged on a flat track, where spiked shoes are taboo. The late John Borican set the world indoor record, in spikes on a banked track, in 1942 with a 1:50.5 clocking.

Courtney's victory gave him permanent possession of his second Schaefer Cup. Thus far this winter he has started in seven races at 880 and 1,000 yards, and he's won five of them.

Another private, Lou Jones of Ft. Meade, Md., won the John Borican 600-yard race in 1:13.3. In the past three Pioneer Club meets Jones has finished second twice in this event.

John Humcke, Jr., just out of the Army, beat Henry Laskau, who started from scratch, in the one mile walk, handicap. The New Jersey heel-and-toer, who wears the colors of the New York A.C., started with a 60-yard advantage.

In the 60-yard high hurdles, Pvt. Charles Pratt of Ft. Dix finished third. Harrison Dillard, beaten by Pratt in the recent N. Y. Knights of Columbus meet, was first in 7.5 seconds.

The Newark (N. J.) Athletic Club selected 800-meter champ Tom Courtney, now at Ft. Dix, N. J., as the outstanding amateur athlete of New Jersey for 1955.

CURVE-BALL artist Roger Collins won his first victory of the 1956 baseball season last Sunday as the Presidio nine edged the Camp Pendleton Marines five to four. Last season Collins was number one man on the local squad.

Baseball Tilt

Presidio Edges Pendleton 5-4 For Second Victory

A walk with the bases full in the ninth inning gave the local Presidio baseball squad a 5 to 4 victory over the Camp Pendleton Marines last Saturday in a nine-inning thriller at nearby Funston playground. It was the second win this year for the locals.

The Presidio jumped off to a one-run lead in the bottom of the third only to have the Marines come back and tie it up with a tally in the top of the sixth. The locals then pushed across two runs on the strength of Harry Williams' round-tripper to take a three-to-one lead into the ninth inning.

The Marines rallied, as Presidio chucker Roger Collins weakened in the top of the ninth and pushed across two runs before Chuck Matzen came in to put out the fire for the locals.

Right fielder Bill Coleman led off the bottom of the ninth for the Presidio by drawing a walk and moved on to second on catcher Mike Rubcic's single to left center.

Pitcher Matzen then slapped a line drive single to center to load the bases. Shortstop Bill Selson then walked, forcing in Coleman with the tying run. Second baseman Dick Shannon then drew a walk which forced in Rubcic for the winning run and the ball game.

Center fielder Harry Williams, property of the New Orleans Pelicans ball club, led the locals in hitting with a home run and a single. Norm Ellenberger, a star guard on this year's Presidio cage team, had a single and a double to his credit for the afternoon's action.

Winning pitcher Roger Collins struck out ten Marine batters before weakening in the final frame.

This Sunday the local nine leaves for a 10-day road trip through Southern California, where they will engage leading service and professional clubs. Games have been lined up with the Camp Pendleton Marines, the San Diego Navy Training Center and the Portland Beavers of the Pacific Coast League.

new track

Fort Riley, Kan.—A new outdoor track is under construction here. Expected completion date is 1 April. It will be an AAU standard quarter-mile oval with a 220-dash straight away and will include room for pole vault, broad jump, javelin, high jump, shot-put and all other field events. Bleachers are also in the plans.

SECOND baseman Dick Shannon, of Headquarters Company, Station Compliment, is one of several stars returning from last year's Presidio diamond squad to bolster the Post team this season. Last year the young slugger boasted a .330 batting average.

Lewis Second

Camp Chaffee Wins Army Cage Crown

A tired but determined Fourth Army basketball team from Camp Chaffee took a double win from the Fort Lewis squad, Sixth Army, to emerge as All-Army Basketball Champions for the 1955-56 season. The Chaffee team won by the scores of 97-72 in the semi-finals and 98-95 in the thrill packed finale.

The Fourth Army squad had a record of six wins and one defeat for the five-day tournament, being shoved into the losers' bracket the first day by the Third Army squad. The Fort Lewis team had won three straight before running into Camp Chaffee in the finals.

The first half of the semi-final match was fairly close with the Fourth Army men leading by five points but in the second half the Chaffee stars poured it on and won going away 98-72.

Sam Jones was high point man for the winners with 27 points followed by Bob Kriegshauser with 17 tallies.

Bruce Goodrich was top man for the Sixth Army champions with 24 points and teammate Marty Zaninovich collected 18 for his efforts.

Camp Chaffee took the '56 crown by edging Fort Lewis 98-95 in a thrilling overtime period battle which saw the winners overcoming an 11-point deficit with eight minutes of play remaining to send the tilt into overtime.

Camp Chaffee's hard driving guard, Sam Jones, was a one-man show that proved the difference, as he continually bewildered his opponents with his rebounding and driving lay ups. Jones again led his team in scoring with 28 points poured through the hoop.

Fourth Army led at half time 54-51 but as the second frame started the Lewis cagers started rolling and pushed in 20 points while the Fourth Army could only sink two baskets.

The Fourth Army squad rallied in the final quarter behind the efforts of Jones and tied the score 89-89 at the end of the regular game. Sixth Army took a quick lead, 95-91, but Jones again came through with a field goal and three charity tosses to clinch the win for Camp Chaffee.

Two Fort Lewis players were chosen on the Army All-Star squad which is playing in the All-Service Tournament in Louisville, Kentucky, this week. They were Martin Zaninovich, former Stanford star, and Clarence Hannon, West Point.

Fort Lewis opened the tourney by blasting Fort Richardson, Alaska, 85-71; Fort Jackson, Third Army, 105-95; and First Army, 101-75, before running into Camp Chaffee.

State Census On Waterfowl Shows Gain

The annual waterfowl census conducted by the California Department of Fish and Game early in January shows an increase of 23 per cent over the previous year in the number of ducks, geese and swans in the State.

The combined aerial and land count taken 7-9 January totaled 6,547,000 birds compared with 5,338,000 counted in January of 1955.

Pictures were taken from airplanes operated by Fish and Game personnel.

Officials believe the good fall migration and a decreased kill during the hunting season are factors responsible for the big increase.

Hunters were hampered during the last three weeks of the hunting season by widespread flood conditions and the birds were relatively undisturbed.

Results of the winter surveys, together with information obtained on the breeding grounds and waterfowl kill counts, are important factors in setting seasons and bag limits.

With the arrival of spring comes the first call for softball for the local Post squad. Action is slated to commence the first part of April, according to an announcement by the Post Sports Office.

Personnel interested in trying out for the Presidio team are asked to contact the Presidio Sports Office in building 122 or call 3968 for information.

The local squad will enter the San Francisco city softball league and will also represent the Post in Sixth Army competition.

M/Sgt. George Van Kirk of the Presidio Honor Guard was named to head the squad for the second straight season.

cage tilts

The Presidio basketball squad swept to two more victories this past week under the capable direction of coach Hal Fischer. Last Saturday night the locals rolled over the Bay Area Junior College All-Stars by thirty points as PSF ace Mike O'Neill poured in 35 tallies. Wednesday evening the locals romped past the 12th Naval District All-Stars, 84-69, in the Cow Palace. Both tilts were preliminaries to clashes between the Harlem Magicians and the New York Olympians. Ten cents from each ticket sold was donated to the U. S. Olympic Fund on behalf of the Presidio of San Francisco.

PSF Volleyball Squad Enters Top Tourney

Headed by player-coach Major Bob Jones, two Presidio volleyball teams will enter the Stockton YMCA Open volleyball tournament tomorrow in Stockton.

Hosting the matches will be the Stockton YMCA team that has captured the National Volleyball Cup for the past two seasons. The local spikers came within one set of upsetting the champs last month in the Berkeley Invitational tourney.

Members of the number one squad are Major Jones, Matt Schmutz, Bob Noel, Joe Gonzales, Dick Godino and Jerry Steiner.

Sixth Army competition will commence on the 17th of next month at Fort Ord when the central division playoffs begin. The winner at Ord will travel to the All-Sixth Army finals on 30 April at Fort Lewis, Washington.

Dick Hearn, right fielder for the All-Army championship team at Fort McPherson, Ga., last year, has been discharged from military service and will report for spring training with Richmond (International). Before going into the Army in 1953, Hearn hit .260 and rapped 18 homers for Quincy (Three-I).

Sgt. Richards will head the 188-average Sixth Army team composed of Sfc. Buford Bledsoe, Fort Lewis; M/Sgt. Bernard Owens, Presidio of San Francisco; Pvt. Edward Buck, Fort Huachuca, Ariz.; Sfc. Fort Huachuca, Ariz., captured the men's team event with an 8,090 score followed by Fort Lewis, Wash., with 7,996. The women's trophy in the team event went to the Presidio of San Francisco with 6,920, to edge Fort Lawton, Wash., with a 6,671 score.

Sfc. Buford Bledsoe and Sfc. Oliver Still of Fort Lewis teamed to win the men's doubles with an aggregate of 1,210 pins. The women's doubles went to Sfc. Esther Cooke and Sfc. Mary Jenkins of Fort Ord, Calif., who rolled a total of 992 for the three games.

Pfc. Lou Diegel of Fort Lawton and Sfc. Esther Cooke of Fort Ord won the singles championships in the final day of the tourney, turning in scores of 620 and 556, respectively.

High game honors for the tourney went to M/Sgt. Kenneth Freeman, Oregon Military District, who had a top game of 268, when he hit eight strikes, spared, then struck out. Sfc. Frank Broadhead, Fort Lewis, rolled an all-spare game for a 182, and Pfc. James Underwood, Fort Huachuca, Ariz., picked up the almost impossible 7-10 split.

Following completion of the tournament, trophies were awarded to the team winner and runner-up; individual team winners; doubles winner and runner-up; singles winner and runner-up; high game winner and runner-up and the all-events (15 games) winner and runner-up, in both the men's and women's divisions by Col. Robert E. Beauchamp, Assistant Executive Officer, Washington Military District, Fort Lawton, Wash.

Entry List Growing For Quantico Meet

SMOOTH stroking Norm Van Harzen, a veteran of last year's Presidio swim squad, is back to lead the locals through another season. All swimmers, with or without competitive experience, are urged to contact the Post Sports Office in building 122 or by calling 3968. Plenty of room still exists on the team for swimmers, both male and female.

Welcome, Colonel says Brigadier General George P. Lynch, acting commanding general of Fort Lewis, Washington, to Colonel John G. Ondrick, deputy chief of staff of administration, Sixth Army, as he arrives to review the administrative management policies of the post. Colonel Ondrick visited Fort Lewis recently.

207 Complete Army's New Work Simplification Program

Students participating in the just completed Comptroller Section work simplification training program must turn in completed projects by 16 April, Earl F. Reinke, Headquarters Sixth Army Comptroller Section, announced today.

Instruction in the three two-hour sessions was given to 207 Sixth Army civilian workers and military personnel. Of this number, 46 were officers, 23 enlisted men and women and 138 civil service workers. Eleven classes were conducted in the 90 days they were held.

A requirement of the course was the submission of an approved work simplification proposal by each trainee.

The training was conducted in the Presidio service club. Reinke said that 80 per cent of Headquarters Sixth Army supervisors participated in the program, with Colonel F. H. Patrick, executive officer comptroller section, making a speech on principles in management prior to each meeting. Reinke, along with Gordon J. Rutkai, instructed the trainees.

The basic idea, said Reinke, was to save time and effort in the planning or the production of work, streamlining office procedure and eliminating waste motion.

106,000 ROTC Grads Will Serve Two Years With Regular Army

About two-thirds of the estimated 15,900 Army ROTC graduates scheduled for active duty in 1957 will be ordered to two-year hitches in the active Army while the remaining third will serve six months' active duty for training in connection with the Reserve Forces Act of 1955, according to a recent announcement by Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker.

Secretary Brucker said that graduates have been polled regarding their preferences although the Army's requirements will necessarily take precedence over individual desires.

After completing six months of active duty for training, ROTC commissioned officers will be assigned to active participation with Army Reserve units. They will be assigned initially to their respective branch qualification training before assignment to Army units.

The Army school system consists of 33 schools in which 49,000 officers and 148,000 enlisted men received resident schooling during the year 1955.

Seek Military Ideas For New Patriotic Book

"The Day I Was Proudest to Be an American" will be the central theme of a book to be compiled and written by Don Robinson, one of the nation's top-flight free-lance writers, but most of the accounts will be written by Americans, both great and small from all walks of life.

Military personnel are invited to contribute to this book by writing some episode in their lives pointing up a particular day or event which most vividly brought home to them the individual pride they felt in being an American.

Contributions should be about 500 to 700 words in length, and do not have to be finished literary efforts as long as they are factual.

Those wishing to write an account for this book should forward their stories to the Sixth Army Public Information Office, attention: Lt. Mildred L. Coulter.

Speed Reading Class Scheduled by T.I.&E. For Next Month

An on-post speed reading class, sponsored by the Post Troop Information and Education Section, will begin 16 April. The six-week course will meet from 1830 to 2030 hours Mondays and Wednesdays in room 7, building 122.

Designed to increase both reading and comprehension rates, the course will be taught under the auspices of the San Francisco Adult Education Division. Class space will be limited to 24.

Applicants may register by contacting Mr. Ralph McElroy at the Education Center or by calling Ext. 2974.

Sixth Army Librarian Wins $200 Incentive Awards Presentation

A check for $200 was presented last week to George Goldfine, reference librarian at the Sixth Army Library and Library Depot, by Arthur Linsley of the Civilian Personnel Office.

Selected for the outstanding civilian award rating, Goldfine was recently commended for his "services to the needs of the commands and staffs throughout the Sixth Army area" by Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander.

The $200 cash award was presented on behalf of the local Incentive Awards Committee.

Colonel Gershenow

Colorful Staff Officer Ordered To Philippine MAG Mission

Headquarters Sixth Army loses one of its most colorful and resourceful field grade officers later this month when Colonel Louis G. Gershenow departs for duty in the Philippines.

Colonel Gershenow, chief of the plans division (G-3), has been given a new assignment as Chief, Army Section, Joint United States Military Advisory Group to the Republic of the Philippines.

The colonel, who is probably best remembered by the public and soldiers for his exploits during World War II, will leave for his new assignment by ship, accompanied by his wife Esther, and children, Earl, 16, and Andrea, 15.

Ordered to active duty as an Infantry first lieutenant in April, 1941, Colonel Gershenow rose to lieutenant colonel and battalion commander in less than two years.

Assigned as a platoon leader with the 47th Regiment, 9th Infantry Division, Colonel Gershenow participated in the invasion of Africa, landing at Safi, French Morocco, early in November 1942. With his unit, the Colonel fought across the top of the African continent to Tunisia.

There, while Rommel's Afrika Corps was engaged in its last ditch fight against American, British and French forces, the Colonel was captured. From the hilly landscape of Tunisia, the Germans ferried him deep into Axis-held Poland.

For more than two years the Colonel languished in a German prisoner of war camp at Schubin, Poland, while Allied forces hammered at the Reich.

Finally, in January, 1945, with Russian troops sweeping westward to the German frontier, the Colonel escaped from under the very noses of his Wehrmacht guards and began to make his way home.

His escape saga lasted three months and took him through 17 countries until he reached his destination, the U.S.

Following a leave and rest, Colonel Gershenow was assigned to Indiantown Gap Military Reservation, Pa., spent a short tour of duty with the Pennsylvania Military District, and attended the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., in 1946-47.

Until September, 1951, the Colonel served in the G-3 Section, Headquarters Second Army, Fort Meade, Md. He was then ordered to Korea and remained there until June, 1952, serving with the Ninth Corps as assistant chief of staff, G-3.

Colonel Gershenow

On his return, the Colonel attended the Army War College and then was ordered to command the 23rd Regiment at Fort Lewis, Wash., a post he held until assigned to the Presidio.

The Colonel holds the Legion of Merit, Bronze Star with two Oak Leaf Clusters, the Army's Commendation Ribbon with Metal Pendant, the Korean Medal of Ulchi, as well as six battle stars for engagements in Africa and Korea.

JAG Sections Present Course in Martial Law; Certificates Are Awarded

Presented jointly by the Post and Sixth Army Judge Advocate sections, a mandatory course in Martial Law will be given to all Presidio officers and warrants. The first of two complete courses of instruction was presented Wednesday; a second session will be given from 0800 to 1200 hours 29 March in the Main Post Theater.

On completion of each course, a written examination is given and a Certificate of Completion inserted in the individual's 201 File.

A make-up period will be conducted at a date yet to be announced.

LH Nurse Wins BA Degree

First of three Letterman Army Hospital nurses to be awarded a baccalaureate degree in Liberal Arts during the recent closing semester of the San Francisco State College courses at the Presidio is Captain Mary Helen Kuhn.

Captain Kuhn completed her junior and senior college requirements by attending the on-Post classes from 1954 through 1955.

A native of Hamilton, Ohio, the attractive Letterman nurse received grade and high school education in Kansas City, Missouri. She became a graduate nurse from Kansas City General Hospital in March, 1942, and entered the US military nursing service in 1944, assigned to hospital duty in Guam in the Marianas.

Captain Kuhn returned to civilian life in 1946-47. She reentered Army nursing in 1948 and was stationed at Fort Jay, Governor's Island, New York, until January, 1950, when she went back to the Far East, serving consecutive assignments with the 8054th Evacuation Hospital in Pusan, Korea, the 8055th MASH Hospital in Seoul and later in Tokyo Army Hospital, Japan and the Osaka Army Hospital near Sendai.

Captain Kuhn has been assigned to duty at Letterman since late in 1953.

"It took me ten years, off and on," she says, "to achieve the Bachelor of Arts degree. The nature of my assignments were of such a roving nature that until lately, I could never find the time or opportunity to apply myself to the necessary studies."

"I took psychology, medical science, anthropology and American Government," she added. "The courses were interesting and the instructors wonderfully helpful in every way."

Captain Kuhn and the three other Letterman Army Hospital nurses are slated to receive their degrees during formal graduation ceremonies at the San Francisco State College this summer.

In a summary of how she feels the Bachelor of Arts degree will benefit her military career, Captain Kuhn declares, "It will advance my interest in my career, help me to contribute more to the nursing service, and in the final analysis, if a tie occurs in competitive exams taken by professional people, the college degree is the determining factor which decides in the individual's favor."

The Star Presidian

Vol. 4, No. 42

PRESIDIO OF SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA

Friday 30 March, 1956

★★★ Assignments Will Be Given Top Priority

Sure Investment United States Savings Bonds will be offered to Sixth Army personnel through payroll savings plans. On a visit to the Presidio recently, Brigadier General Harry W. Crandall, acting chief of Army Finance (right), conferred with Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander (right), and Mrs. Emily Shew, chief supervisory clerk, Post comptroller section, as they made plans for the Sixth Army and Presidio Savings Bond campaigns. Seeking 65 per cent military and civilian participation, the campaign opens 1 April.

Launch Bond Drive

All along the chain of command, from the Secretary of the Army and the Chief of Staff to local unit commanders and section chiefs, the Army has thrown its forces into a carefully-planned, month-long United States Savings Bond campaign.

This week, unit and section representatives met in a kickoff conference at the Post Theater. They were briefed by Major General Riley F. Ennis, Sixth Army deputy commanding general; Mr. Henry E. North, vice president Metropolitan Life Insurance and chairman of the Northern California Payroll Savings drive, and Colonel R. W. Nuss, Sixth Army Finance Officer.

Seeking 65 per cent military and civilian participation, the Sixth Army drive will open 1 April, as announced by Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Sixth Army commanding general.

Emphasizing personal thrift, the campaign theme, "For the Big Things in Your Life," points up the role of United States Savings Bonds in helping each individual to plan the future more confidently.

Last, year, according to General Ennis, the Army set a similar 65 per cent goal but fell short of its objective.

General Young has endorsed the drive, pointing out that "A systematic program of thrift through the purchase of Savings Bonds ensures realization of long range plans and objectives . . . a program of thrift ensures stability and integrity in the individual. These traits are not only an American tradition, they are also desirable attributes in our Army personnel."

Rather than set a dollars-and-cents objective, the campaign seeks to encourage a high level of participation. How much an individual shall invest is his own decision.

To insure complete coverage, Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, has instructed unit commanders and section chiefs to interview personally each officer, enlisted man and civilian employee in their commands. Each will be urged to establish his own individual bond-buying plan.

In supporting the drive, General Young urged, "The success of the Army Savings Bond program depends on command support and the cooperation of the individual. I am expecting commanders and personnel of Sixth Army to respond in their characteristic, wholehearted manner."

Damaged, Burned United States Savings Bonds are shown to Major General Riley F. Ennis, deputy commanding general (center) by Henry E. North (left), State Payroll Savings Chairman, while Colonel Rudolph Nuss, Sixth Army Finance and Accounting officer, looks on. North was demonstrating the reliability of U.S. Savings Bonds to dramatize the start of the Sixth Army Bond program. The drive is aimed at military and civilian personnel of the Army in eight Western States.

special notice!!—

Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, announced this week that all military and civilian personnel of the Presidio and its subposts, duty permitting, would be given time off to attend Good Friday religious services.

In case of civilian employees, time off will be charged to annual leave, compensatory time or leave without pay.

Section and unit chiefs are urged to make a special effort to allow military attendance at Good Friday religious services.

New VA Plan Would Allow Reinstatement Of Lapsed Policies

Under a new Veterans Administration plan, World War I and II veterans whose permanent insurance policies have lapsed, may now reinstate them with a smaller cash outlay.

The new procedure allows veterans to apply regular dividends, payable from the date of reinstatement, towards the cost of renewing the policy, thereby reducing immediate cash demands.

Until the new policy, veterans had only two choices. They could pay all back premiums and indebtedness with interest as a lump sum or they could borrow against the reinstated loan value of the policy to reduce cash outlay for reinstatement. The latter plan, however, created a debt against the policy.

Further information may be obtained from the Veterans Administration, 49 4th Street in San Francisco, YU 6-3500.

East Bay AAA Unit Sponsors Two Retarded Children For Easter Treat

By Pfc. Walter Heil
Star Presidian Staff Writer

Trained to razor sharpness in their mission of shooting down possible enemy attack aircraft, the men of the 752nd AAA Battalion will prove Easter Sunday they're really pretty soft under that gruff, tense exterior they display on duty.

The troops, whose 24-hour-a-day duty is to defend the San Francisco Bay area with their deadly NIKES, are sponsoring an Easter Party for the retarded children of Berkeley's San Pablo Park Recreation Center and, what's more important, have underwritten the tuition of two of the youngsters.

Men of the battalion's headquarters unit and those in Alameda's Battery C have "adopted" Barbara, a pig-tailed, blue jeans wearing young lady, and Mike, an active, chubby youngster.

The month-old project—the special pet of Private Dan Plumley, information and education clerk, and Sp3 Virden Perdue, battalion finance clerk—has already assured the tuition for five months for Barbara, guaranteed her a surprise Easter outfit, arranged the Easter Party for all the youngsters at her school and set up Red Cross transportation for an Oakland child who otherwise could not attend.

Plumley and Perdue have set up a bank account of almost $100 and plan to keep it at that level for the two youngsters' expenses.

The two soldiers came up with the project when a Women's Army Corps member told them how her detachment sponsored a Christmas and Easter celebration for needy families. From that slim beginning Perdue and Plumley started on their battalion-wide project.

Not knowing where to start, they talked with authorities at the Kaiser Foundation Hospital who in turn referred them to Dr. Evelyn Blackman, executive director of the East Bay Association for Retarded Children.

She explained the association's aims and program and told the soldiers about the school.

From that point, Plumley and Perdue firmed up their project. When payday came, they were outside the orderly room with cigar boxes and were gratified as the troops of Headquarters Battery plunged up $75 and Pfc. Jack West collected an additional $30 at Battery C.

The program is being put into effect in such a manner and with such enthusiasm that it will be continuous—even after present supporters are transferred and replaced by other soldiers. In fact, the troops are branching out already. They've joined a meeting of mothers in Alameda to discuss plans for establishing a nursery school there.

All in all, the project has the cooperation and backing of Lieutenant Colonel M. E. Waller, battalion commander, and it certainly has the smiling enthusiasm of happy Barbara and Mike.

The Kremlin is trying to take over new nations in Asia, Africa and the Middle East which are just coming of age. Join with us, the communists say, and you will be free.

Early in February, a joint declaration by President Eisenhower and Prime Minister Eden punched away at the Kremlin's approach to these nations. It showed it to be what it really is—a bare-faced lie. The Reds practice exactly the opposite of what they preach. They are the world's greatest enemies of freedom.

"During the past 10 and more years," the two leaders pointed out, "600 million men and women in nearly a score of lands have, with our support and assistance, attained nationhood. Many millions more are being helped surely and steadily toward self-government."

In the free world, liberty and freedom are not empty phrases. They are living principles.

In contrast, during these same 10 years, the Soviet Union has enslaved 100 million people in Europe alone. Independent nations were turned into satellite states serving the Kremlin. Within the USSR, the Russian people do not enjoy the freedoms so glibly proclaimed in their constitution and in their masters' propaganda line.

In this struggle for the minds of men it would be well for the people of these uncommitted states to take heed in the Washington Declaration of President Eisenhower and Sir Anthony. They wrote:

"It would be illusory to hope that in their foreign policies, political and economic, the Soviet rulers would reflect a concern for the rights of other peoples which they do not show toward the men and women they already rule. Any free nation that may be persuaded by whatever threat, promise or enticement to embrace communism will lose its independence and its people will forfeit their rights and liberties." (AFPS)

Demonstrating Improved main rotor head balance stand used in the maintenance and overhaul of Army helicopters, Arnold H. Lawson of the Sixth Army Transportation Activities, Field Annex, Sharpe General Depot, points out improvement to Major R. T. Alsbury, unit commander. Lawson received a $320 cash award and Certificate of Merit for his suggestion.

Inventiveness on the part of Sp3 George R. Randolph came up with a new type base plate used in packing chest type parachutes. Prior to opening an already packed parachute to show how the stabilizing block operates, Randolph explains to Lieutenant Colonel Jessie M. Johnson, Post Quartermaster Officer, and CWO Harold I. Thompson, Parachute Maintenance Officer, just how the rocking motion encountered in regular packing without the block is eliminated when it is put into use.

Sp3 Wins DA Certificate For Unique Chute Device

"Well, here it is," said SP3 George R. Randolph, as he placed an 8 x 15-inch wooden block on the parachute packing table.

However modest George was in presenting his recent invention, the contrivance has gained him a letter of recognition from the Department of the Army, and a letter of commendation from the Presidio Incentive Award Committee.

Specifically, the block has been designed as a base support unit to prevent the wobbling effect encountered during the packing of chest-type parachutes.

Across the face of the block, Randolph has cut out two sections wide enough to accommodate the "D" rings of the chute pack.

As Randolph put it, "time is of little importance to me in packing these chutes, but accuracy is paramount. I was here about one month when I decided that something needed to be devised to steady these parachute packs during packing, and the idea for my block dawned."

George is well aware of what a parachute means to the men who must use them. For the past four years, he has worn the wings of the Airborne, and in the course of this period, he has trained and instructed men in practically all of the various aspects connected with parachute drops, from the individual soldier to heavy equipment.

Even now, this veteran of 41 jumps still draws that extra $50 a month jump pay. With unmistakable pride in his voice, George said, "we've got a rather unique organization here at the Presidio. In our Parachute Maintenance section, all of us are Airborne, and in order to be parachute packers, we have to be on jump status, so I'm making one or two jumps a month at Hamilton Air Force Base."

George also packs his own chute when he jumps. In a somewhat serious manner he explained why this is necessary, "when I pack that chute myself, I know what I'm jumping with, and it certainly makes me more conscious of the importance of my work. I just can't afford to make a mistake in this business, because carelessness on my part might cause a man to lose his life if he has to use that parachute."

Randolph believes that his invention will greatly aid those whose job it is to pack parachutes, and he has high hopes that the block will be accepted by the Department of the Army, and made a standard piece of equipment in all parachute packing units.

Historic Training Program Gets Under Way As West Germans Learn To Use U. S. Weapons

(This is the first of two articles on the U.S. Army's role in training of the new West German Armed Forces.)

Andernach, Germany—Baron Frederick von Steuben, the German general who helped George Washington bring discipline to the ranks of the Continental Army, would be gratified at the military exchange going on in this small Rhine River town.

Twenty-four U.S. Army non-commissioned officers and four planning officers, members of the German Training Assistance Group, are acquainting German soldiers with American equipment and weapons.

"We feel we are making a little bit of history," said Major Ernst F. Schumacher, commander of the group. German-born, American-raised, the major is fluent in both the languages of this post-war German Army training camp.

"This is the first time a foreign power has ever helped train the German Army," he said. "It has always been the other way around. Steuben you remember, brought a detachment of German soldiers to America to help us during the Revolutionary War. Well, maybe we're repaying that debt. This in itself is a bushel of satisfaction."

Schumacher is quick to point out that his group is strictly an advisory one.

"We follow this to the letter," he said. "We are not here to mold a new German Army. When the German officers come to us and ask for help, we give it to them. Our relations couldn't be better."

One other thing you can be sure of—there is no animosity between us over the last war. We seldom talk of it. This new Army is living in the future."

The 1,000 German soldiers now in training here have been picked as the nucleus of the young Army from the 195,000 who applied for enlistment in the West German "Streitkraefte" (armed forces). They will become the officer and non-commissioned officer training cadre.

The group is divided into four student companies of 166 men each, a military police company of 177, a service company of 81, and a band of 52 musicians. In charge of these enlisted men and also undergoing instruction, is a corps of 38 officers.

The U. S. Army assistance detachment is made up of training committees in small arms, artillery, communications, armor, crew-served weapons and the defensive phases of atomic-biological-chemical warfare. German instructors handle all other aspects of the three-month training cycle, which began in January, including such subjects as physical training, infantry tactics, army organization, drill and night problems.

Classes on American weapons are conducted with the aid of a skilled German interpreter, also a non-commissioned officer, and with American assistants sitting with the students to give individual help.

"When we cover particularly difficult subjects," said Master Sergeant Amon A. Hartwick, "company commanders often request that the class be repeated the next day. So we proceed at a slow or rapid pace depending upon the decision of the German officers."

American small arms and crew-served weapons which the German soldiers are learning during the first two months of training include the 45-calibre pistol, M-2 carbine, Browning automatic rifle, M-1 sniper-rifle, light machine gun, 45-calibre sub-machine gun, 3.5-inch rocket launcher, 81mm mortar, 4.2-inch mortar, and 105mm recoilless rifle. Appropriate companies are being trained on the 40mm antiaircraft gun, 105mm howitzer, armored personnel carrier, and the Patton M-47 tank.

This is a part of the equipment coming into West Germany under the U.S.-Federal Republic Mutual Defense Assistance Agreement.

The language barrier is not a high one. Many members of both groups speak the other's language; those who don't, have learned to carry on animated part-German, part-English conversations in what is becoming known as the "Andernach dialect."

As one U.S. Army sergeant said: "This is the most interesting job I ever had. We work hard, but it's the sort of job that makes you feel you're accomplishing something special."

Service Captain Leon D. Bressant receives the Army's Commendation Ribbon with Metal Pendant from his chief, Colonel Arthur W. Gustafson, at an informal ceremony recently. Captain Bressant was cited for his work as Special Services Officer in Korea and Japan. He is presently chief of plans and services, Sixth Army Special Services Division.

Special Services Officer Wins Commendation Ribbon

The Army's Commendation Ribbon with Metal Pendant was awarded to Captain Louis D. Bressant of the Sixth Army Special Services Office for meritorious service in the Far East.

The captain, a physical education major at Morgan State College, Baltimore, was presented the Commendation Ribbon by his chief, Colonel Arthur W. Gustafson, Sixth Army Special Services officer.

A veteran of the European fighting during World War II, Captain Bressant was recalled to the service in November, 1950, after completing his undergraduate work and winning his Master's Degree from Columbia University.

He has served since then in the field of special services at installations in the United States and in the Far East.

His citation read "for exceptionally meritorious service from 4 January 1955 to 3 January 1956 as administrative officer, Special Services Section, Headquarters, Northern Command, Japan."

AAA Unit Will Host Egg Hunt for Funston Military Children

Unit members and dependents of Battery D, 75th AAA Battalion at Fort Funston will be Easter guests at a Sunday party hosted by Captain William J. Rodgers, the Battery commander and his non-coms.

The children of military-connected personnel on the Funston reservation are being treated to an outdoor egg-search for which event the treasure is being hidden by the bunny, himself.

The hunt begins at 1030 on Easter Sunday morning, followed by a picnic dinner, games, and a demonstration of military equipment in its relation to the anti-aircraft role to which the Triple A is delegated.

An inter-battery softball game, planned as a "get-acquainted" medium between the Ack-Ack families and their neighbors, winds up the Easter Sunday celebration at Fort Funston.

Presidio Chaplains Will Sponsor Egg Hunt For Children 10 Or Younger

An Easter Egg Hunt, sponsored by the Presidio chaplains and hosted by the Post and Sixth Army enlisted men for the local children, takes place at the Service Club, Sunday 1 April at 1430 hours.

Children of all military-connected personnel on the reservation are invited to attend the annual Easter event, provided they have not yet passed the 10-year-old age limit.

Prizes are being given for the child or children collecting the greatest number of Easter eggs hidden on the lawn and shrubbery adjoining the Presidio Service Club.

Assign Husband, Wife Team For Duty Tour At Presidio

The Presidio of San Francisco claims a unique Army husband and wife "team" today—and with justifiable pride. The family involved is that of Colonel James R. Rundell and his wife, Major Lillia Belle Rundell.

The Colonel, longtime engineer officer, is the new Post Engineer, replacing Colonel William T. Cathcart, while his wife is a chief ward nurse in Letterman Army Hospital.

Married since 1952, the couple met while stationed at Camp Breckenridge in the rolling hills of Kentucky and have served together since.

While the Colonel was regional post engineer at Camp Zama, Japan, the major served as assistant chief nurse at the 8169th Hospital on the same post. The Presidio duty will be their third since the union began.

Colonel Rundell brings a record of great experience and knowledge to his present post. He was district engineer in the Panama Canal Zone in 1940-41 and was assigned to Europe after hostilities began.

He served as chief engineer special staff SHAPE headquarters, London, England, prior to assignment in the Mediterranean theatre of operations HQ as chief economic and engineer section.

Following that duty, Colonel Rundell was assigned to the 15th Army Group Italy as economic advisor to General Mark Clark.

Until 1943, when he was recalled to the United States, the colonel held the same post with U.S. Forces Austria. On return home, he was ordered to Fort Knox and Camp Breckenridge.

The major began her Army career in 1940. She was trained at Akron City Hospital, Akron, Ohio.

Urge Military Drivers To Assist Prevention Of Vehicle Accidents

Despite the increased emphasis on defensive driving in all driver training and retraining, 14 Presidio motor vehicle accidents were reported for February, according to the most recent safety letter. Only two of the mishaps involved non-Army personnel.

Action by unit commanders in stressing safety factors has not brought about the desired improvement in accident frequency rates, the letter said.

Among the major causes of motor vehicle accidents were following too closely, excessive speed, misjudging clearance and assuming right of way.

Lieutenant Colonel LOUIS C. MULVANEY has been assigned to the Presidio and is on duty as assistant Post Comptroller. A veteran of 17 years' Federal service, Colonel Mulvaney came here from Fort Lewis, Washington, where he was Finance officer for the 2nd Infantry Division.

During the Second World War, Colonel Mulvaney served in the Middle East and North Africa with the Ninth Air Force Headquarters, 26th Air Depot Group. After that unit was deployed to another area, he was appointed Finance officer for Replacement Depot Number 1, in Karachi, India.

In Korea, Colonel Mulvaney was consecutively Division Rear Commander and Finance officer for the 3rd Infantry Division's 105th Finance and Disbursing Section, during which service interim he was awarded the Bronze Star Medal.

Prior to his military career, Colonel Mulvaney attended Gonzaga College in Spokane, Washington, and took extension courses at Western State College, also in Washington.

Best Wishes are extended to Mrs. Irma K. Stelzer on her forthcoming retirement by Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Commanding General, Sixth Army, who presented Mrs. Stelzer with a certificate of achievement on her 30 years of loyal federal service both in the United States and Hawaii.

TI&E Employee Completes Outstanding Service Career

By SP3 Hugh Dempsey
Star Presidian Staff Writer

The achievement certificate read, "In recognition of 30 years of loyal service performed in an exemplary manner which brings highest credit to herself and to the Army establishment," signed by Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Commanding General, Sixth Army.

This certificate served as a testimonial to Mrs. Irma K. Stelzer, who in her more than 30 years of Federal service has worked in military installations throughout the Continental United States and Hawaii.

Mrs. Stelzer began her Federal employment in 1920. Located at Peoria, Illinois, with the Veterans Administration, then known as the Federal Board of Education, she coordinated and put into operation veteran financing, and maintained a constant check on mustering out payment to the veterans.

Later, she was transferred to Milwaukee, Wisconsin. At this larger VA headquarters, Mrs. Stelzer continued work in the finance section with the added responsibility of routing veterans in need of medical treatment to the various installations set up to care for them.

In 1930, Mrs. Stelzer took over duties as head of the Fiscal Department for a Quartermaster unit in Honolulu, Hawaii. As head of this unit, she controlled the flow of supplies, equipment and payrolls to military units located around Honolulu.

Following the Second World War, Mrs. Stelzer took on a new type of job, one that could hardly be called ideal. A tremendous task confronted the Graves Registration organization in Hawaii, and her services were needed. Here, Mrs.

Stelzer's attentions were focused on research work and intensive investigation to ascertain the location of Americans, killed in combat, who had been buried on foreign soil.

Following a one-year leave of absence in 1950, Mrs. Stelzer came to the Presidio. Here, with the Sixth Army TI&E, she has worked in procurement and dissemination of various civilian and Army publications. Letters requesting educational information came to her from soldiers throughout the Sixth Army, and each request was given personalized attention by Mrs. Stelzer.

Then on a sunny afternoon last week, Mrs. Stelzer left her office and traveled to Sixth Army Headquarters. There, she was ushered into the office of Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, who with a warm glint in his eye, and a friendly greeting, presented Mrs. Stelzer with the certificate of achievement which was Uncle Sam's way of saying, "Thank you Mrs. Stelzer, you have served your country faithfully and well."

Sibley's 222 Game Leads Hilltoppers To Keg Win

The second place Hilltoppers picked up two games this week on the league leading Masonites as they rolled to a 4 to 1 victory over the Keystone Kops in the National Bowling League. Sibley paced the men from the hill with a sensational 222 game while Mahon led the losers with a 186 score.

The first place Masonites suffered a slight setback when the third spot Hooks managed to tie the men from Mason two all. Paul led the Hooks with a 187 mark while Alba paced the Masonites with a 184 score.

The only other match in the National loop saw the Baker Company, 505th Military Police, defeat the Headquarters Company, Sixth Army, 3 to 1. Barton led the MPs with a 185 roll and Sakurada paced the losers with a good 206 game.

High team game with handicap honors shows the Company B MPs in top place with a 1089 mark followed by the Keystone Kops with 1081 and the Masonites with 1063.

Two Army Booters On U. S. Team

St. Louis (AFPS)—Two soldiers, who trained and played with an all-east squad in the soccer trials, have been selected to represent the U.S. in the Olympics at Melbourne, Australia, in November.

The eastern squad placed eight men and the western group seven on the 15-man U.S. team. The two units fought to a 1-1 deadlock in a contest played in the snow here.

The soldiers named are Pvt. Siegbert Wirth, 5th Inf. Div., Germany, and Sgt. Albert Zerhusen, Btry. A, 94th AAA Bn., Germany.

Three servicemen were picked as alternates and could make the trip to Melbourne in the event a member of the first team is unable to go. They are: 1st Lt. Ronald Coder, Hunter AFB, Ga.; A/2C Frank Tolan, Burtonwood AB, England, and Pvt. John Carden, Ft. McPherson, Ga.

CHAMPION woman bowler in the Sixth Army area was the title won last week by Captain Virginia Engels of the Presidio Wac Detachment. Captain Engels won the crown with a total of 2,534 pins, thus earning her a trip to Fort Sill, Oklahoma, this week for the finals of the All-Army Bowling Championships.

Ping-Pongers Enter Division Tilt At Ord

Eight Presidio Table Tennis stars are winding up action today at the Fort Ord Sports Center in the Sixth Army Central Division matches. Winners at Fort Ord will represent the local area in the Sixth Army championships which will be held at Fort Lawton, Washington, 10-13 April.

Don Barton, winner of last week's Presidio Ping-Pong tournament, heads the men's squad along with Collin Hunsacker, Don Wilmot and Catalino Ignacio.

Top girl on the Wac team is Vivian Brill, who took first place in the local tourney, along with Mary Dorr, Ruby Akers and Pat Doering.

Both male and female teams from the Presidio, Fort Ord, Sacramento Signal Depot, Sharpe General Depot, Two Rock Ranch, Ft. Mason, Oakland Army Terminal and Letterman Army Hospital will compete for singles and doubles titles in the double elimination tournament.

The All-Army baseball tournament will be held at Fort Dix, N. J., 16-22 September, and the All-Marine tourney at the home of the West Coast champions beginning September 4. The Eastern All-Navy tournament is slated to start in the Fifth Naval District and the Western competition in the Twelfth Naval District, both on September 10.

Baudin's Punching Leads PSF To Boxing Crown

The small but powerful Presidio Boxing squad punched their way to first place Tuesday night in the Northern California Armed Forces Boxing Championship held at Hamilton Air Force Base.

The four man Post team captured two titles and were runners-up in two others with welterweight Chester Baudin, Post Dispensary, headlining the evening's doings by stopping Ray Wilson, Alameda Naval Air Station, with a TKO in the second round.

Chester's brother, Joe Baudin, wound up in second place in the lightweight ranks when he lost a close decision to Travis Air Forces Base's Bob Glover.

Defending Sixth Army featherweight champ Sammy Moreno, Headquarters Company, 6002, won his title by default as his final opponent failed to appear.

Presidio's heavyweight hope, Ken Johnson, lost an unpopular decision to Jessie Barber of the San Francisco Marine Detachment to round out the night's card.

It was announced this week that the local boxers will enter the Fort Ord Inter-Service Boxing Tournament which will be held on the night of 3 April.

Representatives from Ord, Oakland Army Terminal, Fort MacArthur, Hamilton Field, Camp Pendleton and the U.S. Navy Training Center in San Diego will be present.

A slight charge will be made for admission with all proceeds going into the 1956 United States Olympic Fund.

The Presidio will enter a five man team in the Ord matches with newcomer Saul Stonerod, a promising middleweight, rounding into shape for the bouts.

Following are the official results of the Northern California Tournament:

Flyweight: Ernest Morehead (Fairfield AFS) by default.

Post Fencers Place High In Foil Tilt

Last Saturday night in the Letterman Sports Center the combined Presidio-Letterman Army Hospital fencing team won two out of the top three places in the Northern California Individual open foil championship.

Taking over eight hours for the entire evening's fencing to be completed, going from 2000 hours until 0400 hours. Herb Rhodes wound up in second place with teammate Jose Tafoya ending up in the third slot. Rhodes was tied with Pacific Coast champion Jerry Biagini at the end of the regulation matches but lost the fence-off. Colonel Laurence Brownlee of the locals captured eighth place in the tourney.

The results of the matches gave the locals two of the top three places for the Pacific Coast Foil championships in Los Angeles, 19-20 May, and the United States Nationals in the open foil. The U.S. Nationals will be held in New York City this June.

The Presidio-Letterman squad have already qualified Tafoya in the individual intermediate sabre, individual foil and the open foil. Rhodes is named for the intermediate sabre and the three weapon champions.

Next bout for the local bladesmen will be on the 14th of April at the Berkeley Fencers Club. Leading swordsmen from throughout the northern California area will clash in the open epee matches.

Golfers Smash SF State 28-8 For First Victory

The 1956 edition of the Presidio Golf team got off to a roaring start last week when they smashed out a 28-8 win over the visiting San Francisco State College divot men on the wind-swept Presidio Links.

Leon Thomas and John Roberts teamed together as the local top twosome and dropped S.F. State's first entry five and four. Roberts downed his opponent two and one while Thomas was dropping his individual match two and one.

Playing in the number two slot for the PSF, Tom Ward and Bill Krause had little trouble in winning their match 8½ to ½. Krause was low scorer for the day with a fine three over par 75.

Team Captain Rollin Kapp joined with Mike Rosenberg to win six more points, and Reuss and Fankhauser teamed together to take eight out of nine in their match.

Yesterday the Post divot men left for Fort Ord for an important match today over the Ord links against probably the toughest Army squad in the Sixth Army area, the Fort Ord Warriors.

The 12 top Presidio golfers were chosen recently in a 36-hole qualification round which set up a ladder of players for the local squad. This ladder will be kept in the Presidio Sports Office (Bldg. 122) in order that late comers desiring to make the team may challenge anyone on the ladder from the bottom up.

At the present time the first six players (low scorers) are making up the squad.

Following are the top 12 men with their scores for the 36-hole qualification round:

Ace Spikers

Presidio Volleyball Team Takes 3rd In Tourney

Led by player-coach Major Bob Jones and ace spiker Matt Schmutz the Presidio Volleyball team took third place in the double-elimination Northern California Open Volleyball tournament last Saturday in Stockton.

The event was won and hosted by the two-time National Champions, the Stockton YMCA squad. Hamilton Air Force Base, 1954 All-Air Force champs, finished second.

The top Presidio team opened the tourney by blasting the Oakland Naval Air Station 15-3, 15-4; and then ran into the host Stockton "Y" group and lost a close 15-13, 5-15, 4-15 match. The locals were the only team in the 14-team field that was able to take a game from the winners.

The loss put the PSF men in the losers' bracket where they trounced the Presidio second team 15-10, 15-10. Bob Moran proved the sparkplug for the second squad.

Rolling on the ace spikers put the Embarcadero Y and the San Jose Y clubs out of the tournament by fairly decisive scores.

In the finals of the losers' bracket the Presidio ran into the Hamilton Air Force Base and were edged 16-14, 14-16, 10-15. The Hamilton team was strengthened just prior to the tourney by the addition of two All-Americans from their last season's championship team.

Any personnel interested in assisting the 1956 program of the Golden Gate Little League in the capacity of Managers, Coaches, Umpires or scorekeepers are urged to contact Captain Ellis at Ext. 2577 or Mrs. Adams at Ext. 5216. The only qualification for any of these positions is a genuine interest in boys.

Sport Stars Needed For Post Teams

The Presidio Sports Office announced this week that a critical need still exists for both swimmers and softball players. Interested personnel should contact the sports office at Ext. 3968 or pay a visit to building 122 for information on the two sports.

Softball action is slated to commence early next month with the local team being entered in a San Francisco city league, and will also represent the Post in official Sixth Army competition.

M/Sgt. George Van Kirk has been named to coach the softball squad for the second straight season.

The Presidio swim team is working out daily in the Letterman Army Hospital Pool and has plenty of room for swimmers. Personnel are urged to come out for the team whether or not they have competitive experience.

Major Ken Myer will coach the locals for the second year. Last year's squad captured first place in the Sixth Army.

Two Army trackmen, Pvt. Charles Pratt of Ft. Dix, N. J., and Lou Jones, Ft. Meade, Md., recently left New York on a month-long AAU tour of Africa.

Zellers Takes Third Place In Berkeley Track Meet

Army speedster Lowell Zellers turned in his best time of the young 1956 track season last Saturday when he sped to a 4:09.8 clocking in the mile run but it was not quite good enough as University of California flash Don Bowden took first place with a 4:08.2. The informal time trial took place in Edwards Stadium, Berkeley, before about 1200 fans.

Zellers, a Lieutenant in the 505th Military Police, came back later in the afternoon to take first place in the two-mile gallop in the fairly good time of 9:24.1.

Presidio's Cliff Wright took fourth place in the shot-put with a heave of 50 feet. California ace Charlie Butt won the event with a toss of 55 feet 9 inches. Competition was especially rough in the javelin throw with the Post's Bill Pualson tossing the spear 195 feet for fourth position. The Olympic Club's Cy Young won the top spot with a mighty heave of 234 feet.

Purcell Daniels, Honor Guard, sped to third place in the 100-yard dash and came right back to take second in the 220 with an excellent clocking of 22 flat.

The small but determined Presidio track squad will engage San Francisco State College and the Santa Clara Youth Center tomorrow afternoon on the SF State College cinder path.

Any men on the Presidio with track experience will be entered in the cinder tourney if they desire. Information may be gained by calling Ext. 3968 or visiting the Presidio Sports Office in building 122.

Army Sports Info Topic Next Week

The Army Sports Program will be the featured topic for next week's Troop Information and Education conferences.

At least one sport for each man is the goal of the Army's sports program with competition set up from unit level to All-Army and inter-service tournaments.

The sports participation policy of the Sixth Army is designed to (1) promote a comprehensive sports program at all levels of command, (2) promote the mental, physical and moral development of Army personnel by encouraging maximum participation and (3) provide incentives for increasing competitive and spectator interests, with primary emphasis being placed on the competitor.

All units are advised that intramural softball competition will begin the middle of April. Companies should start now to organize a team and submit a team roster to the Post Sports Director in building 122.

Army Map Chief Pays Visit To Local Engineer Facilities

On a tour of topographical units in the Sixth Army Area, Colonel J. D. Abell, commanding officer of the Army Map Service, Washington, D. C., surveyed map reproduction facilities of Fort Scott's 30th Engineer Group this week.

As head of the Army Map Service, Colonel Abell is responsible for gathering data and producing maps for a variety of uses by the Department of the Army.

His inspection tour this week took him through the 21st Engineer Company's base photomapping plant, the 99th's reproduction plant and the 171st's terrain model shop. He was accompanied by Colonel Wayne E. Downing, commanding officer of the 30th Engineer Group.

Last summer Colonel Abell made an inspection tour of the 30th Group during its mapping expedition to Alaska's Arctic Slope. Fort Scott's 30th Engineer Group is one of the Army's largest topographical outfits.

Some of its personnel are now cooperating with the Army Map Service in the South Pacific, as members of several occultation teams, seeking more accurate mapping techniques.

Before returning to Washington, Colonel Abell will visit Yuma Test Station, Arizona, where the 660th Engineer Battalion of the 30th Group is on survey training-production operations.

Suggestion Program To Save Army Millions $$ During Next Fiscal Year

Estimated savings of more than $19 million will result from suggestions made by Army military and civilian personnel during the calendar year 1955, Department of the Army said.

Recommendations adopted are expected to save the Army in excess of $19,200,000. The recommendations were part of DA's suggestion program which encourages employees to submit ideas designed to promote economy and efficiency.

Colonel Frank R. Maerdian, veteran Infantry Officer and 1928 graduate of West Point, has been named assistant to Major General Riley F. Ennis, deputy commanding general Sixth Army, it was announced yesterday.

The Colonel, who will be making his second tour of duty at the Presidio, will be primarily concerned with strengthening the Army Reserve program in his assignment in Sixth Army G-3 section.

Colonel Maerdian brings to his new assignment extensive knowledge and experience with Reserve forces' problems and organization. Prior to receiving orders to the Presidio he was chief of the Ohio Military District at Fort Hayes, near Columbus, Ohio.

In fact, his interest in the Reserve program was influential in sending his son, Robert, 18, into the Army as a member of the new Reserve Forces Act program whereby young men serve actively for six months and join Reserve units for eight and one-half years.

Robert, the Colonel said, has just completed his six-month tour with the 364th Infantry Regiment at Fort Dix, New Jersey.

Born in Montana, Colonel Maer-

Colonel Maerdian

dian first served here as an officer with "San Francisco's Own" 30th Infantry Regiment in 1935-38.

Prior to World War II, he was assigned to three years in Hawaii and two years with United States forces in the Panama Canal Zone.

The Colonel fought in northern France and central Europe as commanding officer of the 353rd Infantry Regiment of the 89th Division. After the outbreak of the Korean War, he did a tour of duty as chief of staff in the Korean Military Advisory Group and also commanded the 160th Infantry of the 40th Division for a short period.

The Colonel's other regimental commands include the 279th at Hokkaido, Japan, and the 11th at Indiantown Gap, Penna.

He holds numerous decorations, including the Legion of Merit with Oak Leaf Cluster, the Bronze Star, Purple Heart, Combat Infantryman's Badge, the French Croix de Guerre with Palm and the Korean Ulchi with Silver Star.

Colonel Maerdian lives on post with his wife, Jeanette. Their daughter Adele is currently concluding high school studies in Columbus, Ohio, and will join her parents after graduation.

Ordnance School Offers New Machinist Course For Qualified EMs

A new advanced machinist course leading to an MOS of 443.1, has been inaugurated at the Ordnance School, Aberdeen Proving Grounds, Maryland.

Lasting 10 weeks, the course has been set up primarily to train enlisted personnel in fabricating and modification of metal and machine parts, metal castings and forgings for armament.

To qualify, individuals must have a base physical profile of 322322, Combat Support of 322322, and Combat 22221. They must possess good visual acuity and color vision and manual dexterity to operate intricate machines and measuring devices. Also, applicants must not be color blind.

Applicants must have a score of 100 or higher in aptitude area GM, be able to read and interpret technical publications and blueprints, and be able to analyze relationships between printed matter and its practical application.

46th Ordnance Officers Display Top Talent For Tough Course

Ten officers of the 46th Ordnance Group—including the unit commander—were presented Certificates of Accomplishment early this week by Colonel John E. Stewart, post comptroller, for successful completion of a course in work simplification.

The officers, headed by Colonel Albert L. Hettrich, were awarded the certificates on completion of a six weeks' course covering "bottlenecks," low output, "red tape," backlogs, low morale, etc., in classroom and laboratory work.

The course was designed to familiarize the officers with the principles of work simplification and equip students with "know-how" to analyze procedures and to solve problems arising in daily duties.

It was the first time an operating military unit enrolled in the class en masse, according to Bernard Alpert of the management division, post comptroller section.

Alpert, who instructed the ten officers in the class, also declared that Colonel Hettrich himself requested the section give his officers the course, the twelfth in a series inaugurated in August, 1955.

"As a result of these officers enrolling together," said Alpert, "not only were the principles of work simplification covered, but the problems and examples used in order to review the principles were real problems for the group, and of direct interest to all members of the class."

Usually, he added, they may at best apply to one or two of the students only.

The course includes review of organization, use of work distribution chart, flow process chart, work count, motion economy layout studies, on-the-job training, training films, and Department of the Army books. The classes were held in Stillwell Hall.

To complete the course, each student was required to analyze his operation and make recommendations to change steps not meeting the test of tools and principles of work simplification.

The classes were held under the policies of SR 11-110-2, which defines and establishes policies, responsibilities and the outline of a pattern for the conduct of the course.

Officers participating in the course included Lieutenant Colonel Arnold B. Pospichal, executive officer; Captain Merle O. Blum, operations and training officer; Captain William H. Kemnitz, materiel officer; Captain Robert J. Lewis, adjutant; Captain James S. Skelton, armament and fire control officer; Captain Mulford Woodbridge, maintenance officer; 1st Lieutenant John F. Class, headquarters commandant; CWO Ted Davidson, S-4 Officer, and CWO Andrew F. Kitts, supply officer.

New Deputy Commander Spent Youth In San Francisco Area

Presidio of San Francisco military and civilian personnel welcomed Major General Walter J. Muller to the post early this week and accorded him a 13-gun artillery salute and Guard of Honor.

The general was officially welcomed to the post by Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, commanding general Sixth Army, and members of his staff.

Almost immediately after General Muller's arrival, General Young announced his appointment as a deputy commanding general to the Sixth Army.

General Muller, who spent most of his childhood and youth in the San Francisco Bay Area, was assigned here following duty as director, Army Council of Review Boards, in the office of the Secretary of the Army, Washington, D.C.

His arrival here marks the return of General Muller to the scene of his early schooling and youth. His family arrived in the Bay Area in 1904 and General Muller attended Winfield Scott Grammar School in San Francisco, Lockwood and Highland Grammar schools in Oakland and graduated from Fremont High in Oakland in 1915.

He attended Drew School here to prepare for admission to the United States Military Academy and was commissioned a second lieutenant of infantry eleven days prior to the Armistice that ended World War I.

Prior to assignment to the office of the Secretary of the Army, General Muller spent a 14-month tour of duty in the office of the United States High Commissioner for West Germany. His chief duty in the Reich was as chairman and member of the Interim Mixed Parole and Clemency Board for German War Criminals, Bad Godesburg.

Secretary Wilson Names Dr. Murphree To Head Defense Missile Program

Responsible for direction and coordination of all Defense Department missile projects, Dr. Eger V. Murphree was named this week as special assistant for guided missiles by Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson.

A charter member of the American Nuclear Society, Dr. Murphree will serve in the newly created post without pay.

Secretary Wilson said Dr. Murphree will be expected to devote major attention to long range missiles, "particularly the ballistic type." He will oversee the research, development, engineering and production activities of all the services in the push for perfection of effective missiles.

Army Shuns Non-Credited College Marks

"There is no easy road to education!"

At least three military members of the Sixth Army area were finding more truth than poetry in the above comment by Colonel R. M. Connolly, Sixth Army Troop Information and Education officer, following a warning from the Continental Army Command that several independent service journals were carrying advertisements aimed at attracting servicemen to apply cash and time for a "quickie degree."

"Military personnel on at least two Sixth Army installations have recently sent their hard-earned cash to fly-by-night educational agencies that advertise 'a BS degree' upon the completion of an examination and payment of about $50," said Colonel Connolly.

"The Department of the Army only recognizes degrees awarded by accredited civilian colleges and universities," he said. "Military personnel should fully understand that these so-called degrees given out by non-accredited commercial institutions and correspondence schools are not worth the paper they are printed on as far as the Army is concerned."

Midweek Departure

Army Commander Will Attend Major Confab At Ft. Bliss

Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Sixth Army commanding general, left in midweek for the third annual Army Commanders' Conference at Fort Bliss, Texas. The three-day meeting, held simultaneously with a conference of civilian aides to Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker, ends today.

The conference is headed by Secretary Brucker and Army Chief of Staff Maxwell D. Taylor. Its purpose is to provide an opportunity for discussion of problems pertinent to the Army and civilian community mutually.

Along with top civilian aides from each of the eight western states, Philip J. Fitzgerald is attending the conference as civilian aide for the Sixth Army Area.

This year the Fourth Army is acting as host to the conferees. The first two meetings were held at Fort Leavenworth in 1954 and at the U. S. Military Academy, West Point, in 1955.

Under a new Department of Army promotion policy, Sixth Army last month awarded Pfc. stripes to 401 privates with 18 months' time in service. The promotions were made without regard to vacancies or monthly allocations, part of a DA move to "equalize promotion opportunities."

Another 846 E-2's with 14 to 17 months' time in service may be eligible for future promotions under the new policy. Compiled by the Sixth Army Adjutant General Section, the figures include only those units under the command of Sixth Army Headquarters.

According to the Department of the Army, the new promotion plan will "permit establishment of a (Please turn to page 8)

Former SCARWAF Commander Named Sixth Army G-1

Sixth Army Commander Lieutenant General Robert N. Young this week announced the assignment of Colonel Robert Erlenkotter as assistant chief of staff for personnel and administration.

Colonel Erlenkotter

The colonel, commissioned a second lieutenant on graduation from West Point in 1934, comes to the Presidio from his most recent assignment as deputy commander of the 136th Engineer Aviation Brigade at Beale Air Force Base.

Colonel Erlenkotter served in the Panama Canal Zone from 1939 to 1942 and in Europe from 1942 to 1946. His post war duty includes assignment as commanding officer for the 39th Engineer Construction Group in Germany.

He holds the Legion of Merit with Oak Leaf Cluster, the Bronze Star and the Army's Commendation Ribbon with Metal Pendant and an Oak Leaf Cluster to the decoration.

The Colonel will reside on post with his wife and their 14-year-old daughter, Anne.

Auto Shipment Curtailed For EMs

The Army and the Air Force will no longer allow enlisted men in lower pay grades to ship automobiles overseas at either government expense or their own. The new policy which went into effect 1 April pertains to paygrades E-1, E-2, E-3 and E-4's with less than four years of service.

Although it is considering a similar policy change, the Navy has not yet made a decision. In the past, the services allowed overseas commanders to rule on automobile shipping policies.

Fort Point Revisited

Army Daughter Returns To Scene Of Birth At Historic Landmark

Sfc. Debra O'Hanlon

Star Presidian Staff Writer

The only known soldier's daughter to be born at Fort Point when the Presidio was in its infancy, returned here last week to retrace, in fancy, the footsteps of her late father, Major James Lewis Wilson, a West Point graduate serving with the Fourth Artillery Regiment when Fort Point was the local military headquarters.

Paced by a Star Presidian reporter and a photographer, Mrs. Mary Augusta Wilson Clark, now a bird-like little woman of 75 years old, made her pilgrimage through the fortress by the Golden Gate Bridge, where in the eighties a whole book of Spanish-California history was written.

Petite, apple-cheeked and highly articulate, her silver hair ruffled by a bay breeze, and her purple scarf floating like a small bright banner, Mrs. Clark would have rated a salute from the legion of long-dead veterans who once brought gifts to her cradle behind the fortress walls.

Born in 1881, she tripped lightly across the inner garrison courtyard and up the Spanish iron-grilled stairways where from the balconies she had once heard an Army bugler play Taps and Reveille.

"This is the room where I was born," she tells you, proudly; "this is where the garrison surgeon slapped me on the behind to make sure I could talk."

The daughter of what she terms "a satin-slipper Virginia family," Mrs. Clark describes the privileges accorded members of an Army officer's household in the eighties.

"We never went to the dining halls or to any mess hall," she declares; "the soldiers cooked our food and served it to us in our quarters. And woe betide the officer who lowered his social standards by addressing a non-com other than in giving him a direct order."

Now a native of Vallejo, California, Mrs. Clark is a great-niece of the late Admiral Farragut. As a preface to his classic Mobile Bay war cry, "damn the torpedoes, full speed ahead!" she is quick to remind you that despite the inference in the noted phrase, the admiral was a reverent man.

"Before he took the USS Hartford through Confederate sea fire," she adds, "he first prayed to God to direct him in what to do and how to do it—and after every battle it was his custom to exclaim 'Not unto us but to Thy name be all the praise and the glory of our victory.'"

As a girl, Mrs. Clark learned of the cunning and the bravery of the Sioux, the Comanche, the Nez Percés, the Bannock and the Apache Indians in their battles of survival against the white settlers across the United States.

"There were whole days," she reminisces, "when the women of the garrison were herded in the stockade and made to remain there for safety's sake until the marauding Red men were vanquished."

She knew Geronimo and Buffalo Bill, and she speaks of them as though they were men whom she had lunched with only yesterday rather than nearly a century ago.

Despite the fact that she came from an all-military and Navy Virginia family, the delightfully animated Mrs. Clark married a civilian. She was widowed on the death of her husband 10 years ago and she now engages in the hobbies of book collecting and raising cats. She is called on frequently to speak at fashionable society clubs in San Francisco.

"My recipe for a healthy old age," she says, "is never to permit yourself to worry about the inconsequential, for once you learn 'that' good habit, even the important won't cause you to lose any sleep."

In her childhood at Fort Point, the stockade was maintained on the ground floor of the circular Spanish-type building which housed the officers and their families. Below ground level are a group of windowless dungeons complete with ancient torture implements for which purpose historians are at a loss to account. The subterranean caves were sealed off after the garrison was established as a United States military reservation.

"How often my father must have stood here and held me in his arms," she muses, leaning over the face-like iron-grilled balcony; "how often my mother must have run up and down these stairways."

Major Wilson

Mrs. Clark's father is credited with being the youngest regularly enlisted soldier from West Virginia during the Civil War. He was less than 14 when mustered into the service as a drummer for his regiment in the War of the Rebellion. At 17, with nearly four years military duty behind him, he was mustered out of the Army and returned to his home. There he began the study of medicine, on the advice of a captain in his old regiment, and in 1869 he was admitted to West Point.

Graduated fifth in his class of 41, Major Wilson joined the Fourth U.S. Artillery Regiment at Fort Point in 1874. Later appointments saw him a professor of Science, Tactics and Mathematics at the University of Virginia.

While still a junior officer, he completed the course in Submarine Mines and Torpedoes at the Engineers School, Willets Point, New York. He married Miss Camilla Zantlinger, Admiral Farragut's niece in 1874. Mrs. Clark is the second-born of his two daughters.

Major Wilson left Fort Point in 1891. He served with the Army throughout battle lines in the United States and left Jackson Barracks in New Orleans to fight in Cuba with Teddy Roosevelt's Rough Riders during the Spanish-American War.

"He died there as he would have wanted to die," his visiting daughter declares; "a soldier with his boots on—buried in Arlington National Cemetery."

Trainee Pay Boost?

The Senate has passed a bill which would raise the pay of six-month Reserve trainees from $50 to $78 a month. Not retroactive on the matter of pay, HR 8107 would become effective on the first day of the month it is passed into law.

However, it would allow trainees to count their six-month active duty tour toward longevity and retirement benefits. The Senate also passed an amendment which would put the trainees under Public Law 108, assuring them of disability pay should they contract a disease during training.

officers recently assigned

Lieutenant Colonel JAMES G. DANIEL has been assigned to the Sixth Army's G-4, Reserve Program. Recently discharged as a patient from Letterman Army Hospital, Colonel Daniel was admitted there from Headquarters, Fort MacArthur, California, to which post he returned from his release as a prisoner of war from Korea. He was in a Communist-run prison from 1951 to 1953.

A graduate of the University of Arizona and the School of Accounting, Benjamin Franklin University, Washington, D. C., Colonel Daniel was commissioned in 1940. He was assigned later to duty with the Third Cavalry, Fort Myer, Virginia; the Tenth Armored Division, Fort Benning, Georgia; the 16th Armored Division at Camp Chaffee, Arkansas, and the Tenth Army in Okinawa.

Other Far East assignments of Colonel Daniel were with the XXIV Corps, Korea; the 1st Cavalry in Camp McGill, Japan; the IX Corps in Sandai, Japan, and with the Seventh Division, augmenting the 3rd ROK Division in Korea.

Prior to his foreign service, Colonel Daniel attended the Command General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas. He wears the Bronze Star Medal, the Army Commendation Ribbon, the Pacific Campaign Ribbon with one star, and the United Nations Ribbon with four stars.

Colonel Daniel has established a home in San Pedro, where his wife and 18-year-old son are currently residing.

Lieutenant Colonel DAVID B. POWERS was assigned this week to the Post Engineer Section. The newly-assigned officer came to the Presidio from Wolters Air Force Base in Texas, where he was Comptroller for the 132nd Engineer Aviation Brigade.

Colonel Powers has been on active Federal service for the past 10 years. He served in Korea as a construction battalion commander and later as advisor to the Nationalist Chinese Air Force in Formosa during its air field construction project.

A graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Colonel Powers majored in the study of Civil Engineering. A native of El Paso, Texas, his family home is in Berkeley, California, where his wife presently resides.

CWO HARLAND R. McINTURFF came to the Post Engineer Field Maintenance Section from a three-year assignment with the 553rd U. S. Engineer Battalion in Orleans, France. He has been in military service for the past 17 years with consecutive assignments at Fort Bliss, Texas, Camp Carson, Colorado, Hawaii, later with the 1525th Engineer Construction Group in the Central Pacific.

Warrant Officer McInturff left military service in 1945, re-entering in 1946 for foreign service in Japan, thence to Korean duty with the 521st Signal Construction Battalion and to Camp Carson for Stateside duty.

His military schools include the Transportation Officers' Course at Mannheim, Germany, and the Equipment Maintenance Officers' Course at Fort Belvoir, Virginia.

DA Orders General Peplow To Sixth Army Assignment

Department of the Army this week announced the assignment to the Sixth Army of Major General George B. Peplow, assistant chief of staff for Personnel, Headquarters U. S. Army Forces Far East.

The General, who entered the Army as a private in 1920 and rose to officer rank through attendance and graduation from the United States Military Academy in 1925, will return to the States in June to assume his new post.

He was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Air Service after graduation from West Point and entered primary flying school the same year. Following attendance there he was assigned to the infantry. He served at a variety of stations in the U. S., Philippines and China during the peacetime years.

After America's entry in the second world war, the General was on duty with several armored and infantry units in the United States. Starting in June 1944 he was assistant G-3 for the XII Corps and remained with that unit until June 1945.

Since the war he served at Fort Knox, Ky., in China, Japan, Fort Lewis and Korea.

More recently he was assistant commander of the Seventh Armored Division at Camp Roberts and a similar post with the 44th Infantry Division at Camp Cooke. He became chief of staff of the IX Corps in Korea in 1951 and in 1953 Commanding General Southwestern Command, Japan.

In 1859 the garrison at the Presidio consisted of two companies of 90 men each from the 6th Infantry Regiment.

High Cost of Learning

At a cost of $240 per pupil, the United States is educating 85,127 American pupils in Europe. They are children of Army, Navy and Air Force personnel abroad. By 1 July, the government expects to have 263 such schools functioning in Europe.

MRU, Wac Company Dig Deep In Spontaneous Fund Collection

Proof that the Star Presidian reaches not only its readers but their hearts as well, was evidenced this week when both military and civilians in the Presidio and beyond, accepted the challenge in the story of a crippled child written by Sfc. Debra O'Hanlon for the Army newspaper.

Daughter of Military Police Sergeant Leonard Bickford and Mrs. Bickford, Barbara is the victim of a crippling and reputedly incurable muscular disorder which confines her to untold years in a wheel chair.

The child's story was inspired by a letter of gratitude which the Bickfords asked to be published in the Star Presidian. It was a "thank you" to members of the 505th MP Company of which Sgt. Bickford is a member, and to neighbors and maintenance workers at Wherry Housing, for their financial aid in helping to secure a mobile bed for the little girl.

Within a half hour after the Star Presidian was distributed, its readers began to rally to the aid of the stricken child. People with large and small families, and those with no families at all, brought or sent donations toward a new fund for the little one's bed.

An enlisted man's wife who had ear-marked a hard-earned five dollars for the cerebral palsy fund, presented it instead, to her neighbor.

Major Marguerite E. Pomeroy, of the Post Provost Marshal Section, made a personal call to the Bickford home with an Easter

Army Heartstrings couldn't resist the tug of a recent "Star Presidian" story on the hapless plight of tiny, crippled Barbara Bickford, daughter of Sgt. and Mrs. Leonard Bickford. As a result a spontaneous collection in several Presidio units netted over $100 toward the purchase of a special new hospital bed for the little girl. Presenting the donation to the Bickfords is M/Sgt. Mary Richmond, first sergeant of Wac Company, and Sp2 Johnita Johnson, of the Machine Records Unit.

basket and plans for a money gift to the tot.

Meanwhile, as added incentive, the Star Presidian story was posted on the Wac Detachment bulletin board. It meant sacrificing a little of the planned Easter finery fund, but the officers and enlisted women dug down and came through with nearly seventy dollars for Barbara.

In turn, Wac Sp2 Johnita Johnson brought news of the fund collection to her co-workers in MRU.

Major Robert D. Jones, chief of the Machine Records Division, approved an on-the-spot voluntary contribution from his staff. To the last man and woman, officer, civilian and enlisted, they gave, to the extent of nearly fifty dollars, with further money pledged.

This is how a story in the Star Presidian touched the hearts of so many people. This is how over one hundred dollars was so generously given to a Presidio child in need. This is the way the Army takes care of its own.

The fund donation is still active, and unless through intervention of a miracle, five-year-old Barbara Bickford will spend the rest of her life in that new hospital bed.

Staff Writer Pvt. Sanders Rosenblum, 6002 SU, of the "Star Presidian" is presented with a bronze Freedom Foundation Medal by Sixth Army Commander Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, while Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander looks on. Rosenblum also won a $100 check for his third place essay in the annual service competition.

Free Passes

USO Gave 23,500 Annie Oakleys To Servicemen

More than 23,500 Bay Area servicemen and women received free USO admission tickets to theatrical, sports and other entertainment events within the past year.

Free tickets were allocated to the military for movies, swimming, opera, plays, musical comedies, radio and TV programs and ballet.

Presidio servicemen and women are urged to follow the instructions given out with tickets since they come directly from theater managers who make the tickets available.

Frequently, military personnel are requested to wear uniform or to arrive at the box office ahead of performance time.

Also, when guest privileges are an additional feature of the gift tickets, the holders are requested to observe the limitations placed on the number of such guests.

Tickets given to the San Francisco USO are for the exclusive use of men and women guests from the military services. They are not meant to be handed on to civilians.

Two Topical Films Added To Sixth Army Film Library

What life might be like in a space station 1,075 miles from earth is described in "The Challenge of Outer Space," one of two new Armed Forces Information and Education films now available at the Central Film Exchange.

Second feature of the double bill, "Communist Blueprint for Conquest" (AFIF 76), is a Defense Department release, dealing with Communist techniques of infiltration and subversion.

Narrated by Boris Klosson, State Department expert on Russia and Eastern Europe, AFIF 76 uses animated cartoons to illustrate the script. Five prints are available at the Film Exchange. Running time is 33 minutes.

"The Challenge of Outer Space" features Dr. Werner von Braun, director of the Army's Guided Missile Division at Redstone Arsenal, Huntsville, Alabama. In the 61-minute film Dr. von Braun outlines possibilities for creation of a space station and space travel.

Personnel would reach the space station by rocket ship, Dr. von Braun explains. Before leaving the ship, the men might don pressurized suits that bear a distinct resemblance to coke bottles.

The station itself would be wheel-shaped and would spin slowly around its hub. Personnel could live in the rim where laboratories would be constructed to study life in outer space and cosmic radiation as well as to carry on meteorological research.

Nearby, a telescope would help in reconnaissance and provide an opportunity to study planets from closer up.

Within the station, an air conditioning system would be working while an oxygen and carbon dioxide system also would aid in breathing.

Dr. von Braun, who developed the V-2 rocket for the Germans in WWII, said specialized training would be needed to prepare a crew for space travel.

An entire crew could be placed into a nacelle attached to the boom of a centrifuge. Then, the crew would be whirled about. The nacelle could be rotated as well as to simulate erratic flight conditions and prepare the men for possible emergency measures in rocket flight.

'Quickie Degrees'

CONARC has added that authorized educational services are available at Army Education Centers—without cost for the most part—to all service personnel on active duty.

"If you are tempted by clever advertising," the colonel cautioned, "to seek an easy road to a college degree, you owe it to yourself and to your pocketbook to check with your local T. I. & E. officer, or civilian education advisor, before giving time and money for what might well be a useless piece of paper."

Bottom photo shows Captain John F. Kallam, M/Sgt. David A. Dewey, Captain Henry T. Croonquist, and Colonel Charles G. Rau, Presidio Post executive officer and a top marksman himself.

Outlining Plans for the upcoming Armed Forces Day activities here, post project officer Captain Burton Mason (second from right) shows plans to three key officers. Looking on are Major John F. Kwock, representing the Post Provost Marshal and the 505th MPs; Captain Arthur Shepard, 740th Missile Battalion and Captain Ephraim Puffer, Post S-4 Officer. Plans for AFD day are being formulated now.

AFD Planning!

DPC Names Mason Project Officer For Post, Sub-Area

Deputy Post Commander Colonel Carl E. Lundquist this week announced the appointment of Captain Burton Mason, Jr., as chairman of San Francisco sub-area Armed Forces Day Committee.

As the Presidio project officer for AFD, the Captain will coordinate with units in setting up the program here and for organization of displays during the day's activities.

This year's Armed Forces Day, scheduled for Saturday, 19 May, will carry—as it has in recent years—the theme, "Power for Peace."

Captain Mason has issued three suspense dates for units to comply with. The first, set for today, calls for tentative and general plans of the individual units as far as displays are concerned.

The second suspense date, slated for Monday, 16 April, calls for a statement from organizations on unit history, color, role in the Army, their part in Armed Forces Day. This material is to aid The Star Presidian in publication of its special Armed Forces Day edition.

Final and itemized plans of units, said Captain Mason, must be delivered to his office, Building 238, Extension 4433, by Monday, 30 April.

Representatives of most Presidio units and sections met with Captain Mason recently to get under way initial organization of the program here, which will be a joint Armed Forces effort, with Air Force, Navy, Coast Guard and Marines participating.

General Muller

Was Key Planner In WW II Invasion Of North Africa

eral rose to fame as a top drawer planner, especially for the type of warfare fought in North Africa—armored and on the desert.

He landed in North Africa in 1942, took part in the assault on Sicily and in General George Patton's blitzkrieg operations with the Third Army in Europe.

The General was military governor for Bavaria from 1945 to 1947, was posted to the Army Ground Forces at Fort Monroe, Va., until late 1948 when he was Commandant of The Army Transportation School, Fort Eustis, Va. He then returned to Europe as Deputy Chief of Staff for logistics and administration for Allied Forces Central Europe. This assignment was followed by his tour with the High Commissioner.

General Muller holds the Distinguished Service Medal, the Legion of Merit with Oak Leaf Cluster, the Bronze Star Medal and the Army's Commendation Ribbon with Metal Pendant. He also holds decorations conferred on him by the governments of France Luxembourg, Belgium and Russia.

The General's wife and daughter are expected to join him here soon. His son, Walter, Jr., is a cadet at West Point, class of '56.

Taking Five more to round out 20 years of service in the Army, Master Sergeant John W. Wooten, 1st/Sgt., Headquarters Company, Sixth Army, takes the oath from his commanding officer, Major Verne E. Marsden. Witnessing the ceremony is Captain Webster Parker, newly assigned Post Military Personnel Officer.

Two Retire With 49 Years Of Total Military Service

An officer and an enlisted man closed out a combined total of 49 years' service in the Army late last week when retirement ceremonies were held for Lieutenant Colonel Charles N. Gruber and Sergeant First Class James Fotinos.

The Colonel, who has served at the Presidio since 1954, retired after 22 years' active service, while Sergeant Fotinos leaves the ranks after 27 years in the Army.

Colonel Gruber enlisted in the Army in 1934 and served as an enlisted man in the Panama Canal Zone, China, and various stations in the United States. He attended Officers' Candidate School and received a commission as second lieutenant in the Adjutant General's Corps.

Among the Colonel's decorations are the Army's Commendation Ribbon with Metal Pendant and an Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a second award of that decoration; the French Medal of Recognition for services as liaison officer between American and French forces and the Czechoslovakian Military Medal of Merit.

Sergeant Fotinos' last assignment prior to retirement was with the Harbor Craft Branch of the Presidio's Transportation Section. The sergeant enlisted in the Army in 1929.

Prior to World War II he served in Hawaii and at the Presidio with the Coast Artillery Corps.

He served in the Pacific Theatre of Operations during World War II.

The average stay at one station for a soldier is 11 months.

SF High School Cadets Given Day-Long Tour Of Missile Battalion

Approximately 290 ROTC cadets representing seven San Francisco high schools were hosted to a tour and demonstration on the operation of a NIKE guided missile unit recently during a day-long visit with men of Baker Battery, 740th AAA Missile Battalion.

The youthful cadets received a thorough orientation on how an around-the-clock missile unit functions. They witnessed a launcher section crew go through their duties just as if the enemy were actually staging a surprise attack on our coast. Following this, they were taken to control sites where they learned how a guided missile is fired and tracked onto its target.

The tour was part of a planned group of visits to military installations by cadets in order that they might be better informed on the part that the Army plays in the defense of the United States.

All Army troops and equipment were withdrawn from Alcatraz in 1933, when the island was turned over to the Department of Justice.

Your Duty To Vote!!

It is the duty of every eligible soldier as a citizen of the United States to vote.

In this general election year, the Department of the Army is exerting every effort to inform Army personnel of their rights and privileges in voting and to give them an opportunity to vote in both local and national elections.

In certain cases, within the United States, units may grant administrative leave to individuals who must vote in person as required by State law. All units, down to and including companies and batteries, are appointing Soldier Voting Officers for advising purposes and for attesting soldier's oaths on ballots.

Some of the instructional and informational aids being used are DA Poster 21-50, AR 608-20, Circular 608-10, DA Pamphlet 21-50, commercial and service newspaper articles, news announcements, cartoons, radio and service television broadcasts.

ROTC Potential

Vets Who Plan College Could Complete Some Reserve Time

Members of the Armed Forces planning to enter college upon release from active duty will be able to satisfy up to four years of their remaining service obligation in the Army ROTC.

Enrollment in the ROTC, which carries certain pay or allowance, however, will entail additional obligated service upon graduation and commissioning as a second lieutenant, the Army has ruled.

Veterans, regardless of prior service, who take the Advanced ROTC Course as college students, will be required to agree to serve actively for four years in a Ready Reserve unit and, on being commissioned, will be ordered to six months' basic branch training unless they volunteer and are accepted for two years' active duty.

Under the new ruling, the ROTC course will fill requirements for participation in the Ready Reserve for those having this obligation.

The Army explained that the additional service requirement has been put into effect for ROTC students because it would be both wasteful and impractical not to capitalize, to some extent, on the training of these commissioned officers after their graduation from school.

Out of Drink rolls the Army's new landing craft retriever. The odd-shaped vehicle can roll through eight-foot deep water, pick up a capsized landing craft and deposit it on shore—right side up. The Army is currently testing the vehicle to replace makeshift WWII equipment used to salvage landing craft.

New Badge was awarded to Master Sergeant James L. Wade by Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, in informal ceremonies this week. Sergeant Wade was awarded the badge for his shooting performances recently in Florida. The gold badge he may now wear symbolizes the Distinguished Marksman.

Fifteen Top Talent Show Eliminations

★ ★ ★ Yakutis Takes Top Spot; Drummer Proves Versatile

Fifteen talented performers in the preliminaries of the Sixth Army Talent Show have gained top billing in the post show to be held in the Presidio Service Club, 11 April at 2030 hours.

Pfc. Robert Yakutis of the 9th AAA Missile Battalion took first place honors in the individual vocal group with his captivating rendition of "Prologue from Pachellicia." This seasoned performer is also under contract to the Metropolitan Opera Company following his two-year stint with the Army.

Second place in this bracket went to Pvt. Robert Vitale of Hq. Co., Sixth Army, whose somewhat spiced-up version of "That Old Black Magic" gained rapt attention from the audience.

Pvt. Mike Stibella literally had the audience on the edges of their seats with his rock and roll rhythm on the drums. Mike, who plays with the Sixth Army Bagpipers, had a change of pace on the drums that would make Gene Krupa sit up and take notice. His performance won for him first place in the Instrumental Soloist group.

Pvt. Mary Blossom Tadina of the Presidio WAC Detachment brought a touch of Hawaii to the show. Dressed in a native hula costume, her scintillating dance, reminiscent of the dances of her forefathers, and of the present day in her home at Wailuku Maui, Hawaii, gained for her first place in the Specialty Performers category.

In the vocal group winners were four Presidio soldiers calling themselves "The Casuals." Their rendition of "Band of Gold" took first place for the youthful quartet.

Another part of the preliminary round in the Talent Show was held at the Fort Cronkhite service club for talented service people of Fort Baker, Fort Cronkhite and Fort Barry. Winners in this competition will be represented in the post show on the 11th of this month.

Across the bay, Pfc. Clifford E. Taylor of the 441st AAA Missile Battalion took first place in the Specialty Performance category with his amusing antics as a ventriloquist.

movie prevues

BIRDS AND THE BEES introduces the vegetarian son of a multimillionaire meat packer who meets up with a group of card-sharks. One of the card-sharks is a young and beautiful girl who, after a comedy of errors finally traps George Gobel into marriage.

STAR IN THE DUST places John Agar in the role of a sheriff who finds himself virtually alone in upholding the course of justice in saving for the law's gallows, the neck of a professional gunman.

THE BOLD AND THE BRAVE is the story of three heroic Yanks on the battlefields of the Italian campaign of 1944. One won and lost at love — one gambled and lost a fortune, and one, the idealist, knocked out an enemy.

HELEN OF TROY is a spectacular movie, based on Homer's "Iliad," featuring the story of the world's most famous runaway lovers and the treachery of the Trojan's wooden horse.

OUTSIDE THE LAW is a blue print of the manner in which a taskforce of U.S. Treasury runs down a gang of counterfeiters.

How Many tickets would you be interested in buying asks Cub Scout Billy W. Matreraroff as he vies with fellow scout Tom W. DeLany in selling tickets to Bagpiper Sp3 John W. Taylor for the forthcoming Boy Scout Exposition, to be held in the San Francisco Cow Palace on the 20th and 21st of this month. ## Local Dance Group Active At EM Club

A friendly unit of dance instructors, known as the Irene Weed Smith Group, bring an interval of informal relaxation and recreational activity to the Presidio Service Club on a regular monthly schedule.

Coming here under sponsorship of the San Francisco Recreation and Park Department, the instructors teach all types of dancing to military personnel and their families.

The dance program, which is scheduled for every third Wednesday in each month is sufficiently flexible to provide instruction for beginners and advanced dancing pupils. It covers Folk and Modern dances, including the waltz, mambo, tango and square dance.

Newcomers to the Presidio are invited to share in the fun of learning to dance with this delightfully informal group of people. The Wednesday night programs begin at 2000 hours and present individual as well as collective instruction.

Look-Alikes Privates Milton and Filton Boudreaux are causing a certain amount of confusion among the officers and men of Battery A, 9th AAA Missile Battalion, Fort Barry. The identical twins, shown here alongside the tail of a NIKE, have caused quite a stir for their physical likeness makes them difficult to identify. The twins, Texans by birth, are receiving on the job training as radar operators with their battery.

MRU Wins Post Volleyball Crown

INTRAMURAL basketball champions for the 1955-56 season on the Presidio were the 102d Machine Records Unit. Shown receiving the gold trophy for first place are (l. to r.) Lt. Bob Moran and Lt. Harry Matthews and presenting the trophy is Colonel Charles G. Rau, post executive officer. The records men ran up a 14-game winning streak in taking the coveted crown. Lt. Moran coached the winners and Lt. Matthews was high scorer with 258 points for the cage season.

Champions

Records Men Win Third Straight Intramural Title

Sparked by outstanding team play the Machine Records Unit swamped the 21st Engineers 15-2, 15-13 Tuesday night at the Embarcadero YMCA to emerge winners in the 1956 Presidio Intramural Volleyball finals.

The victory was the third straight for the records men as they had previously won last fall's volleyball crown as well as the recently completed Post basketball title.

Last Tuesday night's final featured the top four teams from the two PSF leagues in a double-elimination playoff.

The MRU opened the playoffs by defeating Detachment 5, 6002, 15-1, 15-2 with a dazzling display of spiking by Major Bob Jones, Bob Moran and Frank McDonnell.

The 21st Engineers were the next to fall before the big guns of the champs to the tune of 15-1, 15-5. Setting by Harry Matthews and Alex Nichols combined with the spiking of Dan Anderson proved the difference.

The records men then edged the 21st Engineers in the finals for the Presidio volleyball title for the second straight season.

The Engineers opened the four team championships by beating the Headquarters Company, 30th Engineers, 15-5, 15-7, then edged Detachment 5, 6002, 16-14 and 15-6 before running into the MRU squad in the finals.

Last season the local records men won the PSF intramural title, added a couple of men and won the Sixth Army title and went on to take the All-Army crown.

Official Sixth Army competition will commence on the 17th of this month when the Presidio champs travel to Fort Ord for the central division playoffs. The winner at Fort Ord will go to the All-Sixth Army Tournament at Fort Lewis on the 30th of this month.

Presidio Swim Team Begins Early Drills

In its initial stages of training Presidio's swimming team is now working out in the Letterman Army Hospital pool. Under the direction of swimming coach Major Ken Myer of California Military District, the locals are busy working out for the Sixth Army Swimming and Diving Tournament at Fort MacArthur 18-20 July.

The team needs more personnel to fill out the roster and all swimmers either with or without competitive experience are urged to contact the Presidio Sports Office in building 122 or by calling extension 3968.

In addition to aiming for the Sixth Army water sports meet and the All-Army Tournament later in July, the local garrison swimming team will provide the opportunity for future Olympic hopefuls to get in shape.

The ideal number for the Post swimming contingent, according to coach Major Myer, would be a squad of twenty men and ten women. This would allow one reserve man for each team event.

Top man on the Presidio squad is expected to be Pfc. Norm Van Herzen, who led the locals to the Sixth Army crown last season.

Army wrestlers, vying for the 16-man All-Army wrestling team which will compete in the Olympic trials at Los Angeles in May, defeated the New York A.C. 27-11, in their first match as a team.

Service Clubs Ousted In Cage Tourney

Denver (AFPS) — Three service teams, making a bid to compete in the Olympic trials, were eliminated in the early rounds of the 49th annual National Amateur Athletic Union basketball tournament here.

The Marine all-stars, who last year battled their way to the semi-finals of the AAU tourney, got by their first round opponents but lost their next game. The Air Force and Army teams were defeated in their opening games.

The Marines, sparked by Wally McCarvill of Quantico, Va., knocked off the Marican Kay Co., of Brownstown, Ind., 71-61. The former Iona College star scored 18 points for the Marine quintet. The leathernecks trailed the Hoosiers late in the contest but rallied for seven straight points in a minute and 30 seconds to clinch the victory.

In the second round the Marines were pitted against the defending champions, Phillips 66 from Bartlesville, Okla., and the top-seeded club of the tournament won easily, 84-66.

The Air Force five lost its game to Alabama University's senior team, competing in the tourney as the Ada Oilers from Mobile, Ala. The southerners, hard-pressed by the airmen, held off a late rally and won, 90-83. High scorer for the Air Force team with 25 points was Wally Ziemba of Andrews AFB, Md.

Mirror Glaze of Pasadena, Calif., set back the Army all-stars, 82-68. The Californians, four of whom played for Nazarene College in Pasadena, outran the soldier quintet.

The Seattle Buchanan Bakers won the AAU championship downing Phillips 66, 59-57.

Bowling Action

Captain Engels Wins 3rd In All-Army Keg Tourney

Captain Virginia Engels, of the Presidio Wac Detachment, scored a total of 1388 pins to win third place in the All-Army Women's Bowling Tournament that wound up action last Friday night at Fort Sill, Oklahoma.

Winner of the five-day girl keg contest was Edith Cooke, of Fort Ord, with 1449 pins to her credit followed by Josephine Ross, Fifth Army, with 1390.

Eighth Army bowlers won the coveted men's championship when they edged the early leaders, First Army, by a total of only five pins. Eighth Army emerged with a total of 9411 pins after the final official count with the First getting credit for 9406.

Third place went to USAREUR with 9305 while Third Army copped fourth place with 9267 and the Sixth Army came in fifth with a grand total of 9166 pins downed.

M/Sgt. Bernard Owens was the only Presidio entry on the Sixth Army squad.

The scores are for a total of 15 games bowled in the meet with high game for the tournament turned in by John Piotrowski, Caribbean, with a 235 and high team series by the First Army with a score of 3297.

Trophies were presented to the winning teams and individuals following the tournament by Brigadier General John Bird, deputy commanding general of Fort Sill.

The Eighth Army bowlers won the top prize of the traveling Adjutant General's Trophy. The trophy is made of sterling silver and is insured for $500. The second place trophy is also made of sterling silver and is insured for $300.

golfers

All Presidio golfers are reminded that starting last Tuesday, golf clubs and passes for the Presidio Golf Course are now issued through the office of the United Services Golf Club, building 200, which is located on Halleck Street adjacent to Post Headquarters.

torero

Private Harlan R. Willis was named yesterday by Lt. Colonel Freeman Gage, Presidio Special Services Officer, as the winner in the recent contest to rename the Post athletic teams. The name TORERO submitted by Willis was judged the winner out of a field of over 25 entries. Torero is the Spanish word for bullfighter and will be the name of the various teams representing the local Post. The feminine spelling of Torera will be used for the Presidio Wac Detachment. Private Willis received a prize of $25.00 for submitting the top place entry. Entries were judged by a committee consisting of the Deputy Post Commander, Post Executive Officer, Special Services Officer, Presidio Sports Director and the Sixth Army Special Services Officer.

Track Meet

Presidio Wins 3rd Place As Wright Takes Discus

Presidio weight man Cliff Wright led the way with a first and a second place as the small but powerful Post track squad outscored the Moffett Field Navy Flyers for third place in last Saturday's four-way track and field meet between the Santa Clara Youth Center and San Francisco State College. The cinder meet was held on the State College campus.

Wright, a former University of California star, took top honors in the discus with a heave of 136 feet 2 inches and came right back to nab second in the shot-put with a toss of 50 feet.

Purcell Daniels won the 220-yard dash in the excellent early season time of 22 flat and also captured a fourth in the low hurdles with a :25.2 clocking.

Bill Pualson wound up and tossed the javelin 179 feet 3 inches for another first place award for the local team.

The only other Presidio man to break into the scoring column was Lee Schroeder who sprinted to a third place in the 100-yard churn in the good time of 9.9.

It was announced this week that the Northern California Armed Forces Track and Field meet will be held at Encino High School in Berkeley on Saturday, the 5th of May.

Any men on the Presidio or its sub-posts with track experience will be entered in the cinder tourney if they desire. Information may be gained by calling ext. 3968 or visiting the Post Sports Office in building 122.

Army Third

AF Wins Basketball Title In Service Olympic Trials

Louisville, Ky. (AFPS)—In basketball, it's the points that count—and count they did in the Armed Forces Olympic basketball trials at the armory here.

When the three-day round-robin tourney ended, the Army, Air Force and Marine Corps had identical 2-1 records—but the airmen won the championship on a point-spread system.

Here's the rundown: The Air Force quintet scored a "plus-19." They lost to the Marines by two points, then they beat Army by 21; thus "plus-19."

The Marines were "plus-2" after the AF game, but when they lost by seven points to Army, they finished with a "minus-5." Army was far behind and Navy was actually out of the running, having lost all three of its games.

The Marines surprised the Air Force team in the opening round of the tournament with a 76-74 win. With four seconds remaining in the contest Richie Guerin of Quantico, Va., missed a shot, but Jim Bingham of Camp Lejeune, N. C., tipped in the rebound.

The final game of the tourney was a thriller with Air Force edging the stubborn Navy five, 78-76. This virtually clinched the title for the airmen when, in the first game, the previously unbeaten Marines were stunned by the Army club, 81-74.

divot loss

The Presidio golf team suffered their first loss of the season last Friday when they were defeated 8½ to ½ by the powerful Fort Ord squad on the Ord links. The Post was handicapped by the fact that the top three players on the team were unable to make the trip due to military duties. Bill Krause led the locals in scoring by turning in a fine 76 over the long Fort Ord course.

archery season

Archery deer season will be 21 July through 30 July and 8 September through 17 September in the early and late season areas and 21 July through 31 December in the special Los Angeles county archery area. Archery bear season will be the same as the archery deer season. Both deer and bear may be taken by archers during the regular deer and bear seasons. Bag and possession limits would be the same as last year, under the Department of Fish and Game proposals.

davis cupper

New York (AFPS)—A/2C Whitney Reed, who last year won the inter-service tennis championship, has been named to a 12-man Davis Cup preliminary squad by the United States Lawn Tennis Assn.

Reed, a clerk-typist at Norton AFB, Calif., has annexed the AF singles title for the past three years. The 22-year-old airman is ranked 19th nationally.

"Name" players on the squad are Vic Seixas, Art Larsen, Gilbert Shea, Hamilton Richardson and Herbert Flam. The USLTA renamed Bill Talbert as captain of the Davis Cup team.

Torero Nine Edges Two Service Foes

The Presidio baseball squad returned Wednesday from a ten-day road trip through Southern California boasting a two-two record and with a great deal of valuable experience under their belts.

The Toreros defeated the Castle Air Force Base team, 9 to 6 and the San Diego Naval Station club, 9 to 3.

Two local losses came at the hands of the San Diego Naval Air Station, four to three, in the local's first night game of the year, the first to be played on the Naval Air Station's new field.

The remaining loss came at the hands of the Camp Pendleton Marines, two to one.

Outstanding hurler on the trip was pitcher George Hanes, 441st AAA, who tossed a six hitter at the Marines.

Outfielder Harry Williams sparked the PSF in the Naval Air game when he homered with two aboard to account for all the Presidio runs.

Coach Hal Fischer stated however "that after one month of training, there is still room for more good ball players as all positions are still wide open. Any interested personnel on the Presidio or its sub-posts are urged to contact the Post Sports Office in building 122 or call Ext. 3968.

On Monday the Toreros travel to Petaluma to engage the Yakima Club of the pro Far Western League. On Tuesday afternoon the San Francisco State College nine invades the Fort Scott diamond for what shapes up as a real thriller.

flood loss

Four major hatcheries operated by the Department of Fish and Game were damaged during the December floods and the loss of trout may run over a million fish. The most severely damaged was the Cedar Creek Experimental Station in Mendocino County and the nearby Snow Mountain egg-taking station where more than 170,000 yearling steelhead trout were lost when rearing ponds were flooded.

Star Presidian Staff Writer

The "captain" wore Pinks and Greens, all right, but his blouse was an unauthorized Eisenhower jacket and his Military Police brassard hung loosely around his elbow.

The lieutenant who inspected him shook his head slowly and said, "No, that won't do, sir."

Tugging at his own jacket, the lieutenant said, "This, sir, is the correct and regulation blouse for officers."

The "captain" looked around for help, but the men clustered around the pair murmured agreement with the lieutenant. "You'll have to accompany me to the Provost Marshal's Office, sir, and get into the proper uniform," ordered the lieutenant.

Shrugging, the "captain" climbed into a jeep and departed with the lieutenant. They returned minutes later, the "captain" properly uniformed as an MP Duty Officer, with regulation blouse and brass, Sam Browne belt and sidearm, and 505th Military Police Battalion crests on his shoulders.

Thus the "captain" was ready to assume his role in the CBS television show, The Lineup, which was filmed on the Presidio one bright, sunny day early this week.

The "captain," actually TV actor Alan Ross, then stepped before the cameras, clad in the blouse of Captain Robert E. Kruger, chief of the 60th MP (CI) Investigation and Apprehension section, and wearing the crests and brafs of First Lieutenant Leslie Davison, PMO operations officer and technical advisor to the video crew.

Lieutenant Davison looked on approvingly as "Captain" Ross listened to the director's instructions along with the stars of the show, Warner Anderson and Tom Tully.

The Lineup crew, headed by Producer Jaime del Valle and Production Manager James A. Paisley, spent an entire day on post filming a cops and robbers sequence, complete with MPs wailing sirens and blinking red lights.

Their visit was arranged by Major Helen Hart and Pfc. Joseph Stabile of the Sixth Army Public Information Office and coordinated through the Provost Marshal through Lieutenant Davison and his top non-com, Sergeant First Class Jerasinas Scourtis.

The Provost Marshal, Lieutenant Colonel Fred C. Smith, arranged for the TV crew to have three Military Policemen on hand to direct traffic, convoy the video caravan and—get in front of the cameras as not at all self-conscious actors.

Company A of the 505th provided three Pfc.—Lowell Wilk, Robert McDaniel and Robert Brune—for the film company, while Lombard Gate guard Pfc. Don Barton of Company B also got into the act.

The TV crew shot the climax of the chase sequence first. Actor Tony Cort, playing the badman role, tooled his red convertible along a dirt road overlooking Fort Point and attempted to scramble over a wire fence under the Golden Gate Bridge.

But the good guys won out, as Anderson and Tully coming up in hot pursuit in a San Francisco Police sedan and followed by Ross and McDaniel in an MP jeep, nabbed Cort in a dramatic scuffle on the fence. Brune and Wilk added to the mob scene by dashing up hill and down and putting the clamps on the hapless Cort.

The MPs then escorted the company to the Lombard Gate where Cort, attempting to escape the clutches of the SFPD zooms on post, while Gate Guard Barton waves vainly for him to halt and then rushes to the phone to notify the Provost Marshal.

From there the television crew repaired to Fort Point for an abandoned car bit and were gratified when a two-masted sailing boat beat her way out the Golden Gate as a loaded oil tanker passed in. This, said crewmen, would add considerable background flavor to the scene.

Like troops in the field, the company was visibly cheered when the chow truck arrived. And the meal turned out to be the most novel the participating soldiers enjoyed in the field.

For lunch, the catering service, which follows the crew with hot coffee and snacks during the day, supplied chicken caccitore with mushrooms, French pastry—and linen napkins.

Once the picnic was completed, the filming of the chase sequence was resumed, with shots taken at Fort Point Road and Lincoln Boulevard, the 505th MP motor pool, where railbirds viewing the shooting formed a "lineup" of their own, along the bridge ramp and in front of the Provost Marshal's office.

Throughout the shooting, curious troops and civilian personnel stopped to watch, while del Valle, close-cropped and bushy-browed, sat in a cream colored Cadillac convertible and viewed the proceeding from afar, chin resting on fist in an evidently characteristic pose.

Although the shooting consumed a full eight-hour day, the Presidio scenes will, in all probability, not be seen by TV viewers for more than five minutes.

And, if you happened to be one of the many watching the crew in action, don't hold your breath waiting for the program to be shown—they were shooting for next Fall's pictures.

Developed by a team of Columbia University biochemists, an antidote for nerve gas has been discovered which may prove useful in treating muscular nerve diseases. It may also act as an antidote for insecticide poisoning. The new chemical is called 2-pyridine aldoxime methiodide or 2-PAM.

Tough Competition!

Signal Corps Officer Wins Top Electronic Contest Honors

A 38-year-old lieutenant colonel who plans to retire this year after 20 years' service in the Army Signal Corps and old Air Force has won a first place prize in a contest for electronic engineers.

Lieutenant Colonel Charles J. Schauers of the Communications Engineering Division, Sixth Army Signal Section, won top honors in the contest, sponsored by a leading electronics corporation.

The colonel submitted three entries in the competition, designed to stimulate thinking among electronic engineers along new research and development channels. Details of the colonel's winning entries were not disclosed, he said.

However, Colonel Schauers said his entries were based on medical-electronic lines and a new system of communication.

The colonel, who enlisted in the Army in 1935 after running his own radio shop while in high school, has a varied background in his field. He has attended Army, Air Force and Navy schools for electronics, radio, communications, etc.

He was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Signal Corps in the first OCS class at Fort Monmouth, N. J., and later commanded a radio intelligence company in Europe during World War II.

In 1943 he won a similar contest for design of sonically controlled anti-aircraft rockets.

Currently Colonel Schauers is working on several other papers and ideas in his field. He maintains his own radio laboratory at his residence in San Francisco for electronic studies and private research. He also runs his own amateur radio station and spends other time in television work with station KQED-TV.

The colonel has been assigned to Sixth Army Signal Section since 1954 following return from Korea where he was chief signal officer of the Republic of Korea Army.

Colonel Schauers is a member of the Institute of Radio Engineers and some of its professional groups, as well as the Armed Forces Communications and Electronics Association.

Lt. Col. Schauers

sociation. He is also known for his work in connection with the Military Affiliate Radio System (MARS).

Many of his articles have been printed on aviation radio in technical magazines.

more realistic time-in-grade criterion." But promotions will not be awarded automatically on length of service.

To qualify, E-2's must also be considered in "appointable status" as defined by paragraph 6, AR 624-200, and be deemed qualified by their commanders.

At the request of the Department of the Army, the Sixth Army Adjutant General Section wired Washington this week, submitting a report on the number of E-2's under Sixth Army Command with 14 to 17 months' time in service.

Future criteria for promotion eligibility may vary from month to month in terms of length of service necessary to qualify.

The Star Presidian

Vol. 4, No. 44

PRESIDIO OF SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA

Friday 13 April, 1956

Early Out Rules Are Firmed

Armed Forces Day publicity planning was the topic at an informal meeting in the Sixth Army Information section, this week. Colonel Arthur C. Timboe, chief of information, Sixth Army, points out area of coverage and discusses best methods of external releases with members of publicity committee. Shown l. to r. are Major Walter C. Carppi, assistant post IG and newly appointed project officer for the Presidio; R. A. Ireland, Sixth Army and Post chief of the news section; Colonel Timboe; Capt. Burton Mason, former project officer; Pfc. Walter Heil, "Star Presidian" representative, and M/Sgt. Merrill S. Harrison, who will handle all local press releases for the information section.

Program Shaping Up!

AF Day Plans Accelerated; Name New Project Officer

Plans for Presidio of San Francisco's Armed Forces Day celebration were stepped up this week with the appointment of Major Walter L. Carppi of the Post Inspector General section as project officer.

Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, assigned Major Carppi to handle the Presidio activities in place of Captain Burton Mason, who has been assigned TDY to Fort Huachuca, Arizona.

Captain Mason turned over to the major all plans and statements early this week.

Two suspense dates, the Major pointed out, have yet to be filled. The first is scheduled for Monday, 16 April, when units are required to submit histories, color, facts, etc., to the Star Presidian in connection with its special Armed Forces Day issue.

The other suspense date, Monday, 30 April, call for units participating and supporting AF Day to submit to Major Carppi complete and final plans on displays and activities scheduled.

The first suspense date—calling for tentative plans—brought forth 18 replies. The major requested units who have not yet submitted plans to forward them at the earliest possible date.

All plans should be submitted to Major Carppi's office in Building 238. He is available for telephone calls at extension 4443 in Building 238, or in the Post IG office, Post Headquarters, extension 4345.

This year's Armed Forces Day is scheduled for Saturday, 19 May. It will carry the theme "Power for Peace."

new tags set

The Provost Marshal's Office will begin distribution of the new post automobile tags next week, it was announced yesterday.

Presidio personnel with last name initials A through F must obtain their tags Monday, 16 April, through Saturday, 21 April.

Those personnel with initials G through N must obtain stickers Monday, 23 April, through Saturday, 28 April.

Persons with initials O through Z are required to call for their tags Monday, 30 April, through Saturday, 5 May.

Tags are required of all personnel, military and civilian, on post. The stickers can be purchased—for 50 cents—in Building 106.

DA Okays Cabin Class For EMs, Families Shipping Overseas

Department of the Army this week announced a new plan for enlisted men shipping overseas.

The plan, contained in DA message 403446, provides that EM traveling overseas with their families at government expense will go cabin class and not troop class. The policy is scheduled to begin 1 July 1956, it was declared.

Servicemen Should Keep All Storage Form Correct, Says Army

Washington (AFPS)—The Army has reminded servicemen having household goods stored in military depots of their responsibility to submit DD Form 638 upon a change of status or assignment.

Filing this form is important, the Army said, because it assures personnel maximum storage time authorized by joint travel regulations.

It should be submitted by those retiring; returning from overseas assignment; assigned to a service school, and separated or discharged for physical disability.

New System Will Allow Civilians Overseas Duty

Through a new world-wide "interchange system," career civilian employees of the Army will be allowed for the first time in Civil Service history to compete for some 12,000 overseas positions.

Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker said this week that the policy is the result of a recent Civil Service Commission decision "to bring the Army's approximately 12,000 civilian positions in overseas areas into the normal federal competitive Civil Service system."

The Army plans, according to Secretary Brucker, to staff its positions in foreign countries with volunteers from career Civil Service ranks. Outside recruiting for foreign posts will be limited to vacancies which cannot be filled by career Civil servants.

The interchange system will also allow the Army to retain many highly skilled civilians employed

Month Early For All July Draftees

Draftees, normally scheduled for discharge in July, 1956, will be released in June with 23 months of service, according to Sixth Army Headquarters.

Procedure for processing the "early outs" will be left to the discretion of local units.

According to Post Transfer Point, qualifying inductees will be taken in order of ETS date. For example, the "US" whose normal ETS falls on 15 July will be released on or about 15 June. Those scheduled for 16 July will be discharged 16 June and so forth.

None of those eligible for early release will be discharged later than 29 June. Inductees whose ETS falls on 29, 30 or 31 July will be released by 29 June.

The plan, according to Post T&P, is designed to facilitate the processing system.

The policy will apply automatically to all draftees whose normal ETS fall some time in July, except those who for any reason prefer to remain in service a full 24 months.

Only those slated for release in July will be affected.

Promotions For 15-Month EMs Okayed

Automatic promotions to Pfc. will be awarded this month to Privates E-2 with 15 months' active service as of 1 April, according to TAG Message 19251, announced this week by Sixth Army Headquarters.

The single stripes will be presented without regard to command vacancies or allocations. In all cases, a recommendation from the immediate commanding officer will be necessary, however.

The newly announced promotions are part of a Department of the Army policy designed to "equalize promotion opportunities." Last month 401 E-2's in the Sixth Army Command with 18 months' time in service received their first stripes under the new policy.

Results of a survey completed this month by the Sixth Army Adjutant General Section, show there are some 846 E-2's in the Sixth Army Command who have from 14 to 17 months' time in service.

According to the Department of the Army, the new promotion plan will "permit establishment of a more realistic time-in-grade criterion."

Future criteria for promotions eligibility will probably vary from month to month in terms of length of service necessary to qualify.

Visiting his old command this week was Continental Army Commander General Willard G. Wyman. Full military honors were accorded the former Sixth Army Commander as he made his first official visit since assuming his new post on 1 March. On hand to greet General Wyman was Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commander.

Reserve Association Will Honor General Burbach In Afternoon Reception

Members of the San Francisco Bay Area Reserve Officers Association will honor Brigadier General Claude F. Burbach, Chief, California Military District, at a reception at the Presidio of San Francisco Officers' Open Mess this evening.

General Burbach, who has been in his present post since January, 1955, is directly responsible for administration of the Army Reserve program in California and is being honored by the group for his outstanding support of its activities.

Operation Recreation

We hope that when you opened this issue of the Star Presidian and found our recreation of the earthquake edition of the "fifty-year-old Presidial Clarion" that just for a moment you experienced the sensation of looking over Time's shoulder into the past.

That for a few minutes longer you were impressed with the editorial accomplishment of obtaining and including these apparently authentic collector's items as a timely addition to your weekly newspaper.

In other words, we hope that months of diligent research, ingenuity in preparation and originality in presentation were repaid in terms of its impact on you.

Emanuel Kant has said that all ideas are universal. Our experience with this special edition bears out this philosophical truism. For, despite national magazine and local newspaper play, our idea for a special edition commemorating the fiftieth anniversary of the San Francisco earthquake was conceived months before we were aware of an other such intentions.

Of course, we have managed to retain a certain uniqueness because of the purely military flavor. And we are confident that the detailed research of our expert editor-historians, Pvt. Sanders F. Rosenblum, MA Wayne University and Sp3 William H. Cohn, MA Ohio State University, have revealed and documented many forgotten or little known facts.

Every effort has been made to recreate as authentically as possible an Army weekly newspaper of the earthquake era. Writing, type, makeup and headline styles are all those of a bygone day.

To fail to mention a few of the many people whose cooperation made this edition possible would be remiss. We should like to thank everyone who aided us in any way on this project and especially: Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, whose interest and encouragement has brought about an outstanding revival in research and presentation of Presidio history; Major Earle K. Stewart, post T. I. & E. officer, for his professional advice and scholarly encouragement; San Francisco Public Library, California Historical Society and the Bancroft Library at the University of California for use of pictures and research materials, and Mr. George Goldfine of the Sixth Army Library and Library Depot.

Finally, you, our readers whose constant personal interest and encouragement keeps us happily on our editorial toes. We hope you enjoy this special effort. (kse)

The right to vote—like all other rights guaranteed by the Constitution—also implies a duty.

Basically, we service men are in uniform to protect our democratic way of life against communist encroachment. With so many nations of the world now under totalitarian rule, it follows that we should have our voting rights more deeply impressed in our minds than ever before.

Free governments will continue to be free only so long as citizens exercise their right and duty to vote.

The right to choose between candidates for a public office is a precious thing. The communists—like the fascists before them—know this. Almost immediately upon obtaining control of a country, they choke off this most direct expression of the people's will. The one-party ballot becomes the order of the day.

Simply marking a ballot, however, does not complete our obligation. We must endeavor to vote intelligently. To do this, we must try to be as informed as possible about election issues.

Keep in touch with national and community affairs. Read the newspapers—your home town paper also, if possible—and listen to news broadcasts over radio and TV.

Only by casting an informed vote can you exercise your right and duty completely. (AFPS)

Squirrely? You Should Be!

THERE just isn't anything smarter than a squirrel—and not only as a possible candidate for Aunt Minnie's fur jacket! Some folks think owls are as wise as they come—but Squirrels have got 'em beat, paws down.

And here's the reason, right in a nutshell. Instead of just staring at a problem, your friend Sammy squirrel goes right out and tackles it. That's why he's so doggone busy, all summer long, storing up his food for that cold, snowy winter day he KNOWS is coming . . .

Anybody can be as smart as a squirrel by always being prepared for whatever happens—and the BEST way to do that is to sign up for the Payroll Savings Plan right now, and stick with it, every payday. Buy Bonds. Hold Bonds for the big things in your life.

JAG Section's Role!

Information Topic Stresses Soldier's Legal Assistance

Because the Army considers the soldier's legal rights to be as important as his health, the Judge Advocate General Section is charged with providing servicemen with assistance in questions of the law.

"Legal Aid for the Serviceman," next week's troop information topic, will deal with the legal facilities available to the soldier on the Presidio.

The Post J-A office (Building 201) is broken down into three main divisions: military justice, military assistance and legal assistance. It is the job of the Post legal assistance advisors to assist the soldier or his dependents in personal legal questions.

Among the problems with which the Legal Assistance office deals are simple wills, powers of attorney, tax returns, divorce and separation.

In many cases, the Legal Assistance office can save the serviceman from considerable difficulty, time and expense—particularly when consulted in time.

For instance, a serviceman who buys an automobile downtown will most likely have to enter into a conditional sales contract. The contract is usually weighted in the salesman's favor, often to the disadvantage of the customer. The Legal Assistance advisors may often offer counsel in such cases, saving the serviceman from what can be financial catastrophe.

Again in the case of leases, the serviceman must be wary. Suddenly assigned to another post, the serviceman may discover that he owes his landlord one or two months' rent for failing to give sufficient notice. A trip to the Legal Assistance office before signing a lease or contract may save a great deal of trouble.

In cases where the Army's legal assistance facilities are limited, the advisor may refer the serviceman to a reliable member of the civilian bar.

The information topic concludes, "It is no exaggeration to say that many thousands of dollars might be saved by servicemen if they seek the advice of their legal assistance officer before signing a contract or lease."

"But to derive any benefit from the legal assistance officers, the individual must bring his problems to their attention before it is too late for assistance."

Toreros Win First Diamond Clash

INTRAMURAL champions for the third straight time were the Machine Records Unit who clinched the Presidio volleyball crown last week by blasting the 21st engineers. Shown receiving the gold trophy is Major Bob Jones (center) playing coach for the MRU from Colonel Carl

E. Lundquist, deputy post commander. Looking on (left) is Pfc. Matt Schmutz, number one spiker on the championship squad. It was the third title in a row for the record men as they previously had won last fall's volleyball crown followed by the winter basketball title.

Baseball

Ellenberger Homers As PSF Edges City College

Under Thursday's clear blue skies and to the music of the Sixth Army Band, Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, threw out the first pitch and the local Toreros won their first home game of the 1956 baseball season 2 to 1 from City College of San Francisco.

Presidio curveball artist Roger Collins went the nine-inning route for the Post scattering three hits, walking two and striking out ten City College batters to gain credit for the victory.

The Toreros got off to a fast start in the bottom of the first frame when infielder Norm Ellenberger caught hold of a low fast ball and drove it over the left field fence for a round tripper and the first Presidio tally.

The Toreros scored again in the third when Dick Shannon walked, went to second on centerfielder Harry Williams' single, and came on home when Al Casino slapped a sharp single to left center.

The City College nine scored their lone run in the top of the fifth on a walk and two errors in succession.

batter-up

The final Golden Gate Little League tryouts will be conducted tomorrow at 0900 on the softball field behind the main PX. All boys of Little League age who are not already members of a major team must attend the tryouts in order to be eligible for the 1956 season. Parents are requested to accompany boys to the workouts and to bring birth certificates to verify age.

Post Enters Fort Ord Tournament

The Presidio volleyball team under the direction of coach Major Bob Jones leaves Sunday for Fort Ord and the central division playoffs. If successful at Ord the locals will journey to the All-Sixth Army Tournament at Fort Lewis, 30 April through 4 May.

The Sixth Army champion will then enter the United States Nationals, 9-12 May at Seattle, Washington.

The Post team captured the Sixth Army crown as well as the All-Army title last year for the first All-Army title ever won by a Presidio athletic team.

Besides Major Jones, players making the Fort Ord trip are Bob Moran, Bob Noel, Jess Gonzales, Harry Matthews, Frank McDonnell, and Matt Schmutz.

At Fort Ord

Moreno Fights To Draw In Olympic Fund Boxing

Presidio Featherweight Sammy Moreno saved the Post from being shutout in last week's Special Olympic boxing card at Fort Ord, when he fought Phil Uribe to a draw in the feature bout of the evening before a capacity house in the Ord sports arena.

Moreno, displaying fast footwork, gave the Ord champ a boxing lesson in the first round as he continually scored with a stabbing left hand.

Uribe rallied in the second and third rounds with short left and right hand uppercuts. Late in the round Uribe caught Moreno with a solid left to the head for the best punch of the round.

Moreno came back strong in the fourth and final round, beating Uribe to the punch and raining a series of lefts and rights to Uribe's head and body.

The judging went 77-77, 80-79 in favor of Uribe and 79-78 in favor of Moreno.

Moreno was last year's Sixth Army featherweight champion and Uribe held the USAREUR bantamweight championship in 1954.

Presidio middleweight Sol Stonerod, making his first start of the season, was dropped for a nine count early in the second stanza, at which point the fight was stopped and Ord middleweight Ervin Trammel emerged with a TKO victory.

The remaining Presidio hopeful, heavyweight Ken Johnson, lost a close decision to Pasqual Arriola of Fort Ord in the four-round finale.

Over 300 hundred dollars was gathered and given to the United States Olympic Fund from the capacity crowd of over six hundred fans.

trapping beaver

Trapping regulations for beaver will be the same as last year except that trapping will be allowed without restriction in Del Norte, Humboldt, Siskiyou, Modoc, Lassen, Shasta, Trinity, Tehama, Inyo and Mono counties from 16 November through 28 February, 1957.

PSF Fencers Enter E. Bay Sword Clash

Following a week of concentrated practice the Presidio-Letterman Army Hospital fencing team will cross blades in the Northern California Epee Team Championships tomorrow night at the Berkeley Fencer's Club at 2000 hours.

The locals will enter two teams in the gruelling blade competition with the first squad being made up of Laurance Brownlee, Herb Rhodes and George Kester. The second team is composed of Jose Tafoya, Leo Thompson and Severo Pasol.

Army Star Sets National Pistol Mark

Ft. Sam Houston, Tex. (AFPS) —An army lieutenant, who is a candidate for the U.S. modern pentathlon team here, set three national pistol records and tied one in the Austin, Tex., spring pistol championships.

First Lt. David Miller shattered the military and national open records in the grand aggregate consisting of the .22-cal. centerfire and .45 cal. competition.

He eclipsed his own military record of 2,598 and the national open mark of 2,618 over the National Rifle Assn. short course by firing a 2,620 out of a possible 2,700 points. The previous record-holder was Joe White of the U.S. Border Patrol.

Lt. Miller tied the national open record of 870 with the .45-cal. pistol and also bettered his own military record of 864. He became the 16th pistolman in the world to break 2,600 in the grand aggregate.

Pony League Tryouts Begin Tomorrow

P-O-N-Y League activities will begin at the Presidio tomorrow afternoon, 14 April, with the tryouts of all 13- and 14-year-old boys interested in playing league baseball. The tryouts will start at 1400 hours and will be supervised by parents of boys who have expressed an interest in P-O-N-Y League baseball.

The P-O-N-Y League movement at the Presidio got started in the wake of the tremendous success of the Little League activities of last season. It provides a program of baseball for the age group between Little League and scholastic baseball programs.

According to league regulations, each league must have at least four teams before it can be franchised by National Headquarters. If not enough 13- and 14-year-old players are available this year, an unfranchised league will be formed, and the age will be extended to include boys of age 15 years, provided their 15th birthday falls on or after 1 January, 1956.

Heading the initial efforts of the P-O-N-Y League this year will be Lt. Herb Youngdahl of 6002 SU as player agent, and the four team managers, Lt. Col. Earl Pegram of 6th Army AG Section, Capt. Francis Hoskins of the 505th MPs, M/Sgt. Elbert Ford of the 6002 SU, and Lt. Stanley Seiderman of Letterman Army Hospital.

The name P-O-N-Y League is derived from the first letters of its slogan, "Protect Our Nation's Youth." Scheduled play is expected to start about 1 June.

The local managing personnel wish to point out that every eligible boy who comes to the tryouts on the 14th and 21st of April will play with one of the teams to be formed. For further information call Chaplain Harms at SK 1-5914.

Full scale training for Olympic modern pentathlon candidates will begin at Ft. Sam Houston about 18 June under coach Nicholas Toth.

PSF Golfers Schedule 7 Divot Matches

The Presidio Sports Office released a list of seven golf matches this week for the local divot men both at home and away. Following the completion of the team matches the local "Ben Hogans" will enter a Presidio tournament prior to the Bay Area Armed Forces tourney and the official Sixth Army matches which will be held at Fort Ord from 30 July to 4 August.

Masonites Extend Lead In National Keg League

The league-leading Masonites paced by Vida's 214/587 roll edged past the second-place Hilltoppers three to one to highlight this week's action in the National Bowling League. Stewart led the men from the hill with a sizzling 236/596 score.

The Masonites shot into the league lead the first day of official play and have held the advantage ever since, currently leading the pack by nine full games, in the keg loop.

The third place Keystone Kops stayed on the winning path by defeating the fourth place Hooks three to one. Johnson lead the winners with a 190/515 mark while DeAguiro topped the losers with a 181/507 score.

Baker Company, 505th MP's, behind Dealey's 189/529 roll smashed out a 4 to 0 win from the King Pins. Duncanson with a 182/485 score was high man for the pins.

The remaining match in the National loop featured a two all deadlock between the Headquarters Company, Sixth Army, and the Missileer's number two team. Sakurada paced the Headquarters squad with a good 210/556 mark and Downing was top man for the Missile men with a very good 220/547 roll.

Shortest player in the American League is Ernie Oravetz, the Washington outfielder who stands only 5 feet 4 inches.

New 6002 Company CO Has Colorful Combat Record

By SP3 Hugh Dempsey
Star Presidian Staff Writer

"I never thought I would see the day when I would command the same outfit that I reported to after joining the Army," said Captain Charles J. Monges, who now commands Headquarters Company, 6002 SU.

For this stockily built officer, this event is only one in a series that reads like the tales of Sergeant York.

However, his military career did not have its beginnings in the Army, but in the United States Marine Corps.

In 1940, Captain, then Private, Monges, joined the Leathernecks at Fresno, California. Following a short stay in the states, he shipped out for Samoa, joining the 7th Defense Battalion, where he remained until 1943.

Shortly after returning to the U.S., he was once again on overseas orders, this time for Hawaii, for duty with the 2nd Marine Division. No sooner had he arrived with his new outfit when orders were received for the invasion of Saipan, then a veritable Japanese bastion.

Making the initial landing on this jungle fortress, he, along with his platoon, found themselves in a position which almost proved fatal for his entire group.

"We were on a combat patrol, when we walked into a perfectly set up ambush. The Japanese let my entire platoon get into a pocket, then they let go with three well placed machine guns. My men started falling like cut wheat, and when the Japs started heaving grenades at us, I got it in the arm and leg. Then what was left of us tried to put those guns out of commission before they killed all of us," he said.

What Captain, then Sergeant, Monges didn't say was that during this encounter, he, although wounded, took a Browning automatic rifle from a Browning gunner, and personally assaulted one of the enemy machine gun nests, spraying it with the BAR until it was silenced.

Then, turning on the other two machine gun positions, he heaved grenade after grenade into their nests until they were immobilized. For this valorous action, which saved many of his men, he was awarded the Navy Cross, ranked next to the Congressional Medal of Honor.

Following other island campaigns, Monges returned to the United States and served at various Marine stations throughout the country.

In 1948, following discharge from the Marine Corps, Monges joined the Army, enlisting as a sergeant. Later, he spent a year instructing an ROTC unit at Saint Ignatius High School in San Francisco. While serving with the cadets, he received a direct commission as Second Lieutenant.

After receiving his commission, Monges served with various units throughout the states, and in 1952 he received his jump wings from the Airborne School at Fort Benning, Georgia.

During the latter part of this same year, the then Lieutenant Monges reported to the 40th Division in Korea where he took command of a line infantry company. While serving with this unit, an occasion arose where Monges once again literally put his life on the line to save other GIs.

An ammunition dump located in a valley near Monges' unit was packed with all types of high explosive shells. Early one morning, an ammunition truck backed up to unload its cargo when a grenade fell from the truck and exploded, setting off a chain reaction, which rocked the entire area for six hours.

Following the initial blasts, Captain Monges raced to the scene and started carrying wounded GIs away from the danger area, even though at any time flying steel fragments might have killed him. Time after time he returned to bring stricken men out and administer to their wounds. For his action he was awarded the Soldier's Medal.

Remaining on line in Korea for almost a year, Captain Monges, who had earlier received a battlefield promotion, rotated to the states.

His first assignment after returning was with the 82nd Airborne, serving with the G-3 section and later as company commander.

When Captain Monges left the Airborne unit in February, orders slated him for the Presidio, and duty as CO of his present unit, Headquarters Company, 6002 SU.

Going for Thirty is Master Sergeant Emerald H. Taylor (left) shown re-enlisting for another hitch. Swearing in the sergeant is his commanding officer, Colonel Dallas F. Haynes of the 30th AAA Group. The colonel swore in Sergeant Taylor, who has 17 years' service, at the post he originally enlisted in 1939—Fort Baker. Sergeant Taylor plans to remain in the Army until he completes 30 years.

New Policy!

1-Year Volunteers Will Not Face 45-Day Recall

Soldiers who volunteer for one year in the ready reserve upon separation will no longer be subject to the 45-day recall penalty for unsatisfactory participation, according to the Army.

The new policy affects men who take advantage of the provision of the Reserve Forces Act of 1955 which permits separatees to reduce their eight-year service obligation by enlisting and training with a unit of the ready reserve for 12 months, then requesting transfer to the standby reserve.

Previously, those volunteering for this program could be recalled to active duty for 45 days as penalty under the act. Now, men failing to participate satisfactorily will be transferred immediately to an army reserve control group.

These reservists will not be given another opportunity to cut their obligation by taking part in the one-year program, the Army said. However, they may again join a ready reserve unit and train with it until eligible for transfer to the standby reserve under existing regulations.

Six Scouts Will Win Grade Awards At Court Of Honor This Evening

Six boys from the Presidio will be presented with their grade awards at a Scout Court of Honor for members of Troop 77, PSF, Friday evening at 1900 hours.

The ceremonies are slated to take place in Scout Hall, Building 815, McArthur Street. Among the 27 Scouts attending the Honor Court will be Bob Eddy, who is to receive his 1st class award; Thomas Sparks, Bill Kellman, John Vekich, Ricky Stone and Arnold Zost, who will be awarded their 2nd class awards.

Parents, family members and friends of the Presidio Boy Scouts are cordially invited to attend the Court of Honor on Friday evening.

Five hundred new Wherry Housing units will spring up at the booming Army electronic proving ground at Fort Huachuca, Arizona, it was announced this week.

Major General Emil Lenzner, making the announcement, said work on the units will begin this week. The project is part of a 15-million dollar building program for the AEPG.

Moves Up!

Scanlon Replaces McConaha As Civilian Personnel Chief

Leslie F. Scanlon, a native son and graduate of the University of San Francisco, has been named chief civilian personnel officer for the Presidio, it was announced yesterday.

Scanlon, who has 20 years of Federal service behind him, replaces Jack N. McConaha, 15-year veteran of the Presidio civilian personnel office who left recently for the Ordnance Corps Army Ballistic Missiles Agency, Red Stone Arsenal, Alabama.

McConaha's new job will be chief of the employee utilization division at the Huntsville, Alabama, station.

He leaves with the latest of many letters of commendation in his jacket. Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, presented the outgoing CPO with a letter of appreciation and commendation recently in an informal ceremony witnessed by Scanlon and Lieutenant Colonel Archie Traynor, post S-1.

McConaha first came to the Presidio in 1941 and went to work in the Signal section. He is a graduate of the University of Illinois, attended Hastings College of Law here for a year and a public relations course at Stanford University.

In the Army from 1943-46, McConaha remained at the Presidio as personnel officer of civilian personnel division.

He was awarded the Department of the Army commendation for meritorious civilian service in 1947 for outstanding performance of duty. General Mark W. Clark, then commander of the Sixth Army, made the presentation.

McConaha has attended the DA civilian personnel officers' school and the school of civilian personnel administration in Washington, D. C.

Jack N. McConaha

He is married and has a daughter, Jacqueline, 5. The family lived in Mill Valley before his assignment to Alabama.

Scanlon, who in addition to studies at USF, did graduate work at San Francisco State College.

Following separation from the Army as a major, Scanlon came to the Presidio in 1948.

He has been chief of the salary and wage branch and assistant personnel officer since 1950.

Chaplains Will Celebrate 31st Birthday

The 31st anniversary of the Military Chaplains Association of the United States will be celebrated at a Founders' Day banquet and program at the Presidio of San Francisco Officers' Open Mess on Thursday evening, 19 April.

Principal speaker for the event, which is scheduled to start at 7 p.m., will be the Reverend Dr. Russell T. Loesch of New York City, minister to chaplains and armed forces personnel of the Congregational-Christian Churches of America. Chaplain (Colonel) John T. Kilcoyne, Sixth Army Chaplain, will also address the group on the subject "Gentlemen, We're Clergymen."

Presentation of awards to military and civilian personnel who have made outstanding contributions to the work of the spiritual ministry of armed services personnel will be made by Chaplain (Captain) G. L. Markle, Chaplain of the 12th Naval District.

Program chairman for the evening is Chaplain (Major) Norris T. Morton of Hamilton Air Force Base. Chaplain (Captain) Deane F. Babbitt of the Sixth Army Chaplain's Section is president, and Chaplain (Major) James R. Woodruff of Travis Air Force Base is secretary-treasurer of the Golden Gate Chapter of the Association, sponsors of the event.

AFD Program Taking Shape Army Warned Not To Buy Greens Early

With final plans for Presidio of San Francisco's Armed Forces Day celebration due in ten days, it appeared today the post will be in line for the "best ever" commemoration of the annual event.

Major Walter L. Carppi, San Francisco sub-area project officer who was appointed last week by Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, announced these developments:

1—A three-battalion Retreat Parade at 1600 hours on Saturday, 19 May.

2—Public inspection of a NIKE site at Fort Scott, with transportation supplied by shuttle buses.

3—Army and Coast Guard helicopter pickup of personnel simulating wounds.

4—A judo demonstration by the 505th Military Police, modeling of latest Army uniforms, Coast Guard and Navy bands, Navy drill team and an invitation to the public to join troops in the mess halls for lunch.

Major Carppi said he expects Presidio units to furnish two of the three battalions scheduled to march in the Retreat Parade.

The third battalion will be made up of Air Force, Navy and Marine personnel. The parade will climax the annual celebration scheduled for 19 May and, as in previous years, carry the theme, "Power for Peace."

The public will be invited to visit the NIKE sites throughout the day. Post transportation will provide shuttle buses to carry persons wishing to view the battery.

Weather permitting, both Army and Coast Guard helicopters will demonstrate how wounded or injured personnel are picked up from the ground and carried to safety.

Major Carppi will hold a meeting of all personnel involved in the project today and hammer out a schedule of events.

He also pointed out that submission of final plans for the celebration are due Monday, 30 April. Participating and supporting units should have ready at that time complete and itemized plans.

Plans should be submitted to the Major's office in Building 238. Phone contact can be made with the project officer or his staff by calling extension 4443.

Meanwhile, Kenneth S. Erwin, editor of "The Star Presidian," urged units who have not yet done so to forward organization histories, background, color, mission and function on post as soon as possible.

The material will be used in the Star Presidian's special Armed Forces Day edition, which will be distributed to the Presidio's military and civilian personnel and to visitors coming here to view the activities and displays.

Department of the Army cautioned military personnel against jumping the gun in their purchase of the new Army green uniform, this week. DA said that numerous instances in which civilian uniform makers were offering non-regulation greens for sale as "official" uniforms had been brought to its attention.

Army green uniforms will not be authorized duty wear until 1 October '57 and for optional wear between 1 October '56 and '57.

DA said that regulations governing the Army green uniform will be published and the uniform itself will be available in QM prior to the date it is first authorized for wear.

All personnel are advised not to contract for purchase of the uniform at this time.

Stresses Need For Rapid Mobility For Atomic Battle

Washington (AFPS)—Rapid mobility for the Army under atomic battlefield conditions demands fixed-wing planes and helicopters, Chief of Staff Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor has declared. In an address before the National Press Club here, Gen. Taylor told newsmen "these vehicles do for us in the air what trucks do for us on the ground."

He said the infantry, artillery, transportation and medical corps all need airborne mobility to accomplish their mission, particularly on the atomic battlefield which "... will be characterized by a great dispersion of units."

Stressing that the Army is not competing with the Air Force, Gen. Taylor said there is considerable misunderstanding about Army aviation and its objectives.

He said the Army must borrow strategic mobility from the Air Force and Navy for long moves but "the kind of mobility we are seeking by our own means is that ... which results from improved organic vehicles, both surface and air."

The four-star general also told the newsmen that the Army's major development effort today is in the missile field. He declared the Nike I can operate effectively against any aircraft now in existence, "regardless of height or speed."

He pointed out that another missile in the ground-to-air family, the Nike B, which is now being developed, anticipates the appearance of even higher performance aircraft.

"I would emphasize that the Nike is not a single weapon, but a family of weapons in which the new evolves naturally from the old," experience gained from the old," he added.

150 Presidio, Subpost EMs Out In June

Approximately 150 soldiers from the Presidio and its subposts whose normal ETS falls during July of this year will be returning to civilian life a month early, according to Sfc. Edward J. Larin, chief clerk, Post Transfer Point.

Processing for these early outs will be left up to the soldier's unit.

Under the new plan laid down by the Department of the Army, inductees whose normal ETS is 15 July will be released on the 15th of June. Another whose ETS is 4 July will be released on 4 June, a one month difference to the day.

Only those slated for normal discharge in July will be affected by this new order.

por change

Enlisted men must now have 12 months remaining in service in order to qualify for overseas assignments, according to a newly announced Department of the Army policy.

Dated 21 March, DA Message 401261 makes the new regulations effective immediately.

Until the policy shift, an enlisted man was considered "POR qualified" if he had only nine months' time in service remaining.

Defense Secretary Asks Closer Control Of Info On All New Weapons

Security regulations on release of information concerning new weapons were tightened this week by Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson. Because, he said, premature release of such information "may constitute a grave security threat," performance and other data on new weapons may not be published until after the first production model is available.

The order pertains to aircraft, missiles and other important items in the defense arsenal, and applies to "all agencies and offices of the Department of Defense," including the services.

The new regulations set up uniform procedures for releasing information on new weapons.

Six-Week Practical

ROTC Cadets Will Complete On-The-Job Training Course

Sixth Army Commander, Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, announced today that 1,400 ROTC cadets from the eight western states, Alaska and Hawaii will be given a six-week advance training course at Ft. Lewis, Washington, this summer.

The course, opening on 23 June and ending on 3 August, will emphasize practical work and field training. Students will have an opportunity to serve in leadership capacities, apply actively the theoretical instructions received in classrooms, and fire many of the Army's weapons under field conditions.

Other Army areas will conduct similar courses and some 15,000 cadets will take part in the over-all training program. The majority of the group will be made up of students who have completed three years of senior ROTC instructions at colleges and universities throughout the U.S. and territories.

The successful completion of the summer training course is a prerequisite for commission as a second lieutenant in the Army Reserve.

Students will receive $78 per month, food, housing, uniforms, medical care and transportation to and from camp.

Civilian institutional heads will be invited to attend one of the training camps at which members of their respective colleges and universities are in training. They will be invited to observe and comment on the summer program.

uniform change

Department of the Army announced this week that "notwithstanding previous orders or regulations" after 1 June white shoes and socks will no longer be authorized for wear with the white dress uniform. They will be replaced with black shoes and socks.

DA went on to say that only such accessories as prescribed by SR 600-32-10 would be worn with the Army blue, blue mess and evening dress uniforms. Accessories were defined as shoes, socks, neckties, gloves, scarfs, jewelry and ornamentalations, or any article of uniform other than the basic coats, trousers, shirts, caps, capes or overcoats.

A printed change will be made in the immediate future.

Meeting the Nike

National Guard AAA Unit Visits Local 30th Group Sites

A ceremony and tour honoring the California National Guard Antiaircraft Defense System was conducted recently at Fort Barry, with Colonel Dallas F. Haynes, commanding officer of the 30th AAA Group and Antiaircraft Defense Commander for the San Francisco Bay Area, acting as host.

Leading the National Guard contingent was Brigadier General James W. Cook, commander of the 112th AAA Brigade. Accompanying the General were 25 of his staff officers from various Guard antiaircraft units.

During the ceremony honoring the California "Minutemen," Colonel Haynes said, "On behalf of the Antiaircraft Command, I should like to commend you leaders of the California National Guard for your outstanding co-operation and participation in the air defense of this area. California units were among the first National Guard antiaircraft troops to take over operations of tactical positions from active Army units. Now there are many such units throughout the United States giving us a formidable antiaircraft defense that would not otherwise be possible."

Following the opening ceremonies, the National Guard officers received a briefing on the tactical operation of a Nike unit and later went on a guided tour of Nike installations at Baker Battery, 9th AAA Missile Bn., Fort Cronkhite.

Presently, National Guard Antiaircraft units located in tactical positions around the San Francisco area are designated "Special Security Force" battalions. These units maintain a high state of training and are ready with men and equipment to meet any emergency that might arise. As part of their training, these battalions function jointly with officers and men of the 30th AAA Group.

New Housing Slated For Ord, 27 Other Military Installations

A Sixth Army installation, Ft. Ord, Calif., has been given approval for 189 of the 10,830 new Capehart Act homes which Department of Defense has authorized for military families at 28 projects in the United States.

The new approvals increase the total number of units authorized since last January to 60,696. The DOD expects to reach its goal of 100,000 dependent quarters authorized under the act by June 30, the end of the 1956 fiscal year.

Presidio, Subpost Troops Will Play Key Role In 'Quake' Fete

Army troops from the Presidio of San Francisco, Fort Mason and Marin County posts who 50 years ago helped save and rehabilitate earthquake and fire-stricken San Francisco will be represented in the Festival of Progress parade this Sunday, by their present-day counterparts from the same installations.

Leading the military division of the parade will be the Fort Mason Band under the direction of CWO Billie G. Cook. Then will come the lines of marching men and women and the displays.

From the Presidio will be Company A of the Station Complement, followed by the Sixth Army color guard, a company of the 505th Military Police Battalion, the 561st Engineer Company (Port Construction) of Fort Baker in Marin County, and a company of the 30th Engineer Group (Topographic Survey) from Fort Scott.

The Sixth Army Pipe Band will be next in line, and will be followed by a special unit from Fort Mason and the Oakland Army Terminal composed of two platoons of men and a platoon of members of the Women's Army Corps.

The now defunct Coast Artillery, whose men of a dozen regiments were stationed in the Bay Area in April, 1906, will be represented by its powerful successor, the Antiaircraft Artillery.

The 30th Antiaircraft Artillery Group's participation in the parade will be in the form of a mobile display which will show weapons of the era of the fire up to the present, including one of the sleek new NIKE guided missiles of the type now mounted in the Bay Area.

Riding in one of the lead cars in the parade will be the Sixth Army commander, Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, named one of the honorary grand marshals, and representing the enlisted personnel of the Army will be Master Sergeant Jack C. Wall, Sr., and WAC Sergeant Colleen Thorpe of Sixth Army Headquarters.

A veteran of 24 years' service, Sergeant Wall served in the Pacific Theater of Operations during World War II as a member of the 670th Tank Destroyer Battalion, and saw action in the Philippines and Okinawa. Now assigned to the Army Recruiting Service in San Francisco, he has a son, Private First Class Jack C. Wall, Jr., who has just completed his training at the Antiaircraft and Guided Missiles School at Fort Bliss, Tex., and is en route to Germany.

Sergeant Thorpe, of Blackfoot, Ida., enlisted in the Army in March, 1951, and since completing her basic training at Fort Lee, Va., has attended a signal school at Camp Gordon, Ga., served at Fort Monmouth, N.J., and spent two years in Japan prior to reporting to the Presidio in August, 1954. She is presently assigned to the Office of the Secretary of the General Staff, Sixth Army Headquarters.

Battle Monuments

Six Cemeteries Set In European Dedication Plan

Washington (AFPS)—Dedication of six new U.S. military cemeteries in Europe will take place this summer, the American Battle Monuments Commission has announced.

Ceremonies are scheduled to take place at Cambridge, England, 16 July; Normandy American Cemetery, Omaha Beach, France, 19 July; Brittany American Cemetery near St. James, France, 20 July; Epinal American Cemetery, France, 23 July; Rhone American Cemetery, Draguignan, France, 26 July; Sicily-Rome American Cemetery near Nattuno-Anzio, Italy, 30 July.

Eight other overseas cemeteries remain to be completed, the commission said.

Thousands of America's WWII dead lay at rest in the cemeteries, which were constructed by the commission.

In each a memorial has been erected which contains a small chapel, an engraved list of those who have no known graves or who were lost or buried at sea, and large maps outlining the achievements of American forces in these regions.

Army Spurs RO Transfers From Top Heavy Branches

Washington (AFPS)—The Army is spurring branch-of-service transfers to meet a personnel problem which may affect the careers of more than 50,000 reserve officers on active duty.

Because of both branch and grade overstrengths, reservists on indefinite tours are being urged to seek new fields in which shortages of officers exist.

According to the Army, there are excess captains in the Adjutant General Corps, Infantry and Military Police Corps.

There also are surplus majors and lieutenant colonels in the Quartermaster and Transportation Corps, while AGC has overages in both lieutenant colonels and colonels, and the QMC has too many colonels.

At the same time, there are "significant shortages" of captains in Artillery, Armor, Signal Corps and Corps of Engineers; majors in Artillery; lieutenant colonels in the Corps of Engineers and Artillery, and lieutenant colonels and colonels in the Signal Corps.

Indefinite-category officers in overstrength branches will find more rewarding assignments and enhance their chances of remaining on active duty beyond

20 years by volunteering for transfer to a branch of service where a shortage exists, the Army said.

Branch transfers, however, will not be automatic, the Army added, since each of the four branches needing officers have specific requirements and criteria.

Applications for voluntary transfer must be made under AR 605-145.

Set New System For Academy Aspirants

A radically new appointment system has been inaugurated by the Department of the Army for those desiring entrance into the military academy at West Point.

Under the new plan, entrance examinations, previously given by the Civil Service, will be administered by a picked group of officers comprising West Point Appointment Boards. These designated boards are to be set up at specified locations throughout the Army.

Major Harold A. Neill, CO, 518 AAA Bn., Fort Barry, has been selected to head the West Point Applicant Board located at the Presidio. Major Neill, a 1943 graduate of West Point, will be assisted by Major Carroll H. Wood, Hq. and Hq. Co., 30th Engr. Gp.; Major Samuel P. Smith, Hq. 46th Ord. Gp.; Captain Eugene Gasior, Co. A 6000 SU, graduate, class of '45, West Point; and Captain Webster Parker, Post Personnel Officer. These five officers will comprise the Applicant board who will test those interested personnel from Presidio units.

Approximately 12 such Applicant Boards are to be set-up throughout the Sixth Army area.

In setting up this new system, the Department of the Army hopes to encourage youthful servicemen to take advantage of a West Point education and later commission in the Regular Army or Air Force. With the inauguration of this new testing, the heretofore tightness in selection on a competitive basis has been somewhat relaxed.

The tests will still be of a competitive nature, but with the new program, the Army hopes to be able to admit more young Americans to the Point.

Presidio soldiers desiring to make application may do so through their own units. However, there are certain necessary prerequisites that each hopeful should keep in mind. These are: the applicant must have reached his 17th but not his 22nd birthday by 1 July, 1957, and no age waiver will be granted. He must be a citizen of the United States. Applicant must be single with no record of a marriage ceremony.

He must also have at least a high school education or its equivalent, and his previous education should include mathematics (Algebra and Plane Geometry), three years of English, including Literature, and he must have a thorough understanding of American History.

Any applicant who has a record of convictions by Court Martial for violations of laws other than minor violations of the Articles of War or convictions of a felony in a military or civil court, or if the applicant has a history of venereal infections he will not be accepted.

Individuals admitted to the Academy under the Regular or Reserve quotas must have completed one full year of active service in their respective component by date of admission, which is the first Tuesday in July, and he must be in an enlisted status at that time. However, the individual's service need not have been continuous.

DEADLINE IS WEDNESDAY, NOON

Explaining the whys and wherefores of a new early release order, Sfc. Edward J. Larin, Chief Clerk, Post Transfer Point, points out to Pfc. Bill K. Davis, Hq. Co., 6002 SU, and his brother, Pfc. Jerry E. Davis, the various aspects of the new order which will directly affect the two Presidio soldiers.

Time Running Out But

Brothers Manage To Stick Together During Most Service

By SP3 Hugh Dempsey
Star Presidian Staff Writer

They say that blood ties often are enough to surmount obstacles placed in front of individuals trying to stick together, and Pfc. Jerry and Bill Davis have proved its validity.

This stick together policy that the brothers formed took shape after their high school graduation. Setting up their own bachelor quarters in Pittsburg, California, Bill attended school at East Contra Costa Junior College and Jerry went to work with the American Trust Company in Pittsburg.

After Bill had completed one term in college, the two brothers, by mutual agreement, decided to volunteer for the draft rather than have Bill start another semester of college only to get drafted, and by that time they both would have lost the GI Bill, which they hoped to use later for college.

Following induction, the pair took initial training at Fort Ord, and also completed the Clerk Typist school at this post.

Then, as often happens, the split came. Bill found himself on orders for the 6103 SU at Lompoc, California, site of the US Disciplinary Barracks. Jerry took the big leap to Fort Lewis, Washington, where he served with a station complement unit.

There and then the die was cast, if there was any possible way they could regroup, regroup they would, and that time wasn't far off.

Jerry stayed at Fort Lewis four months when he got wind of a levy for clerk typists slated to report to the Disciplinary Barracks at Lompoc. Seeing the golden opportunity to rejoin his brother, he was determined to get on that levy, and he did just that.

Arriving at Lompoc, Jerry once more joined forces with his brother and later both were placed TDY to Personnel School at the Presidio.

Upon completion of this school, it was found that they were surplus at Lompoc, so they remained at the Presidio.

Jerry now works in the Personnel Record Section at Post Headquarters, and Bill, assigned to Special Services, is actively engaged in recreational work with hospitalized patients at Letterman Hospital.

When the two brothers stand side by side they usually dwarf any other person near enough to be put on a comparison basis. Bill stands a strapping 6 feet 5 inches and Jerry almost matches his brother, tipping in at 6 feet 3 inches. During the 1955 basketball season, they both played in key forward slots on the post team.

Now the big moment in their two-year Army stint is at hand. The two brothers are part of the some 150 soldiers from the Presidio who will be turned back to civilian life in June as part of the new early release policy for those whose normal ETS falls in July of this year.

Post Wac Top As Recruiting Course Grad

Honor graduate in the Sixth Army Recruiting School's 44th class of this year was Sfc. Lillian Aronson of the Presidio WAC Detachment.

Sergeant Aronson's top score of 97 in a class of 17 students covering the Sixth Army area was designated tops in the Posts, Camps and Stations category.

Sharing honors with the local WAC was M/Sgt. Wilbur H. Graff who achieved a similar score in the category covering Field Recruiting for the designated area. Graff has had former recruiting experience and is presently assigned to the 6400th SU.

The two-week recruiting course covered public speaking, reenlistment, salesmanship and administration.

Sergeant Aronson received a commendation from Colonel William M. Cohoon, Sixth Army Recruiting School commandant. The citation was endorsed by Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, Deputy Post Commander, and by Captain Virginia I. Engels, commanding the 6002nd SU WAC detachment.

Winfield Scott PTA Will Hold Open House To Honor School Week

The Winfield Scott Parent Teachers Association is holding Open House, Tuesday, 24 April, in recognition of Public School Week.

Prior to the formalities, a brief meeting will be conducted by Mrs. Milward Bayliss, the new PTA president, after which the school class rooms will be open for inspection by the Open House visitors.

On Friday, 27 April, Fort Winfield Scott PTA holds its annual cake sale in the school auditorium.

At 1330 hours the class students will hold the regular annual dance festival.

Parents and friends of the PTA are urged to support the cake sale and to be present also for the presentation of the dance festival.

Heads Staff College

Maj. Gen. Lionel C. McGarr has been named commandant of the Command and General Staff College, Ft. Leavenworth, Kan., by Army Secretary Wilber M. Brucker.

Gen. McGarr, commanding general of U.S. Army Caribbean, will return to the U.S. from the Canal Zone in July to take his new post.

Ernie Pyle Remembered

Army Colonel Was With Famous War Correspondent On Fateful Jeep Jaunt

A high-ranking Sixth Army officer leaned back in his chair, pulled a fresh cigarette from a pack on the desk and in his mind went back to a day — eleven years ago this week — in the Pacific.

Colonel Joseph B. Coolidge, assistant chief of staff G-4, recalls vividly 18 April, 1945, when an old friend of the Infantry soldier — combat correspondent Ernie Pyle — was killed by a Japanese sniper's bullet.

The Colonel remembers the incident well, for he was riding in the same jeep with Pyle when the sniper opened fire and everyone scrambled for the ditch alongside the road.

"Pyle," says the Colonel with a

Looking In on the snack bar at Crissy Field which is to be modernized with continued improvements, both in the kitchen and outside, as part of the complete renovations planned for snack bars and cafeterias throughout the Presidio and sub posts following the restoration of these eating establishments to the control of the Bay Area Exchange, which is directly operated by the Army.

Better Food, Lower Cost Under New Management

Better service and food at less cost to the consumer are the keynotes in the newly formulated plans for complete rejuvenation of the Presidio's snack bars and cafeterias, under the control of the Army's Bay Area Exchange. The Exchange resumed control of the eating establishments on 1 March after having them operated under concession contract for the past seven years.

Major Bradford F. Muse, Bay Area Exchange Officer, who heads up this new program, said, "After close investigation, and continual complaints from customers regarding the food and service at these snack bars and cafeterias, it was ascertained that the consumer wasn't getting what he was paying for both in the quality or quantity of the item.

"There was no price standardization on the food as it varied as high as 15 cents on the same items in the various establishments. Now we are setting up standard menus, getting more and better food for our customers and dropping the prices right to rock bottom," he said.

Under the new management, extensive cash outlays have been allotted for complete interior remodeling of the snack bars and cafeterias. Along with this, a program for better food preparation has begun. In addition, many of the kitchens in the various cafeterias are being reconditioned and new sanitation measures are being enacted.

Since the Army once again took the reins, a marked change has already taken place. Major Muse summed it up, "We are getting customers back who formerly were going outside the Presidio to eat, because of the poor service they had received.

"We want and appreciate their patronage, and we will try to do everything possible to improve our establishments as time goes by. Any time any of our customers find something disagreeable with the service or food, we want to know about it so that we can make the necessary corrections."

Spearheading this entire operation from its inception has been Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, who saw a definite need for standardization in prices, and the raising of the quality of food being served, for this reason, he became instrumental in re-establishing the Bay Area Exchange as the organization to handle the snack bars and cafeterias.

Hitchhiker Setback

Hitchhikers on military aircraft will not be able to collect travel allowances in the future. The Pentagon has taken the position that the six-cent-a-mile travel allowance shall not be paid when the Government furnishes transportation in kind by a free ride on a Government plane either on a space-available basis or otherwise.

Ridgway, company clerk, try on their stripes to see how it feels to have something besides slick sleeves.

German National Now Happy, Hopeful In Women's Army Corps

An international atmosphere prevailed in the Star Presidian office this week when Wac Pvt. Helga L. Wirges, a German national from Frankfurt-am-Main was interviewed by Sfc. Debra O'Hanlon, a newspaper reporter from Tralee, County Kerry, Ireland.

A tall, attractive blue-eyed brunette, Helga was recently assigned to the 6002nd S.U. Wac Company D. She is on duty at the Sixth Army's G-4 Section where she is employed as a stenographer clerk-typist.

Pvt. Wirges came to the Presidio from Fort McClellan, Alabama. Prior to her arrival in the United States nearly a year ago, she was a civilian stenographer in the Adjutant Section of the Frankfurt U.S. Military Sub-Area.

Just 20 years old, Helga is the daughter of a German surgeon who recently emigrated with the girl's youngest sister to Canada. They are being joined there soon by Helga's mother who is a graduate nurse, currently living in Germany.

"It was an American Wac sergeant who sold me the idea of entering the U.S. Women's Army Corps," the pretty girl says, "she was a close friend of mine overseas, and I was tremendously impressed with her good manners and the lovely way she wore her uniform."

An American soldier and his wife sponsored the German girl's entry to the United States. "They believed I would make a good American citizen," she explains, "because I was so interested in the history and the customs of their country."

It looks now as though their faith in Helga was not misplaced for she has already enrolled in the University of California extension courses presented through the Army Education Center.

Interviewing Pvt. Helga Wirges, former German national, Sfc. Debra O'Hanlon, feature writer for the "Star Presidian," seeks information on the young WAC's background and experiences. Helga proved an interesting and willing subject.

"I am taking Diplomatic History," she tells you, "and I intend to work for a BA degree through the wonderful education facilities offered at the Presidio."

Helga speaks faultless English with a fine, rich German accent. She received the equivalent of a high school education in her native country. In wartime Germany, the soft-spoken Wac was about five years old. During the bombings, she was separated from her family members and sent to live in the country with her grandparents.

"Even as a child," the girl says, "I was constantly made aware of the importance of a united family life and of how tragic it is to be denied it. That's why I want to marry a good man and have a big flock of children."

Learning how to make up a bed according to military standards was the most remarkable achievement in Helga's training interval at Fort McClellan.

"I used to get a gig every day," she says ruefully, "and every night I used to practice the proper way by pulling the bed clothes apart and putting them back on. The day the inspecting officers gave me a commendation for my well-made bed was the greatest day in my life."

Pvt. Wirges has very definite convictions regarding the value of three years' service in the corps.

"I'm sure that I shall marry a military man," she declares, "and it's going to make for a happier home life if we can both apply the good habits we developed through our mutual service in the United States Army."

Training at Andernach:

West German Army's First Tank Unit Gets Acquainted With Patton-47

(This is the second of two articles on the U.S. Army's role in the training of the new West German Armed Forces.)

Andernach, Germany — Members of the West German Streitkraefte (Armed Forces), here for their first post-war military training, regard their U.S. Army Patton M-47 light tank with appreciative eyes.

The 44 commissioned and non-commissioned officers of the tank platoon show the enthusiasm that could be expected of men whose military heritage brought massed armor and "blitzkrieg" to the history of war.

The U.S. Army German Assistance Training Group members who are acquainting the Germans with the operation of the American tanks, part of the equipment coming to this country through the U.S.-Federal Republic Mutual Defense Assistance Agreement, have "never seen such a group!"

"They talk tanks night and day," said Captain Robert K. Warren, on loan from the Third Armored Cavalry Regiment at Bayreuth, for his present training duty. "I believe they are well-satisfied with the Patton 47."

A German officer, Hauptman (Captain) Fritz Sacha, commander of the German Army tank platoon and a veteran World War II Panzer officer who participated in the Polish, French, and Russian campaigns, put it this way:

"From what I have been able to gather so far, this tank is very good — much better, I confess, than I expected. We are highly pleased with the maneuverability of the Patton 47 and the ease with which it can be driven."

"In addition, we are satisfied with the armor, power, speed and fuel consumption — I thought it would take more gas than it does. The tank has a lot of fire-power, but I would like to see a faster-firing machine gun mounted on it."

Sacha and the other members of the platoon, who are here for a three-month training and familiarization program on American weapons and equipment, will, in turn, train armored units in the new German Army. An eventual strength of 500,000 is anticipated.

He figures it will take from one to one and one-half years to build this small tank nucleus into a strong tank division.

Sacha has a high opinion of the U.S. Army teams, commissioned and non-commissioned officers, who are helping with this and other phases of the initial German training program; they will continue to help, as needed, during the first year of the German Army build-up.

"They know their subjects," Sacha said, "and they know how to put the information across. We have become very close to them these last weeks. We have the feeling the Americans belong to us and we belong to them—that we have been together for a long time already."

Suggestions Win Cash Awards for Former WWII Combat Veteran

Herman G. Young, a native of Canton, China, and combat veteran of World War II, has been presented with two checks totaling $25 for his adopted suggestions on streamlining clerical procedures in the Adjutant General's Section at Sixth Army Headquarters.

Now employed in the Military Personnel Division of the Adjutant General's Section, Mr. Young has been a resident of the United States since 1930. He attended San Francisco State College and during his three and one-half years of Army service saw action in Europe with the 78th Infantry Division.

Post I. & E. Moves

The Post Troop Information and Education Division has moved from Building 122 to new quarters adjacent to the east end of Crissy Field.

Main offices are in Building 232 while Building 240 will be used to present unit I&E NCO briefings.

The education classrooms remain at Building 563 near the Lombard gate, however.

Phone numbers remain the same with the addition of Ext. 3100, Mr. Harold Jacobs, education advisor.

President Pushes Career Incentive Legislation

President Eisenhower has urged Congressional approval of several military career incentive bills termed "must" legislation by Department of Defense.

In a dispatch from Washington, the President said, "we cannot move too soon in our efforts to increase the number and quality of volunteers for long-term military service."

Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson recommended a program to make military careers more attractive in a letter to Mr.

Eisenhower, who endorsed the proposals therein.

One of the recommendations calls for enactment of the survivor benefits plan, now on the calendar of the Senate Finance Committee, which will hold hearings later this month.

Passed by the House, the bill would bring all military personnel into the social security program on a contributory basis, and generally increase benefits paid survivors of deceased servicemen.

The Secretary also asked for enactment of the medical care bill, passed by the House earlier this year. The bill provides a group insurance plan that enables military dependents to be treated at civilian hospitals when military facilities are not available.

Other bills called for enactment by Wilson include career incentive measures for physicians and dentists; a measure assuring adequate military housing; a bill placing 50 per cent of Army and Air Force officer strength in the regular category and legislation allowing officers to retire in the highest temporary grade held on active duty.

SF's Oldest USO Club Plans Open House Fete For Late This Month

On Open House at California's oldest USO club, the San Francisco National Catholic Community Service-USO, marks its 15th anniversary Sunday, 22 April, with a tea dance honoring service personnel and the public generally.

The club Open House is also part of San Francisco's celebration of April-USO Month, as proclaimed by President Eisenhower.

New NCCS-USO junior hostesses will be introduced at the tea scheduled for 1600 hours at the 70 Oak Street clubrooms.

Standing tall are soldiers of the 6002 SU during recent retreat ceremonies.

Post Talent Vies In Ord Competition

Competitive spirit ran high as 12 talented performers from a field of 15 repeated in the post talent show finals to win a place on the marquee of the semi-finals in the Sixth Army Talent Show to be held at Fort Ord, the 19th and 20th of this month.

Winning competitors at Fort Ord will return to the Presidio Service Club for the Sixth Army finals to be held on the 25th of this month at 1930 hours.

Next stop for these winners will be Fort Dix, New Jersey, for the All-Army show, and the top performers from this show will appear on Ed Sullivan's "Toast of the Town" television show in New York on the 17th of June.

At the post finals, Pvt. Robert Vitale exhibited the showmanship of an old trooper with his vocal rendition of "That Old Black Magic," captivating the nearly packed house assembled at the Presidio Service Club for the show.

Pfc. Clifford E. Taylor of the 441st Missile Battalion kept the audience in stitches with his ad-libbed jokes emanating from a tiny little dummy named Teddy Tiny. Clifford's feats in ventriloquism gave him a top spot in the specialty performance category at the post show.

In the vocal group, the "Casuals," a quartet of Presidio soldiers including Sp3 Earl N. Carpp, Pvt. J. David Nall, Pfc. Dennis R. Dokken and Sp3 Allen M. Williams gave out with a steamed up version of "Java Jive" and repeated the song, "Band of Gold" which took first in the preliminary contest.

Bringing a touch of old Basin Street to the show were a combo calling themselves the "Shades." With the combination of Pfc. Theaury Jones on guitar, Pvt. Harold Andrews, playing piano and Pfc. Charles A. Brown rocking the drums, this trio secured for themselves a snug spot on the coming trip to Fort Ord with their rendition of "Sweet Dreams" and an improvised tune set to the mombo beat.

The "Cronkhite Ramblers," a western swing group from across the bay, saddled up and came to the post show, and went home with first place in the instrumental group category. Pfc. Jesse T. Brown strummed the mandolin, Pvt. Alkin E. Tilley and Sergeant Dallas S. Simmons filled in on the guitars to set the place a stirring with their hillbilly arrangement of "Wake Up Irene" and "Loose Talk."

Closing the show on a religious theme were the 23 blended voices of the Presidio Male Glee Club. Under the able direction of Mr. Don Bishop, the group sang, "Dear Land of Home" and "The Animals Are Coming," a biblical rendition concerning Noah's Ark.

The new hostess came to the Presidio area from Fort Lewis, Washington, where she was assigned in similar capacity. Her only claim to family military fame is that her grandfather was once the commanding officer at Edgewood Arsenal in Maryland.

An MIT graduate, he won the Distinguished Service Award for his work in Chemical Warfare.

Co-worker with Miss Eileen Pierce in the management of the Fort Cronkhite Service Club, Miss Walker looks forward to planning a large and varied recreational calendar for the men of Fort Cronkhite and their families this summer.

A former lineman for Alabama Polytechnic Institute (Auburn) in the Orange Bowl was named as the first special services officer of the 6th Anti-aircraft Regional Command, it was announced this week.

Lieutenant Colonel Oscar W. Burford will direct special services operations for all gun, Skysweeper and Nike anti-aircraft units in the Western States.

The colonel, recently returned from a tour of duty in Korea and Japan, has served in the sports section of the Adjutant General's office, Department of the Army.

A native of Alabama, Colonel Burford played end for Auburn 1936 through 1938. He participated in the 1938 Orange Bowl, the Bacardi Bowl in Havana, Cuba, and the first North-South game in 1939.

Swapping conversation and jokes are Pfc. Clifford Taylor and his dummy, Teddy Tiny, to captivate the audience which jammed the Presidio Service Club for the finals in the Post Sixth Army Talent show. For his performance, Clifford and his "wooden headed" partner gained a berth on the group who will travel to Fort Ord for the Sixth Army Semi-finals.

Pony League Tryouts Set Tomorrow

P-O-N-Y League activities at the Presidio got off to a fast start last Saturday with 34 boys reporting for the first tryouts. Parents of the boys and friends of P-O-N-Y League baseball supervised the tryouts, which are being held in preparation for the selection of teams.

While the number who have indicated a desire to play so far is enough for a three-team league, the managers and other interested parents hope that sufficient players will report so that at least a four-team league can be operated.

Personnel managing the activities emphasize the fact that all boys of league age 13 and 14 years who try out WILL play ball. No one will be left out.

Boys whose 15th birthday falls between 1 January, 1956, and 31 July, 1956, are also encouraged to try out, since they also will play with the league if enough of the 13- and 14-year-old boys do not participate, making it impossible to franchise the league with National League headquarters. Franchised or not, it was pointed out, the bays will be playing baseball this year.

Another tryout period will be held tomorrow afternoon, 21 April, 1956, at 1400 on the field behind the Main Post PX. Prospective players may register for play at that time.

Julius Boros topped the pros in the eighth annual Ft. Bragg, N. C., Pro-Amateur golf tourney with a 36-hole score of 143. One stroke behind Boros was Ft. Bragg's Sgt. Kelly Kee.

Slugfest

Casino's Four Hits Lead Presidio To 15-2 Victory

By Pfc. Bob Malone
Star Presidian Sports Editor

The Presidio Toreros behind the six-hit hurling of Roger Collins and the outstanding hitting of first baseman Al Casino smashed out a 15-2 win over the San Francisco State College nine to highlight this week's diamond action. The slugfest was held on the State College field.

The locals jumped off to a two-run lead in the fourth when Dick Shannon singled and scored when Casino tripled into left center field. Leftfielder Ben Camera then singled, driving in Casino, and came on in on Mike Rubie's long fly to right.

S. F. State came back to score their two tallies in the top of the fifth on three straight singles before Collins bore down and struck out the side.

Shannon opened the sixth with a triple and came on home when the left fielder bobbled the ball. Harry Williams walked and three straight singles by Casino, Camera and Matzen scored the rest of the runs.

Team captain Shannon led off the seventh by drawing a walk. Williams slapped a sharp single to center followed by Casino with a one-bagger. Camera then cleared the sacks with a ringing double and the Post went ahead 10-2.

The Toreros scored five more tallies in the eighth with Ellenberger, Willis, Williams, Heigh-ton and Collins scoring runs to make the final tally 15-2.

Al Casino led the locals at the plate with four out of five followed by Ellenberger, Shannon, Camera and Selsor who gained credit for two hits apiece.

This afternoon on the Funston Playground, 1400 hours, the Presidio plays host to the Edwards Air Force Base Wings.

Tomorrow morning at 1030 hours the Presidio baseball squad will conduct a clinic for the Golden Gate Little League players. Torero players will give lessons on hitting, fielding, running the bases and other bits of baseball knowledge to the prospective Major Leaguers.

Hunters Get More Birds This Season

The Department of Fish and Game announced preliminary reports indicate this year's pheasant hunting shows a hunter success ratio of .43 bird per hunter. The reports came from the cooperative areas, waterfowl management regions and national wildlife refuges.

The figure compares with a success ratio of .35 per hunter last year when all birds taken were cocks.

A total of 106,921 hunters took 46,422 birds this season on the 28 cooperatives, waterfowl areas, and federal refuges. The season was six days longer than last year and one hen in the seasonal bag was legal.

Hens constituted 28 per cent of the total bag and 43 per cent of the wild kill in the 17 public areas of the Sacramento Valley where most of the wild birds and most of the pheasant habitat are located.

Presidial Clarion Draws Raves; Requests Flood News Office

Like proud parents of a bouncing, newly born infant, members of The Star Presidian staff today are still excited—and a little awed—with their own particular "baby."

What they're so excited about is the Presidio and San Francisco's acceptance of The Star Presidian's mock 1906 Fire and Earthquake edition, the fictitious "Presidial Weekly Clarion."

The congratulatory comments started coming in via telephone almost immediately after the paper was distributed on post. And by midweek a regular groundswell of public acclaim hit the staff.

It started when Charles P. Teevin, chairman of San Francisco's Festival of Progress celebration, made an official request for copies to be distributed to Mayor Christopher, Governor Knight, the Board of Supervisors, and other civic dignitaries.

Next, M. V. Buchanan, Colonel U.S.A. Ret., requested extra copies and commented:

"Your 'Clarion' is a notable work of research and presentation. Our thought is that it is the very best of the current works of commemoration.

"Please send me . . . copies which we wish to send to some prominent old timers who will value it as much as we do."

The California Historical Society and the San Francisco Public Library also requested copies of the historical edition.

The staff also received an accolade from San Francisco's working newsmen when the Press and Union League Club called for 250 copies for distribution at the club's big celebration in its Post Street quarters.

In addition to the official requests for copies, the staff was overwhelmed by countless individual bids. Numerous persons—military and civil—trooped into the Star Presidian's editorial office all week asking for the paper and leaving with a word of praise.

Reports had it that at least two Marina merchants had framed copies of the special edition as a part of their business decor.

Asked by local newsmen about the mysterious process used to effect the charred edges of the Presidial Clarion, Colonel Arthur C. Timboe, Sixth Army information chief replied, "I'm afraid that will have to remain a military secret."

All in all the reception of the "Clarion" far exceeded the expectations of its originators and left them with the satisfied feeling of a job well done.

President Endorses Military Reserve Week Planning

"An all-out effort to strengthen our security through the building of a strong reserve must come from the hearts of the people," said President Eisenhower recently, as he endorsed National Military Reserve Week to be observed 22 to 28 April.

The Department of Defense and 19 civic-minded, national organizations have joined together in an effort to boost the six-month reserve training program during Military Reserve Week.

"During Military Reserve Week," said General Harry H. Semmes, co-chairman of the committee, "it is our purpose to do all in our power to educate the American public regarding the new six-month training program and its many advantages not only for our young men but also for American industry and labor."

Co-chairman with General Semmes is John H. Wilkinson.

The six-month reserve training program enables men in the 17 to 18½ age group to serve six months on active duty, then return to civilian life and serve their remaining time as civilians in reserve units.

The organizations sponsoring the program are:

Amateur Athletic Union, American Gold Star Mothers, American Legion, American Legion Auxiliary, American War Mothers, Am Vets, Am Vets Auxiliary, Disabled American Veterans, Disabled American Veterans Auxiliary, General Federation of Women's Clubs, Jewish War Veterans, Jewish War Veterans Auxiliary, Marine Reserve Officers Association, Military Order of Purple Heart, Military Order of Purple Heart Auxiliary, Military Order of the World Wars, Reserve Officers Association, United Spanish War Veterans Auxiliary and Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Army Will Retain Historic Regimental Designations

Historic regimental designations carried by the inactivated 1st and 20th Infantry Regiments—formerly at Fort Ord—have been retained in other active organizations, the Army announced this week.

The 1st, established in the late 18th century and once commanded by "Mad Anthony" Wayne, will be reassigned to the United States Military Academy at West Point, replacing the 1802nd Special Regiment, which will be discontinued.

The 33rd Infantry, stationed in the Canal Zone, will be redesignated the 20th Regiment. The 33rd's designation will revert to the inactive list.

The Army is making the shift to retain in the active forces the designation of its famed old regiments which fought in the Indian Wars, Mexican War, Civil War, Spanish-American War and World Wars I and II.

Special Reserve Plan For Defense Workers Announced by Army

A special reserve program for men classified 1A who possess critical skills being used in national defense projects has been announced by the Army.

According to Army Secretary Wilber M. Brucker, Selective Service will certify that such individuals are eligible for enlistment in the ready reserve for eight years. The plan is provided for in the Reserve Forces Act of 1955.

After completing six months' active duty training, these enlistees will be transferred to the Army's standby reserve for the balance of their obligated service unless they elect to remain in the ready reserve, or unless they qualify for a critical military skill for which a requirement in the ready reserve exists.

As standby reservists, they will be relieved from further peacetime military training as long as they continue to work in a critical defense-supporting activity, the Army said.

Local Marksmen Ready For Top Army Contests

A host of Presidio rifle and pistol marksmen put the finishing touches on their firing techniques next week in preparation for the Sixth Army matches at Camp Roberts in late April and early May.

Led by some of the top Army marksmen, the Presidio contingent starts firing in earnest today and through next Friday to gain berths on the Sixth Army squad in the All-Army competition at Fort Benning, Ga., in June.

The Presidio marksmen, led by top pistol shot Captain John F. Kallam and his rifle opposite number, Major Edward L. Reams, wrapped up their practice period early this week. The final practice rounds concluded a two-month period of improving aim and technique and selection of squads.

The local shooters will get plenty of moral support from Colonel Charles G. Rau, post executive officer who has been named to a similar post for the matches. The Colonel might even try his own hand on the ranges. He has earned a national reputation as coach and advisor to various groups of marksmen.

PRESIDIO OF SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA

Friday 27 April, 1956

ROA Convention!

Reserve Group Slates Annual Meet This Week

A top atomic scientist and a brigadier general in charge of the California Army reserve program will be awarded the California Reserve Officers' Association's "Minuteman Award" at their annual convention at the Claremont Hotel in Berkeley, tomorrow night.

Dr. Edward Teller of the University of California Radiation Laboratory will be presented his award for his vast contribution to national defense in the fields of nuclear science.

General Claude F. Burbach, chief of the California Military District will be cited for his outstanding support of the ROA.

Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commander, will address the convention on the role of the Army and Army Reserve in the world's present, tense situation, on Saturday morning.

Other highlights of the three-day affair, 27, 28, 29 April, will be a military ball on Saturday night and the installation of new officers on Sunday morning.

Soldiers Urged To Take Advantage Of Special Ready Reserve Option

Servicemen on active duty 9 August, '55, who will be separated prior to 1 July, '57, can cut their ready reserve obligation to one year by joining and participating satisfactorily for 12 months in a ready reserve unit.

They would then be eligible for transfer to the standby reserve.

Option must be taken before 1 July, '57, and is not offered to Reserves Forces Act trainees.

Soldiers, in particular, are being urged to take advantage of this opportunity so that the Army may utilize their military experience to strengthen ready reserve units.

Hitting the Beach in a recent maneuver, Sixth Army troops demonstrate landing tactics which will be displayed to the public on Armed Forces Day at the Presidio, Saturday, 19 May. Present plans call for 100 troops to attack fortified beach positions on the Crissy Field beach. The demonstration of the Army's amphibious tactics will highlight the celebration's activities.

AFD Plans Into High Gear; CG Approves Basic Program

Presidio of San Francisco's Armed Forces Day celebration was virtually assured of success today when Sixth Army Commander Lieutenant General Robert N. Young and Deputy Post Commander Colonel Carl E. Lundquist approved a 28-point program of events and displays.

The high ranking officers' stamp of approval on project officer Major Walter L. Carppi's program assured the Post and San Francisco of an outstanding Army "hit" for the day.

Highlight of Major Carppi's schedule of events will be a landing from assault craft on a fortified beach in the Crissy Field area. Two demonstrations of the Army's amphibious tactics will be shown the public during the day.

Plans formulated by Major Carppi and his AFD Committee call for an assault party of 100 troops in four LCMs to attack beach positions with flame throwers, smoke generating equipment and blank ammunition for small arms.

Troops manning flame throwers will move in to destroy a wooden pillbox. Incendiary grenades will be placed on a simulated steel reinforced pillbox as the attackers move forward to gain a beach head.

The defenders, 50 strong, will attempt to drive off the attack with small arms and machine guns. To lend the entire demonstration an atmosphere of realism, the defenders will set off smoke pots, and use blank ammunition in their small arms.

Prior to the attack, a Coast Guard helicopter will drop a sling on a cable to pick up one of its personnel, while an Army "chopper" is slated to land in the area and remove a litter case once the demonstration has been completed.

Major Carppi warned, however, that changes in the attack plan may be necessary. Three rehearsals, one for The Star Presidian, metropolitan press, television and newsreels, will be held to make the attack a success and to iron out difficulties which may arise.

The landing is expected to be the top attraction of the program, scheduled for Saturday, 19 May.

The landing, however, is only a part of the "spectacular" program arranged by the Major, his committee and units and sections on Post.

In addition to the landing, special events scheduled include an evening retreat parade consisting of two battalions of Army troops, one Marine Corps battalion and one battalion composed of companies from the Navy, Air Force and Coast Guard.

Army Wins National Safety Award Again; 11th Time Since '42

The National Safety Council has presented the Army with an honor award for the eleventh time in the past 13 years.

In receiving the award, the Army was cited for its "impressive record in view of the extent of vast global operations."

Ned H. Dearborn, president of the council, praised the Army's "uncomplicated and progressive accomplishments in the fields of safety."

air trans meet

Transportation problems affecting military personnel and their families are expected to be lessened through a two-day meeting of 19 scheduled United States airline executives in San Francisco next week.

Slated for the Sheraton-Palace Hotel, Tuesday 24 April, the convention will have the managers of Joint Air Military Traffic offices from 50 military installations work out a new system more nearly suited to the immediate needs of the traveling serviceman and woman.

Armed Forces Police To Issue Uniform Violation Tickets On Servicemen

Servicemen in the Bay Area were warned this week that improper wearing of the uniform would result in the issuance of violation tickets by members of the Armed Forces Police Detachment.

Duplicates of the tickets will be forwarded to unit commanders for possible disciplinary action.

Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, said that soldiers receiving uniform violation tickets could expect temporary loss of pass privilege for first offenses and that repeated uniform violations would result in sterner disciplinary action.

Education Goes A-Begging!

Several years ago one of the hottest issues at a national seminar on higher education was the contention of several members that most scholarships and fellowships were going to a group who could well afford to pay for a college education and additional specialized study.

Added to this was the statement that only a select minority were even aware that specific scholarships or fellowships existed.

From these two statements came the conclusion that not only were most scholarships and fellowships going to those who could easily afford a higher education, but in many cases they were going to those who were not the most deserving scholastically.

Whatever kernel of truth this minority declama might have contained was diffused when the majority stated that scholarships at their various schools were going begging every year.

In other words the problem often became not who was qualified, but who was available to receive the grant.

Last year alone, out of 140,000 scholarships totaling 31 million dollars, and 15,000 fellowship grants valued at 10 million dollars, 17,000 were without candidates, primarily because prospective students were not even aware they existed.

In its own sphere the Army has taken the initiative to ensure that these facts on scholarships and fellowships are available to all interested members.

This week, Colonel R. M. Connolly, Sixth Army Troop Information and Education chief, urged all area civilian and military education advisors and counselors to obtain the U.S. Government Printing Office pamphlet entitled "Scholarships and Fellowships" and to make this information available to those in need of educational assistance.

There is a nominal cost involved in obtaining the pamphlets, however, Sixth Army TI&E is making every effort to obtain sufficient supply for field distribution.

This plan will go a long way in helping fill the gap left by the termination of the GI Bill for all those who entered the service after 31 January 1955.

Bronze Star

For Korean Exploits Will Be Awarded At Post Parade

For almost six months during the first half of 1952, First Lieutenant Eugene L. Rowden of the 3rd United States Infantry Division plied a cloak and dagger trade against the Communist enemy among the rice fields and brown hills of Korea.

The lieutenant was an organizer and a skilled handler of men, patient and understanding. And the Army put him in a place where his attributes would help the most—the Counter Intelligence Corps Detachment of the 3rd Division.

He was given his assignment at the height of the Chinese communist push south, just prior to Christmas, 1951. The U.S. Eighth Army desperately needed intelligence on communist troop movements, routes of supply and units.

Part of the task fell to Lieutenant Rowden, then executive officer of his CIC Detachment. He was ordered to get the information and channel it to higher headquarters to help General Matthew Ridgway in his plans for Operation Killer.

The Lieutenant's duties were to "organize and control a select group of agents whose mission consisted of special tasks involving sensitive and hazardous duties."

And Lieutenant Rowden's "tactical and skillful employment of intelligence techniques, his patience and understanding . . . of the problems . . . and his leadership contributed materially to the success of his unit's mission."

Eugene L. Rowden

So reads the citation which Lieutenant Rowden will be awarded along with a Bronze Star for Meritorious Service at the Retreat and Decoration Ceremony today.

Rowden is now assistant inspector general of the 91st Division, Army Reserve, and recruiting and personnel employee for the Department of the Army Ballistic Missile Agency with an office in Oakland.

No longer does he await the return of his agents from their missions, but rather, lives with his wife and two sons in the pleasant suburb of San Mateo.

Unrestricted nuclear war may bring mutual disaster. The United States must not be limited to the capability of fighting no other than a nuclear large scale war. The United States must develop visible strength in being adequate to convince any enemy that aggression will fail. This strength must be real and tangible—and must be tri-dimensional—on the ground, in the air, and on the sea.

newly assigned

Lieutenant Colonel Geoffrey C. Bain reported for duty in the Sixth Army's G-3 Section this week.

Here from an assignment as commanding officer for the 3rd Battalion of the 31st Infantry Regiment in Korea, Colonel Bain begins his second tour of duty at the Presidio. He was executive officer for the Inspector General Section in 1954-1955 and has had previous European service with JUSMAG in Athens, Greece.

From Athens, Colonel Bain went to France as commander of troops for APCAMP. A veteran of 14 years' active Federal service, the newly assigned officer was graduated from Pomona College, in Claremont, California, where he majored in chemistry.

Military schools attended by Colonel Bain include the Infantry School, Fort Benning, Georgia; the Armed Force School, at Fort Knox, Kentucky; the Tank Destroyer School, Fort Hood Texas; the Command General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth and the Command Management School at Fort Belvoir, Virginia.

Colonel and Mrs. Bain are the parents of two sons residing in the family home at Larkspur, California.

On 22 August, 1917, air-to-ground radiophone sets went into the production stage.

'Tomorrow' Division

Former Staff Officer Will Head 101st Airborne Artillery

Colonel Douglas P. Quandt, former Sixth Army deputy chief of staff for plans and operations, will head up DivArty in the newly activated 101st Airborne Division, it was announced recently.

Colonel Quandt is one of many young field grade and general officers, most of them veterans of Airborne combat units, who will receive posts with the division—an atomic-age unit.

Department of Defense has announced the 101st will be organized for battle in atomic war.

Streamlining the unit will include a radical departure from traditional style organization of the division.

The 101st will have—instead of three regiments—five combat groups, each capable of fighting independently to form the 11,500-man division.

Atomic power will be supplied by the "Honest John" rockets in division artillery. The "Honest John" has a mobile self-propelled launcher and can be armed with nuclear or conventional shells.

The 101st will also have the latest and newest weapons the Army has on hand, including a self-propelled 90mm gun—the SPAT—which can be dropped by parachute, 105mm mortars and lightweight and general purpose machine guns.

A mechanical mule will also be included in the division's TO&E. This is a four-wheel steering 1000-pound capacity low silhouette vehicle. Other trucks will also be supplied the 101st.

The division figures to also have better air mobility since the entire complement will be 6,000 men fewer than a normal division. Planners estimate the airborne infantrymen will be able to be transported with less than half the aircraft than previous parachute divisions.

A great number of small aircraft and helicopters will provide the division with plenty of "eyes."

The division commander can also expect greater information from the battle line through an

Colonel, Sergeant Will Retire After Half Century Of Service

An Army medical service colonel and a master sergeant with a combined total of more than 52 years' active service will be retired from the Army on Monday.

Retiring are Colonel Reuel E. Hewitt, Sixth Army surgeon, and M/Sgt. Anthony Pikaitis.

The Colonel, assigned to the Presidio since 1952, will leave the service after more than 30 years' duty.

A graduate of the University of Iowa College of Medicine, the Colonel first entered the Army in 1925 as a medical officer. His first assignment was at William Beaumont General Hospital. From that post Colonel Hewitt served at various hospitals and posts in the U.S. and its then territories.

During World War II he served in the Office of the Surgeon General and as Commanding Officer of the St. Louis Medical Depot. He has been decorated with the Legion of Merit and is a graduate of the Medical Field Service School, the Army Medical Service School and the Army Industrial College.

The Colonel and his wife, Marguerite, plan to live in Auburn, Calif.

Sergeant Pikaitis of Detachment 3, 6300 SU at Davis, Calif., retires after 22 years' service.

"I've waited a long time to get a shot of these old ruins."

"They've waited for us . . . till our Payroll Savings Bonds matured, so we could travel when I retired. And they'll go on waiting for other lucky Payroll Savers to come from the U.S.A. to photograph them." You too can start that retirement-travel fund. Get on the Plan now. See your Bond Officer today!

Medical Service Corps Will Commission Number Of Reserve Officers

A limited number of qualified applicants will be given reserve commissions in the Medical Service Corps, according to a recent Department of the Army release.

They will be commissioned in grades from second lieutenant to captain and called to active duty immediately for two years. Company grade MSC officers in reserve component status may apply for active duty under this program.

Applicants selected under this program will be ordered to active duty for an indefinite period provided they have prior active commissioned service.

Eligibility requirements for individuals desiring active duty status in the MSC under this program may be found in SR 140-105-6.

The Bill of Rights—the first 10 amendments to the Constitution—became the law of the land in 1791. Today, 165 years later, they remain what they were then—an expression of the American mind.

When Congress drafted these rights, its members could recall the indignities many of them had suffered in foreign lands. Even on these very shores the denial of these rights was instrumental in leading them to revolt.

To ensure that future Americans would not be similarly mistreated, Congress outlined the basic freedoms that the government could not deny. These included the freedoms of religion, press, speech, assembly and petition, the right to be secure in their homes from unreasonable search and seizure, the right to a speedy trial by jury, the right to be informed of the charge and to face those testifying against them.

Today, in totalitarian states, citizens still do not enjoy these rights. We know that a Russian, a Hungarian or a Pole may be hauled from his home in the middle of the night and tossed into jail to await "trial" for his "crimes against the state." We know that thousands of Chinese have had their hands tied behind them and a bullet triggered into their brains because they were deemed "enemies" of the "People's Republic." We know that a Czech editor prints only what the state allows him to print.

Like our ancestors 165 years ago, we look to the Bill of Rights as an outline of what men may expect from their governments. Because men throughout the world are still denied these rights, we cherish them even more.

But to cherish is not enough. We must actively defend these rights. That is why we are in uniform.

Another positive means of defense is to exercise our duties as citizens. An intelligent vote is one of our basic duties. Because we are away from home the services have taken great pains to make it easy for us to vote. Let's make use of this opportunity. Freedom and obligation go hand in hand. (AFPS)

Presidio Children Slated For Salk Immunization

Post Surgeon Says There Is No Danger

The first group of Presidio of San Francisco military dependents will be immunized against Infantile Paralysis with Salk polio vaccine at the Post Dispensary starting Monday afternoon.

At the same time, Lieutenant Colonel Harry Spitz, post surgeon, making the announcement yesterday, moved to allay the fears of worried parents remembering the polio vaccine controversy of last year.

"There is no danger attached to our program," said Colonel Spitz in a statement to The Star Presidian. "The present day vaccine is thoroughly checked by the U.S. Public Health Service and certified for use.

"No one is concerned about contracting small pox or diphtheria when immunized against those diseases. So, there is no greater danger with the polio immunization than with those maladies," the Colonel declared.

The first shipment of the vaccine, purchased by the Army at approximately $1.00 per dose, arrived here this week and was immediately made available to children five to nine years of age and to expectant mothers.

Manufactured by the Wyeth Laboratory of Marietta, Pa., and the Pitman-Moore Company of Indianapolis, Indiana, the vaccine has been okayed for Army use and will be administered to 693 persons—the extent of the first shipment to the Post—Colonel Spitz declared.

The immunization program will be followed up by further shots for children six months to 15 years of age and for expectant mothers.

Three doses of the vaccine will be administered in the series, Colonel Spitz declared. The first group will be inoculated for the second time at least one month later, while the third shot will be administered seven to nine months hence.

The interval between the first and second shot, the Colonel said, will not be significant.

Dispensary authorities have compiled a roster for the shots from questionnaires submitted and returned earlier. The immunizations will be conducted in strict alphabetical order regardless of military rank, Colonel Spitz declared.

Parents will be called by telephone and given timed appointments for their dependents' shots. The colonel warned that appointments must be kept rigid to insure an even flow of the immunization program.

Children will be examined by physicians in attendance prior to receiving their shots.

The Colonel made a strong appeal to parents to bring their children in for immunization.

"I sincerely recommend," he said, "that all parents take advantage of this program to insure safety of their children from Infantile Paralysis.

"I expect that within a short period of time all children will have been immunized against polio and that it will disappear from the horizon as a health problem," he declared.

Careful Study and attention is given to an X-ray which pinpoints trouble spots on the patient's teeth. Consultations between the dentists and surgeons before treatment is undertaken has become a vital part in the work of these professionals who never leave anything to chance. ## Presidio Dental Clinic Offers Top Skills To Local Patients

By Sp3 Hugh Dempsey
Star Presidian Staff Writer

Within the offices of the Presidio's post dental clinic, specialists comprising a total of 104 years of formal college training from the finest dental schools in the country, work unceasingly with one goal in mind: to give their patients the best possible dental care!

Operative procedures at the clinic, headed by Colonel Clare T. Budge, post dental surgeon, have been organized so that each patient entering the clinic for treatment receives a thorough and exhaustive examination. During this period, his or her case is carefully analyzed by a group of experts who decide on what course of treatment to follow.

Once the patient begins going through the clinic, one fact begins to take shape. These dentists are trying by every means at their disposal to save teeth and get them in first class condition. Only after complete exhaustion of all techniques that can be mustered from their medical experience has been used to save the tooth it is extracted.

Colonel Budge best summed it up, "We don't want to remove any teeth if there is any way possible we can avoid it. Each one is a valuable commodity to its owner, and our main hope is that we can keep their teeth in top shape so that extraction can be avoided."

Every day some 350 dental procedures are completed in the clinic's four technical sections; oral surgery, operative, prosthetics, and crown and bridge. Yet with the tremendous influx of patients to the clinic during an eight hour period, each case is carefully studied, and nothing is left to chance.

Coupled to the work being done for servicemen, some 1800 dental procedures in examinations, oral surgery, x-rays and emergency care are administered to dependents each month.

Colonel Budge explained the feelings of each of his staff regarding their work, "We have the latest equipment and know how obtainable, all bent in one direction, to take care of our patients and see that they get the finest and most complete treatment that each of us here at the clinic can render."

Certificate of Achievement for outstanding services was presented Fred R. Fowler, foreman of the electrical branch post engineers, by Colonel James R. Rundell, post engineer. Fowler received a check for $50 in addition to the certificate for maintaining and repairing electrical equipment and facilities during last winter's storm emergency.

Also $50 Check!

Army Civilian Wins Certificate For Efforts During Flood

Fred R. Fowler, civilian foreman with the post engineer section, was presented with a U.S. Army certificate of achievement this week for outstanding service at the Presidio during the prolonged storm emergency last winter. A check for $50 accompanied the certificate.

Presentation was made by Colonel James R. Rundell, post engineer, at an informal ceremony attended by a group of Mr. Fowler's fellow workers.

Signed by Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Sixth Army commander, the certificate cited Mr. Fowler's accomplishments as foreman in charge of the Electrical Branch for keeping power facilities intact in the vital defense area of the Presidio and its Marin County subposts throughout the 38-day emergency period that began with the violent storms of 18 December.

Under his supervision were the maintenance and repair of electrical facilities serving Sixth Army Headquarters, Letterman Army Hospital, various troop areas and NIKE installations protecting the coastal area.

Mr. Fowler has been employed in Bay Area Army Engineer establishments for the past 34 years.

Upon his discharge from the Army Signal Corps in 1922 he went to work for the S. F. District Engineers, transferring to the Harbor Defense Command at Fort Winfield Scott in 1938, and taking up his present position with the Presidio Post Engineers after the post-war reorganization of 1946.

Interested In A Real Career?

Soldiers desiring entrance into the United States Military Academy at West Point under the new appointment system are being urged to make their applications as soon as possible. After 31 May, no applicants' requests will be accepted.

Under the new plan, the examinations are to be given by a West Point Appointment Board. At the Presidio, such a board has been created for the purpose of handling applicants from the Presidio and its sub posts.

Those wishing to try for these competitive appointments should refer to Army Regulation 350-55 and AFR 53-15, dtd 5 March, 1956. Contained within these regulations are outlines and requirements relating to necessary requirements for entrance to West Point. If further information seems necessary, the applicant should contact his unit commander.

Jungle Fighter, POW To Retire On Monday

An Army sergeant first class, who has spent years behind Japanese and Communist barbed wire as a prisoner of war, is scheduled to be retired Monday on completion of 23 years' service.

Sergeant First Class Glicerio Valdez, veteran of World War II fighting in the Philippine Islands and the Korean War, will retire in informal ceremonies from his duty with the Sixth Army Map Depot.

The sergeant was first captured by Japanese forces on Bataan in 1942 and placed in a POW camp for two years. He was freed by the Japanese under a parole system they established, but joined guerrilla forces on Luzon almost immediately after.

Valdez, who joined the Army with the Philippine Scouts in 1932, was assigned to the 24th Division in Japan in 1949.

Along with other troops of the 24th, Valdez was committed to battle shortly after the North Koreans decided to go South for the summer in June 1950.

Again the sergeant met with ill luck. On 20 July, 1950, less than a month after the United States entry into the war and under almost the same circumstances as 1942, Valdez fell into enemy hands.

It wasn't until August, 1953, that the communists returned him to United Nations' lines in Operation Little Switch.

After leave and hospitalization in the Philippines, Valdez was sent to Camp Stoneman and was assigned to the Presidio later.

The sergeant wears the Combat

Infantryman's Badge with Star and the Purple Heart for wounds received in action.

He plans to return to Luzon where his wife and five of their six children live. The sixth child, Ely, plans to enter one of the Armed Services.

mental health

Letterman Army Hospital will participate in National Mental Health Week 29 April-5 May, observance with display of pictures and projects completed by patients, Captain Curtiss E. Knighton, project officer, said yesterday.

Displays will be mounted in the hospital's administration building and the Main Exchange. Exhibits will include pictures of occupational therapy, interviews, patients in neuropsychiatry and members of the staff.

In addition to the pictorial displays, completed projects of patients — leatherwork, rugs, jewelry — will be placed on exhibit.

On Tuesday, 1 May, patients in the closed ward of neuropsychiatry will sponsor a tea for hospital personnel.

Birthday Fete—

Two Major Social Events Highlight Wac Anniversary

The 14th anniversary of the establishment of the Women's Army Corps, 14 May, will be marked at the Presidio with two social events, one on Sunday afternoon of 13 May, and one on Monday evening, 14 May.

A reception for women officers and their guests will take place at the Presidio Officers' Club from 1600 to 1800 hours on the 13th. Invitations for the reception are being extended to men and women officers in the Presidio and adjoining sub-stations.

Meanwhile, the regular dinner-dance for the enlisted women and their guests is slated for the NCO Open Mess on the night of 14 May with a receiving line for guest officers and section co-workers set for 1700 to 1900 hours.

Among ranking officer guests on the distaff side attending both social events will be Lieutenant Colonel Anne E. Sweeney, of San Francisco, who heads Army women assigned within the eight Western States comprising the Sixth Army area.

Mulvaney New Chief

New Finance Officer Named; Colonel Batts Retires Monday

Lieutenant Colonel W. Batts, post finance officer since 1954, will retire on 30 April. Taking with him a record of over two decades of Federal employment, Colonel Batts plans to resume public life as a school teacher in Illinois. He will be succeeded by Lieutenant Colonel Louis C. Mulvaney.

During World War II, Colonel Batts served three and a half years in Europe where he was assigned to the 1st Infantry Division. In Korea, he served with the 40th Infantry Division as staff finance officer for KCOMZ, and as executive officer, Controller Section, KBS.

Among decorations awarded Colonel Batts are the Bronze Star Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster, the Commendation Ribbon, Good Conduct Medal, the French Croix de Guerre, the Belgian Fouragerre and two Korean Presidential Unit citations.

Colonel Mulvaney, new post finance officer, has been in service over 17 years. He came here from Fort Lewis, Wash., where he served as finance officer for the 2nd Infantry Division.

During World War II, Colonel Mulvaney was in the Middle East and North Africa, with the Ninth Air Force Headquarters, 26th Air Depot Group, later as finance officer for Replacement Depot Number 1, Karachi, India.

In Korea, Colonel Mulvaney was consecutively Division Rear Commander and Finance officer for the 3rd Infantry Division's 105th Finance and Disbursing Section. He wears the Bronze Star Medal and the European, Middle Eastern and Far Eastern Theater Ribbons.

Knees Win Long Struggle; Will Show In Hotter Climes

"Dig those crazy knees!"

Soldiers in the hotter climes of the U. S. may have to rally to this new battle cry come summer when for the first time in the history of the state-side armies, tropical shorts will become a permanent part of the regular uniform issue.

This new summer garrison uniform, consisting of knee-length, sand-colored socks, khaki shorts and short-sleeve shirts, will replace two of the five conventional sets of cotton khaki now provided on the initial allowance.

New inductees, enlistees, National Guard and Army Reserve Six Months Trainees will receive the issue beginning 1 July. However all enlisted personnel who entered the Army prior to 1 July, 1956, and are still on active duty on 1 July, 1958, will be required to purchase their allowances of the uniform on or before the latter date.

The hot weather uniform will be on sale on an optional basis this summer through Quartermaster Sales Stores. Area commanders, however, will prescribe the conditions under which it may be worn.

A similar uniform has been worn in the tropics by U. S. Army personnel for some time.

Presidio soldiers can rest easy. Weathermen predict continued moderate (cold as billy) summers for the local area.

danger, fire days ahead!

In addition to every day hazards, there are some fire hazards which are present only at certain times of the year.

In the spring and summer, fires in tall, dry grass and brush present a problem. Colonel James R. Rundell, Post Fire Marshal, warns personnel on this Post to exercise special care to prevent such fires, which threaten both life and property.

"The passing of each day makes the danger of fire more hazardous," warns the Post Fire Marshal. "All personnel are cautioned to be careful to prevent brush and grass fires and to report them promptly."

In the summer, there are camp fires and in the fall, there are leaf fires and bonfires, Post Fire Chief George Geller pointed out. "Careless handling of smoking material invites outdoor fires. Extreme efforts to entirely eliminate the fire occurrence is necessary. All personnel, military and civilian, should be familiar with six safety rules to prevent seasonal fire hazards."

- Never start an outdoor fire on a windy day.
- Never toss lighted cigarettes and matches away.
- In camping, never start fires near trees, buildings or fences.
- After putting out any outdoor fire, stay around until ashes are cool enough to test with your bare hands.
- Keep children away from open fires.
- Smother camp fires with sand or dirt and douse with water.

"If a fire starts in grass or brush, the first thing you do," warns the Fire Chief, "is to call the fire department immediately. Never delay in giving the alarm. Be prepared for the coming dry season with its serious threat of disastrous fires."

Speed Reading courses on the Presidio attract a large number of officers and enlisted men as evidenced by this picture of the on-duty instruction given by TI & E's Ralph McElroy. Presidio personnel are taught methods of improving reading speed with various instruments and textbooks. Classes are also given during off-duty hours at the Benjamin Franklin Adult School for Post personnel.

Try Education's Newest Course In Speed Reading Techniques

With the demand for quicker comprehension of the written word becoming greater daily, the Presidio of San Francisco TI&E Section has inaugurated a speed reading course for officers and enlisted personnel.

Under the direction of Ralph L. McElroy, civilian educational adviser, personnel are instructed in speed reading in on-duty and off-duty courses lasting just under a month in duration.

The courses are taught in Building 240. Off-duty courses are under the auspices of the Benjamin Franklin Adult School.

"The course," says McElroy, "is designed to increase reading speed and comprehension by decreasing reading regressions, vocalization including auditory inner-speech or inner-hearing and lip movements in silent reading; by increasing perception span and span of recognition; by reading for main ideas; by reading with better concentration; by improving vocabulary; by developing a wider reading selection and by improving study habits."

The training is given with the tachistoscope and reading accelerators and four text books, in addition to training films and the Harvard Reading Series. Twenty-four students are currently being given instruction in the on-duty course and a like number in the off-duty class.

The scope of the course includes: Training in instantaneous phrase perception with flash-cards and tachistoscope; reading films; training in paced reading accelerators and reading exercises and training in vocabulary development and habits of reading with appropriate drill exercises and selected reading assignments.

SOUND ADVICE is what Lieutenant Colonel William H. Bliss gives to his two swimming daughters here. Left is Joan, 8, just beginning and Susan, 11, a National Junior Olympic champion in her age group. Susan will sit out the 1956 Olympic Games, but has her sights set on the '60 games.

Little Miss Bliss Zeros Sights On '60 Olympics

She may only read about Melbourne, Australia's 1956 Olympic Games fete, but pretty little Susan Bliss, already a fierce competitor, plans to be in the thick of things come 1960.

Susan, 11-year-old daughter of Lieutenant Colonel and Mrs. William H. Bliss, has set her swimming sights on becoming a member of the United States team in the '60 Games.

And Susan, whose father is assigned to Sixth Army chemical section, is moving in the right direction, too. She's determined to be a swimming champion.

To fulfill her ambition, Susan practices twice each week in the Letterman Army Hospital pool and twice more in the Treasure Island plunge where she is coached by top swimming authorities of the Berkeley YWCA.

The practice sessions have paid off, too.

Susan is entitled to wear three badges emblematic of top performances in the AAU Age Group swimming competition, AAU Junior Olympics and Junior National champion.

The biggest thrill of her swimming career, says Susan, came when she won the National Age Group championship and set a new record at the same time. She was timed in 37.2 for the 50-yard butterfly, her best event.

Susan, attending Grant School's sixth grade class, has her eyes set on the still distant '60 Olympics, but her immediate goal is to do well in the Junior Olympic Short Course competition in Sacramento 20 May.

"I hope I do better than last year," she grinned. She admits, however, that "last year" wasn't too awfully bad. Susan merely took three first places and two second places in a total of seven events.

Little Miss Bliss first became interested in swimming when "Dad started teaching me." Later she was coached at LAH pool and joined a team formed there in 1954. When it was disrupted because of the coach's ETS, Susan joined the Berkeley Y.

Susan has a spur to fame, too; right in the family, as a matter of fact. Sister Joan, 8, is developing right along as a swimmer.

Fran Zellers Scores Twin Hawaii Wins

Iron man Lowell Zellers, of the 505th Military Police, proved the individual star of the day when the Sixth Army Track squad competed with the Hawaiian AAU team in an Olympic Fund meet held last weekend in Hawaii.

Over a slow, muddy track Zellers won the two-mile run in 9:39, a new record, and came right back to win the mile in 4:24 with a sensational closing kick over Ken Reiser and Chuck Cappozzoli of the Sixth Army team. Zellers also took second in the 880 to round out a great day of running for the local-MP lieutenant.

Fort Ord's Alex Burl was the only other double winner as he sped to a 9:8 and 21:6 clockings in the 100 and 220 sprints.

Private Jim Mathias of Fort Ord, brother of Olympic champion Bob Mathias, took a first place in the shot with a heave of 45 feet 9 inches and a second in the discus with a heave of 151 feet.

Sfc. Dick Smith, Oakland Army Terminal, won the javelin throw when he unlimbered a toss of 189 feet.

Some 2500 track fans braved the elements to watch the Olympic Fund meet on a muddy track at Hawaii's Alexander Field.

Bickel Takes First In MP Ping Pong Tilt

Specialist Third Class William Bickel won the recent Headquarters Company 505th Military Police Battalion's ping-pong tournament when he defeated Specialist Third Class Larry P. Stewart in a close match.

Bickel took championship honors by downing Stewart, 21-14, 25-27 and 21-14.

A total of 32 men of the company entered the tourney conducted by C.O. First Lieutenant Bernard D. Bridgeman and Master Sergeant Cristobal Seva.

Army Champs Boast Five Pro Stars

Five pro players will begin their second season with the Fort McPherson team when the All-Army champions open their 46-game schedule against Fort Jackson, April 17. Heading the list are Second Baseman Joe Golden, Shortstop Billy Moran and Pitchers Bob Anderton and Billy O'Dell. Golden, a member of the Athletics organization, last played for Savannah (Sally). Moran, owned by Cleveland, was with Reading (Eastern) at the time of his induction. Anderton, a Pittsburgh chatel, was with New Orleans until he was drafted and O'Dell, a bonus baby, was with the Orioles.

Al Casino's Grand Slam Homerun Dunks Sailors

Paced by Al Casino's grand slam homerun in the second inning the Torero baseball team clubbed the Alameda Naval Flyers into submission last Monday afternoon 24-3 in a slugfest played on the Alameda diamond.

The Presidio lads fattened their batting averages during the seven inning route with Casino getting four for four followed by Dick Shannon with three for four. Norm Ellenberger and Chuck Matzen had three hits apiece in five turns at the plate for runner-up hitting honors.

Defensive play was highlighted by leftfielder Ben Camera's great running catch of a long Alameda drive in the bottom of the fifth.

George Hanes started on the mound for the Post and was relieved by Lee Walker in the third, who got credit for the victory:

Team captain Dick Shannon announced that a need for catchers and outfielders still exists on the Presidio nine and anyone interested please contact the Post Sports Office in building 122 or by calling 3968.

This afternoon Lee Walker will get the starting nod for the Toreros when they play host to the visiting San Diego Marine Recruit Depot. The game is slated for 1230 hours on the Fort Scott ball field.

The Presidio is playing a free-lance schedule this year, with games set up with leading service and semi-pro teams in Northern California.

Last year the locals captured first place in the Bay Area Armed Forces League and second in the All-Sixth Army tournament to the powerful Ford Ord Warriors.

Spikers

Presidio Volleyball Men Score High In Tourney

Sparked by all-around team play the Presidio Volleyball squad won a third and a fifth place last week-end in the Far Western Volleyball Championships. The matches were played on the Alameda Navy courts.

Friday's armed forces clash attracted 14 teams, with the locals opening up with a win over the host Alameda team followed by a victory from the Point Magu Navy club.

The Post men ran into Hamilton Air Force next and fell before the defending armed forces champs despite some outstanding play by Bob Moran and Matt Schmutz.

The next two games went to the Presidio with wins over McClellan Air Force and Parks Air Base. Bob Noel and Dick Godino played especially well in the twin victories.

Alameda Navy came back in the following game to defeat the Presidio in the finals of the losers' bracket.

Los Alamitos (Navy) won the title with Hamilton second and the Presidio winding up in the third slot.

On Saturday a total of 16 teams, including top YMCA and college teams, entered the Far Western meet with the top three service squads from the previous day's action.

Major Bob Jones' team turned in their most impressive victory of the 1956 season when they edged UCLA Intercollegiate champs, 13-15, 15-7 and 15-10. Great play by Catalino Ignacino, Jerry Steiner and Frank McDonnell sparked the win.

After dropping a match to the Long Beach "Y" the soldiers

King Salmon Planted In Local Lakes

Approximately 500,000 king salmon eggs have been planted in the Russian River and 500 adult king salmon have been planted in Shasta Lake.

The egg plantings were made in the East Branch of the Russian River on the Webber property below the proposed Coyote Damsite.

It is hoped that with the construction of the Coyote Dam and suitable cold water releases from it, it will be possible to establish a satisfactory run of king salmon in the Russian River in the future. It also is hoped to make additional plantings in the next several years.

The adult king salmon, taken from the Keswick Dam trap on the Sacramento River, were planted in Shasta Lake with the hope they will spawn in tributaries to the lake and eventually provide a temporary future fishery.

James D. Stokes, regional manager of the Department of Fish and Game, explained these fish were surplus; that is there are more spawning salmon in the upper river than there are spawning gravels to accommodate them.

Quantico, Va., and Parris Island, S. C., have lined up 102 and 104-game baseball schedules this season.

Divot Men Massacre Two Rock

Sparked by Bill Krause's fine one over par 73 the Presidio Golf team turned on the power last Friday afternoon to whip the Two Rock Ranch Station divot takers 26-1 in a match played on the Sharp Park course.

Krause, playing number four man, earned three points in rolling to a lopsided 21 stroke margin over his opponent.

Leon Thomas and Milton Rosenberg turned in two over par 74s for runnerup scoring honors for the Post golfers. Other PSF scores were Rollin Kapp, 77, John Roberts, 80, and Tom Ward, 82.

This afternoon at 1300 hours the locals will play host to the powerful Hamilton Air Force Base divot squad. The match will be played on the Sharp Park course.

Hurdler Top Performer At 1st Quantico Relays

Quantico, Va. (AFPS)—Olympic hurdler Jack Davis, now a Navy lieutenant at the San Diego NTC, Calif., won the 120-yard high hurdles in 13.8 seconds, .3 seconds off the world mark, in the closing session of the Quantico Relays.

The former USC star, who lost to Harrison Dillard in the 1952 Olympic 110-meter high hurdles final, was voted the outstanding performer of the two-day meet. A special award for the top Marine athlete of the gigantic relay carnival went to Quantico's Al Cantello who won the javelin throw with a heave of 202' 10½".

Davis took the lead at the gun and despite the soft footing caused by a driving rain opening day whipped over the 10 barriers in fine style. North Carolina College's Olympic candidate Lee Calhoun, three-time winner over Davis on a shorter course during the indoor season, finished five yards back in second place.

More than 1,000 track and field stars from service, college and club teams invaded Butler Stadium here to compete in the first major test of the outdoor season. The rain which fell made the going rough but not one of the program's 35 events was cancelled.

Tom Courtney, the Ft. Dix, N. J., middle distance runner who is a top Olympic prospect won the 880-yard run in 1:12.8. The smooth-striding Fordham grad crossed the wire five yards ahead of John Barnes of Chanute AFB, Ill.

World record holder Parry O'Brien of Travis AFB, Calif., tossed the 16-lb. iron ball 57' 4" to take first place in the shot put. Desmond Koch from the AF reserve training center in Los Angeles won the discus throw with a 164' 7" effort and O'Brien was second with 161' 8".

An Air Force team, aided by an 880 at 1:54.7 from anchorman Lon Spurrier of Hamilton AFB, Calif., won the service and club sprint relay in 3:28.5. Other members of the AF relay team were Burke Wilson, Sheppard AFB, Tex.; Paul Williams, Alaskan Air Command, and Thane Baker, Lockbourne AFB, Ohio.

Director of the relays was Lt. Tom Rosandich, Quantico's track coach, and head referee was Dan Ferris, secretary-treasurer of the National Amateur Athletic Union. A distinguished group of spectators included Secretary of the Navy Charles S. Thomas and Gen. Rendolph McC. Pate, commandant of the Marine Corps.

TORERO TRACK team of six members is busy training for the first annual Northern California Armed Forces Track and Field meet which will be held on 5 May in Berkeley. Service posts throughout the northern part of the state will enter the day long cinder trials. Any personnel on the Presidio with track experience are urged to contact the sports office in building 122 or ext. 3968. Present members of the squad are, front row (l. to r.) Olen Wright, Bill Paulson and Don Dryden. Back row, Fran Zellers, Purcell Daniels and Lee Schroeder.

Presidio Wins Area Crown In Volleyball

The Presidio volleyball squad behind the outstanding spiking of Matt Schmutz and Jess Gonzales breezed through the 1956 Sixth Army Central Division tournament last week in the Fort Ord sports center.

The Post team, coached by Major Bob Jones, who led the Presidio to the All-Army title last season, opened the tourney by blasting Ord 15-4 and 15-6.

Fort Ord came back through the loser's bracket to drop the Sacramento Signal Depot twice for the right to play the Presidio in the double elimination finals.

The men from Ord won the first game 15-10 as Ron Mitler, former USC football star, turned in some outstanding spiking. The Presidio rallied, however, behind some outstanding play by Harry Matthews, Bob Noel and Frank McDonnell to win the next two games by the lopsided scores of 15-6 and 15-5 for first place.

This Sunday the locals will plane to Fort Lewis for the All-Sixth Army Volleyball tournament which will be held from 30 April through 4 May. The Sixth Army champions will be entered in the United States Nationals in Seattle, Washington, 9-12 May.

Seals Have 50c Tickets For Soldiers

Sprint Star

Schroeder Leads Post To 3rd In Track Meet

A small but powerful Presidio track and field team averaged eight and one-half points per man last Saturday in Reno, Nevada, to finish a strong third behind the University of Nevada and Chico State College.

Team captain Lee Schroeder was the individual scoring star of the afternoon with 16 points. Lee won the 220-yard sprint in 22 flat, came right back to finish second in the 100-yard churn. Schroeder also captured the broad jump with a winning distance of 22 feet and nabbed a second in the discus with a toss of 131 feet.

Local sprint star Purcell Daniels won the 100 in 10 flat, took second in the 220, fourth in the low hurdles and tossed the shot 45 feet for another second place ribbon.

The shot put was won by Olen Wright for the Presidio with a mighty heave of 50 feet. Wright's discus mark of 130 feet was good for a third place award.

Presidio javelin ace Bill Paulson won the top prize in his specialty with a toss of 179 feet 8 inches.

Local distance man Don Dryden wound up the day's scoring by coming from behind on the last lap to take the second spot in the mile gallop.

With the strength of the Post team standing at only six men, more athletes are urgently needed for the Northern California Armed Forces Track meet which will be held on 5 May in Berkeley.

Any track men on the Presidio or its sub-posts with experience are urged to contact the sports office in building 122 or by calling ext. 3968.

soldier ump

George Barr, former N. L. umpire, and Robert Rine, an instructor in Barr's umpire school at Sanford, Fla., concluded a clinic for arbiters in the Far East Command, 13 April. Barr, who had made five previous trips to the Orient, and Rine operated a clinic at Camp Drake for Army, Navy and Marine personnel from 2 to 6 April, and for Air Force arbiters at Fuchu, 9 to 13 April.

Post Fencers Win Second In Foil Tilt

The combined Presidio-Letterman Army Hospital fencing squad played host to the Northern California open foil team championships last Saturday night in the Letterman sports center and wound up the night's action in second place.

The locals entered three teams in the evening's foil bouts with the first team composed of Colonel Laurence Brownlee, Herb Rhodes and Jose Tafoya taking second behind the San Francisco Olympic Club, 5 to 4.

The second team of Leo Thompson, Bill Stark and George Kester was edged out of the finals by the Berkeley Fencers Club by the narrow margin of one touch.

Servero Pasol, John Beauvois and Pete Schwartz made up the third squad and were defeated by the first team 9 to 0 in the first bout of the evening.

The local bladesmen are looking forward to the Pacific Coast Fencing championships where Herb Rhodes, Jose Tafoya and George Kester will represent the local garrison. The bouts will be held at the Los Angeles Athletic Club on 19-20 May.

keg loop

The Presidio Special Services announced this week that two new bowling leagues are in the process of being formed. The loops are being set up for action on Tuesday and Friday evenings. More teams and individual keg stars are wanted and those interested should contact Sgt. Alexander at Ext. 2313.

Hot Missilemen!

AAA Will Field Top Rifle Team In Roberts Tourney

The antiaircraft and Nike missilemen of the San Francisco Bay Area will field a star-studded rifle team for the Sixth Army Area matches, starting today at Camp Roberts.

Led by four outstanding shots, the local rifle marksmen will form one-third of the Sixth Antiaircraft Artillery Command team. The other parts of the command's riflemen will come from the Pacific Northwest and Los Angeles areas.

The San Francisco Bay Area team, in practice on the Fort Barry range for three weeks, will be led by Major Charles O. May of the Sixth AA Regional Command Headquarters. May is rifle competition chief and chief coordinator for all antiaircraft teams participating in the event.

He has had many years of small bore and rifle competition to his credit and has placed well in national matches.

Another member of the AA team expected to be among the top shooters is Chief Warrant Officer James V. Morrison, who has two legs on a Distinguished Marksman medal and who expects to win the third at Camp Roberts.

Mister Morrison has won the Distinguished Marksman (small bore) Medal and small bore and rifle competition in the Alaska Armed Forces matches, 1949-1951.

Another of the team's top shooters is Master Sergeant Eugene Booth, team captain of the Presidio Gun Club and holder of the expert classification in the National Rifle Association.

The team's coach is Chief Warrant Officer Wayne F. Shipton of the 740th AAA Battalion. He, like Mister Morrison, will be trying to shoot himself into the elite company of U.S. Army Distinguished Marksmen.

Other members of the team are: 1st Lieutenant Leonard Allen, Pvt. Richard Fuchs, Pfc. William Miller, Pvt. Roger Monks, Pvt. Merle Pagh, Pvt. John Lindsey and Sfc. Hervey Sturdevant.

The Mexican administration of the Presidio paid a teacher $10 a month during the 1820's to operate a school for military dependents.

Task Force Will Leave U.S. For DEW

Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker has announced that a task force of more than 3,000 specially trained Army troops will move into remote reaches of the American Arctic this summer to resupply isolated stations of the "DEW Line" radar network.

The operation will be in support of the northernmost radar defense project being carried out jointly by Canada and the United States. "DEW Line" is designed to provide critically important early radar warning for the North American Continent against possible transpolar air attack.

The 1956 resupply operation follows initial delivery of 200,000 tons of "DEW Line" construction materials in 1955.

Training machinery for this summer's operation is being set up at the Transportation Training Command, Fort Eustis, Va.

Troops assigned to the project will receive specialized training in amphibious operations including operation of a variety of landing craft, including LCMs (landing craft, mechanized), LCUs (landing craft, utility), DUKWs (amphibious trucks), and World War II LVTs (landing vehicles, tracked).

Training will also be given on new vehicles such as the giant 60-ton amphibious "BARC" which will be employed in some locations to ferry exceptionally heavy cargo.

In the forthcoming operation, Transportation Corps troops will discharge general cargo and bulk petroleum products of slightly lesser tonnage from cargo ships standing off "DEW Line" radar stations which extend across the Arctic rim.

Ships and lighters can operate in the Arctic "DEW Line" area for only a few weeks during August and September.

During the critically short period when discharge operations can be carried on, the Army troops will work around the clock landing supplies over beaches of widely varied characteristics, from tidal mud flats to rockbound cliffs. Some 15,000 tons of cranes, bulldozers, forklift trucks and special cargo handling equipment will be used on the land side of the operations.

Troops of the special Army group will be divided into two task forces, one working from the Atlantic side and the other from the Pacific. They will be carried to their destinations aboard oceangoing transports of the Navy's Military Sea Transportation Service.

The eastern task force is scheduled to leave Ft. Eustis late in July, about the same time the western task force is leaving from the Seattle Army Terminal, Seattle, Washington. The two task forces will rendezvous separately in the operating areas early in August.

When the combined force reaches the landing areas, the Arctic summer will be past its height. Temperatures will average about 30°F. during daylight. Before the ships again reach the open seas in late September, the Arctic winter will be at hand.

Icebergs, pack ice and floe ice will provide constant hazards to the operation. Additional difficulties will be presented by the fogs and Arctic cyclones which are most numerous during the Arctic summer. During 1955, as much as three weeks of the operating season were lost at some locations due to ice and adverse weather, and similar conditions may be expected in 1956.

All elements are expected to return to the United States by early October.

Congress Passes Physician, Dentist Incentive Measure

Washington (AFPS)—Congress has passed and sent to the White House the physician and dentist incentive bill which provides increases in special pay and longevity credit for post-graduate training and internship.

The pay hike will become effective when President Eisenhower fixes his signature to the legislation, originally sponsored by the Defense Department.

Physicians and dentists now get $100 monthly as special pay in addition to regular pay and allowances.

The bill ups this incentive pay to $150 a month after two years service; $200 after six years, and $250 after 10.

In the original draft of the bill, it was proposed the increase in special pay start after three years' active duty.

A last minute amendment by the Senate, however, reduced this time to two years and the measure was returned to the House for final approval.

The longevity provision of the bill could mean as much as $78 a month for some physicians and dentists by giving them pay credits for four years of post-graduate study in medical or dental schools and one year of internship.

The legislation also would permit the upgrading of these officers now on the active list to reflect a one year increase of "constructive service credit."

Six Months' Reserve Trainees Get $28 Monthly Pay Hike

As a prelude to the Military Reserve Week recruiting drive, President Eisenhower signed a measure hiking the pay of six-months' reserve trainees from $50 to $78 a month.

The increase was passed by Congress and approved by the President to correct an "inequity" in the Reserve Forces Act of 1955, which paid national guardsmen training in the short active duty tour more than reservists enlisting for the same program.

Outstanding Performance by Sergeant First Class Donovan K. Smith, while serving in a supervisory capacity with the Army Transportation Corps household goods and baggage branch in Japan was officially recognized by the government, and the Army expressed its thanks by awarding Sgt. Smith the Commendation Ribbon with Medal pendant. Captain Frederick V. H. Hills, Chief of Staff, Headquarters Maneuver Director for operation "High Seas" pinned the medal on the sergeant after the citation had been read to the assembled staff of the CPX. Sergeant Smith came to the operation on TDY from Hq. Co., 6003 SU at Fort Ord.

Law Group Says Army Hurt By Old Custom

Washington (AFPS) — The House of Delegates of the American Bar Association at its recent mid-year meeting in Chicago adopted a resolution condemning the practice of offering military service as an alternative to prosecution and imprisonment for crimes.

The association said such practice is contrary to the best interests of the United States and the armed forces, and urged that this alternative not be offered by judges and public prosecutors.

The group pointed out that membership in the armed forces is an honorable occupation, demanding the highest standards of integrity and professional ethics. It is not a place for misfits, they said.

An irresponsible person could cause more damage in the service than in almost any other position, the association added. The serviceman is often called upon to guard security matters and to uphold the prestige of the United States overseas.

The group said that offering military service as an alternative to prosecution or imprisonment unfairly sullies the good name of the armed forces and is harmful to the country as a whole.

New Program

Support Offered Student Nurses In Final Training

Women student nurses now enrolled in recognized schools of nursing who have completed two years' study may finish their formal training under the auspices of the Army, Department of the Army said this week.

Selected candidates will be enlisted in the Women's Army Corps Reserve, called to active duty and allowed to continue their studies in school.

These future nurses will receive pay and allowances in excess of $200 per month, DA said.

Participating students will be required to:

1—Accept commissions in the Army Nurse Corps Reserve as second lieutenants.

2—Serve on active duty for two years if the time spent in training is less than 12 months, or serve on active duty for three years if the time spent in training is over 12 but less than 24 months.

Students enrolled in either three or four year programs may participate if they meet basic requirements.

Persons interested may obtain information by writing to the Surgeon General, Department of the Army, Washington, D. C.; Attention Chief Personnel Division.

Vets' Affairs Committee Asks Education Benefits For Kids WWII, K-Vets

New legislation sent to the House by the Veterans' Affairs Committee would provide education benefits for children of WWII and Korean veterans who were unable to finish school as a result of the veteran's service connected disability.

Special to The Star Presidian

Camp Roberts—Sunny skies and balmy breezes favored hundreds of military and civilian marksmen here this week as the annual Sixth Army rifle and pistol matches got under way.

Operation Big Shoot, as it has been dubbed by the keen-eyed shots, opened with full military ceremonies, featuring an address by Major General Walter J. Muller, deputy commanding general, Sixth Army, and Major General Gilman C. Mudgett, commanding general Fort Ord and 5th Division.

Also present at the opening ceremony was Brigadier General John D. F. Phillips, 5th Division artillery commander, and Brigadier General Cyrus A. Dolph, III, assistant 5th Division commander.

General Muller fired the first shot of the meet signifying the official opening.

A heavy overcast that broke midway in the second day's activities, giving way to a dazzling sunny sky with temperatures soaring to the high eighties, gave competitors a severe test.

However, competition of the keenest variety prevails among both rifle and pistolmen.

Here are incomplete results, received as the Star Presidian went to press:

Match No. 6 course of fire: two strings, ten shots per string, slow fire, 50 yards, any center fire pistol, ten minutes per string, winner with 184, Captain Arthur S. Manchester, 5th Infantry Regiment, Fort Lewis, Washington. Tied with 183 apiece, Sfc. Stanley N. Braithwaite, Hq. Co., 5th Infantry Division, and ADI Leland W. Melching, Alameda NAS.

Army Secretary, Vice Chief Plan AFD Speeches For SF

Two high ranking visitors from the Pentagon—one military, the other civilian—will visit the Presidio in connection with the San Francisco area celebration of Armed Forces Day, it was announced this week.

Scheduled to visit the post on Friday 18 May is Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker.

Slated to visit the Presidio and its sub-posts and to inspect Bay Area Nike sites on Thursday 17 May is General Williston B. Palmer, vice chief of staff, U. S. Army.

Mr. Brucker, former Governor of Michigan and General Counsel of the Department of Defense, will address the San Francisco Commercial Club in an Armed Forces Day luncheon after his arrival on post.

He is scheduled to arrive at the Presidio Friday morning and will be accorded a 19-gun salute and Guard of Honor.

That evening, Presidio officer personnel, headed by Sixth Army Commander Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, will hold a reception in the Secretary's honor at the Officers' Open Mess.

Secretary Brucker

Following his address, Mr. Brucker will leave for Fort Ord and celebrate Armed Forces Day there. A 5th Division parade will be held in conjunction with his visit and he is scheduled to inspect Reserve Forces Act troops and other units also.

Persons interested in attending Mr. Brucker's address may obtain tickets by contacting Major Andrew Bretz, Jr., Sixth Army Information Section, Extension 2470.

General Palmer, meanwhile, is expected to arrive Wednesday evening 16 May. He will visit the post, although the major part of his visit will be concerned with inspection of Sixth Antiaircraft Command Nike sites in the Bay Area.

Following his tour, the General will give a talk before the San Francisco Post, American Ordnance Association, at the Fairmont Hotel. The speech is set for 2230 hours 17 May.

Landing Craft makes its way to the beach in this artist's conception of a new method of launching assault boats from airplanes. The boat is attached to the plane or placed inside it. When the plane, equipped with hydro-lift skis, hits the water, the boat is released and heads for the beach under its own power. The aircraft can then take off and return to the loading point for a returning boat. The system has been patented by E. B. Pierce of the All American Engineering Co., Wilmington, Del.

Danish Education Chief Lauds Soldiers High Moral Character

The free and democratic part that the American serviceman and his military organizations play in the civilian community and the high moral character of the individual soldier were the things that most impressed a ranking Danish Defense Department official during his visit to this country.

Dr. Jorgen Bogh, Director of Education of the Danish Armed Forces, Department of Defense, Copenhagen, Denmark, said during a visit to the Presidio, this week, that he was "greatly impressed by the fine military-civilian relationship your country enjoys."

"In Europe the military is isolated from the community. In reality a state of the state. Here the military is truly an expression of the people. Civilians may not only visit their military installations, they are welcomed. Most Europeans don't like their military because its isolation prevents understanding. As a result, it is often considered only a necessary evil."

Dr. Bogh, who holds a doctorate in theology and is one of Denmark's most highly regarded educators, is currently on the last leg of a three-month tour of defense establishments in this country. His major aim is to study and gain a better understanding of this country's military information and education programs.

He would like to introduce some of the accomplishments of the Army's education program into the Danish Army, but says this might be hard to do because of the country's social and economic structure.

"I think it would be extremely helpful to those young men in our services if we could further their vocational and educational training. I shall attempt, on my return, to set up such a program if I can gain the cooperation of the guilds and educational institutions."

Denmark relies on universal military training for the bulk of their servicemen. Average age is from 18 to 24 and length of service is 16 months. The old guild-union system is still in effect and vocational workers must serve long apprenticeships. For this reason Dr. Bogh feels it would be difficult to gain vocational credit during military service.

Dr. Bogh said that he had been a victim of false impression about America and American servicemen. An impression that is not only prevalent in Denmark, but throughout Europe.

"Recent popular writings about the American military services, movies and other media of this type had left me with a distorted viewpoint on American military life."

"That is why I was so surprised to find the American soldier of such high moral character. I believe it is even higher than our own. I came prepared for a certain emphasis on sex and the like. Instead, I have found the American serviceman not only interested in a variety of cultural and political subjects, but well informed in these interests."

Since his visit to the U.S. Dr. Bogh has become more convinced than ever before that the success of Western democracy lies far beyond joint military aims.

"I must agree with your Mr. Dulles. Only by a greater exchange of economic and cultural ideas can we reach an understanding that will prevent future conflicts of national and international aims."

Danish Visitor Mr. Jorgen Bogh, Director of Education for the Danish Armed Forces, acquaints himself with the news content, layout and format of the Star Presidian, in the post newspaper office. Hosting Mr. Bogh to a tour of the various Presidio offices and sections were Lieutenant Colonel Howard D. Lowe, Executive Officer for Sixth Army T&E and Major Earle K. Stewart, Post T&E Officer.

"I think it is extremely important for our countries to exchange the best, and most representative, aspects of our cultures. I would like to see some mission of this type set up within the framework of NATO."

Dr. Bogh speaks excellent English and said that most of the businessmen, educators and politicians of Denmark must have a command of at least three languages to successfully function.

"Being a small nation (four millions) we must learn English, German and a little French. In the years ahead more than 75 per cent of our school children will be given a chance to learn English."

A journalist in his own right, he was a working newsman on the Copenhagen daily "Kristeligt Dagblad." Mr. Bogh was intrigued with the variety of Army newspapers.

"They are all good. In my country we have few military newspapers. Occasionally one of the units stationed outside of the homeland will publish a small newspaper. However, there are usually difficulties since we have no funds for such publications."

Dr. Bogh felt that the lack of military publications was no great loss in the Danish scheme of things.

"Our standing army is so small (35,000) and centrally located that we place emphasis on the reading of community papers. We feel these papers play an important role in making our soldiers aware of their citizenship responsibilities."

About other phases of the Army's information and education program the visitor was equally articulate. He was highly impressed by the skilled use of audio-visual aids and the calibre of instruction he saw during visits to Presidio classrooms. He was further impressed by the scope and the voluntary participation in the many programs.

"In my country we rely mainly on the discussion type of information conference, which is compulsory. However, our instructors are never neutral. Although we welcome opposite or radical opinions as natural spurs toward proper exposition of a controversial subject, we would never allow an instructor to present a strictly neutralist approach. He must be on our side of the presentation or he would lack effectiveness."

On the other hand, Dr. Bogh said that the personal politics of any individual has no bearing on his acceptability for service.

A Lutheran, Dr. Bogh was impressed with the number and the work of American military chaplains.

"I think they are doing a splendid job. Strangely enough, in your country, which we theologians would classify as non-confessional, you find military chaplains very successful. In my country, which is a confessional country and has no military chaplains we would have little success in this field."

Dr. Bogh visited Sixth Army and Post T&E sections while at the Presidio. He will leave San Francisco today and expects to be back in Denmark by the end of this month.

DEADLINE IS WEDNESDAY NOON

Local Officer Leads New Nuclear Team

A Mill Valley Army captain has been named by Department of the Army to head a group of Armed Services personnel slated to become instructors in a new military occupational field as nuclear reactor power plant operators.

Heading the military contingent of future instructors is Captain Richard W. Graham, 76 Ryan Avenue, Mill Valley.

Captain Graham will be class leader over 33 other service members who reported to the Army Engineer Center at Fort Belvoir, Virginia, for instruction designed to prepare them as nuclear reactor power plant operators and maintenance men.

The plant, now in construction at Fort Belvoir, will be under the supervision of the Atomic Energy Commission, but operated by the Corps of Engineers.

The service personnel reported to the University of Virginia this week after checking in with military authorities at Belvoir.

At the University, the group, which has 20 Army members among its ranks, will be given a special basic preparatory course in the fundamentals of nuclear power plant operations. The course is five months in duration.

Following instruction there, the group will be assigned duty at AEC laboratories in order to obtain practical experience.

Once that phase of their training is completed, the group will be divided, with some men slated for assignment at Fort Belvoir and the rest to the National Reactor Testing Station at Idaho Falls, Idaho.

The target date for opening of training courses at Fort Belvoir is the summer of next year.

The group sent to the University of Virginia was carefully chosen. All were required to have military ratings of not less than E-5 as well as certain educational background, intelligence quotient, experience and physical qualifications.

Presidio Tots Get First Salk Shots; Small Fry Prove Cooperative Patients

Presidio of San Francisco's Salk polio vaccine program got underway this week and immediate reaction of the small fry was, "It didn't hurt a bit."

With Lieutenant Colonel Harry Spitz, post surgeon, personally officiating, the immunization program of Presidio's military dependents neared completion today. Almost 500 children from 5 years to 9 trooped through the immunization line for their shots.

The Colonel expects the remaining doses of the vaccine to be administered next week. All told, dispensary personnel have innoculated on the average of 90 children and expectant mothers this week.

Typical reaction of children receiving shots came when one 8-year-old girl smiled up at the Colonel and said, "I don't know why everybody in my school is afraid of polio shots."

Earlier, however, she expressed some doubt about the whole thing to her mother. "I don't know about this, Mommy," she said, watching as a child ahead of her in the line was examined by Dr. Marjorie Regello.

Once the shot had been administered by Sergeant Val Cherechukin and Corporal Homer M. Coreris, she felt braver, rubbing her arm and smiling at the Colonel.

Children who received shots this week and those who have appointments for next week will further be immunized against the dread disease with the second shot in the three-shot series in approximately a month.

The third shot will be administered in seven to nine months, Colonel Spitz said.

After the first shipment of the vaccine has been used, the program will be extended to expectant mothers and children six months to 15 years of age.

Point System

Top ROTC Students May Win New Superior Cadet Ribbon

An annual award called the Superior Cadet Ribbon will be given by the Army to the best ROTC student at senior institutions throughout the country.

A point chart will be used as the basis of selection and 300 points will represent maximum achievement. Criteria will consist of the following:

- Military grades—50 points.
- Academic leadership — 50 points.
- Military leadership — 50 points.
- Academic leadership — 50 points.
- Consistent demonstration of potential qualities as an officer of the Army—100 points.

The Army also stated that any cadet who wins more than once will be given the "Appurtenance for Subsequent Award of the Superior Cadet Ribbon" as an attachment.

Eligibility requires that a cadet must be: 1) Regularly enrolled in courses that lead to a degree. 2) Stand in the upper fourth of his class in academic and ROTC ratings. 3) Recommended by both the PMS&T and the dean.

Following grading by the point system, a final selection will be made by a special board at each institution. The PMS&T will serve as board president and the board will consist of commissioned and enlisted instructors, civilian faculty or institutional members and student representatives as chosen by the PMS&T.

The board will be formed at the start of the school year in order that members will be able to judge the cadet's entire annual performance.

Mid-term graduates will be given consideration also.

SASC Approves New Medical Care Bill; Faces Final Tests

The Senate Armed Services Committee has approved the dependent Medical Care Bill which would authorize wives and children of servicemen to be treated in civilian hospitals at government expense in areas where no military facilities are available.

The legislation would permit the Defense Department to purchase group insurance to set up the medical care program, which is expected to cost $76 million yearly. Servicemen would be required to pay only the first $25 of any hospitalization fee for their dependents under the plan.

Careful—Safety Week Ahead!

Government workers on Presidio have been issued a challenge by the Federal Safety Council.

Job Safety Week, starting Sunday 13 May and running through Saturday 19 May, has been dedicated by President Eisenhower, with the challenge to every department and agency being—no accidents during the entire week of observance.

Sponsored by the Federal Safety Council, the commemoration week has been established to demonstrate to government employees the importance and responsibility of working safely.

The President hopes Job Safety Week will implant in the minds of Government workers the realization that if they can greatly reduce accidents during the week then they can do so all year round.

Local First Presidio Wac Wins Suggestion Award For Ideas On QM

The first known suggestion award certificate to be won by an enlisted woman at the Presidio was presented here recently to Pvt/2 Marguerite Ferguson of Company D, 6002nd SU, assigned to the Post Quartermaster Clothing Section.

Credited with eliminating thousands of steps taken by servicemen and women daily, in process of collecting new and used uniforms submitted for alterations, the enlisted woman's idea for time-saving and wear and tear on shoe leather was adopted immediately after approval by the Local Incentive Awards Board. It is being recommended for general adoption by units presently using the more outmoded system.

Pvt. Ferguson was awarded a Certificate of Achievement issued by the Awards Board and signed by Colonel John E. Stewart, the board's chairman.

The Wac's idea was the centralizing of a three-part series of clothing tickets, whereby the cashier had the final ticket at hand when the enlisted man or woman came to collect the finished uniform. Formerly, the tickets were so allocated that two trips had to be made by the customer to the cashier's desk, one prior to completion of the work and one afterwards.

The new system, now in effect, eliminated two journeys over a 150-foot area involving the opening and shutting of a ponderous sliding door.

7 May Judging Three Presidians Have Entries In Army Photo Finals

Winners in the Army section of the Sixth interservice photography contest will be selected on 7 May at the Pentagon in Washington, D. C.

Some 281 entries from installations around the world will be judged by Wallace Kirkland, Life magazine photographer; Don Bennett, editor of PSA Journal, and Edwin Wisherd, National Geographic Society.

Forty-one of the best photographs will be picked to compete against winners in other services.

Two officers and ten enlisted men from the Sixth Army area will be among the Army level finalists.

Three Presidio personnel will have pictures in the finals. They include Lt. Col. David E. MacQuigg, winner in the color transparency class; Sfc. Gladys H. Rutter, runnerup in the same class, and M/Sgt. Fred Coulson, who finished fifth in the black and white category.

Nation's Leading Artists Asked To Illustrate Soldier's Conduct Code

Through the Society of Illustrators, the Defense Department has asked the country's top artists to submit sketches illustrating the U. S. Fighting Man's Code.

Six of these sketches will be selected by members of the Defense Advisory Committee on Prisoners of War for completion and reproduction as color posters.

Winning artists will be commissioned to complete final sketches and artwork. Preliminary sketches must be forwarded by 10 June.

Final posters will be displayed at service installations throughout the nation.

Taking Six more years of Army duty, Sfc. Clarence T. Baxter, food service supervisor of the 30th AAA Group, located at Fort Barry, raises his right hand and repeats the solemn oath of allegiance being administered by Colonel Dallas F. Haynes, Commanding Officer, 30th AAA Group, who swore the sergeant in for his current tour. Sgt. Baxter reenlisted to fill his own vacancy within his organization.

Wacs Capture Parade Plaque Eighth Time During Friday's March

Eight-time winner of the halloved plaque for precision marching is once again the Wac Company, 6002nd SU, which copped the laurels during last week's formal parade.

In competition with an otherwise all-male marching contingent comprising Presidio troops, the taupe-skirted soldiers have been consistent winners of the coveted plaque award since its inception on this Post.

Their closest competitors are the Presidio Honor Guard unit, noted throughout California for its superb marching form.

Making the precision award plaque presentation to Captain Virginia I. Engels, Wac Commander, was Lieutenant Colonel John P. McKenna, Sixth Army Provost Marshal Section.

Major General John F. R. Seitz has been named to succeed Maj. Gen. Robert A. McClure of MAAG in Iran. Gen. McClure will retire next month.

Army Lets Two Contracts For New Aircraft Research

Department of the Army announced this week that it has let two awards of contract for research in the possible development of an operational airplane that would combine the vertical takeoff and landing abilities of the helicopter with the high-speed capabilities of the modern transport.

The contracts are not for the development of such an airplane, but for the conduct of applied research.

Awarded to Doak Aircraft Company of Torrance, Calif., ($341,673) and Fairchild Aircraft Division of Hagerstown, Maryland ($1,007,087), these new projects call for the construction and evaluation of research aircraft at a much reduced scale in size and time and at 10 to 20 per cent of the cost required to develop a complete airplane.

During a recent inspection tour of the Sixth Army area, General Hamilton H. Howze, chief of Army Aviation told the Star Presidian that the Army was seeking "a light durable fixed-winged aircraft capable of manifold tasks."

Differing in some respects from the "convertiplane" or convertible airplane which the Army is now experimenting with, the new research plane will feature several unique high lift devices for quicker takeoffs and shorter landings.

Along with other programs being carried on by the Navy and Air Force, these new research aircraft (test beds) will be used to investigate advanced aerodynamic design principles for future military aircraft.

Successful research would benefit small communities now unable to afford expensive terminal facilities.

Meritorious Service while serving with the United States Military Advisory Group in Korea from December 1954 to 30 January 1956, gained Master Sergeant Harold A. Pratt, Jr., a vote of thanks from the government he serves by way of the Army Commendation Medal. Also cited at the recent retreat parade ceremony was First Lieutenant Eugene L. Rowden, USAR, former Counter Intelligence Corps agent in Korea. For his skillful efforts in gaining much needed information from the communist forces during the war by using his highly skilled, behind-the-line group of agents, he was awarded the Bronze Star award.

137 Presidio Personnel Eligible For Point Exam

Intensive research is now under way to ascertain through the careful screening of soldiers' personal history those who will be able to apply for entrance into the United States Military Academy at West Point.

Thus far, 137 Presidio soldiers have been found eligible, and to each of these prospective candidates a form letter is being mailed inviting them to participate in the program. However, these troops are but a cross section of those eligible for the examination, and more men are being added to the roster each day.

From latest findings it indicates that 6000 & 6092 have 60 qualified men; 46th Ordnance Group has 27; 505 Military Police Battalion shows 25; MRU section 13; 561st Engineer Group has 12, and the AAA units of the 30th Engineers are now being compiled.

Informing Presidio soldiers and keeping them abreast of the program has become a paramount factor to officers handling the appointment system on the post. Up-to-date information is being published on company bulletin boards and will be augmented by further publications as the program continues.

In setting up this new system of competitive examinations to be given by a select board of officers comprising the West Point Appointment boards, the Army hopes to encourage youthful servicemen to take advantage of a West Point education and later commission in the Regular Army or Air Force.

Leaving Active Duty? Army Lists Vacancies Open To Officers, EM

Washington (AFPS)—The Army has published a list of civilian employee vacancies at military installations in the U. S. which can be filled by many officers and EM being relieved from active duty.

Circular 601-16, dated March 12, 1956, gives civilian employment opportunities in 38 trades and 120 classification act jobs.

The skills and professional experience demanded in many positions are similar to the requirements of MOSs in the same fields held by men being separated, the Army said.

Adult Courses Offer Two New Fields

Personnel and management officers and enlisted men at the Presidio may take two courses at the Marina Adult School which, according to word received here, will aid them in their duties.

The school is offering a study discussion group in the field of Psychology in Everyday Living. Group leader will be University of San Francisco's Dr. John Devine. The series will stress progress in self evaluation and social relationships.

Persons interested in knowing something about emotional maturity will find this series profitable and interesting, Devine said.

The other discussion group will be the new Communications Workshop, moderated by Stanley Diamond. The course will consist of seven lectures and discussions.

Problems connected with communication barriers, with understanding and with being understood as individuals, in social and civic groups and in business will be reviewed and analyzed.

Effective on Sunday, 6 May, the evening motion picture performances at the Fort Barry Theater will commence at 1830 hours, instead of at 1930.

Effective on Monday, 7 May, the evening performance at the Fort Baker Theater will commence at 1830 hours instead of at the former hour of 1930.

New Bill Approved; Would Forgive Those Overpaid in Bonus

The House Armed Services Committee has approved legislation to permit some 12,000 reenlistees, overpaid under the 1954 Bonus Law, to keep the extra money.

The bill now will be placed on the House calendar to come up for a vote on "forgiveness" of repayments the Comptroller General has ruled are due.

Ten Cents—Ten Cents A Meal!

The Presidio Non-Commissioned Officers Club, in a move that may jam the building to capacity, this week announced a price schedule for meals at ten (10) cents.

Non-coms and specialists of equivalent grades, not on separate rations can now avail themselves of breakfast, dinner and supper at the club at the cost of only 10 cents, set up to defray the cost of linen service for the dining room.

Club guests who draw separate rate rations are charged the regular field ration charge (40 cents) plus the 10 cents service tab.

Beverages are served from 1130 hours to 1300 every week day, and a new, specially planned menu offers a wider and better meal variety than formerly offered at the club.

Meal schedules:

Breakfast 0600—0800

Dinner 1130—1300

Supper 1700—1800

Coffee Call—Continuously.

Scranton Scores again with the second Best Mess Award in six months. Colonel Charles G. Rau, Presidio executive officer, presents Sfc. Ralph G. Scranton, mess sergeant for Co. A 505th MP Battalion, his second platter symbolic of the post's top eatery for April. Commanding Officer of Co. A, First Lieutenant Robert N. Anderson, looks on. Scranton's chow also won the Best Mess Award in November.

Legislation

New Proposal Would Extend GI Loan Time

A four-year extension of the GI loan privileges of WWII veterans, which expire next year, has been proposed in the House by Rep. Albert Rains (D—Ala.).

The loan program, last provision of the WWII bill signed into law in 1944, will end July 25, 1957, unless Congress keeps it alive.

Mr. Rains' bill would provide gradual termination of the program, giving veterans with long service additional time to exercise their rights.

Under the proposal, ex-servicemen of WWII would be given one month of eligibility beyond the 1957 cut-off date for each month of service, with all privileges ending June 30, 1961.

The Veterans Administration earlier said it had considered making no more GI housing commitments after next Jan. 1, under the old bill.

The House, by voice vote, already has approved legislation to allow the processing of loan applications beyond July 25, 1957, and revamping veterans' obligations regarding buying of homes through VA insured mortgages.

No action has been taken on the extension of loan rights.

The Army requires 74 depots and storage activities to store, process, distribute, and rehabilitate Army equipment and supplies valued at $14,000,000,000.

cadet patches

West Point, N. Y. (AFPS)—A limited number of used shoulder patches worn by cadets at the U. S. Military Academy on khaki and field clothing, now are available to collectors.

Lt. Col. James F. Frakes, supply officer of the corps of cadets, said requests for patches should be addressed to the Public Information Office, USMA, West Point, N. Y. Letters must contain a sturdy self-addressed and stamped envelope.

Special Religious Rites Will Highlight Mother's Day Celebration Here

As a special tribute to Mother's Day next Sunday, 13 May, a group of Presidio children of the Catholic faith are slated to receive First Holy Communion during the 0930 Mass at the Chapel of Our Lady.

At 1500 hours on the same day, a procession of boys and girls from the Presidio will march in procession to the chapel where one little girl will be chosen to represent the Blessed Virgin Mary in a crowning of Queen Of The May ceremony.

Diving Film From Chance Meeting

A chance meeting of a former Special Events director for the Far East Network and an Army diver gave birth to a fantastic diving operation which took place in the San Francisco bay near Angel Island last Wednesday.

Recently Master Sergeant Gil Somner of the radio and television section, Sixth Army Public Information Office, sent word to the 561st Engineers to send over a group of men interested in making recordings for later broadcast over their local radio network.

Included in the group who came to the PIO office was Sfc. Charles Holland, a crack underwater demolitions man for the engineers.

Earlier, in Japan, it was this same man who, along with Sergeant Somner, played leading roles in the recovery of a sunken Air Force transport plane which had crashed into the ocean off the coast of Japan while carrying a USO troupe. Sgt. Somner gave an eye-witness account of the underwater recovery while Sgt. Holland handled the diving operations.

After the two men reminisced over their past experiences Sgt. Somner came up with the idea of staging an actual underwater demolitions operation in the San Francisco bay.

Once the preliminary preparations were made and equipment assembled, Sgt. Somner, loaded with photographic and recording equipment, set out with the underwater demolition team for the site of their staging area.

The object was to destroy a huge obstruction located in fairly deep water, and to give added impetus to the operation. Sgt. Somner, outfitted in diving equipment, went down with the UDT men to make radio recordings of the actual operation as it is seen and felt by the divers who work daily on the ocean floor.

In addition to the underwater phase of the recording, Sgt. Sommer compiled a 10-minute film of the preparatory work connected with the diving.

The entire program, once assembled, will be shown May 12th over Channel 5 on the "Captain Fortune" TV variety show. A re-teletcast of this underwater feat will be presented on the 18th over KOVR, Channel 13, on "People, Places and Things."

Key Special Services Meet Set Next Week

A Service Club directors' and Craft directors' in-service training conference takes place at the Presidio Service Club during the week of 7-11 May.

Arranged by Sixth Army Special Services, the conference will have among its guests Colonel Adolph Solomon, chief of Crafts and Entertainment Branch, Special Services Division of the Department of the Army, and Miss Pat Abernethy, chief of Service Clubs.

The opening of the conference will be held at the Presidio Service Club, on the morning of 7 May at 0900 hours.

A reception and tea honoring the Department of the Army guests and other conference members will be held at the club on 9 May at 1600 hours.

We Made It voices the happy group of talented performers who finished first in their particular categories in the finals of the Sixth Army Talent Contest held recently at the Presidio Service Club. Next stop is Fort Dix for the All-Army contest and then maybe some will step into the spotlight on Ed Sullivan's "Toast of the Town" nationwide TV show. Comprising this traveling troupe are, left to right, front row: Pfc. Elmer B. Moore, vocal soloist; Pfc. Anthony E. Napier and Pvt. Robert F. Bollinger, Specialty Group acrobats; Pfc. William

Area Talent Show Proves Successful; Winners Off To Eastern Finals

Star Presidian Staff Writer

The finals in the Sixth Army Talent Show held recently at the Presidio Service Club are over, and an even dozen talented entertainers from various installations throughout an eight state area are on their way to the All-Army show at Fort Dix, New Jersey.

At this show will be representatives from the Ed Sullivan "Toast of the Town" television show, who will pick certain first, second and third place winners for their June 17th show on CBS.

Leading the parade of winning talent was Pfc. Elmer B. Moore, Jr., a tenor operatic soloist who sang his way to first place with "Vesti La Giuba" from Pagliacci. Moore came to the Presidio for the show from Fort Huachuca, Arizona.

Pfc. William L. Scott, a semi-classical pianist from Special Services at Fort Ord, captivated the packed house attending the show with his original improvised rendition of the Warsaw Concerto. Before entering the service, Scott was a professional in the entertainment world.

Taking the limelight in the Specialty Performance category was Pvt. George K. Paoa, currently with Hq. Btry., 38th FA Battalion, Fort Lewis, Washington. Paoa, whose home is in Honolulu, Hawaii, gained a definite emotional response from the audience with his guitar and vocal rendition of the "Nearness of You." Prior to his Army tour, Paoa was a professional entertainer at the Niumalu Hotel in Honolulu.

"They really made the place jump," would be the answer from anyone who heard the FA Gospel Singers, a negro quartet from Fort Lewis. This vocal quartet cinched a berth on the All-Army show with their jazzed-up version of "You May Run On for a Long Time." Comprising this rock and roll group were Pfc.'s Luther Evans, Earthy Gaskin, William Chunn and Willie L. Buchanan.

A bunch of cool cats rocking on a solid beat might be the way a teen age group would describe the winning musical combination of Pvt. Thomas R. Rees, Jr. on the clarinet, Sp2 Lawrence Vance strumming the base violin, and Pfc. Basil A. Frazier, who set up the tempo on the drums. The group call themselves the "Tom Rees Trio," and their musical improvising on "I Remember April" and "Autumn Leaves" took first in the Instrumental Group category. These entertainers came to the show from their home base at Fort Lawton, Washington.

Bringing the audience to their feet to stand spellbound and with bated breath were the acrobatic feats of two muscular performers from Fort Ord calling themselves "The Jumping Jets." Throughout their spectacular performance tension increased as one of the men did a somersault through a flaming hoop. Making up this combination was Pfc. Anthony E. Napier and Pvt. Robert F. Bollinger.

The "Continental," a combo from neighboring Hamilton Air Force Base, provided accompaniments and incidental music for the show, and the 30-voice Presidio Male Glee Club, led by Mr. Don Bishop, made a guest appearance while judges were making their final decisions on the contest winners.

May Day! May Day! and the fashions? Lovely

A May Day luncheon and fashion show was the theme of a Spring luncheon planned by the Artillery Wives Club, Sixth Antiaircraft Regional Command at Fort Baker this week.

Held in the ballroom of the Fort Winfield Scott Officers Club, the fashion show was supervised by Mrs. Carol Rogers. Current dress fashions provided by one of San Francisco's small, elegant style shops, were displayed by Mrs. Charles M. Ashley, Mrs. Dallas

F. Haynes, Mrs. James Mitcham, Mrs. Harold A. Neill, Mrs. Kenneth B. Nicholson and Mrs. Pennock H. Wollaston.

Flowers from the garden of Mrs. Benjamin McCaffrey, Jr., in San Rafael, furnished an air of Springtime charm to the luncheon tables, the ballroom and the stage area at the Officers Club.

Mrs. Richard M. McIntosh and Mrs. McCaffrey were co-hostesses for the luncheon meeting, with Mrs. Mitcham and Mrs. Ashley serving as co-chairmen in charge of arrangements.

Luncheon and style show music were provided by Marian Gerald, Joyce Freeman and Jackie DeWitt, student vocalists and pianist from the George Washington High School.

The next meeting of the Artillery Wives Club of the Sixth Antiaircraft Regional Command takes place on 6 June when an election of officers and a one-act farce entitled "The Columbine Club," will highlight the event.

Volleyball Team Takes Early Lead

THE PRESIDIO volleyball team that is currently in action at Fort Lewis in the Sixth Army tournament. Last season the high net men captured the Sixth Army title and went on to win the All-Army crown. They are, front row

Edge Marines

Torero Nine Take Two More Diamond Victories

The Presidio baseball squad added two more victories to their win column last weekend when they edged the San Francisco Marines 5-4 and then poured on the coal to blast the Marin Junior College nine 12-2.

Curve ball artist Chuck Matzen of the Presidio Honor Guard did the honors against the Marines, limiting them to eight hits in posting his second win of the season.

The Toreros opened with two tallies in the bottom of the third when Dick Shannon doubled with two aboard. The Marines came right back in the top of the fourth with two runs and added one more in the top of the fifth.

Ben Camera then put his mighty bat to work for the Post by driving in a run in the fifth and sixth frames. The Marines came back in the top of the seventh with a single score to tie up the game at four all.

The tally remained deadlocked till the last of the ninth when Bob Harbertson of the 505th MP's laid down a perfect bunt to bring home Norm Ellenberger of the Honor Guard with the winning run.

John Boragh of the 30th Engineers pitched the nine inning tilt against the Marin College team, setting the visitors down with four scattered hits in gaining his first victory of the 1956 season.

It was a case of too much power on the side of the Army men as three different batters gained credit for three hits apiece. They were Harry Williams, Al Casino and Norm Ellenberger.

Yesterday afternoon the Torero nine played host to the Alameda Navy Hellcats on the Fort Scott diamond with results appearing in next week's edition of the Star Presidian.

Tony Curcillo, Ft. Carson, Colo., quarterback, returns to the Chicago Cardinals next season.

Post Nine Edges LAH In Softball

The Presidio Torero softball team proved rude hosts to the nearby Letterman Army Hospital nine on Wednesday afternoon when they defeated the medics, 7-5, in a practice tilt on the Post Exchange diamond.

Ed Johnson of the 505th MP's proved the star for the Presidio on the mound with nine strikeouts and at the plate with two hits and two walks in four official times at bat.

Letterman got off to a fast start in the first with three tallies only to have the Post come back in the bottom of the first with two runs.

The Toreros scored a lone run in the fourth to tie the game up at three all. Letterman pushed across two runs in the top of the sixth to lead 5-3 but the Presidio rallied with four counters in the same inning to gain the final nod 7-5.

Presidio catcher Bob Jackson sparked the winners with his two stolen bases.

trout areas

Trout fishermen expecting to go to the northwestern part of the state are reminded by the Department of Fish and Game that the Eel and Mad River drainage areas do not open until 30 May. The exception is Lake Pillsbury in Lake County, and its tributaries, which opened 28 April with the major part of the state.

Ft. Houston Plays Host To Pentathlon

Mexican and Brazilian athletes will compete in a modern pentathlon competition with U. S. athletes at Ft. Sam Houston, Tex., 13-17 May, the Army has announced.

Participation of the three countries in the event came at the suggestion of Maj. Gen. William C. Rose (ret.), chairman of the U. S. Olympic modern pentathlon committee.

The Army invited Mexico and Brazil through coordination with the State and Defense departments.

Both countries will send three athletes and one alternate to the meet which is designed to develop U. S. athletes for the forthcoming Olympic Games at Melbourne, Australia.

U. S. athletes to compete in the event have not yet been named, but all will be members of the armed forces.

The modern pentathlon consists of the 5,000-meter cross-country riding event, the 4,000-meter cross-country run, 300-meter free style swim, 25-meter timed fire pistol shooting and epee fencing. (AFPS)

invite

After Vinegar Bend Mizell defeated the Reds, 4 to 3, in the April 17 inaugural, the Cardinal lefthander displayed a telegram received earlier from the post commander at Fort McPherson, Ga., reading: "If you don't win up there, we can always use you back in the Army." The southpaw starred for the Fort McPherson team in 1954 and '55.

Opening day was also closing day for Washington outfielder Jerry Schoenmaker. He received orders to report to Ft. Sill, Okla., 22 April.

Drub Two Northern Foes In Sixth Army Tourney

By Pfc. Bob Malone
Star Presidian Sports Editor

The defending champion Presidio volleyball team, under the able tutelage of Major Bob Jones, opened defense of their Sixth Army title on Tuesday with two opening round wins over Fort Lawton and Camp Hanford. The matches are being played on the Fort Lewis, Washington, home courts.

In the first game the red hot Post team took over the action and allowed the Fort Lawton men but six points in sweeping the two-game match 15-0, 15-6.

The Fort Lawton six could neither break through the strong defense set up by the defending champs nor hold down the hard driving offense of the winners.

Sparked by the spiking talent of Matt Schmutz and the all around play of Jess Gonzales the Presidio took Camp Hanford into camp to the tune of 15-0, 15-1.

The local soldiers scored 28 consecutive points in the Hanford contest to easily gain the semi-finals of the three-day tournament.

Gonzales served the first 12 balls in the first game shutout as teammate Schmutz scored on six bullet-like spikes. The final tilt took but 19 minutes to play.

The Presidio men met the Fort Lewis Chiefs in the semi-finals of the double elimination tourney Wednesday night with the results not yet in by press time yesterday afternoon.

Fort Lewis gained the semis by rolling over the Yuma (Arizona) Test Station 15-5, 14-16, 15-7. Jerry Evans was the big gun for the Lewis squad with his booming serve.

The local high net men gained the Sixth Army finals by defeating the Fort Ord Warriors 10-15, 15-5, 15-6 in last week's central division playoff at Fort Ord.

If successful in defending their Sixth Army title the Presidio team will be entered in the United States Nationals from 9-12 May in Seattle. It is from this tournament that the United States Olympic team is chosen.

The Presidio squad is composed of playing captain (Major) Bob Jones, Bob Moran, Matt Schmutz, Bob Noel, Dick Godino, Catalino Ignacino, Jerry Steiner, Frank McDonnell, Harry Matthews and Jess Gonzales.

Presidio Golf Team Crushes Hamilton AFB

The sharp shooting Presidio golf team turned on the power last Friday afternoon to crush the supposedly powerful Hamilton Air Force Base crew 23½ to 3¼. The team matches were played over the soggy Sharpe Park course.

Bill Krause led the locals in scoring for the second straight week when he turned in a fine two over par 74.

Krause was followed in close order by Rollin Kapp, Tom Thomas and Tom Ward with 76's. Other Post scores were Milt Rosenberg 82 and John Roberts with a 90.

Next Tuesday afternoon on the Sharpe Park links the Presidio hopefuls take on the strong Parks Air Force Base divotmen.

more antelope

An aerial antelope count taken in northeastern California shows an estimated 2,790 head, or a slight increase over last year. Counts taken during the past five years show the herd to be relatively stable.

PING-PONG champion of Headquarters Company, 505th Military Police Battalion, is Bill Bickel, who took the coveted honor from a field of 32 entries. Bickel displayed a wide assortment of strokes when he topped Larry Stewart in the finals, 21-14, 25-27 and 21-14. The tourney was organized by Sergeant Ed Nosbaum with the encouragement of Lt. Bernard D. Bridgeman and M/Sgt. Cristobal Seva.

PRESIDIO MILER Lowell Zellers captured two first places and a second last week when the Sixth Army all-stars invaded Hawaii for an Olympic fund meet with the Hawaiian AAU stars. Zellers, a lieutenant in the 505th Military Police, won the two mile on a muddy track in 9:39 for a new record on the islands. The wiry speedster came right back to win the mile in 4:24 and also took second in the 880 gallop. Zellers will be running for the Presidio tomorrow when the locals enter the Northern California Track meet in Berkeley.

Post Track Team Enters Service Meet Tomorrow

A nine-man Presidio track and field squad journeys to Berkeley tomorrow morning for the first annual Northern California Armed Forces track meet. The day long festivities will get under way at 1000 hours when the discus and javelin stars unlimber their talented arms.

All four services will be represented in the meet with the Presidio and Fort Ord being the only Army teams entered. The various Navy stations have entered a total of 150 men to make the salts an overwhelming favorite to win service honors.

Ace Post distance man Lowell Zellers of the 505th MPs will be a prime choice in the mile and two mile gallops. Zellers holds a lifetime best mark of 4:09.4 in the mile and boasts a 9:21 clocking in the two mile.

Lee Schroeder of Hq. Co., Station Complement will enter the 100 yard dash as well as the broad jump and the discus throw. Lee captured 16 points last week in a triangle meet in Nevada.

Purcell Daniels of the same Hq. Company will be the locals choice in the 100 and 220 dashes as well as the shot put and the low hurdles.

Big Olen Wright of the 21st Engineers will be tossing the shot and discus along side teammate Bill Paulson, 740th AAA Msl. Bn., whose specialty is the javelin.

Baker Company MP, Don Dryden, will be the only local entry in the 880 and will also gallop the quarter mile.

Three new faces will make their first appearance for the Presidio cinder men tomorrow as Sammy Moreno, Ken Porter and Dick Ludeman are busy rounding in to shape. Moreno will tackle the mile, Porter will toss the shot, and Ludeman will be high jumping for the Army men.

Sac Steelhead Run Same As Last Season

An estimated run of 31,500 adult steelhead ascended the Sacramento River system during the 1955-56 season, the Department of Fish and Game said. This figure is about the same as for the previous season.

Based on tag returns and creel checks, about 8,400 of them were caught by anglers, or less than last year. Flood conditions kept fishing pressure down.

This spring 270,000 yearling steelhead were planted in the Sacramento River at Princeton. This was a cooperative venture among Fish and Game, Kamloops, Inc., of Redding, several northern counties, and the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service at Coleman Hatchery.

New Presidio Youth Loop Formed For Teenagers

The Presidio Youth Baseball League was officially organized last Tuesday evening when the parents and players gathered to elect Chaplain (Captain) Erhard H. Harms of the 505th MP Bn., president. M/Sgt. John Lupo of Sixth Army Special Services was named to the post of vice-president.

Highlighting the meeting was an encouraging address by Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, in which he urged parents to be unselfish in contributing their time to the promotion of the baseball league giving the following two reasons for his answer.

First: to keep the boys active in the critical early teen years and second, to provide a stepping stone for the sportslife of the boys between their Little League experience and their future scholastic baseball teams.

The league, just formed, will be known as the Presidio Youth Activities Baseball League. Efforts to form a P-O-N-Y league had to be abandoned because of the lack of the required number of 13 and 14 year boys.

Under present arrangements, the league will include 15 year old youths. Any 15 year old boys interested in playing in the new league are to contact Lt. Herbert Youngdahl at ext. 3623 as soon as possible.

Team names for the league have already been chosen with Braves, Dodgers, Tigers and Pirates winning out over numerous other choices. Team managers reported that practice has gotten under way with scheduled play planned for two weeks from now.

Lt. Youngdahl, player agent for the loop, reports that room for about twenty more players exists.

Servicemen Place High In Relays

Air Force cinderman Thane Baker equalled the world record for the 100-yard dash and turned in the fastest American time ever recorded for the 300-yard run at the Ohio Relays.

The former Kansas State grad, now at Lockbourne AFB, Ohio, was clocked at 9.3 seconds for the 100-yard dash and 29.4 seconds for the 300. His 100-yard effort cannot be considered for recognition as a world record tie because of a strong following wind.

Baker's time for the 300 may be submitted for recognition as an American mark since the race was started into the wind. Herb McKenley of Illinois held the fastest previous time for the 300 with a 29.8 performance in 1946.

Ron Duckett, USAFE thinclad, set a new meet record in the hop, step and jump, reeling off a distance of 47 feet 5 3/4 inches. Duckett, Israel Booth of Altus AFB, Okla.; Van Bunner of Dow AFB, Maine, and Wally Monahan of Lockbourne won the shuttle hurdle relay in 1:01.7.

In the pole vault event, George Mattos of March AFB, Calif., cleared 14 feet 8 1/2 inches to gain a first place tie with Jerry Welbourn of the Ohio Track Club. John Barnes of Chanute AFB, Ill., placed third in the 600-yard run and Mike Stanley of Lockbourne was third in the mile. (AFPS)

More than 400 Army athletes have applied for a crack at Olympic tryouts.

Rowing Aces Working Out At Ft. Lawton

Two U.S. Army candidates for the 1956 United States Olympic team pair-oared crew are working out daily with the University of Washington crew on Lake Washington in Seattle.

Pfc Alvin E. Ulbrickson and Richard W. Wahlstrom, both former varsity crewmen for the University of Washington and now assigned to the 6516 SU, Fort Lawton, Wash., work out daily under the watchful eye of Al Ulbrickson, varsity crew coach of the "Huskies," and father of Pfc Ulbrickson.

Pfc Ulbrickson, a veteran of four years' competition, was a member of the U of W freshman crew which won the Pacific Coast and National IRA Championships in 1949; rowed in the Pacific Coast and National IRA Championship varsity shell in 1950 and was a member of the 1951 varsity crew and captained the 1952 varsity shell. Following the IRA National Regatta in 1952, he rowed as a member of the four-oared crew which won the National Amateur Championships and placed third in the 1952 Olympic Games held in Helsinki, Finland.

Also a four-year crew veteran, Pfc Wahlstrom rowed freshman crew at the University in 1950; junior varsity in 1951 and 1952; and was a member of the varsity shell crew in 1953. Along with Ulbrickson, he rowed in the four-oared shell which placed third in the 1952 Olympic Games.

The two recently purchased a new pair-oared shell from Mr. George Pocock, well-known Seattle builder of racing shells, for use in the 1956 Olympic trials.

SHOT PUT ace Olen Wright will be representing the Presidio tomorrow in the big Northern California Armed Forces track meet in Berkeley. Wright is a former track man for the University of California and is now stationed with the 21st Engineer Company of the 30th Engineer Group.

Stars Upset 6A In Keg Tilt

The fifth place All-Stars turned in the upset of the week in the Pacific Keg league when they dumped the second spot Sixth Army Signal bowlers three to one. Alba's sizzling 220 score led the stars, while Okley of the Signal pin-splitters was turning in a 187 scorecard.

The first place Keystone Kops stayed on the winning path by blanking the Post Dispensary four to 0. Schultz was top man for the Kops with a 204 mark and Fischer was high medic with a 177.

Kern of the 102d Machine Records Unit fired a great 243 to lead his team to a three to one triumph over the Headquarters Company, 6002. Chapuis was high man for the losers with a 178 score.

The remaining keg match saw the Cherry Pickers win by a three to one margin over the men from G-2. Eby was top man for the winners with a 193 score and Everhart led the G-2's with a 174 mark.

Only three weeks of action remain in the Pacific loop with the top place Keystone Kops enjoying a six-game lead over the second place Signal bowlers.

Despite Alexander's great 214 game the fourth place Hooks dropped a three to one decision to the eighth place Missileers for the prime upset in the National Bowling league. Burns was high man for the winners with a 191 keg mark.

The first place Masonites won again when they drubbed the seventh spot King Pins four to 0. Shumaker topped the men from Mason with a sizzling 212 and Dutton was top man for the Pins with a 162 score.

The second place Keystone Kops stayed within nine games of the loop leaders when they defeated the Headquarters Company, Sixth Army, four to 0. Schultz was high bowler for the winners with a very good 231 score while Pearson headed up the losers with a 164 scorecard.

The remaining match in the National saw the Hilltoppers take a three to one victory from the Company B, 505th MP's. Walker was tops for the hill keglers with 216 and Hoskins turned in a 190 to lead the MP's.

Sing You Soldiers is the theme song here as members of the U. S. Army Field Band's "Soldiers Chorus" rehearse in Washington, D. C. Directed by Master Sergeant Arthur Donofrio, the singing group will make three Bay area appearances later this month, along with the band. Thirty members are in the chorus.

AFD Plans Near Completion; Officials Move To Firm Goals

A topflight program of events and displays has been arranged for Presidio of San Francisco's Armed Forces Day celebration, Saturday, 19 May, Major Walter L. Carppi, project officer, announced today.

Major Carppi received the stamp of approval on his schedule of events from Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, and immediately began final preparations for the commemoration with his committee.

Post units and sections were alerted to the Monday, 30 April, deadline for complete plans and activities.

It appeared, however, that the deadline day will be of little significance since most units and sections have already submitted plans and are well into organization of activities.

At least 11 displays and events will highlight the program.

Tops among these is the scheduled evening Retreat Parade. The AFD Committee plans call for Presidio units to furnish two battalions, while the Marine Corps will provide a third battalion. A fourth battalion of marching troops will be supplied by companies of Air Force, Navy and Coast Guard personnel.

The parade is scheduled to climax the AFD day at 1600 hours.

Another special event expected to draw the public eye is the 740th AAA Missile Battalion's guided tour of its Fort Scott Nike site. Shuttle buses will provide visitors with transportation to the site from the parade ground area.

Presidio and Navy drill teams will perform throughout the day and arrangements have been made for the Sixth Army Band and Pipe Band, Navy and Coast Guard Bands to give concerts.

The 505th Military Police Battalion, while providing traffic control, will also hold open house for visitors in A and B Companies, give two judo demonstrations and display vehicles and equipment. The 60th MP (CI) Detachment will exhibit criminal detecting gear and weapons and other items seized from offenders.

Open House will also be held at the 30th Engineer Group, Fort Scott, Company D, 6002 SU, Wac Detachment and Letterman Army Hospital.

The Engineers will demonstrate map reproduction and display helicopters used in their operations. An airplane display will also be held by the Group at Crissy Field.

Letterman will hold a guided tour through the hospital and two hospital train cars on a railroad site near Crissy Field. Coffee and donuts will be provided for guests.

The 561st Engineer Company (Port Construction) will display heavy engineer equipment, give a diving demonstration which will include underwater welding in a water filled tank. The Company will also demonstrate pile driving.

Post Quartermaster has arranged a "fashion show" of the Army's green uniform and other garb and demonstrate parachute packing.

The Food Services Section expects to feed thousands of civilian visitors in nine open mess halls on post. Post guests will also be able to get light snacks while viewing the events and displays at vending machines and refreshment booths provided by the Bay Area Exchange.

A host of other units and sections will also put up exhibits of their functions and roles here.

Army Will Train Own Pilots At Two Texas Airfields

Washington (AFPS) — The Army will assume responsibility for training its own pilots, until now an Air Force function, the Defense Department has decided.

Two Air Force bases in Texas—Edward Gary and Wolters—will be turned over to the Army.

The added training responsibility will not alter the role of Army aviation beyond those missions recommended by the Joint Chiefs of Staff and approved by Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson, the department said.

Existing facilities at Edward Gary will be used mainly for fixed-wing pilot training. Those at Wolters will serve for primary helicopter pilot training. Civilians will be used as instructors at both bases.

Air Force instructors will be relieved at the two bases this summer.

With the switch-over at Wolters, primary cargo helicopter pilot training will be discontinued at Ft. Rucker, Ala., although an eight-week advanced course will still be taught there.

Primary fixed-wing pilot training will be an 18-week course at Gary, while the 10-week advanced course will also be held at Rucker.

At present, the Army has approximately 3,500 aviators and 3,900 planes, including helicopters and fixed-wing craft.

AAA First New Reenlistment System Originated 30th AAA Group

A new reenlistment awards system has been designed for the Nike and Gun units of the 30th Antiaircraft Artillery Group, the Army Antiaircraft Command announced recently.

Each of these San Francisco AA Defense units with the highest percentage rate of personnel enlisted or reenlisted of its battalion will receive a plaque in the shape of the Army AA Command patch, a missile flanked by two A's. Likewise, the battalion with the highest reenlistment rate will receive a similar plaque.

The plaques will be awarded each quarter of the year and will be rotated, but any unit which wins an award three times in any 12-month period will retain permanent possession of the plaque. A replacement plaque will be issued to continue the competition.

Contrived to provide due recognition to Army AA Command units obtaining outstanding results in the reenlistment effort, it is hoped the program will provide a continuous incentive to improve the reenlistment rate, thereby enabling the 30th AAA Group to retain greater numbers of highly qualified men.

100 Slated To Complete High School During This Month

More than 100 enlisted men from the Presidio and its subposts will complete their high school educations during May, Post Troop Information and Education section announced yesterday.

A letter, over the signature of Major Earle K. Stewart, Post TI&E officer, has been sent to all unit commanders urging enlisted men who have not completed high school courses to take the GED Tests.

Any EM who scores 90 or better usually passes the test battery and enables him to be considered for service schools closed to him without high school education or its GED equivalent.

It was recommended that individuals concerned report to Building 232 at earliest possible moment to take the five-part test.

Each test lasts approximately two hours, although there is no set deadline. Subjects tested include English composition, social studies, natural sciences, literature and mathematics.

AFD Is Family Time

In order to make this year's Armed Forces Day program a success, project officer Major Walter L. Carppi yesterday urged Presidio military and civilian personnel to bring at least one other family on post for the celebration.

The Major, who has organized a huge military show for the day, asked post personnel to bring as many persons as possible for the commemoration.

"We have a big show scheduled; mess halls and barracks will be open. Post personnel should be enthusiastic and spread the word to the whole San Francisco area," he said.

Unit commanders and first sergeants have been alerted to tell troops of the importance of "selling" the Armed Forces Day idea to the public, the Major added.

Famed Soldiers Chorus Featured In Local Army Concert Program

Rouge Shatters Pistol Record

New Record for national pistol marksmen to aim at was established by Colonel Leon J. D. Rouge during the Sixth Army Rifle and Pistol Matches at Camp Roberts last week. Colonel Rouge lowered the existing record by 3 points when he fired 293 out of a possible 300.

Wade Tops Aggregate Pistol Scoring; Presidio Team Finishes Runners Up

By Pfc. Walt Heil
Star Presidian Rifle Editor

Colonel Leon J. D. Rouge returned to his Sixth Army Headquarters assignment this week, the new National Individual Service Pistol record holder.

The Colonel, firing in the Sixth Army rifle and pistol matches at Camp Roberts last week, bettered the National record by three points when his keen eye found the bull's-eye for 293 points of a possible 300 total.

The feat of superior marksmanship was verified by Colonel Charles G. Rau, Presidio executive officer acting as match executive.

His record score qualified him for his second Excellence-in-Competition Badge, three of which are required for the Army's top shooting award, the Distinguished Pistol Shot Badge.

Colonel Rouge's record smashing score included a 96 in slow fire at 50 yards; 98 in timed fire at 25 yards and 99 in rapid fire at 25 yards. He used a .45 service pistol with fixed sights throughout his standard breaking performance.

But the Colonel's distinguished performance was only one of many incredible firing performances turned in on the huge Roberts range under good weather conditions.

Master Sergeant James L. Wade, also assigned to Sixth Army Headquarters, topped all pistol shooters when he scored 2525 aggregate total out of a possible 3000. The sergeant thus beat his closest competitor, Marine Staff Sergeant Donald W. Henry of Camp Pendleton, by seven points.

The Marine tallied 2513, while third place in the aggregate pistol shooting went to Sfc. Stanley Braithwaite of Fort Ord, who fired 2516. The scores represent an aggregate of three matches.

Colonel Rouge and Sergeant Wade also paced the Presidio Blue pistol team to second place in the team firing.

Fort Huachuca's Orange team eked out a 1081-1080 triumph over the Presidio to gain team honors. Colonel Rouge fired 284, Sergeant Wade 272, while Captains John F. Kallam (505 MP Bn) and Henry T.

Croonquist (California Military District) shot 262 apiece.

The Second Infantry Division team took third place in the pistol shooting, scoring 1071.

In rifle competition, meanwhile, Master Sergeant Jacob Svela, University of Washington ROTC Detachment, took aggregate scoring honors with 665 V 47, out of a possible 700.

He beat Sergeant John F. Mooney of the 38th Infantry Regiment, Fort Lewis, who tallied 664 V 46 and Sfc. John D. Whittaker, also of the 38th, who bagged 661 V 43.

Fort Lewis' Silver and Gold rifle teams finished one-two in that category, the Silver squad piling up a total of 1387 V 76 points, (Continued on page 8)

CG Calls For Top Area Support In National Safety Campaign

Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commander, has asked installations throughout the eight western states area of the Sixth Army to throw the full weight of their commands behind the national "Slow Down and Live" safety campaign that begins on Memorial Day and runs through Labor Day.

"Combined and vigorous efforts of all Army personnel during the 1956 campaign materially reduced the number of deaths and injuries to Army personnel," said the general.

"It is essential that the same degree of planning and coordination be effected at all echelons throughout the Sixth Army to ensure the success of the 1956 'Slow Down and Live' campaign."

The Army Commander called for a total emphasis on publicity, education and enforcement to ensure continuing emphasis during the campaign.

Listing a six point program, the general stressed the need for aggressive and effective action in:

1) Continuous support by local commanders to the campaign.

2) Maximum cooperation with the civilian authorities.

3) Personal participation by commanders through appearances and comments.

4) Utilization of the Commander's Hour and the facilities of TI&E for expressing advice to the troops.

5) Traffic control by military police, truck unit and march unit commanders.

6) Inclusion of activities suggested in the regular "Slow Down and Live" programing.

Appropriate material such as bumper strips, dashboard stickers and posters will be mailed to local commands throughout the campaign.

Soldiers Will Host Local Orphans For Armed Forces Day Celebration

The Army is pulling out all stops to give children from San Francisco's Edgewood Home the time of their lives on Armed Forces Day, Saturday, 19 May.

Major Walter L. Carppi, Presidio AFD projects officer, announced yesterday that more than 30 children and orphans will be rendered VIP treatment when they come on post for the mammoth celebration.

Scheduled to arrive shortly before 1130 hours, the children will be treated to lunch in E and D Companies, 6002 SU mess halls, taken on a tour of exhibits on the parade ground, shown the assault beach landing at Crissy Field and the Retreat and Review ceremony.

Members of the Presidio's WAC detachment will escort the girls, while troops from units all over the Presidio will show the boys of the group the sights.

television salute

General Maxwell D. Taylor, Army Chief of Staff, will introduce the Army portion of a salute to the Armed Forces over NBC's Wide Wide World this Sunday at 1300 hours over KRON, TV, Channel 4. Army action will take place at Ft. Benning.

After watching the beach landing and helicopter pickups, the youngsters will return to the main parade ground area where it is expected they will be given soft drinks, hot dogs and ice cream.

The Army hopes that when their departure time arrives at 1700 hours the children will have had "a whale of a good time."

Meanwhile, two of the three "dry-runs" of the assault landing have prepared participating troops—from the 561st Engineer Company (PC) and 660th Engineers for the demonstration.

Tuesday a Press camera day will be held. Representatives from The Star Presidian, the metropolitan

High Seas Will Get Under Way On Wednesday

Sixth Army Signal Center Opens At Davis Monday

From the Air the new communications station at Davis, California, is shown. The station will be formally opened Tuesday by high ranking Department of Army, State of California, Sixth Army and civilian officials.

Automatic Teletypewriters stand white and silent in the Davis, California, communications station. Cross-Office units are shown in the foreground, while incoming line units are left and monitors to the right. The new station is the largest west of the Mississippi and will be dedicated Tuesday at formal ceremonies.

Transmitting Messages to the Army's Pacific area units will soon be old hat, once the new communications station at Davis, California, goes into operation. Here M/Sgt. Harry Homberger is tuning the radio receiver, while Glen Hinsuakr is "patching" the frequency shifter. The machines are located in the transmitting building.

Yankee Ingenuity Turns Battered Washer Into $$$ Saver

An ex-Marine combat veteran with a supply sergeant's savvy of how to salvage and influence old parts dug deep in the local dump recently and came up with a unique device that will save the Army some $300 a year by quick-washing the main ink cylinder of Presidio's many busy mimeograph machines.

Daniel Wiley, who served as a machine gunner and mortarman in the South Pacific during WW II and is now an office appliance repairman with the Post Quartermaster section, was awarded a Department of the Army Suggestion Awards Certificate and a check for $35 for this unusual handiwork this week.

Wiley's money winning device consists of an old washing machine, rehabilitated from the dump, to which he added a durable inner tank that is attached to the agitator. A strong detergent is added to the tank and with a twist of the wrist — a powerful sw-s-s-sh, swi-s-s-sh, and presto — a clean cylinder.

This device cuts the cost of cleaning a cylinder by at least a dollar and reduces cleaning time by two-thirds.

Wiley resides in San Francisco and is the father of two daughters. He has been with Post QM since 1946.

Ranking Civilian, Military Officials Will Attend Colorful Dedication Fete

High ranking Department of the Army, State of California, Sixth Army and civilian electronics officials are scheduled to be on hand for the formal opening of the new Davis (California) Communications Station Tuesday morning.

The new hub and switching control center for official Army teletype messages west of the Mississippi River will be dedicated and formally opened with full military ceremonies, it was announced this week.

On hand for the ceremonies will be Major General W. Preston Corderman, Deputy Chief Signal Officer representing Department of the Army; Major General Riley F. Ennis, deputy commanding general Sixth Army; Lieutenant Governor Harold Powers of the State of California, and civilian technicians who will describe the installation of equipment and its development.

Welcoming remarks will be made by Colonel Steven S. Cerwin, Signal Officer, Sixth Army.

The acceptance of the system and presentation to the Commanding General Sixth Army will be made by General Corderman, while General Ennis is slated to make the speech of acceptance of operational responsibility by the Sixth Army.

Full military ceremonies will be furnished by the Sixth Army band, a detachment of 505th Military Police Battalion troops, and the Corps de Garde, the Sacramento Signal Depot precision team.

The station, fully automatic teletype switching center just completed, is the first full scale installation of its kind in the world.

It is the jumping off point to the Pacific overseas area with radio channels to Honolulu, T.H., Tokyo and to all Army units in the Pacific.

On the continent it ties Alaska, Seattle, Los Angeles, Chicago, Fort Sam Houston and the Pentagon together.

From this point messages destined to or from any or all of these points may rapidly be switched and relayed to their addresses.

Traffic to be handled through the new installation includes messages running the gamut from top level commands, directives, policy statements, etc., which affect the State Department and military strategy of the nation.

The new system is equipped to furnish protection for highly confidential military information and automatically provides for quick identification of urgent messages, relaying them ahead of less important messages and where necessary, even interrupts messages in the process of transmission to speed the high priority missives on their way.

"Modern military requirements," said Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commander, "have created an unprecedented need for fast, reliable and complex communications. The equipment in the new station exemplifies the latest development in electronic communications."

Two New Courses Would Prove Useful To Poor Speakers

How often do we hear it said, "A man may look intelligent, but when he starts to speak, he either affirms it or displays a lack of it."

Now, through the media of two new self-study courses, "Grammar In Action" and "Good Times Through Literature," the individual student will be able to gain a mastery of self-expression through the creation of good grammatical construction.

This course helps the individual to speak and write more effectively through the media of reading.

The material covered is similar to that of a first semester course in English generally offered at grade level nine.

Those interested in this study course may gain additional information by contacting the post TI&E Section.

Old College Try!

If you are one of the unfortunates who won't be receiving the GI Bill for school and still desire to get that college sheepskin, here's your chance.

The post TI&E section, in conjunction with the University of San Francisco, has inaugurated a program whereby the individual student will have 75% of his tuition costs, up to $7.50 per unit, financed by Uncle Sam, while on active duty.

Any Presidio soldier who has less than four years of college may apply for this college program. The forms necessary may be obtained through the post TI&E section, Bldg. 232, which is located next to Crissy Field.

However, there is one necessary pre-requisite. Anyone who does enroll under this new college program must have on record a form DA 669, which is an educational record. This must show the last college attended, if such is the case, and the credit hours earned in the major field of study.

For Superior Service, the Sixth Army presented Albert H. Rork, technician in supply and maintenance division, Sixth Army Engineers, a check for $300 and a Certificate of Achievement. The award, made recently, was presented by Colonel Francis H. Falkner, Sixth Army Engineers. It was given in connection with Rork's work on turning existing defense emplacements into Nike sites in the San Francisco Bay region.

$300 Cash Gift!

Nike Engineer Wins Top Award For Superior Accomplishments

Department of the Army this week presented a San Francisco Army engineer a $300 check and Certificate of Achievement for sustained superior service.

Receiving the check was Alfred H. Rork, former civilian chief of the equipment advisory service for the Engineer Section.

The award, made in an informal ceremony before Rork's fellow workers, was presented by Colonel Francis H. Falkner, Sixth Army Engineer.

It was presented Rork in connection with duties performed for the Sixth Army Engineer Section with Nike construction in the San Francisco Bay area last year.

Rork supervised the reconstruction and rehabilitation of earlier defense emplacements at Bay region military posts to provide launcher sites for some of the Nike installations which protect the area from possible enemy aircraft attack.

He achieved outstanding success in the economical and efficient adaptation of existing structures to meet requirements demanded of a Nike firing site. Rork effected maximum defense capabilities with the least expenditures.

The award was made on the eve of Rork's departure for a new assignment at Fort Mac-Arthur, Fort Ord, Camp Roberts and parts of Camp Irwin. He has been employed with the supply and maintenance division of the Sixth Army Engineer Section for five years.

His experience in engineering covers operation, repair and maintenance of mechanical, heavy construction and transportation equipment for concerns in the East. He has also added highway construction and mining equipment to his abilities.

Rork first became associated with the U. S. Army Engineers in 1940.

Present military programs generally make adequate provisions for the strength and capabilities necessary to deter general or total war involving the unrestricted use of nuclear weapons. Adequate means also must be provided to deter aggression short of general war, and to deter general or total war in which the use of nuclear weapons is outlawed or restricted.

New Military History Book Now Available

The orderly assembly, movement and delivery of great masses of men and materiel to distant parts of the globe during World War II is described in the latest volume from the Army's Office of Military History.

Volume four in a series dealing with the second world war has just come off the press, Department of the Army announced yesterday. The book, titled, "Global Logistics and Strategy, 1940-1943," is authored by Richard M. Leighton and Robert W. Coakley.

They attempt to analyze in detail the manner in which limitations of supply and transportation shaped the strategy of the Anglo-American high command. The work also reveals the intricate relationship of logistics and strategy in the top-level direction of the Army.

The book contains 760 pages and includes photographs, tables, charts and appendixes. Persons interested may obtain copies through the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington 25, D.C. It is on sale for $6.25.

New Civil Service Booklet Explains Needs, Advantages Of Career

"The need for stenographers and typists in Government offices is so acute that examinations are open continuously," a new booklet reminds high school students.

"Thinking About Your First Job," just issued by the Civil Service Commission, will be of interest to Federal employees with high school students in the family.

Engineering aid jobs and jobs in scientific and trades occupations are described, as well as office jobs. "Summer Employment in Federal Agencies" is particularly of interest to students who plan to go to college or are already attending.

Office, laboratory, and outdoor jobs are described. Both pamphlets are available from the U.S. Civil Service Commission, Washington 25, D.C.

Perfect Record for having driven 10 consecutive years without one black mark for accidents was established by Mr. Robert Finley, Army bus driver, who receives a safety award from Lieutenant Colonel J. J. Speciale, Post Transportation Officer. Mr. Horace Sanders, bus driver, Sgt. Clifford Moore, mechanic, and Mr. Sideon Bledsoe, bus driver, look on approvingly. These men were also cited for their safety records at the ceremony. On hand to assist at the ceremony was Captain Ricardo De Villa, Post Motor Officer.

Local Drivers Win Safety Awards For Fine Records

Slow down, be courteous to the other fellow, you may live longer.

This has become the code of military and civilian drivers who operate their vehicles day and night from the Presidio Post Motor Pool. Their constant efforts to live up to this motto has not gone unnoticed by Uncle Sam.

Monday afternoon, 22 drivers and mechanics stood before a group of Transportation Corps officers to receive warm thanks for their exemplary conduct in placing safety first both in their shop work and while driving.

Then to each man went a safety award indicating that no reportable accidents have been recorded in his file for one consecutive year.

One of these men, Mr. Robert Finley, who daily is entrusted with the lives of countless people whom he chauffeurs between Fort Cronk-hite and the Presidio, stepped forth to receive an award for having driven ten consecutive accident-free years.

These men have set an example the Department of the Army would like to see more follow.

With the advent of Memorial and Labor Day, the Army is ushering in a new safety program emphasizing the national slogan "Slow Down and Live."

The Army, in inaugurating this new program, hopes to make each individual conscious that cautious driving now will help cheat the "Grim Reaper" of the fat harvest in lives he takes each year from careless drivers.

Hearings Completed; Civilian Military Chiefs Support Full Legislation

Hearings before the Senate Armed Forces Committee on the Defense Department's new medical care bill have been completed.

Carter L. Burgess, assistant secretary of defense for manpower, personnel and reserve, and Marion B. Folsom, secretary of health, education and welfare, led presentation of support for the measure. Surgeon Generals of the various services lent their support to the proposed legislation.

Participation In Incentive Awards Program Shows Sharp Increase

Participation in the Incentive Awards Program at the Presidio has increased nearly 150 per cent since this time last year, according to Leslie Scanlon, chief of Civilian Personnel.

"I am well pleased with the terrific strides we have made in informing and interesting personnel of the Presidio in this mutually beneficial program.

"Cooperation of supervisors and section chiefs has and will continue to play the most vital part in making the Incentive Awards Program a really going concern. I believe that this record high is directly attributable to their efforts and interest in the program."

Scanlon urged supervisors and section chiefs to continue to encourage their personnel to submit suggestions.

He also urged these leadership groups to increase their recognition of deserving personnel in their units and to award superior performance ratings and letters of commendation.

"Performance that has been superior over a period of six months can and should be recognized," said Scanlon. "Be sure to indicate how these employees have exceeded the standards for their positions."

"Letters of commendation should follow as close as possible the accomplishments they are awarded for, rather than issue such letters at time of departure or transfer."

Miss Elizabeth Antoine, secretary of the Local Incentive Awards Committee was pleased with the high participation in the program, but felt that "quality of ideas should be one of the program's major aims."

"In order to receive an award the suggestion must be adopted—some agency must use it. This should be the main concern of the suggester when he begins to prepare his idea."

Miss Antoine stressed the need for ideas that will improve methods, expedite production, save materials and time. These suggestions she said, could take the general line of better office organization, promote health, increase safety or improve morale.

"Good ideas and suggestions, carefully thought out, can earn an employee both cash and recognition," said Miss Antoine. "If there is an idea you have been thinking about for some time, write it out on a suggestion form and place it in an envelope addressed to the Secretary, Local Incentive Awards Committee, Bldg. 36, PSF."

Miss Antoine offered her personal help to anyone that might need assistance in preparing their suggestion. She may be reached at Ext. 2554.

Currently a training program is underway to acquaint supervisors and section chiefs with the outstanding morale and economic benefits that may be derived from a successful Incentive Awards Program.

Award Winner Harry Leyh receives his check and a Suggestion Award Certificate for a recently adopted administrative suggestion from Lt. Col. Archie R. Traynor, Post S-1. Mr. Leyh's suggestion will result in a savings of approximately 10-weeks in the reinstatement of civilian personnel to federal job status. The suggestion has been forwarded to Department of Army for possible use Army wide.

A Candidate for competitive examination, and a possible appointment to West Point is Cpl. Arnold C. Wiebengo of the Presidio Honor Guard. Captain Eugene J. Gasior, West Point advisor and CO of the Honor Guard, tells Wiebengo of fine educational and career advantages offered by the United States Military Academy.

Deadline Nears!

Qualified Troops Should File Soon For West Point Exams

Enlisted members of the regular or reserve components of the Army who meet the prerequisite of the West Point appointment system as set forth in AR 350-55 will take a three and one-half hour qualifying examination.

This test is to be divided into three main components:

West Point prequalification test (WPT-1) which will last 60 to 90 minutes; Prequalification Inventory (WPI-1) lasting 30 to 50 minutes; and then candidates will appear before an Officer Leadership Board for one hour and ten minutes.

Interested candidates who have not as yet requested application should do so immediately. If additional qualifying information is required, it can be readily obtained in Army Regulation 350-55 and AFR 53-15.

Anyone who submits an application must accompany it by a photograph. Applicants wishing to have these photographs made may do so by contacting personnel in the enlisted branch of the unit personnel office, post headquarters.

From this point, the applicant will go to Bldg. 603 for the actual photograph. It is advisable that candidates go to the pictorial center in unit groups rather than individually.

At the present time, intensive research is under way to determine eligible candidates for admission into the Military Academy, and those found eligible are being notified by a form letter being sent from the West Point Applicant Board.

The tests are to be given this month, so speed in submitting these requests is of utmost importance, according to members of the applicant board.

DOD Asks Major Ad Campaign Aid In Reserve Plan

A major advertising campaign in behalf of the Armed Forces Manpower Program shortly will be launched by The Advertising Council in response to a request from the Department of Defense.

Twofold purpose of the campaign will be: (1) to inform young men of their obligations, under present laws, to serve in the Armed Forces and (2) to acquaint them with the choices of military service open to them so that they may select the time and type of service that best fit their plans.

In requesting the campaign, the Department of Defense stated: "It is our belief that, if we fully inform the average American youth and his family as to the obligation and choices, the manpower requirements of the Armed Forces will be met. It is also our firm belief that the services available through The Advertising Council are essential to the success of the effort to give every young man and his family the information they should have with respect to the Armed Forces Manpower Program."

F. G. Jewett, manager of sales promotion, American Can Company, has agreed to serve as the campaign's volunteer coordinator. Compton Advertising, Inc., will serve as the volunteer advertising agency.

Key piece in the campaign will be an illustrated booklet of pertinent military manpower information addressed to 18-year-old men and their parents.

Congratulations Colonel, smiles Colonel J. E. Stewart, Presidio comptroller (right), as he presents Certificate of Achievement to Lieutenant Colonel Louis C. Mulvany, new post finance and accounting officer. Colonel Stewart presented the award in lieu of Brigadier General George P. ### Reemployment Rights

Law Protects Reservist's Job Status, Rights During Service

Individuals who enlist in the Ready Reserve and who satisfactorily complete their initial six months period of active duty for training under the provisions of Section 262, Reserve Forces Act of 1955, are reservists entitled by that Act to reemployment rights.

This means that if reservist left a public or private position to go on such active duty for training, he must be reinstated in that position, or one similar to it, without reduction in seniority, status or pay, provided that he applies for such restoration within 60 days after release from active duty for training or from hospitalization continuing after his release for not more than six months.

In addition, the individual cannot be discharged from his position, except for cause, for a period of six months following reinstatement to his position.

Under the Reserve Forces Act of 1955, it is not necessary for the reservist to resume employment within the 60 days. He need only to make application to do so and indicate his willingness to begin work within a reasonable length of time. However, it is recommended that reservists who plan to return to former positions notify their employers of this fact as soon as possible in order that these employers may plan accordingly.

Reservists who encounter any difficulty in obtaining their reemployment rights are urged to contact the Veterans Employee Representative in the local branch of their State Employment Office. This official will go over the problem and, if appropriate, will help the reservist contact the Bureau of Reemployment Rights, U. S. Department of Labor, which supervises enforcement of the law.

Information and assistance may also be obtained from the office of the Bureau of Veterans' Reemployment Rights.

Topos Back From Yuma

Most elements of the 660th Engineer Battalion (Base Topo) are back at their Presidio home station today, following completion of winter production and training mission at Yuma Test Station, Ariz.

With the exception of the 542nd Engineer Company, the unit, commanded by Lieutenant Colonel W. W. Walters, has returned to its Presidio billets for garrison duty.

The 542nd will remain at Yuma through June to complete and continue production training.

The battalion's return to the post was accomplished in a 756-mile motor march in two series, a day apart. Twenty vehicles participated in the first march, while 17 returned in the second convoy.

Elements returning included the 537th and 549th Engineer Companies (Base, Survey) "A" Flight of the 521st Engineer Company (Topo Aviation) and medical, radio and aerial photography teams from the 30th Engineer Group.

The production missions completed during the four months the unit was in the field included: determination and marking of the actual boundary line of the test station, a planetable map for the Engineer Test Team of an area to be used for testing fire fighting methods and equipment; establishment of 45 horizontal positions to be used as ground control for the Signal Corps at the Army Electronic Proving Ground, Fort Huachuca, and participation of a 13-man survey team in the LORAC Test conducted along the Louisiana coast by the Engineer Research and Development Laboratories.

In addition, on-the-job training, extensive classroom instruction in and field training in surveying principles and methods were conducted.

The boundary line work consisted of recovery of existing section corners, subsection corners and triangulation stations; establishment of rock cairns and concrete posts as boundary markers; triangulation and traverse surveys along the boundary line and computations of the survey work.

The aerial photography team photographed the boundary.

Sergeant's Testimonial Lauds Army Education As Program That Offers Best Chance For Higher Learning

College degrees don't come easily, and Master Sergeant Audavee Gaston, Supply Sergeant for the 561st Engineers at Fort Baker can testify to that.

"I've been trying for the last six years to get that sheepskin, and now, thanks to the on-post courses offered by San Francisco State College, I have just about attained my long sought after goal," said the sergeant with a wide grin.

Utilizing every educational opportunity offered by the Army, Sgt. Gaston completed work in college USAFI courses and subject examinations plus classroom study being done in conjunction with San Francisco State College.

Sgt. Audavee Gaston

Sergeant Gaston is typical of the many Presidio soldiers who are now actively engaged in furthering their education through this on-post study course work.

Others who are interested in taking advantage of this college work may do so by enrolling in one of the classes and then submitting a DD-295 to San Francisco State with college transcripts and USAFI test reports indicating work already completed. These records should be submitted through the Post TI&E section.

Your educational advisor can give you sound advice on where and how to add recognized credits to your educational record. Talk with him today!

Famous Basso Tops Lecture Series

It is one thing to hear and see Grand Opera, and another to understand it.

To aid those music lovers who wish to learn the intrinsic values of this musical art, the Adult Division of the San Francisco Public School System has invited the famous Hungarian basso, Desire Ligeti, to give a series of lectures on this subject.

These stimulating discussions will center around the themes of some of the new operas to be presented this season as well as the well-known favorites.

Each lecture will be illustrated with recorded vocal music and augmented by the participation of well-known guest vocalists.

Mr. Ligeti, who will conduct the series of lectures, has been a leading artist with the San Francisco Opera Association for the past 11 years, and has established himself as one of the country's outstanding operatic authorities.

The lectures will be held at the Marina Adult School, Chestnut and Fillmore streets, on Thursdays from 7:00 to 9:00 p.m. beginning May 17.

World Renowned Hypnotist Will Offer Local Stage Show

A 50-minute show, presenting Dr. Zarro, one of the United States' most sensational hypnotists, is slated for staging at the Presidio Non-Commissioned Officers' Open Mess, 26 May.

Advance information on the show bills Dr. Zarro as one of the world's leading authorities on hypnotism. The artist himself claims that he can teach self-hypnosis and that a person can be aided in overcoming unwanted habits such as excessive smoking and drinking; that the faculty for increasing the power to memorize, can be accomplished, and that he can teach any volunteer student such tricks as how to abolish pain in having a tooth extracted, or even how to lose the inherent fear of approaching the dentist's chair.

Dr. Zarro claims that his coming show is one which may be enjoyed by every member of the family, that his feats in hypnotism are strictly authentic and that he does not use confederates in any of his tests.

Featured nationally on radio and TV, Dr. Zarro has appeared with Bob Hope and other movie stars on various networks.

The date of Dr. Zarro's performance at the Non-Com Club is strictly a reservation party night. Telephone the club for early and pleasing table space.

The time is 26 May. Telephone —2183.

The Tables of the Law (Ten Commandments) cast in bronze by the Navy during WWII for the use of Jewish chaplains, will be one of the central display pieces during the high Jewish religious celebration of Pentecost. The bronze plaque is surmounted by a crown symbolizing God the King while two Lions of Judah support the Law. A Star of David is centered at the plaque base.

Jewish Holiday Starts Tuesday

Jewish people throughout the world will mark the birthday of the Ten Commandments in a three-day ceremonial commencing at sunset, Tuesday, 15 May, and concluding at sunset, Thursday, 17 May.

The special Jewish theological observance of the festival of Pentecost indicates that 50 days intervene between Passover, the time of liberation, and Shavuot, the time of the granting of the Decalogue. In the Bible the festival is introduced as the time of the feast of the first fruits.

Personnel of the Jewish faith and their dependents are invited to attend Shavuot Services to be held at the Chapel on The Hill, on 16 May at 1930 hours.

Rabbi (Major) William Z. Dalin, USAR, will officiate at the services.

At the reception following the ritual, special Shavuot refreshments will be served to the children by members of the Jewish War Veterans, Post and Auxiliary No. 152.

Presidio Wins 6A Volleyball Crown

SIXTH ARMY champions for the second straight year are the Presidio volleyball squad, led by Major Bob Jones of the 56th Machine Records Unit. The Post men took the title by drubbing the Fort Lewis Chiefs in the Sixth Army finals at Fort Lewis. Players are (l. to r.) Jerry Steiner, Harry Matthews, Catalino Ignacino, Jess Gonzales, Dick Godino, Bob Jones, Bob Noel, Bob Moran, Frank McDonnell and Matt Schmutz. By winning the title the local high net men were entered in the U.S. Nationals being played in Seattle this week.

Successful Defense

Smash Lewis Team For Second Crown

By Pfc. Bob Malone
Star Presidian Sports Editor

The local Presidio Volleyball team, headed by Major Bob Jones, made effective use of teamwork last Friday night and blasted the Fort Lewis Chiefs into submission 15-2, 15-7, to win the Sixth Army title for the second straight year for the Presidio of San Francisco.

By dint of their victory the Post high net men are entered in the United States National Volleyball championships as Sixth Army representatives. The Nationals wind up action tomorrow in Seattle, Washington. It is from this tournament that the Olympic team is chosen.

The winners opened the final two game playoff by hitting for seven straight points before Lewis could tally the first of their two points. From that point on the Presidio team lost the serve only twice in racking up the last eight points.

Fort Lewis rallied in the second contest and put up quite a spirited battle before yielding to the superior power of the Presidio net men.

The serve changed hands four times before Lewis scored the first point. The locals proceeded to go ahead 3 to 1, only to have the northern team come back and deadlock the score.

The Presidio went ahead 5 to 3 and once again Fort Lewis tied it up. With the score 7 to 6 in favor of the champs, the winners finally hit their stride again and caught the Lewis players out of position to score four points in a row. The Post men finished with a string of three straight successful spikes to win the 1956 Sixth Army crown.

The Post men opened the four day net battle by defeating Fort Lawton and Camp Hanford to gain the finals.

The Presidio squad is headed by playing coach Major Bob Jones and includes Bob Moran, Matt Schmutz, Bob Noel, Dick Godino, Catalino Ignacino, Jess Gonzales, Jerry Steiner, Frank McDonnell and Harry Matthews.

The Oakland Army Terminal Wacs won the Sixth Army women's title by smashing the Fort MacArthur girls 15-0, 15-11.

Vic Rimkus, Parris Island, S. C., lineman, has been signed by the Chicago Bears for next season.

Blademen Enter Top Tournaments

The combined Presidio-Letterman Army Hospital fencing squad wound up its qualifying recently for the United States Nationals, the Northern California championships and the Pacific Coast title bouts.

During the past season the local blademen captured fifteen Northern California championships and the Texas Border Division championships plus numerous second and third place victories.

The Army swordsmen slashed their way to a total of 37 medals and two trophies during the past season which added to last year's total gives the locals a grand total of over seventy medals for the past two years.

Next weekend, 19-20 May, a squad composed of Jose Tafoya, George Kester and Herb Rhodes will be crossing blades in Los Angeles for the Pacific Coast Championships.

From the 7th through the 16th of June, a crack team of Colonel Laurance Brownlee, Rhodes and Tafoya will appear in New York City for the World Series of Fencing, the United States Nationals.

Next scheduled team match for the area squad will be Friday evening, 15 June, when San Francisco State College will be the opponent.

overseas

Paul Giel, bonus pitcher of the Giants, who reported for military service as a second lieutenant last November, has been transferred overseas and is stationed at Vaihingen, Germany, headquarters of the Seventh Army in Europe. He will be a pitcher and coach for an Army team.

PSF Hosts Fort Ord Next Week

The weather was the story for the Presidio Torero baseball team this week with all scheduled contests being called by reason of the heavy San Francisco fog.

Next Wednesday and Friday afternoon the powerful Fort Ord Warriors invade the local ball park for a pair of games with the Presidio hopefuls. Last season the Ord men took first place in the All-Sixth Army Baseball tournament with the Presidio coming in second, so next weeks tilts should be well worth watching.

One week from tomorrow, Armed Forces Day, the Post Toreros play host to the Oak Knoll Naval Hospital on the Fort Scott diamond with game time set for 1300 hours.

A proposed new baseball league for Army and Air Force teams in the Bay Area is in the offing with two Army squads and five Air Force teams showing interest.

The Bay Area Armed Forces baseball loop is not in operation this season due to the Navy teams forming their own league. Last season the locals captured the top spot in the league standings.

Post Tennis Tourney Set Next Month

The Presidio Sports Office announced this week that a Post Tennis Tournament will be held from 4 to 8 June on the Infantry Terrace courts. There will be three divisions in the tourney.

Senior: for male personnel over 40 years of age, Female and the Open (for men under 40).

The top four in the Open, top two in the senior and the top two in the women's tournament will represent the Presidio in the Central Division, Sixth Army tourney.

Players may enter the double-elimination play by calling the Post Sports Office at Ext. 3968.

crack shot

Ft. Brooke, P.R. (AFPS)—First Lt. Patricia Mooney, a dietician at the Rodriguez Army Hospital, made the second highest score in the 50-yard slow fire pistol match of the U.S. Army Forces Antilles marksmanship competition. She is the first woman ever to compete in the annual event.

Ex-Grid Ace Sam Brown At Ft. Ord

Sam "First Down" Brown, former UCLA athletic star and All-Coast halfback for the Bruins last season was inducted into the Army late last week and was sent to Fort Ord for basic training.

Brown, the Pacific Coast's number one ground gainer last season, recently signed a pro baseball contract with Los Angeles of the Pacific Coast League. He had been optioned to Twin Falls, Idaho, of the Pioneer League.

help-help

The Presidio Sports Office sent out an urgent call for help from any swimmers or divers stationed on the Presidio or its sub-posts. Personnel with or without competitive experience are urged to call Ext. 3968 for further information. The Presidio as defending Sixth Army Champions will enter a team in the Sixth Army swim meet at Fort MacArthur 18-20 July. The All-Army meet, drawing stars from throughout the world, will be held in the Fort MacArthur pool from 26-29 July.

Little League Opens With Double Header Tomorrow

Featuring music by the Fort Mason Band and General Robert N. Young, Commanding General, Sixth Army, pitching the first ball, the 1956 Presidio Golden Gate Little League gets under way tomorrow afternoon with a double header at 1330 hours. The action will take place on the Presidio Little League diamond, located behind the Post Officers' Club.

Included on the list of invited guests are Major General Paul I. Robinson, Commanding General, Letterman Army Hospital; Brigadier General Dale B. Ridgely, Chief of Dental Service, Letterman Army Hospital, and Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander.

Highlight of the opening ceremony will be the unveiling of a plaque in honor of the late M/Sgt. Carus Hicks of Letterman Hospital, for whom the Little League Park is named.

The first regular six-inning contest will get under way at 1330 hours with the Cubs meeting the Cards. The Cubs managed by Major Robert B. McIntire are coached by Major Joseph P. O'Connor. The Cards are under the direction of Colonel C. A. Barnes and Captain R. J. Teehan.

The second tilt will pit the Giants, last year's winners, against the Yanks. The Giants are under the direction of M/Sgt. James McKrell and M/Sgt. Mullender. The Yanks will be managed by Sfc. Beauvois.

Besides the four major league squads there are five minor league teams this season with a grand total of 160 boys signed up with the program—an increase of 40 from last season.

Tryouts for the teams started the last of March and continued 'till the middle of April. The league rules are patterned after the regular major loops with a major-minor setup and trading of players.

Foremost theory of the Little Leagues is the teaching of sportsmanlike conduct both on and off the playing field.

As this season is the second for the local pint-sized sluggers, the teams will be eligible for the National Little League tournaments. The tournaments are played locally, by regions and on a national basis with the World Series of Little Leagues being held in Williamsport, Penn., at the end of the regular season.

Named as president of the Golden Gate League for the 1956 season is Captain Ronald Ellis with CWO (Navy) Earl Stewart as vice-president. The secretary will be Mrs. Beryl Adams with Major Florence Boush named to the post of treasurer.

8 Man Track Squad Enters 6 Army Meet

Headed by three members of the 505th Military Police Battalion the eight-man Presidio Track and Field squad will enter the Sixth Army track meet on 24 and 25 May at Fort MacArthur.

Lieutenant Fran Zellers, Don Baikie and Don Dryden are the MP representatives followed by Lee Schroeder and Purcell Daniels of Headquarters Company, Station Complement.

The remaining speedsters are Bill Paulson of the 740th AAA Missile Bn., Ken Porter of the Area Vet. Det., and Dick Ludeman from D Btry. of the 9th AAA Missile Bn.

Among the tackle candidates on the spring roster of the Notre Dame football team is a young man by the name of Bronco Nagurski, Jr.

License Sales Soar To New Records Here

Sport fishing and wild game hunting in the United States attracted enough new recruits during the fiscal year ended 30 June, 1955, to establish a record of 33,046,361 paid license holders, an increase of 392,162 over the previous year, the Fish and Wildlife Service has reported.

In the enjoyment of these outdoor sports, hunters and fishermen spent nearly $87 million for all types of hunting and fishing licenses, permits, tags, trout stamps, and Federal duck stamps.

Fishing, still the most popular sport, recorded 18,854,809 paid license holders, compared with 18,580,813 in fiscal year 1954. Paid hunting license holders totaled 14,191,552; last year the figure was 14,073,386.

Pfc. Bob Gilliam of Ft. Lewis, Wash., is building a hydroplane which he plans to enter in the granddaddy of all powerboat regattas, the Gold Cup next August. He will call his entry "Fascination."

The remaining match saw the Hooks hold the Company B, 505th MPs to a two all score despite Hoskins 212 game for the police. Alexander led the Hooks with a 201 roll.

Over in the Pacific League with only two weeks of action left, the first place Keystone Kops are enjoying a five-game margin over the Sixth Army Signal pin-splitters.

The Kops were held to a two all tie by the fifth place All-Stars this week as Beidenbender rolled a 191 game for the stars. Johnson was high man for the Kops with a 189 score.

Post Golfers Smash Parks AFB 20-7

The sweet swinging Presidio golf squad won their fourth match of the 1956 season last Tuesday when they blasted out a 20-7 win from the Parks Air Force Base divot men on the Sharpe Park course.

Colonel Tom Ward turned in the low score card for the day with a fine two over par 74 followed by Captain Leon Thomas with a 75. Thomas teamed with Bill Krause for the local's number one team and dropped five points while winning four.

Ward and Major Rollin Kapp made up the second squad for the Presidio and came through with nine tallies while dropping none, to make the final score 20-7.

Milton Rosenberg with a 78 and John Roberts with a 82 made up the other Post twosome and made off with nine points.

This afternoon at 1300 hours the Post divot takers play host to the strong Mather Air Force Base six on the Sharpe Park links.

JAVELIN star Bill Paulson wound up and tossed the spear 185 feet, last week, as the Presidio won third place in the Northern California Track meet. Paulson, a former Washington State College ace is now stationed with the 740th AAA Msl. Bn.

Toreros Take Third Place In Track Meet

Paced by big Olen Wright's two first place awards in the discus and shot, the nine-man Presidio Track and Field team captured third place in last Saturday's first annual Northern California Armed Forces cinder meet at Encinal High in Alameda.

The powerful Fort Ord Warriors took first place with an overwhelming display of power. The Ord men won the mile, the 100-yard dash, the 220, the low hurdles, the high jump and the hop step and jump. Parks Air Force Base was second with 40 points, just one ahead of the local cinder squad.

Wright, a former University of California star, and now from the 21st Engineers of the 30th Engineer Group, tossed the 16 pound shot 51 feet and came right back in the discus with a heave of 148 feet.

Purcell Daniels took second in both the 100 and 220 sprints behind the Fort Ord flash Alex Burl. Daniels also won a fourth place ribbon in the shot put.

Lanky Bill Paulson of the 740th AAA Msl. Bn., wound up and tossed the javelin 185 feet for a second place award.

Don Dryden of Company B, 505th MP's finished second in the quarter mile, Lee Schroeder of Headquarters Company, Station Complement, won the broad jump and Sammy Moreno making his first start on the track team wound up fourth in the mile run, to round out the individual scoring for the Post speedsters.

The PSF mile relay team of Schroeder, Daniels, Moreno and Dryden wound up in the third slot and the 440 yard team of Daniels, Ludeman, Dryden and Schroeder took fourth place.

Wacs Will Celebrate 14th Birthday On Monday

★★★ Social Events Highlight Post Celebrations

By Sfc. Debra O'Hanlon
Star Presidian Staff Writer

Courtesy and hospitality are the stepping stones over which 150 Presidio enlisted women of the 6002nd SU, Company D, and 30 Wac officers of the Command march on 14 May into their 14th year of military service with the United States Government.

The dual anniversary date which occurs next Monday, is likewise being marked across the nation and foreign outposts where women officers and enlisted women serve.

On the Presidio, two social events are planned to mark the occasion; one to be a reception at the Presidio Officers Open Mess, Sunday, 13 May, from 1600 to 1800 hours, hosted by women officers of the Command for their particular social group; the other a reception and dinner dance at the Presidio Non-Commissioned Officers Open Mess, on Monday from 1700 to closing time. (The pre-dinner dance reception at the Non-Com Club is planned mainly to permit section officers and civilian co-workers of the enlisted women to extend anniversary felicitations to the Corps through the local medium.

Land Here 34 Reenlist During Mass Overseas Ceremonies

Eighteen soldiers who reenlisted in the Regular Army 24 April in a 34-man mass ceremony held at their regimental headquarters in the demilitarized zone of Korea, landed at Travis Air Force Base last week to begin a thirty-day reenlistment leave at home. Six others arrived on a later plane.

The men, all members of the 32nd (Buccaneer) Regiment, U.S. Seventh Infantry Division, were stationed at Camp Hovey, Korea. After taking the oath of enlistment, administered by the battalion commander, the group flew to Japan for a two-day stopover.

Those stateside bound then flew to Honolulu for another two-day stopover and sightseeing trip before embarking for the mainland where they will disperse to their individual homes.

They will report to Oakland Army Terminal in one month for return to Japan and duty with the 5th Cavalry Regiment, 1st Cavalry Division.

High Seas PX System Is Topic At Next Info Meet

Participants will embark for HIGH SEAS in San Diego aboard the USS Eldorado and the USS Bayfield. Although troops and warships will not be present for the landing operations, all of the logistical and tactical problems of their employment in establishing a beachhead will be solved under combat conditions.

Following the theoretical assault of the 1st Infantry Division, III Corps Headquarters will move to shore with field equipment and establish a command post.

Opposition to the landing will be furnished by a mythical enemy "Aggressor" Force, commanded by Major General Riley F. Ennis, Deputy Commander, Sixth Army. The Sixth Army Mobilization Group (Army Reserve) will operate as "Aggressor" Corps headquarters. On 19-20 May, headquarters personnel of the 49th Infantry Division (California National Guard), the 63d and 91st Infantry Divisions (Army Reserve) will also engage in the play of the "Aggressor" Force.

Work clothing should be changed at frequent intervals. Soiled clothing should be cleaned or laundered frequently as a health measure.

Next week's Troop Information Topic will center on the benefits derived from the Army's popular Post Exchange System.

In 1895 the embryo of our present Post Exchange System was inaugurated, and then as now it has a two-fold basic objective; to supply objects of command demand at a lower cost, and sharing the profits with the units as revenue for recreation and welfare benefits.

With this idea paramount in the minds of those who operate the vast network of outlets comprising the Bay Area Exchange, changes consistent to the ever changing pattern of our living standards are taking place.

Major B. F. Muse, exchange officer for the Bay area, heads up 21 sub-exchanges in addition to the main exchange on the Presidio, 14 cafeterias and snack bars and six service stations which in 1955 had gross sales of $2,872,428. Of this $145,399.64 was sent to the Regional office for redistribution to welfare funds.

This gross of nearly three million dollars a year benefits local troops in three ways. First, it provides a convenient place for necessities that are not available for issue. Second, the cost to the individual serviceman, his dependents and retired military personnel is usually lower than other sources. Third, the net profit is returned to company funds and in recreational facilities by way of the various welfare funds.

Out of each dollar taken by the Exchange, 78 cents pays for the merchandise, 16 cents pays utilities, fixtures, salaries, equipment replacement or improvements. Six cents goes to the Regional Welfare Fund, which returns a proportionate share to the Presidio Central Welfare Fund. This is according to the morning report strength, and usually comes to about $14 per man per year.

The Special Services division gets from the Central Post Welfare Fund much of the money it uses for hobby shops, athletic and talent competitions, libraries, service clubs, and other morale programs.

Although the supervision of the Exchange is a staff function, an advisory group consisting of an NCO committee and an Officers council assists the Exchange officer. The NCO committee is made up of representatives from each command, and meets quarterly to hear or present complaints or to suggest improvements. The officer representatives in each of the major commands have similar functions. These two groups are the policy makers for the Exchange program.

Major General Edward H. White once called the Post Exchange "The Serviceman's General Store," and that is just what it is today.

while the Golds came up with 1385, V 79.

The Ford Ord Blue team finished third in rifle team competition with 1383 V 81 markers.

Although Presidio's rifle team members did not number among the top shooters, it appeared that at least six of the 16 members of the squad may go to the All-Army tournament at Fort Benning next month.

Shooters who stand a good chance of getting Benning orders are 1st Lieutenant Donald E. Fries, M/Sgt. Peter A. Kuznar, M/Sgt. Abbott E. Thibodeaux, M/Sgt. Wayne K. Steward, Sfc. Richard E. Alexander and Pfc. Robert L. Dalton.

The post pistol team will probably receive orders for Benning en masse.

On behalf of the men and women of the Army, I extend congratulations to you on the 14th anniversary of the Corps.

Founded in time of emergency, the Women's Army Corps has amply proved its value to the Army both in peace and in war. Overseas and at home, in a wide range of skills, the members of the Women's Army Corps have demonstrated a high order of competence and devotion to duty, worthy of the best traditions of the military service.

I am confident that the future will bring increased opportunities for service to the Nation, and that the Women's Army Corps will be more than equal to the challenge.

Chief of Staff

Presiding at both social events will be Lieutenant Colonel Anne E. Sweeney, Sixth Army WAC Staff Advisor, Captain Virginia Engels, Wac Commander, Lieutenant Dorothy Miller, Wac Executive Officer, and M/Sergeant Mary E. Richmond, the Company First Soldier.

Among honor guests invited to attend both functions are Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commander, Brigadier General Louis J. Rumaggi, Major General Riley F. Ennis, Major General Walter J. Muller and Colonel Carl G. Lundquist.

The Wac Companies at Letterman Army Hospital, Fort Mason and Oakland Army Terminal are each holding Open House for staff officers of the respective headquarters and their friends during the week of 11 to 14 May. Letterman is holding an informal reception on Monday to which ward nurses, staff supervisors and co-workers have been invited.

Outdoor picnics and tea-dances will terminate celebration of the 14th anniversary of the Wac corps throughout the Bay Area generally.

I Solemnly Swear, says Sfc. Robert Schultz as he is reenlisted into the Army by Major John F. Kwock, 505th MP Battalion operations officer. The sergeant, who originally enlisted in the Army when he was 15, before World War II, is the MP Battalion's operations sergeant. He re-upped for six years to complete the final leg on his 20 year enlistment.

PRESIDIO OF SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA

Saturday 19 May, 1956

Community Spirit!

Presidio's Generous Giving Aids Bay Area Charities

The neighborly community feeling which prevails at the Presidio is manifest in concrete manner by the amount of money collected here annually for the city of San Francisco's various charitable drives.

Special fund drives during the fiscal year 1956 sponsored at the Presidio in the interests of civic welfare, reached a total of $47,221.31. This total was reached through a contribution of $5,100.04 from military and civilian personnel on the reservation, to Army Emergency Relief and Army Relief Society.

Some $30,171.40 was collected for the United Bay Area Crusade, while $9,919.85 was achieved for the March of Dimes Fund, and $2,030.02 was given to the Crusade for Freedom.

Other charities supported by the Presidio are the American-Korean Foundation and the San Francisco Guild for Crippled Children.

The Presidio Women's Club, with the aid of the Boy Scouts, collects clothing and other items for orphanages in Korea. Meanwhile, the enlisted men and women of the command have established a personal project involving financial and other contributions to needy local causes at Christmas and Easter.

The national blood program is supported at the Presidio through the turning over of all whole blood given by military personnel in excess of the standard supply required at Letterman Army Hospital. Such blood is used for transfusions in local hospitals and for vital medical research projects when the need arises.

LAH Officer Awarded Community Citation For Outstanding Service

An award for service to the community went to Lieutenant Colonel Raoul C. Psaki, Jr., Letterman Army Hospital, during the Golden Gate District Annual Dinner honoring volunteer Boy Scout Leaders, on Wednesday evening.

Principal speaker at the dinner was the Honorable George Christopher, Mayor of San Francisco.

Honor guest was Mr. Walter Heller, president of the San Francisco Boy Scout Council. Chaplain Major Henry C. Butt, Presidio, read the invocation.

Reports from the chairmen of the District Scout Activities for the past year were announced during the dinner meeting.

Chaplains Play 180th Year! Special Role In High Morale

The Presidio Chaplains' Section—an integral part of the U.S. Army—has planned a full exhibit of its activities for today's Armed Forces Day program on the main parade ground.

Plans formulated by Chaplain (Major) Henry C. Butt call for a squad tent to be erected on a grassy plot near the parade ground.

Visitors to the Chaplains' tent, identifiable by a large sign; National Flag; Christian Flag; Jewish Flag; and Chaplains' flag will be shown a host of items and exhibits pertinent to a chaplain's duties.

Included will be a Christian and Jewish chaplains' field kit, a field desk, folding field tables, pictures of Chaplains' activities in the field and garrison, character guidance lecture material and literature of Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish faiths.

Visual aids, including a film on the chaplains' work in the Army, will be shown at regular intervals.

Presidio chapels—The Chapel of Our Lady, Roman Catholic, and the Post Chapel, Protestant, will be open to the public throughout the day. Personnel will be on duty for information.

Special Project!

Troops Will Host Homeless Children During AFD Fete

Soldiers and Wacs from the Presidio will play host for today's Armed Forces Day festivities to more than 30 children brought on post for a "treat" from San Francisco's Edgewood Home.

The children, many of them orphans, will be given VIP treatment by the enlisted men and women of the Presidio so as to enable them to have a wonderful time while watching the various military demonstrations and exhibits.

They will be met, as they come on Post in the Home's bus, and escorted to mess halls for lunch. The boys will go with their soldier escorts to Company E, 6002 AC mess hall, while the girls will accompany Wacs to their dining room in Building 617.

After the lunch—topped by an entree of baked ham—the children will view exhibits, watch the assault beach landing, the Nike site, drill teams, bands, etc., and return to the mess halls for a snack of cokes, ice cream and hot dogs.

They'll take leave of their escorts after watching the three-battalion retreat parade at 1600 hours.

CAP Has Gala Show On Tap For Visitors

Approximately 60 members of two squadrons of northern California's Civil Air Patrol will participate in the observance of Armed Forces Day at the Presidio of San Francisco today. Participants include cadets of San Francisco's Squadron 96 and the East Bay's Mount Diablo Squadron 88 from Concord.

Thirty cadets will serve as traffic control personnel at the two amphibious landings scheduled at Crissy Field, while 20 young women of the squadrons will circulate through the crowd in the vicinity of the parade ground to furnish information to visitors.

The CAP personnel will also man a display of equipment, to include an aircraft, communications vehicle, survival gear and other equipment used in rescue operations. Other personnel will display Civil Air Patrol uniforms in the fashion show of service uniforms to be held at the Presidio during the day.

Squadron 88's crack drill team, winner of the recent northern California championship, is also scheduled to perform on the Presidio's main parade ground during the day, and a CAP amphibian plane will patrol the beach during the amphibious landings.

The active Army is aware of the importance of the civilian components and supports wholeheartedly the program to strengthen and improve them. It insists, however, on getting fair return in efficiency and combat readiness.

ARMY POWER — KEY TO PEACE

Army's I &amp; E Program Key To Better Soldiers

Education and information play vital roles in the life of the modern serviceman.

Through such mediums as newspapers, organized discussions, posters, films and other modern visual aids, he learns why he serves and why, if necessary, he must fight and die for ideas of home and country.

In the field of education, the Army continues to make a vast contribution to raising the scholastic and technical skills of the professional and temporary soldier. Affiliations with adult programs, colleges and approved technical courses are supported by expert programming and monetary assistance.

Designated Troop Information and Education, this unique military operation touches the life of every serviceman and is without equal counterpart or parallel in civilian or military history.

Within the eight western state area of the Sixth Army, the most recent quarterly education survey shows that some 12,926 active enrollments were listed. During this quarter 17 per cent of assigned troop personnel participated in some phase of the education program.

At the Presidio seven servicemen will receive BA degrees from San Francisco State College next month. This was made possible by a program of on-post college courses that has totaled some 700 over a six-month period.

In the high school field, two sixteen-week semesters are offered on-post each year by teachers from the San Francisco Adult Education Division. Classes include English, science, mathematics, history and typing. Completion of the first four and the General Educational Development Tests earned thirty Presidians a San Francisco high school diploma. Many others received diplomas from their home school districts, and even more received the Army equivalency rating which enables them to attend service schools which require completion of high school for entrance.

Many Presidians through the Post TI&E Division arrange to take courses at such schools as

Shades Of Former Heroes Stalk Local Historical Scenes

This year, the 180th since the founding of the Presidio by the Spanish, offers an unusual opportunity for guests on Armed Forces Day to recall some of the major events with which the Presidio is associated and to visit some of the monuments that commemorate them.

Primary interest should probably center around Pershing Square which was once the site of General John J. Pershing's home. A plaque marks the location of the house where his wife and children perished in the fire which destroyed it in 1915. Nearby is the marker which indicates the northwest corner of the original presidial enclosure, which in the Spanish and Mexican days was a wall of adobe and stone, twelve feet high. The Presidio Officers' Open Mess generally marks the south side of the old presidial enclosure.

Also located on Pershing Square is a Dawn Redwood tree planted by the Daughters of the American Revolution, whose organization is responsible for the erection of many markers on the Presidio. The ancient cannon on the square and also in front of the officers' club, cast over 250 years ago, are worthy of close study. Other cannon on the post were presented by General William Shafter and were brought from Cuba.

which the American flag was raised for the first time on July 9, 1846.

Throughout the post there are markers which recall that the Presidio was a training camp during the Civil War, the Spanish-American War, and World Wars I and II. At Inspiration Point the visitor can stand where Anza and Moraga stood while discussing the selection of the sites for the presidio and the fort which would guard the Golden Gate.

Guests may wish to visit the two oldest buildings from the American period, the Post Dispensary, Building 2, completed in 1857, and the old powder magazine, Building 95, erected in 1862.

Perhaps the most interesting relic of the past is Fort Point into which American troops entered in February, 1861, shortly after its completion. On this site once stood the Castillo de San Joaquin, built by the Spanish in 1794, to protect the entrance to the harbor and the anchorage located just off the Fort Point Coast Guard Station.

Nearby can be seen the battery emplacements that were the last word in coastal defenses when Fort Winfield Scott was completed in 1905. Not far away, guided missile batteries protect the city and harbor from air attack. In a few reflective minutes the visitor can cover 180 years in the history of military fortifications.

No visitor should leave the Presidio without entering the beautiful San Francisco National Cemetery, established in 1884, and pausing for a brief period to pay tribute to those members of the Armed Forces who in war maintained the right of the nation to have peace. (E. K. S.)

The Army does not forget its old soldiers after they retire. It remains interested in their welfare, and wants them to serve in their civilian communities as loyal, informed, representatives of the Army.

three on-duty typing classes were conducted to meet the need for typists to fill military jobs.

One of the outstanding services performed for military personnel of the Presidio and nearby anti-aircraft units is the educational counseling provided by the three skilled and experienced advisers of the Presidio Army Education Center. In the period from October through March of this year, nearly 1100 servicemen and women were individually counseled on their educational needs and requirements. In the same time-period, the advisers conducted 1500 individual follow-up interviews.

The Post TI&E Division also operates a testing and registration center for the United States Armed Forces Institute. During the second and third quarters of this year more than 1200 enrollments and applications were processed and more than 1200 tests were administered by personnel of the Presidio's testing center.

Army Will Show Battle Mettle In Beach Assault Landings

The American public will be given a crystal-clear impression of U.S. Army assault landings today when troops storm the Crissy Field beach to highlight the Presidio of San Francisco's Armed Forces Day fete.

The visitors, and thousands are expected to throng the Presidio grounds, will be shown two demonstrations of the Army's amphibious tactics during the day.

The demonstrations will be held at 1000 (10 a.m.) hours and 1500 (3 p.m.) hours on the beach, north of Crissy Field.

The demonstrations, formulated by Major Walter L. Carppi, Presidio AFD projects officer and his staff, and approved by Sixth Army Commander Lieutenant General Robert N. Young and Deputy Post Commander Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, will involve more than 150 troops, artillery, landing craft and aircraft.

Everything has been done to make the landings as realistic as possible, said Major Carppi, and from all indications they will adhere as closely as possible to the real thing.

Three LCMs and one DUKW, provided by the Post Harbor Craft Detachment, will comprise the attacking force, which will get artillery "cover" from a 105 millimeter howitzer posted at Fort Baker.

The landing craft will proceed in column to a rendezvous point 150 yards offshore and then veer sharply toward the beach. As the boats approach the shore defenders from the 660th Engineer Battalion will open fire with small arms and machine guns.

Troops aboard the landing craft will return the shots with four machine guns, one aboard each boat.

The LCM on the right flank will disgorge its troops—from the 561st Engineer Company—first, with two flame thrower teams in the lead. The flame throwers will fire short bursts of napalm, deadly in time of war, but weakened for the demonstration, at a wooden pillbox on the beach.

Once the flame throwers have stormed the beach, all troops will attack frontally and capture aggressor forces. Attacking troops will then march the defenders to the embarkation area.

Medics, simulating a first aid marshalling area on the beach will stand by for the helicopter rescue of two litter cases.

When the exhibition has been completed in the afternoon part of the show, the landing craft will remain on the beach for public inspection.

Troops participating in the assault have been rehearsed three times, the last for press cameras and newsmen, to insure perfect coordination and safety.

In addition to the flame throwers, assault troops will be reinforced by demolition teams scheduled to explode an armored machine gun pillbox.

CG's AFD Welcome

"On this, the seventh Armed Forces Day, I salute the men and women of the Sixth Army for their magnificent achievements in war and peace.

"Today, when war could mean total devastation, the objective of our Armed Forces is to provide the power to keep the peace. The Army is joined with its sister services in an all-out effort to build a force which will offer convincing evidence to any potential enemy that we have the determination and means to check aggression anywhere in the world. The teamwork which has brought us victory in the past will be invaluable in preserving the peace in the future.

"Let none of us forget that the people of America and the Free World have placed their faith in us. We are determined not to betray their trust."

Chemical Section Will Demonstrate Special Effects Weapons

The Post Chemical Section will conduct a munitions and equipment demonstration for visitors to the Presidio's Armed Forces Day fete today.

The Nation's fighting forces celebrate the 7th annual AFD program today, with the public invited to inspect, be curious about and ask about equipment and facilities throughout the U. S. and installations overseas.

A three-battalion Retreat and Review Ceremony is scheduled to climax Presidio of San Francisco's mammoth Armed Forces Day fete at 1600 (4 p.m.) hours today.

Fully 800 troops—plus massed color guards from the Army, Marine Corps, Air Force and Coast Guard—will swing past Lieutenant General Robert N. Young and other high ranking officers' reviewing stand to highlight AFD on post.

Orders published by Headquarters of the Presidio indicate that two battalions of Presidio troops and one battalion of combined Marine Corps, Air Force and Coast Guard personnel will participate in the march.

Additionally, the Sixth Army Band will perform in the parade.

The orders indicate the first battalion will be made up of companies D, C and A, Station Complement, in that order. Those units will be followed by the massed color guards.

To the rear of the colors will come two companies of Detachments 1 and 2, Sixth Army Headquarters. The Headquarters Company, Station Complement, is scheduled to march at the rear of the second battalion.

Marine Corps, Air Force and Coast Guard troops will march in that order in the third battalion, the order said.

Service Power Grows; Add New Ships, Planes

New York (AFPS)—In the 12 months since last Armed Forces Day, the services have gone ahead developing new weapons and modifying long-standing battle concepts to keep this country prepared for the long pull of either a hot or cold war.

This was the year the Navy introduced the USS Forrestal, a new type of aircraft carrier — the world's largest. This high-speed mobile airbase could carry 100 planes a distance of up to 1,000 miles in 24 hours. Five more in this class were on the way.

The Navy allocated funds for construction of the first nuclear-powered surface ship—a missile firing cruiser. The service also announced plans for six more atom-powered submarines to join the Nautilus, already on duty.

Meanwhile, the Air Force was rapidly replacing the B-36 with the B-52 heavy bomber, which Chief of Staff Gen. Nathan F. Twining called the best bomber in the world.

The Army, convinced that, in the final analysis, it is the man who takes the ground who holds the key to winning a war, was adding increased mobility to its fighting power.

The service was working out new techniques, tactics and organization of its units for the rapid dispersal and concentration of forces. Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, chief of staff, looked forward to a time when entire divisions could be transported by air around the world at relatively low cost.

The Marine Corps further developed its new techniques of "vertical assault," using planes and helicopters to establish a beachhead. The Corps adopted a new antitank weapon, "The Thing," which was equipped with six 106-mm recoilless rifles.

Guided missiles continued to get top attention from the services.

The Air Force announced it was developing two types of intercontinental ballistic missiles—Atlas and Titan—and one of medium range—Thor.

The service continued to make progress in development of strategic, tactical and air defense missiles. Matador squadrons operate with the U.S. Air Forces in Europe. Supersonic interceptor planes are being armed with air-to-air guided missiles like the Falcon.

Already developed and deployed were the Army's surface-to-surface Corporal and Honest John rockets. Nike, first operational surface-to-air guided missile, was on site protecting vital defense areas in the U.S. The Army's new intermediate range guided missile, Redstone, was undergoing extensive tests at Redstone Arsenal, Ala.

The Navy was building a guided missile family including surface-to-surface Regulus, the air-to-air Sparrow, the antiaircraft missile Terrier and an air-to-underwater missile.

Talos, a Navy-developed guided missile of the surface-to-air variety, was added to the arsenal of the Continental Air Defense Command at land installations and aboard ships.

AAA Battalion Has Big Guns Defense Ready

The 752nd Antiaircraft Artillery Battalion is a far-flung organization, standing guard over the San Francisco Bay region with 90-millimeter guns located high atop hills overlooking the populous cities—and right on down to the water's edge.

Activated in Hawaii in December, 1943, the battalion served in the Central and Western Pacific Theaters until 1948, when it was taken off the Army's active roles. It was returned to active duty in Oakland in 1953.

Its mission is to provide anti-aircraft defense of the Bay Area and for ground and naval support when directed.

The unit has planned an Armed Forces Day display at the Presidio's parade ground and at the Oakland Army Terminal.

Batteries C (at Government Island, Alameda) and D (at Fort Funston) will hold open house.

The 752nd has established excellent community relations. Recent activities included an open house Easter Egg Hunt at D Battery and a spaghetti dinner given A Battery (at Richmond, California) by a community organization.

Headquarters and B and C Batteries have initiated a unique and interesting project whereby they sponsor retarded children in local schools.

Services Trim Weight In Programmed Move

Washington (AFPS) — The numerical strength of the armed forces continued to decline during the past year as the services got down to fighting strength by removing some excess poundage.

Three of the services, the Army, Air Force and Marine Corps—were programmed for a manpower drop during the year while the Navy was given a slight increase in strength.

A year ago the U. S. had 2,968,810 men under arms. By 30 June, 1956, the end of the current fiscal year, there will be 2,814,074 men and women on active duty.

Present Defense Department planning calls for the strength of the services to climb upwards once again during the coming fiscal year. By 30 June, 1957, it is anticipated that there will be 2,839,458 personnel in uniform unless there is a critical change in the world situation.

Here is the way the services will look by next 30 June:

Army—Authorized 1,034,300 men with 19 divisions (three in the Far East and five in Europe), 10 regimental combat teams, 137 AAA battalions and six army training centers. By 30 June, 1957, it is planned to have an army strength of 1,034,500.

Navy—Authorized 662,774 men with 994 ships (403 warships) and 12,548 aircraft. Plans call for the Navy to have 663,223 men in uniform by the end of the 1957 fiscal year.

Army, Air Force and Marine

Air Force—Authorized 916,000 men, 131 wings and 26,429 active aircraft. Nearly 90 per cent of all planes, except transports are jet equipped. By 30 June, 1957, the AF is expected to have 936,000 men. 137 wings and 26,736 aircraft.

Marine Corps—Authorized 201,000 men with three divisions (one in the Pacific area) and three air wings (one in Japan). By the end of fiscal 1957, the DOD proposes to increase Marine strength to 205,735 men.

Coast Guard—Under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of the Treasury, this service has a force of 28,500 men and 342 vessels (33 cutters).

First Public View of AAA Sites

The Army's ring of steel—conventional antiaircraft guns and Nikes—surrounding the San Francisco Bay Area will be thrown open for public inspection for today's Armed Forces Day celebration.

For the first time in the Bay Area, a Nike site will be open for the general populace to inspect, wander about and be briefed on.

The announcement came from Colonel Dallas F. Haynes, commander of the 30th Antiaircraft Artillery Group, the command organization over the various Bay Area ack-ack battalions.

Colonel Haynes announced that B Battery of the 740th Antiair-

America's armed might goes on parade throughout the nation and overseas today.

The fighting services everywhere will celebrate the seventh annual Armed Forces Day with a "Power for Peace" display that is expected to instruct and enlighten the public of its combat capabilities.

From the remotest outposts right on down to the Iron Curtain in Communist surrounded Berlin—and other trouble spots—the American armed services will demonstrate their skills and techniques.

Here at the Presidio, the best of northern California's Armed Forces Day exhibition will be held.

Under the direction of Major Walter L. Carppi, Presidio AFD projects officer, a mammoth program has been arranged to display the Army's role in America's defense planning.

Plans for the day's events and activities call for guided tours of the Presidio to displays of the Army's most formidable weapons.

For the first time, residents of the Bay region have been invited to take a glimpse at the Nike guided missile sites which ring the area to protect citizens day and night from possible enemy air attack.

And twice during the day, infantrymen—supported by tanks, artillery, automatic weapons, incendiary teams and flame throwers—will storm a beach head at Crissy Field in a demonstration of Army amphibious tactics.

The demonstrations have been scheduled—with the approval of Sixth Army Commander Lieutenant General Robert N. Young and Deputy Post Commander Colonel Carl E. Lundquist—for 10 a.m. and 3 p.m.

Numerous barracks will be open for visitors to inspect and see just how the modern U. S. soldier lives. The public will also be invited to have dinner with the troops in nine mess halls on Post.

Letterman Army Hospital will take visitors on a guided tour of the hospital, serve them coffee and doughnuts, and let them inspect two ambulance train cars.

On the Presidio's main parade ground, the public will see almost every conceivable display of Army technical and administrative equipment.

Besides the static exhibitions, the visitor will be entertained by concerts by the Sixth Army Band and Pipe Band, demonstrations of troop drills by the Honor Guard's crack drill team, a judo show by members of the Military Police, a fashion show of the latest Army uniforms, a demonstration of underwater welding and pile driving by the engineers, rescue operations from light aircraft and helicopters.

There will be plenty of parking space for visitors, too. Areas have been designated and any of the courteous MPs on Post will be happy to furnish information.

Landing

An Army deep sea diver will debark from a Q-boat off shore, place an incendiary grenade on the defense strong point and re-board the vessel.

The entire demonstration, including helicopter pickups of personnel before and after by Army and Coast Guard 'choppers, is expected to last an hour.

Parking areas on Crissy Field landing strip—a short distance from the beach—have been established for the convenience of visitors.

Cut PX Surcharge

Washington (AFPS) — Army and AF commissaries worldwide cut surcharges on purchases one-half of one per cent this month.

The new surcharges, added to the customers total sales, have been fixed at three per cent in the U. S. and two-and-one-half per cent in all overseas areas.

This additional charge is levied at all Army and Air Force commissary stores to cover the costs of supplies, equipment, maintenance and utilities.

Parade

Each marching unit will be composed of 85 enlisted men (and enlisted women) and four officers.

Sixth Army Headquarters will furnish the commander of troops and three staff members. Post Headquarters and Army Headquarters will furnish commanders and staffs for the two Army battalions.

The Marines will provide the troop commander for the third battalion, while one officer of each of the participating services will staff the battalion.

Army troops will wear Class A uniforms, combat boots, helmet liners, scarves and gloves and sling weapons, muzzle down.

JCS's AFD Message

Unique Presidio Unit Will Display Varied Skills For AFD Visitors

The 561st Engineer Company (Port Construction), one of the Army's most versatile and colorful units, has been assigned a mighty big task for today's Armed Forces Day celebration on the Presidio.

First, the 561st, commanded by First Lieutenant Alvin L. McDowell, is scheduled to furnish approximately 100 troops for the assault beach landing demonstration at Crissy Field in the morning and afternoon showings.

Secondly, the unit will display some of its varied engineering skills to the public on the Presidio's main parade ground exhibition area.

In the first role, the 561st's troops will storm the Crissy Field beach to show the public exactly how the Army gets a foot hold on enemy held territory.

And in the second role, the Company will demonstrate:

1. How it drives piles into the ground (or sea) to build docks for boats and ships to land.
2. Underwater welding by a diver in standard gear.

First Lieutenant Neil M. Cline, the 561st's Armed Forces Day representative, has also arranged to show the public some of its Table of Organization and Establishment heavy equipment.

Included are one bulldozer, one mobile shop trailer, one 210 CFM truck mounted air compressor with organic pneumatic tools, a 20-ton truck mounted crane with pile driving attachments, deep sea and shallow water diving gear and steel cube pontoons with assembly fixtures.

The divers will demonstrate underwater cutting and welding of metal in a tank within the unit's exhibition area.

All told, the 561st will amply show why the Army assigns it to road building, dock erection, underwater demolition, deep sea diving, salvage, and any other engineering duties necessary.

Demonstration is readied as members of the 561st Engineer Company (PC) fit diving helmet on Specialist First Class Charles W. Holland, who will demonstrate diving techniques in a water tank on the Presidio parade ground. The unit will show the public how underwater welding and repair is accomplished.

Opportunities Galore! Recruiting Display Aimed At Showing Services' Advantages

The Army's Recruiting Service, designed to show young men the opportunities of service to their nation, will put on a full display in conjunction with the Presidio's Armed Forces Day fete, it was announced this week.

The northern California area of the Recruiting Service has placed on display the latest version of a mobile recruiting station. The colorful bus was designed primarily to assist Army Recruiters in carrying information concerning the benefits of an Army career to communities not having a full time enlistment staff.

The unit has visited many of the towns and cities in northern California and western Nevada during its tour of the area. In addition to being fully equipped as a recruiting station, the bus contains a number of attractive and interesting displays.

A scale model of an Army mess hall and kitchen, complete in every detail, is on display. Seventy-five miniature models comprising armored vehicles, scout cars, and tanks used by nations participating in World War II are mounted on life-like ground landscape, showing the various types of combat vehicles in tactical formations. The models are exact replicas of their giant counterparts.

Another exhibit shows a collection of enlarged colored pictures depicting the advantages and opportunities a young man is offered in today's modern Army.

you'll come!

The Army Reserve Recruiting Office, located in Stillwell Hall at the Presidio, will be open all day tomorrow, 19 May, to give information and accept enlistments under the Reserve Forces Act of 1955.

Medical examining facilities will also be open at the recruiting office for the purpose of expediting the processing of men who decide to enlist that day.

The Army is in the first line of defense of the United States. By its overseas deployment it presents to the enemy the United States soldier as an initial obstacle to his aggression, covering the forward bases of the other Services.

Armed Forces Day Prayer

ALMIGHTY GOD, on this Armed Forces Day, we give Thee thanks for all those who by their sacrifices and devotion to duty have made our heritage of freedom secure. Grant that we may prove worthy of our birthright and that in the days to come our land may be a power for peace in accordance with Thy will. Thou dost hold us to account for the use of all our powers and our privileges, thus keep us ever mindful of the responsibilities our citizenship requires.

PROTECT and assist all those who at home and abroad, on land and sea, and in the air are serving our country. Shield them from danger; keep them strong and steadfast; give them courage and faith. Uphold their hands that they, with all those who stand ready in reserve, may faithfully perform their duties and at all times remain true to the precepts of their Code of Conduct.

FINALLY we pray that we may become and remain Thy good servants, more completely surrendered in our devotion to Thee and to our country, and that Thy peace may return to this world to Thy honor and glory.

Bay Area Protector! AAA Unit Has Proud, Capable History In War And Peacetime

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

While San Franciscans work, play and sleep, officers and enlisted men of the 740th AAA Missile Battalion stand by on 24-hour alert, ready to defend the area, should enemy aircraft descend on the city.

With headquarters and launcher areas at Fort Scott, on the Presidio and control area atop Mt. Sutro, in the heart of San Francisco, the 740th's personnel are on duty seven days a week of every year in their vital mission.

Assigned to the 30th AAA Group—the command brigade for the San Francisco Bay Area—the 740th's military lineage goes back to May, 1942.

Herewith a brief outline of events in the unit's history:

- 21 May, 1942, constituted as part of the 611th Coast Artillery Regiment.
- The 611th activated at Fort Bliss, Texas, December, 1942.
- Elements of the 611th redesignated, the 1st Battalion becoming the 740th AAA Gun Battalion.
- Shipped to European Theater of Operations, the 740th earned campaign streamers in England, Normandy and northern France.
- Twice cited in the Order of the Day of the Belgian Army for action in defense of the city of Antwerp and the Harbor against the Luftwaffe.
- Awarded the Belgian Fourragere.
- Inactivated 9 July, 1946, in France.
- Allotted to the Regular Army, 19 November, 1952, reactivated April, 1953, at Presidio of San Francisco.
- Changed to Missile Anti-aircraft Battalion 9 July, 1954, at Fort Scott.

14-Month Pvts. Set For Early Promotions

Newly promoted Pfc's won't be calling their slick-sleeved colleagues Private much longer.

According to DA Message 22920, dated 7 May, and Sixth Army message AMAGP-1-E363, dated the 9th of this month, unit commanders have been authorized to appoint privates with 14 months' service as of 1 May to Pfc., regardless of TO&E vacancies.

Length of service will not be the sole criteria used in this new promotion program. Those promoted will be fully qualified for the boost in rank according to his ability and prior service record. This will be determined by the prospective candidate's commanding officer.

Last month, 401 E-2's in the Sixth Army command received like promotions under a program which gave privates their first stripe, provided they had 15 months of active federal service. This new program drops the length of time necessary for promotion by one month.

This new influx of promotions is part of a plan by the Department of the Army to equalize promotion opportunities for enlisted personnel.

Cal Military District Plans Colorful Info Show Today

The California Military District Headquarters at the Presidio maintains the record of each Army Reserve member, officer and enlisted, for the purpose of emergency call. Like all Reserve headquarters, its method of operation is based on military regulations and Congressional law.

Geared to maintain a crack Reserve force, its over-all purpose is reducing the need for a larger regular Army through maintenance of a highly trained "stockpile" of trained servicemen and women.

The California Military District is headed by Brigadier General Claude F. Burbach.

Colonel Loren D. Buttolph heads the staff advisors at the Presidio. He and his staff oversee the training of all local Reserve units in the district, supervise and assist in the maintenance of records and advise Reservists on performance of unit administrative functions.

Meeting here weekly and bi-monthly the Reserve units are dedicated to the role of preparedness.

The 91st Infantry, located at the Presidio, represents Northern California. Its battle cry is taken from the last line of a chant adopted by the Division during World War I combat in Europe, which goes as follows:

"A mile wide, an inch deep, too fast to drink, too thick to eat, Uphill from Texas to Montana, Powder River, let 'er buck."

Commanded by Major General

C. Lyn Fox, political editor of the San Francisco "Call-Bulletin," the Division wears the pine tree shoulder insignia, and is noted for its devastating machine gun attacks on the enemy during the first world war.

Should the 91st be ordered to combat, the division will have half the tank strength of a fully-equipped World War II tank division and an immeasurable amount of fire power, adding up to safety and success in combat.

The 820th Hospital Center at Harmon Hall, Presidio, is the parent unit to which all Reserve hospital units in Northern California are assigned.

Commanded by Brigadier General Manfred U. Prescott, noted San Francisco surgeon and chief consultant for the Sixth Army, the 820th plans a complete hospital display for the enlightenment of visitors to the Presidio on Armed Forces Day.

The Army respects its civilian leadership, and traditionally abstains from any suspicion of involvement in politics. It respects the role of Congress, and responds quickly and accurately to the legitimate requests of its members.

Well Groomed and sharp creased, the Sixth Army Drill Team, pride of the Honor Guard, demonstrates here part of its routine. The Presidians will make three parade ground appearances today in conjunction with the Presidio's Armed Forces Day commemoration. The silver-helmeted drill team appears at 9:15 a.m., 1 p.m. and 3:15 p.m.

Precision Soldiers!

Honor Guard Unit Always Puts Army's Best Foot Forward

Representing the Army up and down the Pacific Coast, Headquarters Sixth Army's famed Honor Guard has to be sharp.

The unit, nearing its fourth anniversary as an active organization, has compiled one of the most distinguished and active records of any unit on the Presidio.

Clad in White helmet liners, white foureggerre and well pressed O.D. uniforms, the Honor Guard, commanded by Captain Eugene J. Gasior, a graduate of the United States Military Academy at West Point, has awed thousands of citizens at numerous civic occasions.

Organized for two big duties, the Guard has fulfilled its mission amply.

The first task is to function as a mobile alert force capable to act as a controlling or tactical element in case of disaster, fire or civil defense emergency.

The second mission accorded the unit when it was first formed in August, 1952, was to represent the Sixth Army at the countless ceremonies contingent with an Army headquarters.

Among these are furnishing interment details consisting of firing squads and pallbearers for military funerals at the Golden Gate National Cemetery in San Bruno, California, and at the San Francisco National Cemetery, Presidio.

During a typical month, the Honor Guard might well find itself on orders for parades, drill competitions, burial ceremonies, VIP Guards of Honor, civic and governmental parades.

Always when on marching orders for civic occasions, the Honor Guard has returned to its home station at the Presidio's Fort Scott with the applause of onlookers ringing in its ears. Their military precision and soldierly bearing have impressed thousands of citizens and groups wherever they have performed.

The strength of the unit consists of two platoons of riflemen and a third platoon of riflemen who comprise the crack drill team, the Presidians.

Currently their number totals 148 enlisted men and four officers.

In its inter-service relationships, the Army is a loyal member of the national defense team, resisting encroachments on its own legitimate responsibilities, but scrupulously avoiding trespass on those of the other Services. It is open-minded, and will listen to reason on any subject.

AAA Unit Offers Tours Of Unique Operations During AFD Celebration

In keeping with the Army's role in the community, the 740th AAA Missile Battalion has set up a unique system of tours at its Fort Scott Nike site.

In addition to the tour to which the public has been invited for today's Armed Forces Day program, the 740th has organized tours and played host to more than 1,000 visitors in the first quarter of 1956.

Members of 24 military, civic, professional, social and school organizations have inspected the unit's Nike site.

Unclassified tours are but one of the activities designed to "let the public know that Nike is as essential to their protection as their police and fire departments and as safe as a gasoline station," says Lieutenant Colonel Charles M. Ashley, battalion commander.

As a result of the tours, officers of the unit are receiving invitations to appear before civic and educational groups to tell the Nike story and its role of protecting the Bay Area from aerial attacks on a round-the-clock basis.

A Key Operation

Transportation Plays Vital Role In Busy Post Activities

The movement of supplies, personnel and equipment "on time and at the right place," is an absolute essential to success in combat—and the job falls to the Transportation Section of the Army.

Although the combat element is eliminated in peace time, the vital function of transportation logistical support is a day to day operation for the Post Transportation Section at the Presidio.

So says Lieutenant Colonel J. J. Speciale, Presidio transportation officer, who directs activities of the TC supply division, movements division, highway division and harbor craft-marine repair division.

Headed by Victor L. Hassler, the supply division is responsible for the procurement, storage and

Public Will See Army's Crack Unit

The Presidians, crack Sixth Army drill team—pride of Lieutenant General Robert N. Young's command—have been scheduled to make three appearances on the Presidio parade ground today as part of the Armed Forces Day celebration.

The 17-man unit, sharp-creased and well-groomed, will execute intricate marching formations while performing their well-known "silent drill," familiar to thousands of persons in the Sixth Army area.

Composed of three five-man squads, a guidon bearer and drill sergeant, the drill team will make appearances at 9:15 a.m., 1 p.m. and 3:15 p.m. on the Presidio parade ground.

The unit will be armed with regulation U.S. Army M-1 rifles with fixed bayonets.

First organized in late 1952, the drill team—part of the Sixth Army Honor Guard—has made countless appearances at state and county fairs, military and patriotic occasions and other functions.

Commanded by Captain Eugene J. Gasior, the drill team acts as part of Sixth Army Headquarters' Guard of Honor for high-ranking Armed Forces officers and civilian dignitaries.

The Presidians are put through their paces by drill sergeant Sfc. Henry L. Carpenter, a career soldier with more than ten years' service.

maintenance of records.

The movements division, supervised by Frank P. Kirshenheiter, effects the transportation of all personnel being transferred from the Presidio to points within and outside the limits of the continental United States. This service includes the movements of dependents' baggage and household goods. And the job is mighty big, for thousands of persons and their effects are moved annually.

All freight shipments arriving at or leaving the post are also routed through the movements division office.

Second Lieutenant Lawrence Bingham is responsible for air-sea rescue missions in the harbor craft detachment division. And also local movement of personnel and sup-

Bright Combat Record Too!

Ordnance Group Has Key Role In Post Training, Maintenance

Administrative control of all ordnance units assigned or attached to the Presidio of San Francisco is the responsibility of the 46th Ordnance Group.

Stationed at the Presidio since 1953, the unit, commanded by Colonel Albert L. Hettrich, will commemorate its second Armed Forces Day on the post today.

In addition to its mission of control of ordnance, the group also has the responsibility of assisting Headquarters, Sixth Army Ordnance, in administering Army Training Tests and coordinating reserve training.

The group itself went into training when Department of the Army called on it to act as Headquarters, 46th Maintenance Group, and to test the ATFA concept of maintenance service in the field during Operation Sagebrush, the huge maneuver held in Louisiana from September, 1955 to January, 1956.

Constituted in mid-June, 1946, the group was activated for the first time at Luzon, the Philippine Islands. It served its active Army period for three years and then taken off the roles in Yokohama, Japan, in late September of 1949.

During its tour on the active duty roster of the Army, the 46th participated in the rehabilitation program of the Asiatic Pacific Theater.

After the outbreak of the Korean War, the 46th was allotted to the Regular Army and reactivated in September, 1950, at Fort Lewis, Washington, where it replaced and assumed the mission of the 60th Ordnance Group.

plies via water. This division also has shipways and all equipment necessary for maintenance for vessels assigned to Sixth Army installations.

The highway division—or Post Motor Pool as it is referred to by most persons—is chiefed by Captain Ricardo de Villa. His section furnishes local administrative transportation to all units on post not having organic vehicles.

During 1955, vehicles assigned to this division were driven more than 2,500,000 miles in the course of official Army business.

Approximately 1,200 school children, dependents of the Presidio's military personnel, are transported daily to 34 San Francisco public and parochial schools.

New Political Guide Slated For Issue To Federal Employees

Federal civil service employees will shortly have available a guide to what they may and may not do during this campaign year when candidates and political causes vie for public attention.

A new leaflet has been added to the new Federal Employee Facts series, which began this spring with an issuance on the Federal incentive awards program.

Many agencies are purchasing copies for distribution to their employees. The series, prepared by the CSC and an inter-agency committee, will be available to the employee only through his agency.

ARMY POWER — KEY TO PEACE

Sixth Month Training Program Highlights New Reserve Plan

Highlight of the Army Reserve Program for 1956 is the eight-year enlistment program authorized for youths between the ages of 17 and 18½, which, presents a deferment from the draft. Any young man enlisting under this plan is required only to serve six months on active duty training and 7½ years in a Ready Reserve unit.

During the six months on active duty training, the trainee receives $78 monthly pay.

High school students adopting the plan will be deferred from active duty until they graduate, provided they show advancement in that goal, or until they reach the age of 21.

Visiting dignitaries and general officers from numerous foreign nations are frequently transported locally by picked enlisted men.

The highway division also tests and licenses all Presidio personnel for operation of military vehicles. More than 3,500 persons were licensed during 1955 and a complete maintenance shop is operated and performs all repairs necessary to keep the motor pool's more than 350 vehicles in tip top shape.

Operationally speaking, the Transportation Section has arranged for shuttle bus service from the Presidio's main parade ground to the Fort Scott area and will also display various equipment (boats, vehicles, etc.) for the Armed Forces Day celebration.

"Column, forward march," shouts sergeant, and Presidio soldiers respond for close order drill.

Butt stroke to head is taught in bayonet drill.

Baked ham is forked across the serving table as the troops have dinner.

Plenty of time for relaxing, reading and recordings in the Service Club.

Band music boosts the soldier's spirit and the Sixth Army Band tootles away in practice session on the parade ground.

Home away from home is the Service Club, nestling under tall trees and among rolling hills, near the parade ground.

Thrust and parry is the watchword as Presidio fencers participate in a meet in the Army's sports program.

When sick, soldier's ailments are ministered.

TH 30 ENGINEER GROUP

ARMED FORCES DAY DISPLAYS

Busy Engineers Always On The Job In Tough Assignment Or Disaster

To the men of the 30th Engineer Group—ready to celebrate Armed Forces Day on the Presidio with a full program of events—strange places and tough assignments are taken in stride.

In the last year, the group has been assigned to the rocky slopes and soggy marshlands of Alaska and the equally soggy—and often-times flooded—areas of northern California during its great winter rains.

Though prideful of many of its accomplishments, the 30th Group pops buttons on its collective shirt most over its duties and heroisms during the December, 1955, flood in northern California.

In a move that definitely established top community relations, the Group rendered invaluable aid to communities in the North State when the disaster struck.

That story alone calls for retelling.

Giving up their Christmas leaves, the men of the 30th came to the rescue of a number of towns and cities when its commander, Colonel Wayne E. Downing, was placed in charge of all relief operations outside of the Bay region. And the colonel got his orders from the top—Sixth Army Commander Lieutenant General Robert N. Young.

Through the flood period and well into January, the Group furnished helicopters, aircraft, pilots and crews for rescue, transport and reconnaissance duties.

Many lives were saved as aerial personnel spotted marooned farmers and townspeople and relayed information to ground crew locations. Sp3 James Hatcher was credited with saving the lives of three persons when he spotted them near Eureka, California, and, while the helicopter hovered above, hauled them bodily aboard.

The 30th's aerial patrolling saved, according to John C. Lilly, Stockton City Manager, more than 3,000 man-hours of patrolling and observing.

High praise came to the Group from California's Governor Knight, civic and Army persons and just plain thankful average citizens.

When not fighting floods, the 30th fights fires.

When forest fires raged out of hand last summer, the Group again came to the rescue, sending men from its units into the disaster area to quell the flames.

Troops fought side by side with civilian fire fighters and the 30th's medics covered a 50-mile front treating injuries and rendering first aid.

Although the organization has seen action in disaster areas it must also stick closely to its authorized functions.

The big one in this category is mapping the wilds of Alaska and uncharted areas of Southern California.

And where they had their duty, the men of the 30th rarely saw fellow human beings, with the exception of an occasional Eskimo family. They worked among broad trails, valleys, sea-shore, benchlands and mountain passes, and the highest peaks in the territory.

Helicopters carried the teams over the impassable tundra and to the top of the mountains, while M-boats ferried surveyors to coast stations and before the use of 'choppers became routine, tracked vehicles slogged through the swamps.

Each summer since 1950, Colonel Downing's command has shipped out to America's last frontier—Alaska. There the men chartered vast areas of marsh and swamp land, rugged mountain ranges, rambling volcanoes and thousands of miles of desolate land.

More than 313,000 square miles were surveyed in the Alaskan Operation, providing maps of the entire western and northern coastal regions of the territory.

Topo Unit Has Top Record In Special Field

Activated on the day — 1 September, 1939 — Hitler unleashed his blitzkrieg against Poland, the 30th Engineer Group (Topographic Survey) is nearing its 17th birthday celebration and can claim service during WW II in two hemispheres.

Following is a thumbnail sketch of the unit's history, starting after its activation at Portland, Oregon.

- Sailed from Portland to New York, 30 September, 1939.
- Arrival at Fort Belvoir, Virginia, 7 December, 1941, after maneuvers in Louisiana and North Carolina.
- Shipped to Casablanca late November, 1943. Produced countless maps to support the push to Rome, invasion of Dalmatian coast, landing in southern France and offensive to the Reich's borders.
- Awarded Meritorious Service Award.
- Ordered to Boston early November, 1944.
- Given new orders, for the Pacific this time. Arriving in Honolulu, early 1945.
- Awarded Meritorious Service Plaque second time for duty in preparation of naval and approach bombardment charts, target and air strip maps and countless special studies.
- Returned to U. S., 7 December, 1949, established at Presidio of San Francisco's Fort Scott billets.
- Sent to Alaska each summer since 1950.

Signal Display

Signal flags, cameras, technical equipment, teletypewriters will be put on display for the Presidio's Signal Corps Section's Armed Forces Display.

The equipment will be shown to the public today in a large tent on the Presidio's main parade ground.

One of the features of the Signal Section's display will be two teletypes clicking out the latest news from the Associated Press and United Press.

Overseas Assignments Will Be Based On Duty Time Still Left

Officers and enlisted men with no foreign service credit will be assigned to overseas areas in accordance with amount of active duty service remaining, the Army announced recently.

Where MOS and grade are equal, officers and EM will be given foreign service assignments according to the amount of duty time left in their service categories or terms of enlistment.

Personnel with more active duty service remaining will be sent to the overseas area with the longer prescribed foreign service tour. A normal overseas tour with or without dependents is 36 months. However, there are some duty tours which restrict dependents and are much shorter in duration.

Some of the short foreign service tours with or without dependents are Ethiopia 30, Formosa 24, Iraq 24, Turkey 24 and Yugoslavia 24. For more information see change 6, AR 614-30.

Aviation Unit Has Proven Versatile, Vital

From small beginnings, the 30th Engineer Group's Aviation Section has grown and developed into a full fledged and important function of the unit's over-all operation.

On display for Armed Forces Day fete today at Crissy Field, the 30th's aviation section will show just why it is so highly rated.

Throughout the six summers the group went to Alaska, the size and versatility of the section expanded, until in 1955, 47 helicopters and 19 fixed wing aircraft were in operation.

Two types of 'choppers are used in Alaska: the H-23, three-man reconnaissance craft, which carried survey teams; and the H-19, utility 'copter, which can carry up to eight passengers or 1,600 pounds of cargo.

The fixed wing craft range in size from the two-man L-19, used for area classification, to the Army's new U-1 Otter, a 14-passenger cargo plane.

In addition, the L-23, a twin engine aircraft, was equipped with an aerial camera and flew more than 3,500 flight line miles in survey operations.

Pilots of the 30th Group have proved they—and their craft, too—are of vital importance for quick and efficient accomplishment of any survey mission.

Wherever maps are needed, the 30th's Army aircraft will accompany the ground survey teams.

Atop Barren

Military Policemen Will Fill 505th Military Police Battalion Dual Role In Today's Events Boasts Top Record, Key Duties

Armed Forces Day—and any other important ceremony—means a big job for the 505th Military Police Battalion, the Presidio's combat-ready unit.

Military Police functions for today's AFD celebration fall into two separate and distinct categories:

1. Hospitality to visitors, demonstration and display of equipment.

2. Control of traffic and parking areas, directions for visitors and any other special functions necessary.

In the first category, the battalion operations officer, Major John F. Kwock, has set up an interesting and diverse number of displays and exhibits, topped off by two judo demonstrations.

Companies A and B have been assigned to put their barracks in tip-top shape for visitors to inspect and roam through under the guidance of military policemen. The model barracks will be in Building 104-A and 104-B.

The public will be permitted to visit the orderly rooms, squad rooms—to see how Uncle Sam's soldiers live—mess halls and supply rooms.

Rest rooms for ladies and gentlemen have been set up, with appropriate signs posted.

A photographic display of the battalion's activities on duty and in training will be set up in the unit's area on the main parade ground.

In addition, MP vehicles will be exhibited and equipment shown in the assigned area.

The 505th will show the public its weapons—pistols, rifles, shotguns, machine guns, bazookas, etc.

Radio and communication equipment will also be exhibited.

The 505th's sister unit, the 60th MP (Criminal Investigation) Detachment, is expected to display latest criminal detecting equipment and weapons confiscated during the course of duty.

In the second category, First Lieutenant Leslie Davison, the Provost Marshal's operations officer, has been assigned the duty of keeping things humming smoothly as the large crowd of visitors comes on post.

The operations officer has set up traffic control points, MPs for parking areas, walking patrols, information booths, etc.

The job is a big one, and visitors will find the 505th MP both courteous and helpful.

ARMY POWER — KEY TO PEACE

The Army, by the nature of its requirements, attaches the greatest importance to human values. It recognizes man as the basic element of military strength. Hence, it works constantly to improve the moral, physical and intellectual capacity of its men. It creates for them an environment of decent, clean living and of intolerance of vice, dissipation, or flabbiness.

Honor Guardsmen for visiting dignitaries and veterans of continental atomic tests, the combat-ready 505th Military Police Battalion today celebrates its fourth Armed Forces Day program since assignment to the Presidio.

And the 505th, commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Fred C. Smith, a long-time MP officer, has compiled an enviable peacetime record to back up its World War II role in the European Theater of Operations.

Reactivated in 1951, the local Military Police unit immediately filled the role its Table of Organization and Establishment calls for on all fronts—training, routine post duties and ceremonies.

Current members of the 505th need not take a back seat to their World War II brethren, for they've been called on to perform every MP duty—short of actual combat—in the book. And in one respect, today's well groomed, courteous 505th MP has a big jump on his elder brother.

A goodly number of men on the 505th's roster today have participated in atomic bomb maneuvers.

In fact, hardly a year has passed since Department of the Army hasn't called on the battalion to assume security details in A-Bomb tests. Many of the troops in the unit call Camp Desert Rock—hard by Frenchmen's Flat, Nevada—their home away from home.

And in last fall's huge Exercise

Symbolizing the Military Police role in recent atomic bomb maneuvers, a member of the 505th MP Battalion directs traffic as the bomb's lethal mushroom cloud rises in the distance. The picture, taken at Camp Desert Rock, Nevada, symbolizes the Army's new concept of atomic warfare.

Sagebrush, the 505th was ordered to send a beefed-up company to assume military police duties at Camp Polk, La., where the Army quartered most of its troops for the maneuver.

At both stations, the 505th kept the posts, patrolled the roads, maintained order on post and in neighboring communities and manned security watches.

When not utilized in such roles, the 505th goes into training itself. Each year the battalion holds company strength tests at Hunter Liggett Military Reservation, usually climaxed by a battalion-wide test.

Maneuvers such as these enable Colonel Smith's command to maintain its combat-ready state and reputation as one of the Army's finest units.

In addition to duties at "Rock" and Camp Polk, the 505th treks to Camp Roberts, California, each summer in support of National Guard and Army Reserve units on active duty.

For these tasks, the 505th needs well trained and well drilled troops. And to bring them up to the unusually high MP standards, training for fledgling MPs has been conducted countless times across the Golden Gate Bridge at Fort Baker.

Field work and class room instruction ran the gamut of Military Police training. Rookies were taught first aid, driver training, military courtesy, physical conditioning, drill and ceremonies, supply economy, use of the .45 caliber pistol, .45 caliber sub-machine gun, .50 caliber heavy machine gun, shotgun and other weapons.

Combat skills were taught and included technique of fire with weapons, hikes and marches, squad and platoon tactics, radio procedures and gas mask drills.

Besides its field training the battalion is also committed to serving with distinction as honor guard for visiting chiefs of state. The unit has served in such roles for Queen Juliana of the Netherlands, escort for King Paul and Queen Frederika of Greece, guard of honor for President Sygman Rhee of Korea, and King Feisal of Iraq.

Other high ranking statesmen and military persons such as General James Van Fleet, General Mark W. Clark, Brazilian Minister of Defense and President of Italy Giovanni Gronchi have been accorded official welcomes in which the 505th played a vital role.

Generally, when the Presidio is visited by very important persons, the Provost Marshal's Office—Colonel Smith's second big job—takes over and arranges for door guards, flag bearers, traffic control points, road blocks and, when needed, chrome jeeps. (W. H.)

ARMY POWER — KEY TO PEACE

The Army is the versatile member of the defense team with a flexible system of weapons at its command. While possessing atomic weapons of great power, it retains the ability to vary the application of military force to the needs of the moment, to make "measured" rather than "mass" retaliation.

Judo Exhibit MP Feature

Visitors to the Presidio for today's Armed Forces Day celebration will be treated to two showings of the ancient athletic art of judo by members of the 505th Military Police Battalion, the 60th MP (Criminal Investigation) Detachment and the Sixth Army Provost Marshal's section.

Members of the Presidio's military police units, both officers and enlisted men, will perform for the public at 0900 (9 a.m.) and 1500 (3 p.m.) hours in a boxing ring near the MP barracks on the main parade ground.

The MPs will demonstrate judo methods as part of the military police Armed Forces Day program, which will also include open house in the barracks, open mess hall and a display of equipment.

As first practiced by the Chinese, jiu-jitsu was an unarmed form of combat aimed at killing or maiming an opponent. The Japanese later modified and polished it as a "gentle" art and transformed it into a sport.

It was first adopted by the Military Police during World War II as a means of subduing an opponent without using weapons or injuring him. The physical tactic was also employed to give the military policeman confidence in his ability to handle situations without resorting to the use of weapons.

Trainees in Military Police units are given training and practice in judo as part of their physical fitness program. And they are continually trained in various holds to remain proficient in the art to cope with any situa-

The type of training given MPs in judo is not expected by the Army to make them into "black belt" judo experts, but the training is thorough enough so as to

Ready For Any Job!

MP Battalion Boasts Stellar Mission In Army Planning

Well into its fourth decade of service, the 505th MP Battalion was first constituted on paper and allotted to the Organized Reserves as the 305th, just three years after the end of World War I.

Herewith, then, a thumbnail sketch of the unit's history since 1921:

- Allotted to the Regular Army as the 305th in 1938.
- Baptized as the 505th MP Battalion in June, 1940.
- 1943—activation orders at Camp Breckinridge, Kentucky.
- August, 1944, orders to the European Theater of Operations, Port of Embarkation, Boston.
- Landed in France, D-Day plus 113, 17 September, 1944.
- Replaced the 772nd MP Battalion at the Valognes staging area on 27 September, 1944.
- Movement orders for northern Belgium in November, 1944.
- March, 1945, crossed the Rhine with elements of the British Second Army.

- June, 1945, a month after V-E Day, battalion attached to XXI Corps and moved to Bavaria for occupation duty.
- Assigned to 12th Army Group in Vienna, Austria, a month later.
- Inactivated while on occupation duty in Vienna, 28 June, 1948.
- Recalled to duty at Camp Roberts, California, 25 July, 1951.
- Early 1952, elements of the 505th ordered to Camp Desert Rock, Nevada.
- June, 1952, ordered to Sixth Army Headquarters, Presidio of San Francisco.

Sports Play Key Role In Services

Army Stars Lead Tryouts For Olympics

Some 400 Army athletes have made application for Olympic tryouts at three installations across the country, in high hopes of landing a spot on the United States Olympic squad which will compete in the games at Melbourne, Australia, 22 November through 8 December of this year.

Track and field events will be held at Fort MacArthur (Los Angeles) commencing this month with the Sixth Army meet and then the All-Army and All-Service meets which will lead up to the Olympic tryouts in the Los Angeles Coliseum.

Boxers will converge on Fort Myer, Va., during the first week of October with Olympic trials scheduled to be held on the West Coast later the same month. Army tryouts and Olympic trials for the Modern Pentathlon will be held at Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

Tryout invitations come from the U.S. Olympic Committee. Soldier athletes are being given all assistance possible to attend the tryouts if they have Olympic potential.

Soldier athletes comprised about 25 per cent of the U. S. Olympic team in the recent VII Winter Games held at Gortina, Italy. Twenty per cent of the U.S. team at the 1955 Pan-American Games in Mexico came from the Army. Indications now are that the percentage of Army personnel on the U.S. Olympic team at Australia will be as high if not higher.

Many Sports Provided For PSF Soldier

The average soldier stationed at the Presidio of San Francisco has within his reach a wide variety of off-duty, leisure time activities in the world of sports.

If athletics are his chief interest, he or she can play for a Presidio team in nearly every sport from ping-pong to boxing. If he is interested, he can take part in the Post intramural program.

Military sports start at unit level throughout the services as they do at the Presidio. For example, a boxer competes initially within his company. If he wins his unit championship he goes on to battalion level and from there to regimental tournaments and to division competition.

Champions from the division play go on to Post title bouts and Post winners move on to Army area championships. Army winners compete in the All-Army tournaments, and the All-Army champion represents the Senior service in the Inter-Service matches for the Service championship of the world.

Although all sports are not carried to the Inter-Service competition, the major sports such as baseball and basketball are. Most sports go to Army level, if no further. Each and every soldier has the chance to compete in the Army sports program, provided there is no interference with his military duties.

The Presidio sports activities are centered in the Post Athletic Office in building 122. The Sports Office also runs the Presidio Pitch and Putt course

Mat Champs

Two Soldiers Win Places On U.S. Wrestling Squads

Four servicemen from three branches of the Armed Forces captured starting positions on the United States Olympic wrestling team in the national finals held at the Legion Stadium in Hollywood, California, last week.

From the Senior Service is Private Ralph Bartleman of Fort Carson, Colorado, who took the top spot as a heavyweight on the Greco-Roman squad.

The second Army man is Private First Class John Wilson, 6th Armored Cavalry Regt., Germany. Wilson won the flyweight division on the Greco-Roman team.

At the same time one Navy Ensign and an Air Force Lieutenant grappled their way through the grueling elimination rounds to gain starting positions on the U. S. teams.

Ensign Pete Blair, stationed at the U.S. Naval Academy, will represent this country as the free-style light heavyweight at Melbourne, Australia, this November. Air Force Lieutenant Tommy Evans, Vance Air Force Base, Okla., captured the lightweight position on the Greco-Roman squad.

Pvt. Bartleman narrowly missed a place on the free-style team when Bill Kerslake, a 310-pound Cleveland giant, decided him but Bartleman came back to win the heavy spot on the Greco-Roman team. Bartleman's college competition consisted of one year's competition with the Iowa State freshman squad in 1949.

Pfc. Wilson's prior experience had been limited to high school competition.

In Greco-Roman wrestling all holds below the waist are barred. It is not necessary to touch both opponent's shoulders to the mat as in free-style. A pin is completed when one contestant rolls the other on his back.

Those winning berths on the 1956 United States wrestling team are:

GRECO-ROMAN

Heavyweight—Bartleman.
Light heavyweight (191)—Dale Thomas, unattached, Michigan State.
Middleweight (174)—Dan Hodge, Univ. of Oklahoma.
Welterweight (160½)—Jay Holt, San Francisco Rowing Club.
Lightweight (147½)—Evans.
Featherweight (136½)—Rice.
Bantamweight (125½)—Kent Townley, Iowa State.
Flyweight (114½)—Wilson.

FREE-STYLE

Heavyweight—Kerslake.
Light heavyweight—Blair.
Middleweight—Bill Smith, Rock Island, Ill.
Welterweight—Dick Beattie, Tulsa, Okla.
Lightweight—Frank Bettucci, NYAC.
Featherweight—Myron Rodenick, Oklahoma A&M.
Bantamweight—Lee Allen, Portland, Ore.
Flyweight—Dick Delgado, Univ. of Oklahoma.

PSF Golfers Edge Mather AFB, 16-10

The smooth shooting Presidio golf team won their fifth match of the current season last Friday, when they edged out the Mather Air Force Flyers 16½ to 10½ on the Sharpe Park course.

Bill Krause and Milton Rosenberg teamed up for the local's first team and won 3½ points, but dropped 5½ to a pair of sharp shooting Airmen.

The Post second team of Major Rollin Kapp and Captain Leon Thomas managed to eke out a 5 to 4 victory over the Mather number two squad.

John Roberts and Craig Wright, the Presidio third team, clinched the win by taking eight tallies from their opponents and giving up but one lone point.

Bill Krause and Craig Wright were low medalists for the locals, turning in good two over par 74's. John Roberts followed with a 75 and Major Kapp rounded out the 70 shooters with a good 78.

Yesterday afternoon, Friday, the Presidio golfers traveled to Hamilton Air Force Base for a return match with the Flyers. The Post men rolled to a 23 to 3 win over the Hamilton men two weeks ago.

Toreros Rally

Presidio Edges Firemen On Fort Scott Diamond

The Presidio Toreros baseball team rallied in the bottom of the ninth inning Tuesday with one run to edge out the San Francisco Firemen, 12-11, in a thrill paced diamond clash on the Fort Scott field.

The firemen jumped off to an eleven run lead in the first two frames off the offerings of soldier hurlers John Blackwell and John Borreggo. Borreggo lasted until the fourth when Lee Walker came for the locals and was replaced by Blackwell, who had moved to right field, Blackwell pitched till the eighth when Roger Collins came in to retire the side and save the game for the Presidio.

The Presidio crew picked up three tallies in the third and roared back with six runs in the sixth on the strength of pinch-hitter Chuck Matson's grand slam homerun to left center field.

Shortstop Bill Selsor walked to lead off the seventh inning and the next man up, Dick Shannon, leaned in to a fast ball and drove it over the left field fence to tie the game up, 11 all.

Dick Shannon led off the bottom of the ninth by drawing a walk and advanced to third on the hit and run as Norm Ellenberger slapped a single to right field. Al Casino was purposely walked to load the bases and Harry Williams walked forcing in the game winning tally.

The starting lineup for the Toreros was Joe Martin, catching; Al Casino at first, Dick Shannon at second, Bill Selsor at shortstop and Norm Ellenberger holding down the third base slot.

The outfield was made up of Bob Harbertson in left, Harry Williams in center and Ben Camera over in right field.

Last season the Presidio baseball squad won first place in the Bay Area Armed Forces baseball tilt and took second in the Sixth Army tournament to the powerful Fort Ord Warriors.

swim call

The Presidio Sports Office sent out an urgent request for swimmers this week to begin training on the Post swim squad. Any men or women on the Presidio or its sub-posts with experience in the art of water splashing should contact Sports Director Hal Fischer in building 122 for the necessary information. The Presidio, as defending Sixth Army champions, will enter a team in the Sixth Army swim meet at Fort MacArthur, 18-20 July. The All-Army swim meet will also be held at Fort MacArthur, 26-29 July, drawing Army stars from throughout the world.

National Tourney

Post Wins Second Place In Volleyball Tournament

Climaxing a tremendously successful season that included winning the All-Sixth Army championship, the Presidio volleyball team under the direction of playing coach (Major) Bob Jones wound up capturing second place in the Armed Forces division of the National Volleyball tournament. The tourney was held in Seattle, Washington, last week.

The Post men opened the tournament with a forfeit win from Fort Sill and followed this with an upset 15-11, 12-14, 15-7 victory over the 1955 champions, the Los Alamitos Naval Air Station.

The local net champs then conquered Hamilton Air Force Base 15-9, 15-13, to head the winner's bracket.

Hamilton came back through the loser's bracket, however, and dumped the Presidio in two straight games, 10-15, 14-16 and 10-12, 10-15, for the 1956 Armed Forces volleyball crown.

A total of eight top service squads were entered in the service division of the so-called World Series of volleyball.

Following the service tournament, the Presidio, along with 26 other national top-ranking teams, entered the Open Division of the National volleyball meet.

The locals got off to a flying start when they rolled over the Vancouver YMCA Club, 15-4, 15-12; won a forfeit victory from the Wichita, Kansas, "Y" team before being defeated by the Hollywood "Y" team, 4-15, 7-15. The loss put the PSF men in the loser's bracket.

Honolulu YMCA was the next opponent and the locals fell before the hard-spiking Hawaiian's, 5-15, 10-15. This loss eliminated the Presidio from the tournament, with Hollywood winning, Stockton 2d and Honolulu third. The Post soldiers wound up eighth out of a field of 26 entries.

The second place position in the Armed Forces competition and the eighth place in the open class is the highest an Army team has ever finished in the National volleyball tournament.

Besides winning a trophy for the Post and individual medals for each player, Matt Schmutz and Dick Godino were picked on the United States Volleyball Association's all-American squad in the Armed Forces division.

Members of the top place Presidio team were Major Bob Jones, Bob Moran, Matt Schmutz, Bob Noel, Harry Matthews, Dick Godino, Catalino Ignacino, Jess Gonzales, Jerry Steiner and Frank McDonnell.

Wacs Defeat Hamilton In Practice Tilt

The Presidio Wacs started the 1956 softball season off on the right foot early this week when they drubbed the Hamilton Air Force Base Wacs, 6 to 2 in a practice tilt on the Hamilton home diamond.

Hamilton jumped off to an early lead with two runs on two hits in the bottom of the second frame. Presidio hurler Nina Hefner rallied, however, and pitched the remaining five innings without the Air Force girls getting any more hits.

The local lassies came back in the top of the third and scored four tallies on two hits and numerous walks. The Wacs closed out the game in the top of the seventh with two more runs for their first victory of the current season.

Last season, the Wacs, under the able coaching of Julian Kite, won the Women's Bay Area Armed Forces league as well as capturing the Sixth Army championship for the past two seasons.

Starting lineup for the Presidio in the opening clash was Emilienne Owens behind the plate with Nina Hefner pitching. Edith Wark filled the first base slot with Bea Van Houten on second, Pauline Edwards, shortstop, and Mary Phillips on third.

Catcher Ed Sadowski, who played his service ball at Camp Chaffee, Ark., is handling the backstop chores for the San Francisco Seals these days.

STRIKE ONE was the call as the Presidio Golden Gate Little League made their 1956 opening with a double header on the Little League diamond before a capacity crowd. The opening game saw the Cubs defeat the Cards 32-3 and the nightcap saw the Giants beat the Yanks 39-0. A grand total of 160 boys have signed up for the baseball action which includes four major league teams and five minor loop squads. The league rules are patterned after the regular major loops with a major-minor setup and the trading of players.

1300 Hours

Four Little League Clubs In Double Header Today

By Pfc. Bob Malone
Star Presidian Sports Editor

A Little League double header will highlight Armed Forces Day sports action on the Presidio today. The first one, between the Cards and the Yanks, will get under way at 1300 hours on the Post Little League diamond located behind the Officers' Club. The second tilt, pitting the Cubs against the Giants, will get under way as soon as the first of the six inning games is finished.

The 1956 season got off to a flying start last Saturday afternoon when the Cubs blasted out a 32-3 victory over the Cards and the Giants shutout the Yanks to the tune of 39-0.

Behind the four hit pitching of Kim McIntire the Cubs, managed by Major Robert McIntire, rattled out 22 hits in rolling up their 32 tallies. George Ladado started on the mound for the Cards and was followed by Dick Timbo and Jim Kirkland.

In the second game of the opening double header the Giant's Dick Stone set the Yanks down with but two hits as his teammates parlayed 29 base hits into 39 runs. Bill Quillan started for the Yanks, managed by Sfc. Beauvois, and was followed by Jose Salgado and Henry Higson.

Last Tuesday evening the Cards, managed by Colonel C. A. Barnes, got on the winning path when they edged out the Giants, managed by M/Sgt. Jim McKrell, eight to two.

The winners collected but five hits off the offering of Tom Sparks and Mike Frye while the losing Giants batted out eight hits from Card hurlers George Ladado and Jim Kirkland.

The winning Cards were paced at the plate by Bill Walker, George Ladados and Dennis Reams as each collected a double.

Dennis Singleton was the big man at the plate for the Giants with a triple and two doubles in three times at bat. Fred Patrick with a triple and Dick Stone with a double were other Giant stars.

On Monday night the minor loop of the Presidio Little League started with the Padres rolling over the Oaks by the score of 17-2. Jim Doster gained credit for the win and Mike Hulsey suffered the loss.

open house

The Presidio Sports Office announced that the Post Pitch and Putt Golf Course will be open from 1000 to 1600 hours today for Armed Forces Day. Pro Ralph Scanlon will be on hand to describe the activities and free use of the course, clubs and balls will also be made available. The Pitch and Putt Course is located adjacent to Rodriguez Street on the Presidio.

Ken Johnson Sinks Sailor In Key Bout

Highlighted by heavyweight Ken Johnson's decision over Navy man Bill Baxter of the Mare Island Naval Station the three-man Presidio boxing squad took two out of three bouts early this week at the Fairfield Air Force Station.

Featherweight Sammy Moreno, defending Sixth Army champion, won the other Post victory when he defeated Bob Ashford of Travis Air Force Base in a close three-round match.

Ashford, up to this fight, boasted an imposing 20-win 2-loss record and is the Air Force champ in his division in northern California.

Presidio middleweight Sol Stoneroad dropped the only bout for the locals when he lost a split decision to Lou Mims of the Fairfield Air Station.

FORT ORD speedster Alex Burl receives the Elks trophy from Colonel Arthur W. Gustafson, Sixth Army Special Services Officer, for being high point man in the recent Northern California Armed Forces Track and Field championships held in Alameda recently. Last Saturday night the Ord flash finished second in the 100 yard dash at the Fresno Relays in the excellent time of 9:4.

Thirty Keg Teams Roll Weekly

More than thirty keg teams roll each week at the Presidio and Fort Scott alleys in the Post intramural bowling league competition. The National, Pacific, Tuesday night and Mixed League have from eight to twelve teams each, bowling on a regular weekly schedule.

With two weeks of bowling left in the National League the first place Masonites boast an eight-game lead over the second place Keystone Kops. Alba has been the sparkplug for the front runners all season and is currently sporting a 164 average followed by Raish with a 159 pin average.

The men from Mason took the fourth place Hooks in to camp this week to the tune of 3 to 1. Shumaker rolled the top score for the winners with a 207 mark and Paul paced the losers with a 202 score.

Despite Hilltopper Leonard's 214 game the Keystone Kops shut out the men from the hill 4 to 0. Thorne rolled a 193 to lead the winners.

Headquarters Company, Sixth Army, behind Turner's 175 game, turned on the power to blast the Company B, 505th MP's 3 to 1. Moullet was high man for the police with a 188 score.

The remaining match in the National saw the Missileers roll to a 4 to 0 win over the King Pins. William's was top missile man with a 175 roll and Lansing led the Pins with a 180.

The new Tuesday night keg league got under way last week with a total of eight teams rolling in league competition.

The Hi-Balls paced by Dubois' 214 game got off to a fast start to defeat the 752d AAA 4 to 0. Mattox was top gunner for the AAA men with a 175 mark.

Alexander's 204 game led the Hooks to a 4 to 0 shutout victory over the QMers squad. DeLaney was high bowler for the losers and turned in a 197 scorecard.

The Duds behind Ryan's 190 score came through with a 3 to 1 win from the Sarc Sharks. Lyman was top man for the Sharks with a 167 mark.

The remaining match in the Tuesday evening loop featured a FinComps victory over the Flit Dits 4 to 0. Garden was top man on the winner's squad with a 178 score and Kimzey turned in an identical 178 mark for the losers.

Visitors to the Presidio on Armed Forces Day are invited to include the Service Club on their list of interesting places to see. Here, behind a sheltered knoll is one of the military show places in the Sixth Army area.

Within the Presidio Service Club social and recreational rooms a host of activities are planned and executed in the interests of local servicemen and women, and their civilian co-workers. local theaters, present the best and the most tastefully chosen of literature and movie fare to

Through an ideal neighborly association with the theater and general recreational managers of the San Francisco entertainment world, stage shows, small-scale carnivals and singers and musicians of high professional standing are introduced to the club patrons.

Here also, a man may learn to sing, to play a musical instrument, listen to classical and popular recordings, to read, secure fishing tackle, participate in a quiz show or dance with a junior hostess from a group well-chosen by the club directors as part of their social program.

Operated under management of the Special Services Section, the main club is parent to two smaller clubs operated at Fort Baker and Fort Cronkhite, which also have their own motion picture theaters.

The Sixth Army and Post libraries on the reservation, also under supervision of the Special Services Section, and the two local theaters, present the best and the most tastefully chosen of literature and movie fare to suit the needs of the individual soldier.

The Arts and Crafts program, operated in the Service Club, presents instruction in a variety of subjects to include woodwork, ceramics, leatherwork, photo contests, metalworking, silver and copperware.

A Congressional resolution that will result in a permanent memorial monument honoring General "Black Jack" Pershing, AEF commander and general officer hero of WWI, has been approved by the President.

The Battles Monument Commission has been designated as the agency to prepare plans for the project.

General Pershing died eight years ago.

Presidio Is Important Community Asset

The Presidio of San Francisco scores heavily on four counts in its contribution to the community of San Francisco;

- 1.) A vital defense bastion geared to protect one of the nation's top industrial areas.
- 2.) A major economic force that contributes some $60,000,000 each year to the community's income.
- 3.) A historic beauty site that draws thousands of tourists yearly to San Francisco.
- 4.) A defense community within a greater civic community that is a day-to-day working example of civilian-military unity.

These are only the major assets that accrue to the local community from Presidio's vital acres. Other less tangible contributions would have to include the many off-duty civic activities of the soldier-citizen, participation in fund-raising events, public ceremonies, exhibits and many other individual and collective contributions to the civil life of the community.

All in all, San Francisco's Presidio is an integral part of a great city and a living and vital monument to the free enterprise of Americans of yesterday and today.

Their capabilities and their skills are as varied and colorful as the coat of the Biblical Joseph!

They have served at the Presidio since 1946.

A cross-section of girls and women, members of the U.S. Army Women's Corps, representing practically every one of the 48 states, they fill a formidable list of military assignments here, as in all places where they are called on to serve.

The Sixth Army Headquarters and Post Wac units are combined to form the 6002nd Service Unit, Company D.

Under supervision of Captain Virginia I. Engels, Lieutenant Dorothy Miller and First Sergeant Mary E. Richmond, the enlisted women share the workload of administrative and semi-professional duties attendant on the functions of the headquarters, Post and sub-areas.

Letterman Army Hospital maintains a separate medical unit of enlisted women directed by Captain Martha A. Voyles. This group is billeted in an area adjoining the hospital. Assigned here under orders from the Surgeon General of the Army, their work is confined to the medical, surgical and administrative sections of the hospital only.

Meanwhile, there are two other enlisted women's units assigned to the Bay Area; one at Oakland Army Base, one at Fort Mason and—on a more far-flung scale — are units at Fort Ord, Fort McArthur and Fort Lawton, all within the Sixth Army area.

The Presidio Wacs, approximately 175 strong, hold some out-of-the-ordinary assignments. They serve as secretaries, stenographers and clerks, cryptologists, finance specialists, writers, quartermaster clothing salesgirls and staff car drivers. In fact, it may truthfully be said of them that at one time or another they have been called upon to assist in a major operation, to prepare a body for burial or even to act as escort at a military funeral.

The United States Army has so augmented their civilian school and college training that they are in a position to cope with nearly any emergency.

Here at the Presidio, the women of the corps have established highly commendable community relations through their contributions to such civic enterprises as fund crusades, charities and united social endeavor generally. They have given uncounted pints of their blood for routine Army hospital contribution or in cases of medical and surgical emergency when more rare blood types were needed.

Many of the older servicewomen here have been awarded military commendations for outstanding achievement in the lines of duty to which their calling has dedicated them.

The present Wac commander of the 6002nd Service Unit, Company D, has during her career, directed the military commitments of enlisted women here under the commands of General Joseph W. Stilwell, General George P. Hayes, General Mark W. Clark, General Abert C. Wedemeyer, General Joseph M. Swing and the present General Robert N. Young.

Some more concrete idea of the many assignments covered by enlisted women at the Presidio, with a bird's-eye view of their recreational facilities, and the quarters which temporarily serve as their homes, may be gotten by visiting the 6002nd Service Unit Wac Detachment area, on Armed Forces Day, when their billets, mess hall and social rooms are open to inspection by the public.

Enlisted men may now volunteer to fill existing quotas for linguist training at the Army Language School, Monterey, Calif.

According to a recent Department of the Army Circular each application must include a preference of two or more languages and a statement that the applicant knows he is subject to world-wide assignment upon completing the course.

Enlisted personnel selected for language training will be transferred to the Army Language School on permanent change of station orders. Some of the language quotas available for the 1957 fiscal year are Albanian, Arabic, Bulgarian, Chinese-Cantonese, Chinese - Mandarin, French, Hungarian, Indonesian, Italian and Russian.

However, graduation from the language school is not a prerequisite for a linguist assignment. Any individual possessing fluency in one or more foreign languages may apply for linguist duties under the provisions of AR 615-200.

ful, will celebrate its sixth birthday on Armed Forces Day with several appearances on the main parade ground. Its first appearance was in May, 1950.

Presidio of San Francisco's Sixth Army Pipe Band—one of the Army's most colorful organizations — celebrates its sixth birthday at today's Armed Forces Day program here.

The tartan-clad Pipes, 15-men strong, made their first appearance on AFD in 1950. And to commemorate the occasion, Sergeant Richard K. Kirkland, the drum major, will put his unit through its musical paces several times during today's celebration on the main parade ground.

Familiar to thousands of West Coast citizens, the Pipers have made appearances at state and county fairs, military and public functions, holiday celebrations and as guards of honor for top Army, Navy, Marine officers and civil personages.

The richly ornamental uniform of the Pipe Band traces its origin back to the ancient Scottish wars when the soldiers wore silver buttons to defray their burial expenses if they were killed far from home, and silver chains to pay for food and clothing on capture by the enemy.

The white gaiters are a memento of the privations endured during the Peninsular War when—their boots worn out on the rocky coast of Portugal—the troops wrapped their feet in their shirts. The tartan is that of the Royal Stuarts.

New Look of the Army's officers and enlisted men is displayed here by three Presidio non-coms. The new uniforms, which will be displayed here for today's Armed Forces Day project, are—from left—the dress blues, the khaki, summer garrison uniform and the green duty uniform. The uniforms will be modeled for Presidio AFD visitors at the QM parade ground display, starting at noon.

QM Uniform Display Features Local Show

Although it generally spurns the frivolous, the Army—for its civilian guests to the Presidio—will stage a "fashion show" today.

As part of the Armed Forces Day program here, the Quartermaster Corps will unveil the very latest in Army uniforms, the type American soldiers will be wearing at home and abroad in the near future.

The "fashion show," arranged by post QM, will be held on the main parade ground from noon to 1 p.m. and, it wouldn't be a bad idea, either, if fashion editors dropped by to see the latest in handsome masculine wear.

Three new uniforms will be displayed: duty, tropical and dress.

The traditional Army olive drab woolen uniform, with "Ike" jacket—so familiar to millions of Americans—will be replaced next year by a brand new green uniform, wearable for duty and semi-dress occasions.

Enlisted men have been told they can wear the green uniform off duty after 1 October, 1956, and it is expected to replace the old OD's entirely within a year or so.

Accessories to the greens include a service or garrison cap, black tie, poplin or light khaki shirt and black shoes and socks.

The tropical and hot weather uniform will keep U.S. soldiers cool, man. The new summer garrison uniform—ready for wearing 1 July, 1956—includes a short-sleeved shirt, with open collar, Bermuda-type shorts, the rage in "smart circles," ribbed knee-length cotton stockings and low quarter shoes.

This departure from conventional khakis will also be worn at Posts where the regular khaki uniform is worn during the summer.

Inductees, enlistees, National Guardsmen, Reservists, will be issued two hot weather uniforms on coming to active duty after 1 July, this year.

For the opera or other dress occasions, the officers and enlisted men of the Army will wear a blue uniform, with minor differences, according to commissioned or non-commissioned status.

It has a dark blue blouse on which the accoutrements are in gold—chevrons, soutache, service stripes and gold trimmed epaulets. The sky-blue trousers have a wide gold stripe the length of the outer seams. A white shirt, black tie and black shoes and socks go with the dress blues.

Another part of the Quartermaster exhibit will be the display of airborne equipment for which the QM is responsible. Parachute personnel of the quartermaster field maintenance shop will demonstrate the proper packing of a parachute for safe jumping and will model the equipment worn by a well-dressed paratrooper ready for combat.

In addition, the QM will also show movies on airborne operations in Korea and on dropping safely heavy equipment such as trucks and artillery to troops on the ground.

Company Grade Officers Needed For Courses At Language School

According to a recent Department of the Army Circular, company grade officers may now apply to fill existing 1957 fiscal year quotas for training as interpreters and translators. Instruction is at the Army Language School, Presidio of Monterey, Calif.

Graduates are subject to world-wide assignments upon completing the required course. This program should not be confused with Foreign Area Specialist Training or considered as the language training prerequisite to a student's previously selected assignment.

Some of the existing quotas are French, German, Italian, Portuguese, Spanish, Chinese-Mandarin, Japanese, Korean, Polish, Russian and Turkish. For more information see Circular 621-19.

Scout Activities Highlight Youth Programs Here

The Boy and Girl Scout movement in its relation to the importance of happy, healthy youth, gets top billing in the activities calendar for sons and daughters of military parents at the Presidio.

On the reservation, there are approximately 225 registered Girl Scouts and 30 registered adults serving as leaders and committee members.

The Brownie Troops, comprising the largest of the Scout group, utilize their recreational time in the study of crafts and related pastimes.

The Intermediates, second largest group, do all phases of basket-making, study child care, house-keeping, cooking and purchasing for the home.

Summer vacation activities for the Presidio Scouts generally include summer camp and weekend outings at the Youth Center in Marin County, with a Day Camp for the Intermediates at Camp Merced and organized camping established at Camp Sugar Pine in the Sierras.

The Senior Girl Scouts carry out specific assignments such as entertaining hospital patients, making scrap books for patients in the city hospitals and over-mittens for the various Day Camps. They are trained also to carry out specific jobs in the event of emergency.

In a combined enterprise with metropolitan troops from San Francisco, the Senior Troop at the Presidio, completed a course in emergency training. It covered first aid, civil defense, and how to care for and entertain small children. Some 65 girls from here were awarded Completion Certificates for this.

To raise funds for a camping trip to Yosemite, the Senior Scouts gave a series of suppers and food sales.

Two troop members have received Service Bars and Caps for completing 50 hours as hospital aides at Mount Zion Hospital.

Boy Scouts at the Presidio take in two troops, whose membership has grown in the past year to nearly 200.

Troop No. 77 was chartered in 1937. It includes Explorer Scouts, Boy Scouts and Cub Scouts, while Troop No. 178, of Wherry Housing, consists of Boy Scouts and Cub Scouts.

World Wide Integration Of Air Force, Army Post Exchanges By 30 June

World-wide fiscal integration of Army and Air Force Exchanges will be effected by 30 June, 1956, according to recent announcements by the Army and Air Force.

The Secretaries of the Army and Air Force have directed this plan to gain increased operating efficiency. Other advantages are uniformity, business-like coordination of operating policies and fiscal controls.

Coordination in procurement, warehousing and distribution services will eliminate costly duplication.

This integration plan provides segregation at departmental level of respective Army and Air Force shares in net profits of the world-wide exchange system.

Accounts of all Army and Air Force exchanges when consolidated will constitute the net worth of the world-wide service and be the only fiscal entity.

Army Mailmen

Post Office Unit Has Important Mission In Peace Or Wartime

Mail—to the weary, footsore soldier in the front lines—is always welcomed with a happy smile, and even with a tear.

And it's the job of Army postal units to make sure the troops get the mail—letters, newspapers, magazines—under any circumstances, at all times.

The Presidio's 16th Base Post Office, a small unit of forty officers and enlisted men, commanded by First Lieutenant Jack W. Gailard, is charged with just such duties.

The unit's primary mission is training to be capable of furnishing for receipt, separation, distribution, routing and dispatch of mail to and from troops in a designated area or command. A unit such as the 16th is generally assigned to a communication zone headquarters, theater of operations headquarters or major subordinate command HQ.

And to insure the unit's ability of performing its assigned duty, the 16th has conducted for the past three years, at Hunter Liggett Military Reservation, annual field tests to determine the status of the technical, administrative and tactical capabilities of the unit.

At Liggett actual combat conditions are simulated and the men and their methods are put to severe tests.

In garrison, the unit provides the required personnel needed to operate the Postal Directory Section for the Presidio and its sub-posts, delivery of the Daily Bulletin to the Wherry Housing area and the installation's Postal Officer.

During World War II, the 16th was given a big job—getting mail to the jungle-weary American troops in the South and South-western Pacific areas. It was stationed at Guadalcanal, Saipan the Marianas and the Bonin Islands.

The unit stayed on in the Pacific, delivering and sorting mail for occupation troops from its Mariana Island headquarters. There, in late November, 1951, it was finally inactivated.

The 16th was inactive until allotted to the R.A. in September, 1952.

Mighty Good Eating, grin these Cub Scouts, recent visitors to a Presidio mess hall. The general public has been invited to eat lunch with the troops at the annual Armed Forces Day program. ## But Army Will Seek Needed War Weapons

The Army does not now, or has never, coveted any of the Air Force's weapons or missions. But the Army will fight to obtain and utilize such weapons and equipment as will best contribute to the successful fulfillment of its atomic age missions.

This was the gist of Secretary of the Army Wilber Brucker's reply to a query from a local newsmen on the now controversial Army vs. Air Force weapons conflict, a full 24-hours before the story broke nationally in the daily press.

Secretary Brucker lauded the sister services in an Armed Forces Day speech and at a press conference during his visit here last Friday.

He told members and guests at a luncheon at the Commonwealth Club in San Francisco that although there was "occasionally still to be heard the isolated voice of service partisanship" this was in most cases only the over zealotry that comes from individual pride in service. And for the most part is a healthy sign of the dedication and spirit that is essential to a strong defense team.

Secretary Brucker was unstinting in his praise of the fine contribution being made by members of the defense team. He specifically cited the high calibre of the Air Force's contribution to the mobility of the modern combat unit. He praised the mutual respect and esprit that exists between the paratrooper and the pilot that delivers him to his destination.

Classing himself as a vigorous exponent of universal military training, Secretary Brucker said at the same time the Army was doing everything in its power to make the new six-month reserve program into a workable and successful part of the defense plan. He said that enlistments were on the upgrade and that there was high hope that the program would fill a major part of its commitment by the July '57 cutoff date.

12,000 Visit Displays

Huge Throng At Presidio's Open House

From the heart of the Mission, from the Sunset and from the East Bay and Marin County the American public streamed to the Presidio to catch a glimpse of Army might at the annual Armed Forces Day celebration last week.

An estimated throng of 12,000 persons jammed almost every nook and cranny of the Presidio for the Army's "Power for Peace" demonstration.

As was expected, the majority—their interest aroused through Star Presidian and metropolitan press coverage—flocked to Crissy Field for the amphibious beach landing show.

There, members of the 505th Military Police battalion were called on to hold the overflow crowd out of danger of exploding grenades and TNT detonations.

During the morning demonstration, chill winds and overcast skies held the attendance under the 2,000 figure. But once the sun broke through, more than 6,000 persons filled the three bleachers to capacity, spilled out in front and along side them.

Military Policemen, held in reserve for just such an occasion, were called out to keep the throng out of harm's way, yet allowing them a good view of the landing.

The parade ground took on the aspect of a military fairground, with the public munching hot dogs and drinking soft drinks, wandering happily from exhibit to exhibit.

At the dispensary tent, military authorities counted more than 9,400

Two Young "four-star generals" help load and lock a 90 mm shell into the breach of an anti-aircraft artillery piece during the Armed Forces Day exhibit.

persons entering and viewing exhibits.

The Letterman Army Hospital train—parked on a siding near Crissy Field—hosted more than 1,100 persons.

Mess halls adjacent to the parade ground got a tremendous play. Headquarters, Sixth Army fed more than 500 visitors, while Companies A and B of the 505th MP Battalion, welcomed more than 700 persons to their dining halls.

Headquarters, Station Complement and Fort Scott units also reported feeding hundreds of civilian visitors a meal of baked ham, potatoes, salad, etc.

A large crowd gathered around the boxing ring near the parade ground to watch the Military Police judo demonstration and cheered lustily whenever one contestant "threw" the other.

The Army fashion show was held before an attentive and appreciative audience. Civilian and military persons saw and heard the latest developments on the dress blue, green and summer khaki uniforms.

Hundreds of visitors also jammed Army busses for the ride to Fort Scott and the 740th AAA Missile Battalion's guided tour of its Nike site. There, visitors were briefed, watched a mock alert and were guided by officers and non-coms.

Chaplain Ryan Praises High Morale, Morals Of Soldiers Abroad

A former Sixth Army chief of chaplains who now heads the Army's entire religious program, Chaplain (Major General) Patrick J. Ryan, says that soldier morale in Europe is higher than at any time in recent history.

Following a six-week tour of the Army's religious program abroad, Chaplain Ryan said that "not only does the morale of the men appear to be excellent in the performance of their often arduous military duties, but morals conditions have vastly improved."

Seeks School Extension

Sen. Thomas H. Kuchel (R-Calif.) has proposed a measure which would extend the educational provisions of the Veterans' Readjustment Assistance Act of 1952 until existing laws authorizing compulsory military service expire.

Helicopter, designated YH31 by the Army, will undergo tests at Ft. Rucker, Ala., on troop-carrying, cargo and litter-bearing missions. Operational, maintenance and safety standards also will be checked under field conditions.

Sixth Army Area Aims At New Safety Record

If posters, stickers, lectures, training and publicity will do the trick, the eight western states area of the Sixth Army should set a new accident-prevention record in this year's "Slow Down and Live" campaign.

The campaign, which begins on Memorial Day, 30 May, and ends on Labor Day, 3 September, will mark the second year that military and civilians of this area have gone all out in support of the national safety campaign.

Last year the Presidio rang up an accident-free record and will be out to achieve a similar record this year. During last year's campaign there were three long weekends, this year there is only one such weekend.

You can do your part by obeying the following simple rules of safety and courtesy:

- Keep your hands on the wheel and your eyes on the road.
- Observe speed limits; you'll be better late than dead.
- Don't tailgate the car ahead; stay far enough behind to allow room for an emergency stop.
- Drive on your own side of the road; you can't win in a collision.

- Give the other driver a break even when you have the legal right of way.
- Take it easy on the curves.
- Don't toothpick your eyes when you get sleepy; a roadside rest may save your life.
- Never pass another car without a clear view ahead.
- Make that one for the road a cup of coffee or a pot of tea.
- Always remember that good manners make a safe driver.

Editorial

... they toll for thee!

Ranked as a classic in its field the following dramatic essay was written by Raymond M. Eastman, a young advertising copy writer in Des Moines, Iowa . . .

10 Seconds to Live

"He pushed his sleeve back, held his wrist close to the lighted speedometer, squinted to read the time. A little after 9. Five, 10 minutes after. Ought to be home in half an hour.

"If he had only known he had only ten seconds to live, he might have checked the time more closely. He might have done things differently.

"Ten seconds to live. He massaged his eyes with thumb and middle finger, trying to rub out some of the sand.

"Nine seconds to live. He'd driven almost eight hours since lunch, and was beginning to feel it.

"Eight seconds to live. Lousy driving in the rain. Light from your headlights just seems to soak in along with the water.

"Seven seconds to live. Probably need a new windshield wiper blade. Old one just spreads the water around instead of wiping it clean. Get one tomorrow, or next time it rains.

"Six seconds to live. Somebody threw a cigarette out of an oncoming car. The red glow dissolved almost before it hit the pavement.

"Five seconds to live. He planted his heels on the floor-board, squirmed back in the seat, trying for comfort.

"Four seconds to live. At 60 miles an hour, a car covers 88 feet of pavement every second. Four seconds, 352 feet.

"Three seconds to live. Something looked wrong through the blurry windshield. A tentative dab at the brake stiffened into desperate pressure as he made out an old, unlighted slow-moving truck ahead.

"Two seconds to live. Panic moved in. Turn to the left. No, car coming. Headlights too close. Can't make it. Turn to the right.

"One second to live. Horror numbed everything into slow motion. He was floating right into the near corner of the truck bed. He opened his mouth to scream.

"No seconds to live."

. . . two years ago, at this time, Raymond Eastman, 29, became a traffic statistic. He was killed when his new sports car careened into a bridge while passing another car at high speed.

Moral: Knowledge can help, but only good driving habits can save your life.

Honor the Dead!

Presidio Troops Join Memorial Day Celebration

On Memorial Day, 30 May, the Presidio joins the nation in ceremonies honoring the military dead who have fallen in battle over the last century.

Spotlighting the local events will be Sixth Army troops and the Sixth Army band with units from the Navy, the Marine Corps, Coast Guard and Air Force in a parade from the city's Van Ness Avenue through the Presidio via the Lombard Gate to the Cenotaph on the Presidio.

Commencing at 0930, the active units, augmented by various American Legion Posts in the Bay Area, with the Veterans of Foreign Wars and related associations, will assemble on Van Ness for the line of march to Lombard Street. Here, the massed troops will be met at 1000 hours by a detail of Presidio Military Police as escort to the cemetery.

In deference to the patients at Letterman Army Hospital, the bands and drum corps are to remain silent while the parade passes a given point in the area.

The first colors arriving at the cemetery will remain in formation until the colors of all organizations have assembled, when they will be massed and marched in, as one unit.

At 1200 hours, a gun salute by riflemen from the combined military services will honor the dead and terminate the local observation of Memorial Day.

Local Troops Plan Two-Day Annual Program At Presidio

Hundreds of Explored Scouts from all parts of the Bay Area will take part in the second annual Bay Area Explorer Bivouac, a two-day session that begins at the Presidio of San Francisco this afternoon and runs through Sunday.

Physical fitness, leadership, and knowledge of a variety of skills learned through the Exploring program (for young men aged 14-17) will be featured in nearly 20 competitive events over the week-end, which will also include social and recreational activities.

Members of both the Land and Air branches of Exploring will start arriving at the Presidio this evening from Alameda, Berkeley, Marin County, Oakland, Piedmont, Vallejo, Palo Alto, San Jose, and San Mateo. Boy Scout Councils located in these areas are joint sponsors of this year's Bivouac.

All Explorers who attend the Bivouac will be required to take part in the Bivouac Problem, a series of five events to test their skill in pioneering (construction of towers and rustic structures using ropes and poles), first aid (treatment of bleeding, shock, and fracture, their ability to use a compass, their knowledge of facts contained in the Land and Air Explorer handbooks, and their physical fitness (rope climbing, base-ball throw, push-ups, etc.).

Optional events will include rifle shooting on a 50-foot range, archery, trail tent pitching, observation and identification of objects, wood chopping and pancake cooking, bait casting, signaling and Morse code, navigation, survival tests, life saving, and automobiling.

The automobiling test contains 10 questions from the State Motor Vehicle Code and requires the Explorers to identify the parts of an engine. They must also drive and stop a car, know how to check oil, water, and battery, and change a tire.

The Explorers will use the recreational facilities of the Presidio and attend movies and a formal dance Saturday night.

On Sunday at 1330 hours, closing ceremonies will be held at which awards will be presented to the participating groups that have excelled in the various events.

No matter what the job is, don't underrate the danger and don't overrate your luck.

Plaque Winners

Sfc. Joe M. Hall, mess sergeant of the 21st Engr. Co. and his company commander, Capt. M. S. Saunders, recently received for their company the best mess award for April. Deputy Post Commander Carl E. Lundquist presented the plaque.

Brucker

However, the Secretary could see little hope in meeting the total manpower needs of the services without a continuation of the draft or universal military training. He stated that every able bodied American man must expect to spend some time in the service of his country before his 27th birthday.

Prior to his speech and press conference at the Commonwealth Club, Secretary Brucker visited the Presidio where he was accorded full military honors.

Following a nineteen-gun salute, he inspected units of the Sixth Army Band, 505th MP Detachment and the Honor Guard.

A reception at the Presidio Officers' Club in the evening climaxed the Secretary of the Army's visit to the local installation.

He inspected training at Ft. Ord on Saturday and was scheduled to visit Ft. Lewis, Washington, on Monday. The Secretary was expected to return to his office in the Pentagon by midweek.

Troops Roll Out Red Carpet For "Old Soldier's" AFD Tour

Story and Photos by
Sp. 3 HUGH DEMPSEY

When President McKinley called for troops in 1898 to battle Santa Anna during the Spanish American War, a young man named Warner Marshall stepped forth to be among the first to volunteer.

During that same year he was stationed at the Presidio to receive training that later proved invaluable in the struggle against the Spanish.

On Armed Forces Day of this year, this same man paid a visit to his old military station, and with him brought back a page of history from an era which to most was only a section covered in an American history class.

During the lunch hour when hundreds of guests poured into the various mess halls to sample GI cooking, Mr. Marshall chose to eat at Headquarters Company, 6002 SU.

Walking in, he remarked to a soldier standing nearby in line, "This place sure has changed since I ate here during the Spanish American War." Soon the word got around that there was a celebrity in the group, and with this announcement, the entire mess crew along with the company first sergeant rolled out the red carpet for the old soldier.

Following his hosted tour of Headquarters Company, Mr. Warner proceeded to visit the historical exhibit provided by the Post TI&E section. Here he pointed out to members of a younger generation various pictures that he was present to see made.

One picture particularly impressed him, that of General John J. Pershing, Supreme Commander of Allied Forces during World War I. Turning to Major Earle K. Stewart, Post TI&E officer, he said with a marked sadness in his eyes, "I can remember when General Pershing's family perished right here at the Presidio. They didn't have a chance. The whole building went up like kindling wood."

Walking outside the exhibit room, he pointed out where many of the now extinct military buildings were located. Looking up toward the homes located high atop one of the Presidio hills, he remarked, "You know, I guess it don't really matter how old you get; you never forget certain things. I remember how this Presidio looked in 1898 just like it was yesterday."

Later he visited many of the exhibits located around the parade ground, and one that particularly impressed him was a portable resuscitator put on display by the post medical section.

Watching a demonstration while Lieutenant Colonel Harry Spitz, Commanding Officer of the Post Dispensary explained its operation, Mr. Marshall shook his head, and with a wide grin said, "This thing sure is a far cry from the old horse-drawn ambulances we had here during the Spanish American War."

Photo Story

When he had learned all of this operation to his satisfaction, he set out to inspect a 90-mm antiaircraft gun. After watching its smooth operation he remarked to gun-sergeant Martin Bram that the old gattling gun of his day looked like a water pistol compared to this mammoth weapon.

Nothing was missed during the old soldier's visit, and his endurance was almost unbelievable. When queried on how he still possessed so much energy for his 90 years, he laughed and said, "I do plenty of exercises every day and keep fit as a fiddle, and believe me, they say old soldiers fade away, well, here's one old soldier who isn't going to fade for quite some time to come. If you're around, I'll be seeing you next Armed Forces Day. With that he turned and walked down the same parade field where he once marched as a member of the First Washington Infantry Regiment, U.S. Army."

Twin Bars now adorn the shoulders of Captain Robert N. Anderson of A Company, 505th Military Police. Pinning on the bars is the 505th Battalion Commander, Lt. Colonel Fred C. Smith. The promotion to Captain was the first for several years in the Battalion.

Wins Tracks!

First Captaincy In Some Time Goes To 505th MP Officer

New captain's bars were pinned on former First Lieutenant Robert N. Anderson, commanding officer, Company A, 505th Military Police Battalion, by Lieutenant Colonel Fred C. Smith, battalion commander last week.

In an informal ceremony in Colonel Smith's office, Captain Anderson was officially promoted.

Witnesses to the first captain promotion in the battalion in several years included Captain Francis Hoskins, C. O. of Company B, Major John F. Kwock, battalion operations officer, and Captain Roger Cass, adjutant.

Captain Anderson, a 1950 business administration graduate of Michigan State College, has been stationed at the Presidio since 1951. Prior to assignment here he served with the U. S. Military Advisory and Assistance Group in Turkey as an MP officer.

The captain's World War II service was with the Third Marines at Guam and Iwo Jima. He was awarded the Purple Heart for wounds received in the Pacific and concluded his two years in the Corps in 1946.

He lives on post with his wife, Bernice, and two children, Sheila, 7, and Robert, 4.

Two Will Retire In Mid-Week Ceremony

A formal retreat parade and review on the Presidio will mark the retirement of Brigadier General Claude F. Burbach, Chief of the California Military District and Lt. Colonel W. Batts, chief post disbursing section at the Presidio on 29 May.

General Burbach came to Sixth Army Headquarters as a Colonel in July 1954. He was at that time named deputy chief of staff, Comptroller, Sixth Army.

His promotion to brigadier general was announced here in October 1954 and shortly after this he was named deputy chief of staff, Administration and Management, Sixth Army Headquarters.

On January 3, 1955, General Burbach was appointed chief of the California Military District. He is a graduate of the class of 1925 of West Point, also of the Field Artillery school and the National War College.

General Burbach served as chief of staff of the 4th Infantry Division from 1950 until 1953, accompanying it to Germany after its reactivation at Fort Benning, Georgia.

Prior to his assignment here, General Burbach commanded the Bremerhaven Port of Embarkation. His World War II service includes command of the Artillery battalions of the 7th and 85th Infantry Divisions. Later he was named director of the Field Artillery School, Fort Sill, Oklahoma, and was designated chief of staff of the 8th Armored Division the following year.

In 1944-1945 the General commanded the 418th Field Artillery Group in the Pacific theater. At war's end he was assigned to the planning section of Army Forces, Western Pacific, in Manila.

After his graduation from the National War college in 1947, General Burbach served for three years on the general staff of the Department of the Army.

Colonel Batts has served at the Presidio as Post Finance Officer since 1954. During the second World War he was in Europe where he was assigned to the 1st Infantry Division.

In Korea, Colonel Batts served with the 40th Infantry Division as staff finance officer for KCOMZ and as executive officer, Comptroller Section, KBS.

Taking with him a record of over two decades of Federal service, Colonel Batts plans to resume public life as a teacher in the Illinois schools.

Commander of troop units of the California Military District participating in the retirement ceremonies, is Colonel John A. Elterich, with staff members Lieutenant Colonel Frank B. Wilson and Major J. A. Pena.

Adjutant will be Lieutenant Colonel D. C. Brewer.

Lieutenant Colonel W. Glover will command the first Battalion, with Major C. B. Searls, Captain W. A. Rutledge and Captain G. R. Krough staff members.

Lieutenant Colonel C. Johnson will command the 2d Battalion. Staff members will be Major E. L. Reams, Captain D. A. Huff and Captain A. A. Cox.

Teenagers Plan Big Work-Day Campaign

A household clean-up project, launched by the Teenage group at the Presidio, as a means of earning money toward maintenance of their club, takes place here on 16 July, the day after summer holidays begin.

Project Work Day covers such jobs as car washing, dog washing, baby sitting, window washing, (interior and ground floor exteriors only), lawn mowing, basement cleaning, light flat ironing, Venetian blind cleaning and other general work.

To augment the financial project arranged by the Teenagers themselves, the entire Presidio has been broken up into small districts. Each numbered district will be canvassed by group members for the purpose of making advance contract for the work being done on the 16th.

Price arrangements for Project

Work Day jobs are tabbed at a cost of $1.25 for car washing or $1.00 for washing a dog. Baby sitting costs 35¢ an hour for one person; 50¢ for two people. Window washing, lawn mowing, basement cleaning, flat ironing, Venetian blind cleaning and other general work costs 50¢ an hour per person. A preference is indicated that the young people be allowed to work in pairs on any given assignment. For further information on Project Work Day please call Ext. 3419.

U. S. Army Band Here For Three Local Concerts

Major Chester E. Whiting, who will stand on the podium and give the downbeat to his 100-piece U. S. Army Field Band during concerts here 26, 27, 28 May, has a long and impressive career as both soldier and musician in peace and war.

After attendance at the New England Conservatory of Music, the Malden, Massachusetts, officer became a member of the faculty of his home town high school. His natural musical talents and leadership ability were recognized early in his career and he became head of the music department for all Malden schools.

Major Whiting was appointed a warrant officer band leader in the Massachusetts National Guard by the Governor of the State in 1923. He organized and conducted a band in that State's National Guard Cavalry.

Shortly before the outbreak of World War II his unit was called into Federal Service and, in 1942, sailed for the South Pacific war zone. While in this zone, Major Whiting organized and conducted the famous American Division Band on the island of Bougainville. The bandmen, under Whiting's direction, served as fighting infantry,

Major C. E. Whiting

litter bearers and communications men during the bloody fighting on Bougainville and Guadalcanal in the early stages of the Pacific War.

For his devotion to duty and leadership under fire, Whiting was awarded the coveted Combat Infantry Badge, the Legion of Merit, and the Bronze Star Medal.

The American Bandmasters Association elected Major Whiting to the Board of Directors of that organization in recognition of his invaluable contribution to music and for his fine work with the Army's largest touring band.

Recently Major Whiting was the recipient of another honor. He was made Honorary lifetime leader of the Zembo Temple Shrine Band in Washington, D. C. He is the second person to be so honored, the first being the immortal John Philip Sousa.

In 1944 it was decided in Washington to organize a band of combat infantrymen from combat divisions throughout the world. This band, to be known as the First Combat Infantry Band, was to travel throughout the nation on bond-selling tours.

To organize, command and conduct this unique band, Major Whiting was selected. After hand-picking his musicians, procuring the necessary instruments, and weeks of rehearsal, the band began its mission. So successful was this mission of selling bonds that the unit earned the nickname of the "Million Dollar Band."

From this beginning evolved the present United States Army Field Band, the Army's traveling band. Since its very beginning Major Whiting has been in command. Under his leadership the band has toured Canada, Mexico, Europe and the British Isles, in addition to every State of the United States, as goodwill representatives of the Department of the Army.

Whiting is not only a conductor but composer as well, having written six marches which are currently being published. Ability, both musical and military, are synonymous with Major Chester E. Whiting, Commanding Officer and Conductor of The U. S. Army Field Band.

Wacs Score 2 Victories, As Softball Loop Starts

The Presidio Wacs under the able guidance of Coach Julian Kite outlasted the U.S. Naval Hospital girls, 19-15 and the Oakland Army Terminal lassies, 7-3 in the first two official softball games of the 1956 season.

The local girls by reason of their twin victories shot into an early lead in the northern California Armed Forces Women's softball league.

Last year the Post Wac softball squad won the local area title as well as the All-Sixth Army crown.

The opening win over the Hospital girls saw the Post team jump off to a 17 run lead by the end of the third inning. At this point the Presidio second string entered the game and outlasted the Girl medics through the rest of the slugfest.

The heavy hitting Presidio batters blasted out six home runs in the seven inning contest with Peggy Harris leading the pack with two round trippers. Others with one homer to their credit were Mary Phillips, Emma Owens, Zorah Christian and Nina Hefner.

The second win over the Oakland Wacs saw Pat Doering take the mound and give up but three hits in posting her first victory of the season.

The locals got off to a one run lead in the first, added three more in the third which along with three tallies in the fifth put the game in the win column for the Presidio.

Peggy Harris sparked the Post batters with a home run in the fifth with two teammates on the bases.

Emma Owens, catcher, suffered a broken ankle in the first inning and will be lost to the team for some time.

1st Lt. George-Morris of Ft. Benning, Ga., considered by many as a great lineman at Georgia Tech, has been signed by the San Francisco 49ers.

The All-Service meet, which pits the champions from all Armed Services will be held in the Los Angeles Coliseum from 14 to 16 June.

Big Sticks Spell Difference As PSF Wins Three Games

The booming bats of the Presidio Toreros proved the margin of difference during the past week as the local nine scored three wins and dropped but one tilt in four scheduled games.

The victories came at the expense of the Fort Ord Warriors, 13-11 and 6-3; and a lopsided 28-7 win over the Mare Island Sailors. The Toreros lone defeat came from the Stanford Braves, 5-3.

Home runs were the story of the first Torero-Warrior clash with the Post men blasting out six round trippers to edge the men from Ord 13-11 in a real slugfest.

Presidio second sacker, Dick Shannon, turned up the star of the day when he homered in the bottom of the ninth with teammate Bill Selsor aboard for the game-winning runs.

Charlie Matson went all the way for the locals except for the last two outs in the sixth when John Blackwell came in to retire the side. Matson moved over to right field and returned to the mound at the start of the seventh.

Star Presidian Sports Editor

The smooth shooting Presidio golf team won their sixth and seventh matches of the current season this past week when they beat the Hamilton Air Force Base men, 16-10 and edged out the Parks Air Base swingers, 14-13.

The match against Hamilton was played on the Air Force home links, Sonoma Golf Course, saw the local twosome of Milton Rosenberg and Bill Krause team up to win seven points to the opponents lone tally.

The second Post team, made up of John Roberts and Craig Wright, won five points while giving up four to the second Air Force team.

Vern Frankhauser and Major Rollin Kapp made up the third Presidio twosome and won four while dropping five points.

Craig Wright was low medalist for the locals with a fine four over par 76. He was followed by Krause, 77, Roberts and Rosenberg, 80, and Kapp and Frankhauser with 81.

The second divot match saw the Presidio golfers edge the Parks Airmen 14-13 on the Lake Chabot Course in Oakland.

Captain Leon Thomas and Bill Krause teamed as the first Post team and won three points while dropping six despite Krause turning in a very good 69, three under par, and Thomas coming in with a 76.

John Roberts and Milt Rosenberg made up the second Presidio twosome, winning six tallies and losing three. Both shot a 75 for the day's action.

The third team from the Post was composed of Craig Wright and Vern Frankhauser. They won their match five to four to clinch the victory for the Army divot takers. Frankhauser fired a 77 and Wright turned in a 79 to round out the scores for the day.

Yesterday the Presidio golfers played host to the powerful Fort Ord Warriors on the Sharpe Park Course. The locals will be at full strength for the first time this season and hoped to revenge an earlier eight and one half to one half loss suffered on the Fort Ord links.

An addition was made to the golf schedule this week when it was revealed that the Post men will play the nearby Letterman Army Hospital squad on the 7th of June on the Sharpe Park Course.

new record

Lieutenant Parry O'Brien of nearby Travis Air Force Base firmly established himself as the greatest shotputter of all time, and virtually a cinch to win the Olympic title, by tossing the 16 pound iron ball 61'1" for a new unofficial world's record.

The former University of Southern California star athlete, who holds the official world mark of 60'10" set the new mark in an exhibition meet held at the University of Utah in Salt Lake City.

Rau, John Tosses No Hit Shutout In Softball Tilt

John Rau of A Company of the 505th Military Police used a good curve ball to pitch a no hitter this week as the Presidio Toreros softball team beat the Duke and Larry's club of the Class A San Francisco city league, 4-0.

Rau faced only 22 batters in posting his win and struck out five men along the way. He was helped by two double plays by his teammates. Leading batters for the Post softballers were Harry Matthews with two for two and Bob Moran with two for three during the seven inning contest.

Yesterday the Presidio squad journeyed to Two Rock Ranch for a clash with the Army nine stationed there. Results will appear in next week's Star Presidian.

Curve ball artist Roger Collins gained credit for the win.

The Army nine lost their third game of this week's play when they were defeated by the Stanford University Braves, 5 to 3. The college men got off to a four run lead in the last of the first inning and were never headed. The Toreros scored their three tallies in top of the third.

Big Al Casino paced the locals at the plate with two booming triples, one of which bounced off the left field fence, 475 feet away.

Tuesday of this week the Presidio squad unlimbered their siege guns and blasted the Mare Island Sailors into submission to the tune of 28-7.

First sacker Al Casino was the big man at the plate with two home runs and eight runs batted in for the Army nine.

Chuck Matson took the mound for the Post and gave up 11 hits in posting his 3rd victory of the year.

Big inning for the Presidio was the sixth when 14 batters paraded to the plate and scored 13 tallies.

This afternoon at 1300 hours the Post plays host to the Castle Air Force Base nine on the Fort Scott diamond.

roero home run derby in the third with the bases empty. Mike Rubic blasted one out of the park in the fourth with one on and was followed by Al Casino's homer in the fifth with the bases empty.

Stocky Norm Ellenberger picked out a slow curve ball in the sixth with two on and parked it over the left field fence for the fourth PSF round-tripper.

Hurler Chuck Matson led off the bottom of the ninth with another homer, tying the score and setting the stage for Shannon's game-winning blow.

Dick Shannon and Harry Williams sparked the second Presidio victory over the Ord Warriors with two hits apiece in four trips to the plate.

Shannon lashed out a triple and a double and Williams had a home run and a double to his credit.

The Post men jumped off to a one run lead in the bottom of the first with the Warriors tying it up in the top of the seventh. The Toreros rallied in the bottom of the same frame however, and pushed across four runs to put the game on ice.

Secret Paper War Concluded At Ord

CPX High Seas Sharpens Planners In Staff Duel With Aggressor Force

Special to The Star Presidian

Command Post Exercise High Seas, Fort Ord—Final reports and windup critiques by high ranking officers are being turned in today as Command Post Exercise High Seas—long on the Top Secret list—draws to a close.

The maneuver, with more than 2,000 actual Army, Navy and Marine Corps personnel representing U. S. forces and aggressor troops, went into D-Day plus four early this week and left the huge situation map at Fort Ord's East Garrison studded with markers symbolizing troop positions.

Designed to improve and develop individual skills and techniques in staff planning as well as interservice teamwork, the CPX does not involve actual troop participation.

The staff members of both U. S. and aggressor forces play out the war game on paper.

In High Seas the mission was to conduct a joint Army-Navy amphibious landing against an enemy-held shore by U. S. units and the prevention thereof by aggressors.

Major General Riley F. Ennis, deputy commanding general, Sixth Army, who was acting maneuver director, announced American forces hit the beach in the Monterey Bay area during the first day of the operation.

During the course of the "battle" U. S. troops penetrated to several points east of Santa Cruz, Castroville, Salinas and Seaside.

Martial law was proclaimed in Monterey after the city was occupied by the U. S. III Corps on the third day of the maneuver. But aggressor forces placed road blocks on main arteries out of the city, covered by machine gun and recoilless rifle fire. Refugees are fleeing the battle area along the coast, while Navy planes have conducted heckler raids on aggressor supply lines.

Naval air support was decisive during a simulated atomic bomb attack on a U. S. armored division supporting logistical troops and shipping. The U. S. armored division suffered notable losses in the a-bomb attack during the pre-dawn hours, but quick retaliation halted it, with Navy air driving the aggressors back.

And while the CPX was drawing to a close, carrier-based aircraft were harrasing aggressor armored vehicles as they pulled back.

The results of the maneuver showed that a large-scale land-sea landing could be conducted at low cost. Staff officers participating in the maneuver gained experience in planning similar to that of a real landing.

As reports reach the director's staff through Army-Navy communications networks, orders are relayed to controller seated in an arena-like structure overlooking a huge map.

Special Edition Hailed

The Star Presidian went into the homes of thousands of San Franciscans—visitors to the Presidio for last week's Armed Forces Day celebration.

More than 4,000 copies of the Army newspaper were distributed to visitors thronging the Post for the exhibits and assault beach landing demonstrations.

The newspaper, printed on glossy paper with a photo of a beach landing on the front cover and an aerial shot of the Presidio on the back, also caused quite a flurry among military personnel.

Calls to The Star Presidian's editorial office requesting additional copies came all day long. Headquarters, Sixth Army ran short early and asked for 400 more.

All told, The Star Presidian printed 10,000 copies for AFD, and with many persons indicating they were mailing a copy home, it is expected the newspaper gained a measure of international fame for its coverage.

CPX Points Up Importance Of Top Communication Lines

A Sixth Army Signal Corps officer and a naval lieutenant today were credited with planning the vast communications system set up for the just completed Command Post Exercise, High Seas.

Lieutenant Colonel Charles J. Schauers and Lieutenant (JG) Donald C. Stibich were singled out for planning and organizing the intricate nerve center of electronic equipment which resulted in superior communication between Navy vessels participating in the maneuver and the eight commo sub-sections ashore.

The employment of modern electronic technology in the joint Army-Navy amphibious exercise proved that without reliable signal communications, land and sea commanders would be virtually helpless in tactical situations.

More than six months of planning went into the gigantic signal system which served Army and Navy units participating in the maneuver.

Colonel Schauers and his naval assistant's work in connection with the exercise resulted in topnotch communications between the Navy ships anchored in Monterey Bay and the Army sub-centers serving attacking divisions and corps headquarters.

Hundreds of miles of wire were utilized throughout the operation, in addition to commercial facilities and MARS radio facilities, also used as a back-up means for radio traffic directed to Headquarters, Sixth Army here.

The main means of communication which carried the bulk of the load, was radio teletype—both ultra high and high frequency—supplemented by wire teletype. Helicopter messengers, telephones, and the new light-weight walkie-talkie radio.

Colonel Schauers, who as assistant chief of staff, said, "Our job was to get the message through—and thus far we have met every requirement. The cooperation and coordination with naval communications has been excellent. This indicates both services 'speak the same language' when it comes to the complicated electronic system now in use."

He added that "we have established some sort of record in that during the first two days, the commo center handled more than 500
